1. Reference is made to your memorandum dated 23 July 1954 requesting a covert security clearance to permit Subject's use in the United States in preparing reports and furnishing contacts in the newspaper and lecture field in the United States and abroad. He will work closely with PP/CRTV Office.

2. In accordance with the provisions set forth in the Director's Memorandum of 14 February 1949, entitled "Security and Operational Clearances," a covert security clearance is granted for the covert use of the Subject as described in your request set forth in paragraph 1 above.

3. The Subject is not to represent himself as, nor is he to be represented as, an employee of CIA.

4. Your attention is called to the fact that a covert security clearance does not constitute complete compliance with the provisions of CIA Regulation 10-9. Therefore, if you should desire at a later date to change the status or use of this individual, a request for clearance to cover any proposed change should be submitted to this office.

5. This clearance becomes invalid in the event the Subject's services are not utilized within 60 days of the date of this memorandum.

MILESTONE

A most important gentleman had an unusually important day this week. Charles Phillip Arthur George, son of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip, and England's future King, became three.

It was a happy day all round. For not only did Bonny Prince Charles enjoy to full measure the usual delirium of the small boy's birthday, but the King felt fit enough to attend the party and invite a Press photographer.

The King's rapid recovery to the point where he can walk unaided and move with no apparent strain has astonished and delighted the nation. The TIMES photographer - the first member of the public to see him since his operation - reported in some amazement that the King showed no sign of illness, laughed and chatted happily and seemed altogether out of character for a man so recently at grips with major surgery.

The Prince's birthday began, as always. Still, he seems happy every such day should, with eager opening of many parcels. He was then taken for his usual outing in St. James's Park - that delightful Scotland Yard all over. He's a playground that he can never fully enjoy. For, as a royal prince he must not sail boats in public ponds everybody as he clutches two or feed ducks, or ride on the grubby lead soldiers. He's a firm

On his third birthday, he shows many of the qualities of a princely manliness and thoughtful commonsense. He has enjoyed so much. He spends much of his time with a fiddle, and it was past the baby-talk stage. He is bright, interested in everything and very obviously no cissy. He has had to learn to bear long absences from his parents and conduct himself with dignity in public. London, the world's most critical judge of royalty, awards him ten marks all round in its third Report on Progress, and heartily wishes him very many happy returns.

TRAP

Londoners face a new hazard, another pit in the treacherous bog of regulations that surrounds today's law-respecting citizens.

This week, careful sidesteppers along the narrow pathways of rectitude learned that the phone may lead to a fine.

In our public telephone boxes are two buttons: after the money has clicked into the box and some sort of response been evoked the caller presses Button A so that the other end can hear him. If he gets the wrong number or none at all he presses Button B and gets his money back, usually. Sometimes, the mechanism appears to develop an unusual contrition in its behaviour and pours out a shower of coins wildly in excess of the Button B presser's due. Till now, this pleasant quirk has invested the dull business of telephoning with a certain sporting quality. No call is complete without a hopeful lunge at Button B.

The other day, it seems, a youth trying to phone his girl-friend was getting no reply, which is trouble enough, anyway. Pressing Button B, he was rewarded with eightpence, five more than he was entitled to. If there's one soul in the whole of London's ten million who wouldn't have pocketed that extra fivepence it certainly wasn't our young swain. Unfortunately, somebody spotted his transaction and the lad eventually found himself in court as wrong a number as anyone ever got.

They fined him ten shillings, saying that he should have returned the other fivepence to the box or a post-office. The authorities explain that people who forget to press Button B to regain their money claim on the Post Office and, therefore, anyone pocketing money thus hurled at them is robbing the Postmaster General. There may possibly be people who claim for the odd forgotten threepence, but this column has never met even a remote friend of one.

So something of the sport has gone out of life. And a lot of people are congratulating themselves on a narrow escape from disaster. There, but for the grace of God. The lad seems to have had less than a generous deal from Fate. London hopes he at last enjoyed the consolation of a plausible explanation by his girl-friend.

HOPF

Among the more frightening visions floating in the mind's eye just now is one of cohorts of plump ladies standing purposefully on their heads. For somebody has discovered that this modifying power produces a reduction in weight.

Bain's amateur bantam-weight boxing champion had a spot of business up at Wembley this week which necessitated his stacking a weight as he took a hot bath and jugged about a bit and had another shot. No matron ever registered more disappointment on a weighing machine - he was still overweight. A bystander, who might have been a stitch-doctor but who was a more than ordinarily knowledgeable gymnast, suggested the dejected bantam-weight should stand on his head. Surprisingly, instead of giving the know-all a clip on the ear for ill-timed levity, the boxer did as he was told. They weighed him again and he had lost the surplus six ounces. The story ends happily enough, as he won his fight a few hours later.

Now, there's another fight in progress between the "experts." Some doctors refused to believe it, like the man who first saw the giraffe. Others say that standing on the head couldn't have had any effect; it was something else. From Harley Street comes the theory that being upside down disturbs a body's air content and sends some of it higher; this results in a temporary loss of weight. But this isn't among light fantastic we hear about?

TAIL END

There'll be no extra food at Christmas, says the new Food Minister. More time for devotion and somewhat less for digestion this year.

An enquiry reveals that electric bulb manufacturers have been running price rings to prevent competition. Could this be the light fantastic we hear about?

FRANCE IN MOROCCO

HERE has always been discussion about the peculiar trait of human nature which finds expression in a feeling of pleasure in contemplating the misfortunes of others. The great Lucretius in his poem "De rerum natura" tells of the satisfaction enjoyed in witnessing, from the safety of the shore, the shipwrecked mariners struggling in the sea; but he does not seem to have found anything reprehensible in the sentiment. Nowadays we should, of course, indignantly deny any such baseness in ourselves, though we may not be so sure about "the other fellow" who is quite capable of putting a banana-skin on the path for our special benefit. However this may be, it cannot be ignored that the "foreign" press tends to gloat over the difficulties of Great Britain, formerly in India and Palestine, now in Iran and Egypt, conveniently forgetting the fact that no country in the world with international responsibilities can hope, in present world circumstances, to evade situations dangerous to national prestige.

Just twenty years—no more—have passed since a magnificent "Exposition Coloniale" was held in the Parisian suburb Vincennes, which attracted visitors from all parts of the world and was proudly pointed to in many countries, as being convincing evidence that the great nations of Europe, and the United States with them were in no way disposed to accept the concept of "the twilight of the West" or to renounce their "mission civilisatrice".

How stands that Colonial Empire today? It has to be remembered that France, as a colonial power had a great asset shared by no other Western nation—the absence of a rigid colour bar. The extending to "native" peoples of the full rights of French citizenship went beyond legal formulae; mixed unions are not frowned on and "a touch of the tar brush"—or of yellow paint in the Far East, conveys no stigma, whatever other handicaps may have to be overcome. Moreover, colonial France has called forth the energy, and in not a few cases, the genius of great soldiers and administrators, second to none, and whatever may happen in the future their place in history is secure. Nevertheless, though the accolade still flies over many lands and over millions of many races, all of them, potentially if not actually, overseas Frenchmen, the wave of nationalism rising to full tide after the disasters of the second world-war has swept away many landmarks that seemed to have their foundations firmly based in tradition. Syria and Lebanon, with their great French Crusader castles, speaking still of warriors and heroes of the past who left their giant bones from Antioch to the Gulf of Aquaba and beyond—all gone. On Indo-China and Annam, Tonquin and Madagascar, we see French dominion fighting there for very life, and fate hangs daily in the balance. Now the interest and anxiety concentrates on Morocco, a question that really concerns all French Africa, north and central.

In Morocco the position is peculiar. Less than fifty years ago, though so near Europe, Morocco was very little known and foreigners were not welcomed there. The mutual jealousy of European powers helped to perpetuate this situation until it became intolerable, and in return for the usual shady agreements not to interfere with the ambitions of others elsewhere, France was given a free hand to go ahead. By 1912, it was possible to speak of "pacification," and since that date, with a shadowy native ruler in nominally supreme authority, the civilizing of Morocco had gone far enough by 1913 for that country to have its "pavilion" in the Exhibition. But under the surface nationalism fermented, raising difficulties for the Sultan as well as for French military and civil authorities. These difficulties have now become acute, and have been raised in the United Nations by the representative of Iraq, to one that led the French representative to leave the Mandate Commission during the hearing. It is not only Great Britain, but has to struggle with problems in the Mediterranean area!

Last week's publicity was certainly amongst your best—but tell me who writes the captions for the photographs? I presume you import them but do you adhere to the original description. I always have an uncomfortable feeling that my leg is being pulled yet I should not be so bold as to say that you tamper with the text. However, I find it more than difficult to believe that a girl with a name like Daphne Codd should be selected by the International Pearl Divers' Association (A.F.L.) as the "GIRL WITH WHOM WE WOULD LIKE TO SHUCK OYSTERS". One other point! Is there an International Pearl Divers' Association and would they be affiliated with the American Federation of Labour.

Sincerely yours,

"Doubtful"

The captions for S. F. M. pictures are invariably rewritten by the staff not, however, to stretch credulence but to fill spaces. Miss Daphne Codd was not only selected by the International Pearl Divers' Association as the "GIRL WITH WHOM WE WOULD LIKE TO SHUCK OYSTERS" but stood as a candidate for the title "MISS BEACH-MINDED 1951, in which contest she failed to place. This fact was, therefore, omitted in order not to unnecessarily strain readers' doubts. Finally to the best of the editors' knowledge there is an International Pearl Divers' Association and Mr. Murray (president of the A. F. L.) would assuredly welcome them to the A. F. L. ED.

KOREAN CEASE FIRE LINE RATIFIED IN PLENARY SESSION: CESSATION OF LAND FIGHTING REPORTED

Into the chilly, rain-soaked, roadside tent at Panmunjon this week swept a gust of accord. United Nations and Communist delegates set a thirty day deadline for concluding a truce as they, at the same time, came to an agreement on the second item of the peace agenda—the location of the cease fire line.

Agreement came just five months to the day after Soviet Deputy to the United Nations, Jacob A. Malik, proposed that both sides open negotiations for a cessation of hostilities based on the thirty-eighth Parallel.

In those five, weary, bloody months proposal failed the negative air of Communist obduracy and U. N. insistence. Meanwhile, the fighting had gone on, savage and costly. And ridge by dreary ridge had fallen, taking their toll of thousands of lives.

And what of the final settlement? It was decided a U. N. territorial victory:

The present battle line—now from ten to forty miles inside North Korea—will become the permanent truce line if agreement is reached within thirty days on outstanding agenda items. If the agreement is forthcoming the armies will surrender any territory gained in the next month's fighting. If there is no accord the discussions will go on and a new line will be drawn up along the points of battle contact at the time the peace is finally signed.

Ratified by a plenary session of negotiators after lower echelon groups had debated for days the topographical details, the line that will separate the two armies extends from a point south of Katsong on the east coast to the mouth of the Imjin river on the western seaboard. Extending along the length of the twisting line is a neutral corridor two and a half miles deep, which includes Panmunjon, site of the armistice negotiations for the past month but falls by several miles to encompass Katsong, former peace city.

But three multi-pronged problems of the five-point peace agenda remained to be settled. In order of scheduled appearance these are the three questions:

(1) SUPERVISING THE ARMISTICE: Each side distrusts the other and each fears that the other might use the full for reinforcement and re-equipment with new weapons. To obviate difficulties and to allay suspicions some sort of inspection system is called for. The United Nations Command proposed a joint policing team, free to travel anywhere in Korea. The Communist proposal calls for a joint armistice commission responsible for armistice arrangements and supervision. Never ones to tolerate unauthorized nosing in their own backyard, the Communist plan made no mention of inspection behind the lines.

(2) EXCHANGE OF WAR CAPTIVES: In United Nations prison compounds are 168,346 prisoners—148,256 North Koreans and 19,610 Chinese. Just how many U. N. prisoners the enemy is holding is not known since neither North Korea nor Communist China is a member of the Geneva convention on war prisoners, therefore does not report them. Currently missing are 10,871 U. N. troops and 88,380 South Koreans. At Tuesday's plenary session, when the cease fire line was ratified, Admiral Charles Turner Joy, chief of the United Nations delegates, suggested each side prepare statistics on prisoners to speed that issue when it comes up for debate. The senior delegate proposed that each side prepare the latest available information on names, nationalities and other identification of all war prisoners and the location of all prisoners of war camps.

(3) RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE GOVERNMENTS CONCERNED: Never a clear point, this vaguely worded item results from a U. N. refusal to put on the agenda the withdrawal of troops from Korea. The U. N. insists that troop withdrawals form part of a political aspect and have no part in armistice discussions.

At week's end came a blurred report from the battle front that all land warfare had ceased and that only the sea and air warfare was still going on. Correspondents reported large fires along the Communist front and complete tranquility.

It was not clear from where the cease fire order had emanated but from Key West, Florida, where President Truman is taking his winter vacation, came a vigorous denial from Presidential Press Secretary Joseph Short. Said he: "There can be no cease fire in Korea until an armistice has been signed."

EAST AND WEST CONTINUE VERBAL CLASH IN U. N.

East and West were still poles apart and no move yet made in the spacious chambers of the Palais de Chaillot, where the sixth session of the United Nations General Assembly is convening, seemed capable of bridging the yawning chasm of suspicion and tension now so much a part of East-West relationships.

Disarmament was still the number one issue on the business like agenda and the Big Two (Soviet Russia and the U. S. A.) were no closer to agreement now than they had been at the outset.

But now there was a new point of friction, which Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky raised last week. It concerns a provision in the American Mutual Security Act, which became law last October. The provision authorizes the President to spend up to $100 million out of military aid funds "for any selected persons who are residing in or escaping from" Russia and the satellites "either to form such persons into elements of the military force supporting the North Atlantic Treaty organization or for other purposes." The sponsors of the provision claim that "other purposes" provides an opening for them to aid underground forces behind the Iron Curtain.

The Russians protested that the Mutual Security Act was designed to "finance subversive activities of persons and armed groups (to) finance traitors and war criminals who fled from their countries." They branded the $100 million authorized by President Roosevelt and former Soviet Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff in 1948 when the United States formally recognized the Soviet Union.

The pledges were made at the insistence of Washington which had a wary eye on the Communist predecessor of the Cominform. In the exchange each side promised not to sanction efforts at "bringing about by force a change in the political or social order" of the other country.

Washington and the rest of the West conceded the move to Russia. It was an astute piece of diplomacy and one more step in a long-range plan—a peace propaganda battle. At week's end the West took the initiative and simultaneous announcements from Washington, London and Paris declared that the Western Big Three were prepared to confer secretly with Russia and Luis Padilla Nervo, president of the United Nations General Assembly in an effort to reach an agreement on a common proposal for disarmament and the abolition of atomic weapons.

Taken off guard Foreign Minister Vishinsky asked for time to consider the proposal.

THE PROBLEM OF WEST GERMANY'S SOVEREIGNTY

Three facts were tangling the issues of West German sovereignty last week, all vitally interlocked and all hinged to a none-too-clear future.

How was the (West) German Federal Republic with its huge Ruhr industries and technical resources to be welded to the West and how was it to be fused into the Atlantic Community and its potential military manpower tapped so that it would flow into Community channels?

Last week the Western Big Three Foreign Ministers and the Bonn Government made an approach to solve these problems. U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman met with Bonn Chancellor Konrad Adenauer in Paris. They approved an agreement which moved Chancellor Adenauer to remark with rhetoric favour: "An historical event which has brought Western Germany forever into the Western camp."

The essentials of the agreement are: Bonn occupation will end but Allied troops will remain on West Germany. The Allies will have the right to intervene and to exercise control of the country in any emergency while in their own position to make decisions on the question of West German unity.

The new Allied-Bonn arrangement would await agreement on a European army. That is a multinational army composed of units from France, Germany, Belgium, Italy and Luxembourg.

The uncertainties surrounding the agreement stem from three sources. First of these is the political situation in West Germany where Dr. Adenauer's strength has been weakened by losses in recent by-elections to extreme Rightist parties and especially to the powerful, well-disciplined Socialist party of Dr. Kurt Schumacher. The Socialist party leader has accused Dr. Adenauer of a "sell-out" to the Allies. He is inflexibly opposed to the European army proposal and insists that Germany rearm as a national equal with the Atlantic Pact countries or refrain from participation.

The second factor is French distrust of German rearmament for which reason they piloted the European army idea into prominence in an effort to head off any independent German rearmament plan.

The third factor, and perhaps the most important of all, is the daze of unity, long the hope of all Germans and recently brought to the fore again by an East German invitation to West Germany to participate in nation-wide elections.

However the issues were resolved, even the most guileless optimists would not predict full West German membership in the N. A. T. O. before 1953.

GUILTY CROSS

The Colonial tower of San Francisco—the cause of humorous polemics between the Mayor of Santiago and the Prior of the Franciscan Fathers—has upset local painters. In accordance with an order from the Mayor reconstruction work has begun on the outside walls of the church and tower. Taking advantage of the ascent to the bell towers the Prior ordered that the tilted cross be straightened—the cross is 30 metres above the street and was struck by a strong bolt of lightning during a storm. Local painters have always liked to go into the green gardens of the Order, and from there paint the picturesque tower with ancient tilted cross. But now that they have seen the new position of the cross they have countered with bitter statements: "Now we must remake all our paintings because of the cross".

The world-famous cancer specialist, Dr. George Pack, who only recently operated on Eva Duarte de Peron in Argentina and several years ago treated the Maharaja of Kapurthala, has arrived in Santiago. He told reporters, "Friday I shall operate in the clinic of Dr. De Amara. It will be a modest contribution to the success of the Congress of Cancer Specialists."

"Simply by answering a question concerning the yearly export of Chilean nitrate, Professor Charles K. Ranson and his wife have won a free trip throughout South America. The fortunate couple arrived yesterday in Santiago. The luck began on a radio program called "Your Tropical Trip". Professor Ranson was called before a jury and asked about the annual exportation of nitrate from Chile. He answered that it was a million tons a year (he had only ten seconds to answer). His answer was closest to the fact: the actual figure is 690,000 tons per year.

Only last year Professor won another radio prize, a trip to Honolulu, on a program called "Earn Your Vacation". The Ransons will stay in Santiago about ten days.

TO THE AUTOMOBILE THIEF

who stole my automobile No. B V. 39 from my home, 751, Dr. Cadiz Street, leaving it abandoned at dawn last Sunday at Lo Encarnala on the corner of Crescencio Frázuriz, you are requested to come by the same spot to carry off the rest of the car that you left behind, after removing the wheels, radiator, etc., in order that I may collect my insurance since so long as there is anything left of the vehicle I can collect nothing. The automobile is still where you left it. Your cooperation will be much appreciated.

THE OWNER

Editor's Note: At press-time the automobile mentioned above had not been re-stolen. The owner of the car has been identified by the local press as Gustavo Campaña, newspaperman and radio script writer. Señor Campaña's insurance contract carried a clause stating that if the automobile reappeared before the end of ninety days no damages could be collected.

PUBLIPRESS

One of the advantages we have over most readers of the S. P. M. is that we can see what goes into print before publication and if we feel like commenting can do so at once without waiting for next week's edition. Thus we can acknowledge "Chatter Box's" comment on our column of the week before. We had asked for examples of words, which like "innings", have a singular form along with an "s" termination. Chatter Box came up with "series" and it is a good example—the dictionary states clearly that it serves both as singular and plural. Chatter Box also mentions that the headline "STIX NIX CRIX PIX" from "Variety" would produce blank despair on the face of any Englishman that came across it. It would do the same to 99 out of one hundred Americans. Probably ninety percent of those who do grasp the translation live, or have lived, within a one mile radius of Times Square. Although it will be comparable to translation from the Urdu (we used to speak it, but now have forgotten; you know how it is when you don't keep a language up) we shall attempt to clarify the meaning. First of all the strict meaning. In the terse language of Broadway: Stix means sticks, Nix is "says no to", Crix is critics and Pix is pictures. In other words the movie fans who live in the country do not swarm to the box office when a film that has been highly praised by reviewers arrives at the local flicker-house. WALL STREET LAYS AN AGG is, obviously, a reference to the crash of '29. "To lay an egg", when one is not speaking of a bird, means to drop a brick or put your foot in your mouth.

Words are fun, even the serious study of serious words. If you find yourself in the house some rainy afternoon without a game of canasta to fill your time pick up the dictionary and cruise through it. The dictionary, etymologically speaking, is a fascinating tome. Take the word "shibboleth," for instance. Today it means "password, watchword; a party slogan." Its original meaning in Hebrew was "ear of corn or stream in flood". Its present usage stems from the time Jephtha used it as a battle-line password to distinguish his men from the fleeing Ephraimites—who could not pronounce it correctly. The same idea is used in today's warfare. English speaking troops often employ words that cannot be pronounced easily by the opposition. The idea even went further in an anecdote published in these pages a few weeks ago. American soldier to unknown: "What are the words of 'The Star Spangled Banner'?" Answer: "Damned if I know them". Soldier: "Advance American soldier, and be recognized."

"Burcombe", also known as bunkum, was the name of a U. S. Congressman who made a pointless speech to impress his constituents. "Chauvinism", the practise of blind patriotism, comes from the name of Chauvin, a soldier who was continually boasting of Napoleon's glory. "Cabal", an intrigue, is a word composed of the initial letters of the names of five English gentlemen who conspired against authority. With these words we have hardly started in an investigation that can be as exciting as reading detective stories. But if the history, and use of words is an interesting study, the observation of the mis-use of words is even more fun. We blush to say that we have an Aunt who "blushes" when she is excited and often remarks on the "beautiful revenue of trees" in front of her house. Aldous Huxley once wrote a delightful story about a young man who thought the word "criminative" meant red, or pertaining to that color. Huxley recounts how the fellow bandied the word about in an intellectual manner, and, most of the time got away with it since none of his listeners knew the difference. Actually the word describes a remedy for rheumatism. And now we are going to stop before association makes someone think of descriptive words for this twittering.

A few weeks ago I commented that the performances of the Karadura Koncert Kompany, some twenty-five years ago, must have been as corny as their name. One of the organizers of that enterprise, Mr. Bert Gould, has since informed me that they were very good and that furthermore by their efforts were able to raise the sum of one thousand pounds for Earl Haij's Fund. The members of the party, were all members of the British Legion and that once more demonstrates my contention that Legion Members of those days were more serious about their membership and the objects of the Legion than the new members of nowadays. To anyone who may feel offended at my comments about the name of the company, I apologise most sincerely, but nevertheless I still consider that the Name, Karadura Koncert Kompany, was a crummy one. Or should I say "krumby"?... Incidentally, the suggestion put forward by "JOE" last week that the apparent lack of enthusiasm on the part of the new members may be attributed to the fact that there are now more ladies who qualify for membership, and so forth, doesn't convince me very much. I recall a dinner at the Country Club, two or three years ago, at which the ladies sang the barrack room ballades of the 1939-1945 at- tray with quite as much gusto on husiasm as the men. And anyone who states that the ladies are not as keen on a party as the men prevaricates, and the truth is not in him. Mr. Bert Gould, who has always been active in Legion affairs, and for his service in the Second World War was decorated by His Majesty's, is still around and very vital. Now that the election of officers is approaching, I emphatically suggest that the members of the Legion couldn't do better than vote for Mr. Albert C. Gould, M. M., as President. This is not a paid announcement. It's just the expression of a personal opinion, to which anyone is entitled. Mr. Gould may put his medals on back to front, or the wrong way round, when he attends Church Parade, but, as he says, "What the heck! The Sergeant-Major won't be here!"

D. A. P. in his "Hell Box" the other week expressed his confusion at vagaries of the English Language as used by the reporter of a Cricket Match. He needn't feel so upset about it, because I am more than sure that there are many Englishmen who would be as equally puzzled by many of the terms. . . . And I can't imagine a greater punishment for any Englishmen than to be cast on a desert island with the Sports Section of an American newspaper as a sole companion. . . . I have to confess that, even after a residence of some six years in New York, and in spite of the fact that I was a staunch supporter of the Baseball Team formed by the employees of the Bank that had the doubtful honor of being me among them, I still am unable to explain the finer points of the game. . . . Once it was explained to me very carefully by a profound student of the sporting world how Baseball was evolved from cricket, but I can't even recall that interesting point. . . . Maybe the fact that the ground which the team used was attached to-Tromer's Brewery in Brooklyn, and the liquid refreshment was good and plentiful has something to do with the fact that I didn't pay as much attention to the game as I should have done. . . . As for the word "innings", which bothered D. A. P. so much, I was always under the impression that it was one of those peculiar English words with a plural form, but is really singular. Such as "series". The question is one for a philologist to explain, and if there is one in the audience, now's the time for him to step forward and do his stuff. . . . Talking of the difference between English as used in England and the United States one must not overlook that famous weekly of sports business "Variety". . . . Such notable headlines as STIX NIX CRIX PIX and WALL STREET LAYS AN EGG are undoubtful misapprehensions but I don't think they will produce anything but blank despair on the face of any Englishman who comes across them. . . . Yet the fact remains that there are English people who firmly believe that they can understand fully, and will be understood fully, in the United States just because they can make sense out of the stories in the Saturday Evening Post and Ladies' Home Journal. It isn't as easy as that believe me!

An underground gasoline tank blew up in the crowded centre of Bristol this week, killing at least seven persons and shattering store fronts in a quarter mile area. Weekend shoppers were bowled over by the blast and persons in nearby houses were trapped as ceilings and walls collapsed. . . . Discovery of extensive manganese deposits in the northwestern areas of British Guiana was reported by the Barima Gold Mining Company (Canada) Ltd. The report said preliminary tests indicated a large tonnage of rather low grade ore.

Prime Minister Churchill and the three other ministers who are to accompany him to Washington will depart on the Queen Mary on December 29, for discussions with President Truman, expected to begin January 3rd. The other ministers are Anthony Eden, Lord Ishmay, and Lord Cherwell. On leaving, Washington Mr. Churchill will visit Canada at the invitation of the Canadian Government and spend two or three days in Ottawa. The two visits will probably take about a fortnight, after which Mr. Churchill will return home by air.

Charles Norris, a 24-year-old American in Paris was ready for bed when he saw a picture of Princess Margaret in a newspaper. He was so smitten with her beauty he decided to attempt a meeting. The newspaper reported that the Princess was attending a charity ball that night. Norris put on his tuxedo and borrowed 8,000 francs for a ticket to the ball. Making his way through a knot of admirers around Margaret, he offered his hand. He said: "Excuse me, Your Highness, I should like to present myself. I am an American and my name is Chuck Norris". "I am delighted to meet you," the Princess replied. When Norris asked for a dance, however, she told him that she sorry, but was "booked up".

Protestant and Roman Catholic churches throughout Britain will offer special prayers and thanksgiving on December 11th for the restoration to health of King George VI. The King, recovering from a lung operation, celebrates the fifteenth anniversary of his accession to the throne on December 11th. . . . When American troops in Korea offered to share their Thanksgiving holiday food supplies with other United Nations troops, the offer was politely declined by British units. They explained that they would rather wait for the special rations until a British-type turkey celebration was more in order at Christmas time.

A move to re-create the Home Guard, the voluntary body of part-time soldiers who stood guard over Britain while her army was fighting abroad in World War II, was approved this week by the House of Commons on its second reading. No vote was taken, although Labour party members questioned the necessity for the measure and said that it would offer amendments to it in the committee stage of consideration that will follow the second reading.

BUSINESS DEPT. Francis J. Whitehair, the Under Secretary of the Navy, conferred with President Truman who suddenly asked him: "One of your ancestors was the chief of the Osage tribe, wasn't he?" "Yes, Mr. President," said Mr. Whitehair. "And didn't he trade 5,000 acres of choice Kansas farmland for a carload of whiskey?" said the President. "Yes, sir," said Mr. Whitehair. The President smiled at the Under Secretary and said: "Don't you go trading any carriers without talking to me."

SCHOOL DEPT. On Thursday afternoon, in New Haven, there was a meeting of university presidents. One of the attendants was Dr. Franklin Murphy, the new head of the University of Kansas, who is only 35 years old—the young at head of a major university. The 35-year-old Murphy said to Whitney Griswold, the president of Yale: "I've become somewhat of a curiosity—being pointed out, the youngest, etc. I think I should have my hair pulled out or else dye it gray." "Just wait two years," the 40-year-old Griswold replied. "Two more years at the job—and your hair will fall out."

PHOTO DEPT. Dr. Albert Einstein continues to rank among those whose photo is published most frequently. A visitor at Princeton said to Einstein: "You are a scientist, mathematician, teacher, author—if you were asked to give your profession, what would you say?" "My profession?" said Einstein, "photographer's model."

ART. DEPT. Tom Benton, whose home is in Kansas City, decided to use his talents as a painter to help the victims of the recent flood. He therefore prepared lithographs depicting the plight of the flood-sufferers, struck off enough copies for Congress and mailed the lithographs to the Congressmen in the hope of inducing them to legislate increases in relief funds. . . . Most of the Congressmen, unaware of the worth of a Benton lithograph, ignored it. Rep. Dick Bolling and his staff visited the offices of his colleagues, retrieved the Benton lithographs from their waste-baskets, took the lithographs to Kansas City and sold them at auction for the benefit of flood victims.

SCHOOL DEPT. Michael DiSalle, the Price Stabilizer, was invited to make the commencement address at St. Mary's, in South Bend, Ind. DiSalle's daughter, a pupil at that school, is a member of the graduating class. In his letter of acceptance, DiSalle told the head of the school: "Thanks for your invitation. I was going to be there anyway."

Mike Todd has become the jumping jack of show business. Before he came to Broadway he won and lost several fortunes, and a series of hit shows made him rich again. Then he gambled it away, made another fortune and lost that too. Now he and Lowell Thomas have been devoting their time to the production of tri-dimensional movies. Sir Alexander Korda saw a sample, spread the word that it would revolutionize movie-making and again Todd is riding high, with capital gain offers which can net him several millions. "I'll come back to Broadway only when I have enough not to worry about a review," said the producer. "I'll produce a show only when I feel that my life doesn't go with it."

The Overseas Press Club, which invited the Mayor to be guest of honor at a luncheon to discuss and be questioned about his recent trip abroad, received no reply. They withdrew the invitation. . . . Sen. Bricker hears that Michael DiSalle's official announcement of his candidacy for the U. S. Senate will be made on Feb. 15. . . . The Associated American Artists, which developed a ceramics business for its 20 artists, now is venturing into another field—fabrics. They'll be featured at Macy's. . . . As of last night, Dar Topping says he still hasn't heard from Joe DiMaggio about next year's plans.

THE WINDFALL

BY ERSKINE CALDWELL

WHEN Waldo Murdock, whose trade, when he felt like working at it, was rendering errand services, came into the unexpected inheritance, there had been no commotion in Brighton to equal it since the time when, eleven years before, one of the Perkins brothers, with no more forewarning than a knock at the door, slipping, ran away in broad daylight with the resident minister's second wife.

As for the townspeople, none of them, not even Aunt Susie Shock, who told fortunes by reading tea leaves or coffee grounds if necessary, had ever had the remotest idea that anything in the nature of sudden wealth would fall into Waldo Murdock's scrawny lap, while at the same time, of course, people were quick to say that if he had not been sitting down, as usual, instead of being up and doing, there would have been no lap of his for it to fall into; and certainly Waldo himself, even though he daydreamed about almost everything else under the sun, had never entertained such a far-fetched thought in his mind.

Waldo did not even know he had a brother in Australia and, even if he had known it, he would never have imagined that he would be remembered in a will. From Bangor to Burlington, all the Murdock's especially the home-owning branch of the family, were known throughout the entire region north of Boston for their trait, which relatives-by-marriage and other outsiders called cousins as, of not acknowledging kinship with one another. And so it was, it was all Waldo could do to force himself, after having cast aside pride of long standing, publicly to admit blood relationship with another Murdock, even if he had lived in Australia, long enough to go to the bank in Waterville and cash the check the lawyer from Portland had handed him.

"Pay no mind to what the people say," he told the clerk in the bank. "There may be others in the State of Maine bearing the name of Murdock, but there's not a single drop of mingling blood that I would own to. I'd sooner claim kinship with my old black cow than I would with a so-called Murdock."

Dessie, Waldo's wife, was, at the beginning, the most levelheaded of all. She maintained her mental balance, if only at the start, much better than Waldo and some of the townspeople. Dessie, although afterward she regretted not having gone alone, even remained at home and tended the house chores while Waldo was away in Waterville cashing the check. There was only one thing she did out of the ordinary that forenoon, and that was to make Justine, the hired girl, air the parlor and shake out the scatter rugs, even if it were not Saturday.

During all that time the neighbors were ringing her up on the phone, and asking what she was going to do with all that money, but that, too in the beginning, failed to veer the even measure of her thoughts.

"When the check is cashed, if it's not worthless, and it'll be a wonder if it's not, there'll be ample time at hand for me to go out of my way to think about it," she told them. "Right now, and likely forever after, it's nothing but a scrawl and a promise on a scrap of paper."

Dessie went back to work with her bus a little lighter each time she finished talking to one of the neighbors on the phone. She was not exactly worried, she told Justine, but she was feeling impatient. Waldo failed to come home at the noon hour for dinner, and it was not long after that before she, like everybody else in Brighton who was working himself into a frenzy over Waldo's sudden windfall, began thinking what could be done with the money.

Late that afternoon Waldo drove up to the dooryard and left the automobile standing there instead of putting it away in the shed where it belonged.

Justine came running to tell her.

"Mr. Murdock's back!" Justine cried, twisting her fingers.

"Hold better bet!" Dessie said. "If he hadn't got home when he did, he could have just kept on traveling, for all the concern I'd ever have."

"I guess Mr. Murdock has the real money," Justine said, looking over her shoulder. He looked like he was feeling good about it when he got out of the auto."

Dessie leaped to her feet. "Go on about your tasks, whatever they be, Justine," she said crossly. "It's none of your money, if there is any, anyway."

Justine went to the kitchen and watched Waldo come along the path to the side door.

Waldo came in, throwing his hat on the table. He looked at Dessie for a moment, cocking his head a little to one side. His coat pocket sagged heavily.

Neither Dessie nor Waldo spoke for a while.

Presently Dessie walked up to him and held out her hand.

"Guess I'll take charge for the time being, Waldo," she said stiffly. "Hand it over."

Waldo reached into his coat pocket, drawing out a mostly empty bottle and handing it to her. She stepped back, looking at it severely. Then, without a word, she grabbed the bottle by the neck and slung it with all her might across the room. It struck the wall, shattering into dozens of pieces.

"I might have known it, and I would have, if I had only had the sense God has given most people!" she said, raising her voice. "I've got only myself to blame!"

Waldo reached for a chair. "Now, there's no cause for a human to take on so, Dessie," he said. "Everything turned out, from here to there and back again, like it was made to order."

of greenbacks. The fact was that simply around the corner with a piece of heavy chain. Dessie's large, her money in constant she saw the money. The scowling lines on her face disappeared completely while she watched Waldo bounce the roll up and down in his hand.

"All I've got to say," she began, "is that I never thought I'd live to breathe the air of the day when a deceased Murdock would have the decency to do the honorable thing with his money, even if he couldn't find means of taking it along with him when he went, which would be a wonder if he didn't try to do and he probably did, anyway."

Waldo leaned back and let her talk to her heart's content. He felt so good himself that he wanted her to have a good time, too. He let her speak what came to mind without uttering a single grumble.

"Have you any more blood relations that we've neglected to remind ourselves of, Waldo?" she asked, leaning toward him. "It seems to me that I recall your second cousin in Skowhegan saying once some years ago that a Murdock went to California at the end of the Spanish-American War and prospected for gold. It might be that he struck it rich out there, which a lot of people did, so I've read, if reading can be believed. If we'd been more particular about your blood relations in the past, we wouldn't have to sit here now and wrack our brains trying to call them to mind at a time like this."

"Guess I have no blood relations of the name of Murdock," Waldo said firmly.

Dessie drew a deep breath and looked longingly at the large roll of greenbacks bounding up and down in her husband's hand.

Suddenly she leaned forward and grasped the roll desperately. Waldo snatched it from her.

"This is Murdock's money," she said quickly. "A Murdock made it, and a Murdock should spend it."

Dessie sat up decisively. "Well, anyway, we'll be sensible," she said calmly. "We won't throw it away on trifles like a lot of people would who I could mention if I had a mind to."

"I've got it all settled, Dessie," Waldo told her, smiling as kindly feeling came over him. "Guess we can afford to have good time now at our age. May we won't be lingering here much longer, which would be a shame if we hadn't taken full advantage of it by the time we were. Wouldn't be no sense in hoarding it only to have to pass it along to somebody else after we are gone."

Dessie nodded approvingly, her spirits rising again.

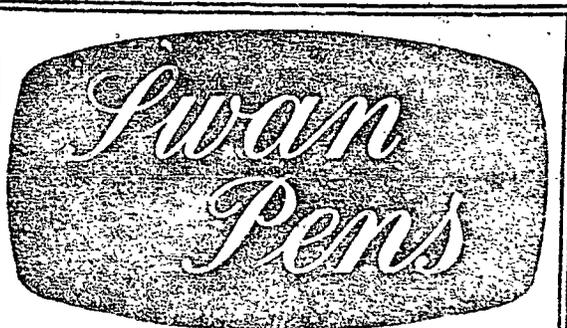

"I've always wanted a fur neck-piece, Waldo," she said, her face bright with hope.

Dessie did not sleep a single wink that night. For an hour after they had gone to bed, she lay silently tense, listening. Waldo did not stir. He lay on his back listening to Dessie's labored breathing.

Just before midnight Dessie got up as quietly as she possibly could and tiptoed to the foot of the bed where Waldo had laid his pants over the back of a chair. It was dark in the room with the shades drawn, and she took care in feeling her way to the chair. She was trembling nervously when she touched it, and the jerking of her breath had started a pain in her chest. Without losing any more time she slid her hand into the pants pocket.

"Get you hand out of my pants, Dessie," Waldo said, rising up in bed. "Leave that money be."

Dessie dropped the pants without having touched the money, and went back to bed without a word. Neither of them spoke as she lay down again and tried to

Just as dawn was beginning to show the first signs of break up, Dessie slid carefully from the bed and crawled to her hands knees toward the chair. As she was rising up to reach the pants, Waldo sat up erectly.

"Don't want to have to mention again about you putting your hand in my pants pocket," he said. "Leave that money be, Dessie."

Dessie dropped the pants and went to the window. She stood there watching a red dawn break in the east. After a while she began dressing, and as she was leaving the chamber she heard Justine starting a fire in the kitchen stove.

While she and Justine were preparing breakfast, she began to realize how uneasy she really was about the money. She had spent a sleepless night worrying over the wealth, and she was afraid she would not get a chance to spend a single penny of it herself.

"Mrs. Murdock," Justine said, coming and standing beside her, "Carl and I could get mated right away if we had the money for a chamber suite."

"Let Carl Friend make his own money," Dessie said sharply, turning on the girl. "Me and my husband have worked hard all our lives for what we possess. It won't hurt Carl Friend to do the same for you, if he wants a family."

"I couldn't sleep much last night for staying awake wondering if you and Mr. Murdock wouldn't want to help me out," Justine said persistently. "Especially because I've worked here for you six years without asking favors, and I didn't think you'd miss a little of all that big inheritance from Australia."

"Mind your own affairs, Justine!" she said sharply. Besides, Carl Friend can get the money from his own family if he wants to furnish a house for you. Those Friends have made plenty of profit in roof-tinning in the past."

"They won't help any, Mrs. Murdock," Justine said sadly. "And Carl and I don't want to have to wait and wait and wait."

"You don't have to hurry the marriage for any reason, do you?" Dessie asked suspiciously.

Justine looked at her for several moments her thoughts racing through her mind.

"Not exactly," she admitted at last.

"Well, then," Dessie said, turning away. "In that case, you can afford to wait."

In turning abruptly she almost walked headlong into Waldo. He had come into the kitchen and emptied the coffee can into the kitchen. He went through the kitchen door the door without a word being spoken. Dessie watched him leave, wondering what he was about to do. She went to the window and watched as he walked to the tool shed and came out a moment later carrying a spade. With the coffee can in one hand and the spade over his shoulder, he disappeared out of sight behind the barn.

It was not until almost ten minutes had passed that Dessie realized what Waldo was doing behind the barn.

Just as she was opening the door to run out there and observe him from the corner of the barn, Waldo walked into view. He came toward the house, carrying the spade but not the coffee can. Dessie's heart sank. He had buried the can, and the money with it, and she had failed to get out there in time to see where the wealth had been hidden. She walked back into the kitchen and placed breakfast on the table.

Waldo came in a few minutes later washed his hands at the pump, and sat down at his place. He began eating as though nothing out of the ordinary had taken place out behind the barn. Neither she nor Waldo had anything to say to each other during the whole twenty minutes they were at the table. When he finished eating, he got up and put on his hat.

"Have some affairs to attend to in the village," he said shortly. "Will be away for the forenoon, the whole of it."

Dessie nodded. She had to grip her hands tightly in order to hide her impatience. She waited until Waldo had got into the car and driven over the hill out of sight, and then she grabbed Justine by the arm and pulled her through the door. Pushing Justine ahead, Dessie ran as fast as she could to the tool shed, where she quickly snatched up two spades, and then hurried toward the back of the barn.

She set Justine to digging right away, while she looked the ground over carefully, hoping to find evidence of a freshly covered hole. She searched for nearly half an hour without finding a single trace of the hole she was positive Waldo had dug, and after that she went to work digging methodically.

After several hours Justine slumped to the ground, completely exhausted. Dessie was tired, too, and the blisters on her hands made digging so painful that she could hardly bear to hold the spade to push the blade of the spade into the stony earth. She wanted to beg Dessie to let her rest some more, but when she glanced up and saw Dessie's closely clamped lips she knew it would be useless to ask.

Dessie stopped for a moment to ease her back. When her eyes were raised from the ground, she saw Fred Paxton leaning over the stone wall beside the road a hundred feet away.

"Going fishing, Dessie?" he called. "See you're digging fishing worms."

Dessie thrust her hand against the small of her aching back and straightened up a little more.

"Thought I might," she said slowly. "It's been a long time since I went."

"Now that you and Waldo have all that money to salute on," Fred said. "I guess you and him can afford to spend all your time doing nothing but fish, if you have a mind to."

"Maybe," she said, tightening her lips.

The mere mention of the money inflamed her thoughts until she could not see clearly. She bent over the spade, thrusting the blade into the rough, stony ground with all her might. She kept doggedly at it until she was certain Fred had walked out of sight over the hill.

Later she sent Justine to the kitchen for some bread and potatoes left over from breakfast, and when Justine returned, Dessie sat down in the shade of the barn and ate hurriedly.

"While I was in the house, Mr. Murdock phoned and said he wouldn't be back in the forenoon," Justine said. "He told me to tell you he would be away in the afternoon, too, the whole of it."

Dessie leaped to her feet.

"Why didn't you tell me right away when you came back a minute ago?" she said angrily.

Justine glanced at the stony ground.

"We're not going to dig out here the whole afternoon, too, are we, Mrs. Murdock?" she inquired pleadingly. "My hands are raw with blisters, and—"

"Never mind that," Dessie said firmly. "We are going to dig this afternoon, the whole of it!"

"But, Mrs. Murdock—"

"Shut up, Justine, and do as you are told!"

When Dessie fell on the bed at dusk that evening, she had never before in all her life felt so thoroughly miserable. Not only had she spent the entire day digging in the stony ground behind the barn, but, moreover, she had spent the whole day digging in the stony ground behind the barn. She had spent the whole day digging in the stony ground behind the barn. She had spent the whole day digging in the stony ground behind the barn.

The phone did not stop, and it sounded as if it never would as long as she lived. She got to her feet, pressing her hands over her ears in order to keep out the sound, and stumbled painfully to the hall. There she sat down in the chair beside the stand and lifted the receiver.

"Hello," she said unsteadily.

"Is this Waldo Murdock's wife?" a voice boomed.

"Yes," she answered, wondering who it could be.

"Then you'd better better yourself and fetch Waldo home where he belongs before it's too late. This is Charles Mason. Waldo is over here at my place, in the east part of town, annoying my household, and if he was a Democrat, I'd shoot him myself, instead of turning the job over to his wife. I've never in my life seen a man behave like he's doing. I guess it's public knowledge by now, otherwise I wouldn't be repeating it that sudden wealth has gone to his head, but that's still no excuse for the way he's doing."

"What's Waldo doing?" Dessie asked, shouting impulsively into the phone.

He's befuddling Miss Wilson, the schoolteacher who boards at my house, into going away with him. He says he's going to set sail for Australia or somewhere."

"But he can't do that!" Dessie protested.

"That's what any average, normal, level-minded human being would think, too, but I don't know what's going to stop Waldo if you don't come and get him right away, because he's already befuddled Miss Wilson into going to Boston with him tonight, and starting out again from there the first thing in the morning. He's got Miss Wilson believing everything he says, the lies along with the common truth. Looks like she would be on her guard, knowing she's associating with a newly rich, but she's too far gone now to listen to reason. Waldo pulls out his wealth every few minutes and wags it in front of her, and the sight of that big roll of greenbacks acts on her just like chloroform.

She hung up the receiver. A moment later she slumped brokenly in the chair. She called Justine several times before remembering that Justine had gone out with Carl Friend.

After that she hurried into her clothes and went back to the phone. She rang up Thornton Blanchard, her lawyer, and told him to come right away. He lived only a few miles distant, and he promised to be there within fifteen minutes.

While waiting for Thornton Blanchard, Dessie paced up and down the hallway, her face grim and determined. Her mind was made up, and she knew the sooner she acted the better she would feel.

After a few more minutes, he drove up to the house and stopped his car in the dooryard. Dessie went to the step, holding the door open for him. Thornton Blanchard hurried inside and went directly to the table in the center of the living room.

"Is there something wrong, Mrs. Murdock?" he asked anxiously.

"There is now, but it won't be much longer," she said, sitting down at the table. "Not after I set things right. I should have attended to twenty years ago."

Blanchard sat down and opened his brief case, slipping out a pad of ruled yellow writing paper and a pencil. He watched Dessie's face, waiting for her to begin.

Growing Popularity of Rugby League Football

Walter Pilkington

Sports Editor of the "Lancashire Evening Post" and contributor to leading sports publications in Britain

TWELVE months ago a French Rugby League team visited Britain and lost by nine points to 14 at Leeds, North of England centre of an area more attached to this offshoot of the rugby game than to Association football. Since then the French converts to the Rugby League code have become international champions. Thus the return visit to Yorkshire by France for a match at Hull against Other Nationalities (comprising ten Australians, two Scots and one New Zealander, all of them players with English Rugby League Clubs) was a recent attractive feature of a crowded programme spiced this winter by the tour of New Zealand, Kiwi

These visits and the French tour of Australasia this year when they broke crowd records nearly everywhere they went have proved the ever growing popularity of the Rugby League professional game.

Enthusiasts for the code are not without hope of inspiring a liking for the game in the United States American National Football League. Sunderland's idea is to encourage the formation of a pioneering team to visit the English centres in the same way that Jean Gallia's Frenchmen first came 17 years ago, learn the game and return to encourage others to take it up. The French learned so well that an international championship which included France was formed in 1935.

AUSTRALIAN TOUR

Although travel tired after playing 22 games with only two defeats in the recent Australian tour the Frenchmen went to New Zealand and lost only one of seven matches. To show how the game is thriving in Australia the Sydney cricket ground was packed, when the third and deciding Test Match was played, by 67,000 spectators. Winning by 35 points to 14, the Frenchmen inflicted a more overwhelming defeat than any suffered by an Australian test team in the long history of Rugby League in that country. The speedy clever Frenchmen taught lessons which will be taken to heart by the selectors in choosing a young team for a return tour of England and France next year. This girdling of the globe by a comparatively new game is amazing when one reflects that it was enduring a struggling infancy at in Lancashire and Yorkshire nearly 30 years ago. With the professionalism the game was introduced in Lancashire in 1895 and in Yorkshire in 1896. The Rugby League men eventually won the support of a more conservative public with the result that the Cup Final crowds became comparable with those seen at Wembley Stadium on great Association football occasions. Last year record receipts of £24,782 were taken at the stadium on the most eventful day in the Rugby League calendar.

HAD TO FIGHT FOR EXISTENCE

Yet it is well within the memory of many people how great clubs counties which gave it birth, and like Wigan, the Lancashire stronghold of the game, came into Wales. The time will come when being Wigan, since World-War II, has won the League title three times in six seasons and taken the Cup twice in the last four. The New Zealand Rugby League club has been Lancashire champions and Cup winners every year since 1945 and 13 times altogether

BRITISH LEGION

The Committee for the year 1st November 1951 to 31st October 1952, is as follows:

Mr. Allen Price, Hon. President.
 Rev. Edgar Pearson, Hon. Chaplain.
 Mr. T. A. Moodie, Chairman.
 C. O. Hardy, Vice-Chairman.
 D. Madden, Hon. Treasurer.
 R. W. Jeffery, Hon. Secretary.
 H. P. Rushforth, D. M. King, and Miss K. McLean.

Among those who came down from Santiago for the cricket weekend we noticed Mr. and Mrs. Ian McLaran, Mr. and Mrs. Dorien Cooper and Mr. Ivor Davies.

Mr. and Mrs. K. T. Russell spent the weekend in Vifa, returning by road on Monday.

Mr. A. Forbes Robertson was a visitor to Vifa del Mar and is leaving this week to Buenos Aires.

All members of the Women's Diocesan Union of St. Paul's Church, Cerro Concepcion wish to thank all the ladies who attended their recent Bridge-Canasta Tea; also those who contributed cakes, flowers etc., which helped to make the afternoon such a success.

On Friday, December 14th, a Xmas Sale will take place at the residence of Mrs. Allen Price, wife of H. B. M. Consul General, Calle 6 Poniente No. 50, Vifa del Mar. There will be plum puddings, Xmas cakes, candy, cookies, Xmas gifts and two Braine letters. From 2.30 p. m. to 7.30 p. m.

The American Women's group are having their monthly sale at the Instituto Chileno-Norteamericano, Wednesday, December 5th from 3.30 p. m. to 7.30 p. m.

Miss Monica Whitty celebrated her 15th birthday last Saturday with a most delightful party.

which took place at her home in Vifa. Those present were—
 The Misses Jacqueline and Maria Bages, Valerie Baird, Mr. Olivos, Ana Sanchez, Maria Olea and Maria Angelica Segovia, Joyce Powell, Elena Sureda, C. Silva, Alice Porter, J. Avayú, Nimeria Lancien, Gloria Lacquanta, E. Calderón, Silvia Fabiani, Nadine Clifton, Yvonne Olaya, Xenia Guarda, Isabel Mangruga and Laura Romani and Messrs. C. Cross, M. Barry, J. Gayán, A. Anker, A. Silva, R. Pollmann, A. Castilla, S. McCall, P. McCall, G. Villafra, G. Garca, H. Vicencio, J. Cavere, A. Velarde, P. Garca, E. Purcell, J. Quintana, J. Porter, D. Costa, E. Rogers, R. Perez A. Vercellino, L. Guerra, E. Fischer, R. Thomas, P. Plaza, O. Soto, E. Madden, F. Aranda, D. Murdoch, P. León, R. Aranda, C. Naylor, I. Lagerborg and O. Olivos.

TOC H BIRTHDAY FESTIVAL

This year Toc H Craftock Branch and Toc H (Women's Section), Valparaiso, celebrated their Birthday Festival during the week-end November 24th - 25th. The following members from Santiago attended:— Mrs. James C. T. Henry, Grace Jones, Isabel Holloway and the Misses Margaret Cater, Sally Fuenzalida, Tatiana Antipoff, Otilia Bozza, Jane Plunkett and Margaret Henry.

On Saturday evening there was a short service in the Union Church at which the Rev. Murdoch MacLeod officiated and Mr. Albert Turner played the organ. The Rev. Edgar Pearson gave a most interesting and appropriate sermon, and specially mentioned the valuable help that Toc H were giving to the Seamen's Mission.

After the Service a delightful cold supper was served in the adjoining hall. The Hon. Commissioner, Mr. David Blair, then welcomed the Santiago members and friends who had come to spend the evening with Toc H.

The Orange won the toss and as is usual in these one innings games put St. Peter's in. By lunch time at 1.15 P. M. the score was 7 for 49 runs, St. Peter's having lost 3 wickets for 3 runs and 4 wickets for 11 runs. But Naylor's 20 was a very useful help to his side and the innings closed for 59. For the Orange, Vial had 6 wickets for 21 runs and Henderson and Stringfellow each got 2 wickets. The fielding was mediocre; although 3 catches were held, several were dropped and the ground fielding needs a lot of practice and improvement.

The Orange started their innings equally badly losing 3 wickets for 9 runs and with no one except Shearman, who scored a "shaky" 10 runs, making double figures—they were all out for 36, leaving St. Peter's the winners by 23 runs. Naylor and Wilkins bowled unchanged for St. Peter's, the former taking 3 for 18 and Wilkins 7 for 13. In fact it is fair to say that these two boys won the match for their side.

St. Peter's fielding was also only mediocre and several catches were dropped, but undoubtedly the better side won.

SEAMEN'S INSTITUTE
 We are informed that Mr. Henry Boys has been appointed resident Layman of the Valparaiso Seamen's Institute as from the 1st December next.

Mr. William H. Hallam, who worked in the Accounts Department of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company up to the year 1931 when he returned to England. In 1935 he left this country to serve in the first World War, joining the Royal Engineers, "D" Company Signalling Corps. In August of that year he was sent to France, where he was engaged in communications work.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC

The picnic will be held in the Parque del Salitre, El Salto, on Saturday the 8th of December.

The Little Man Of The Chimes

A Christmas Gift For Dad

Once upon a time there was a Very Old Lady who lived by herself in a small brown house. She had a rocking chair, a thick storybook, and a clock that chimed. Every day the Very Old Lady sat in her rocking chair beside the window. Slowly she rocked back and forth and read stories from the thick book. There was a story about a white-topped mountain in Japan, one about a gray castle in Spain with a thousand rooms. And one was a story of a golden horse in Africa that could run faster than the wind.

At the end of each hour, as the Very Old Lady read from the thick story book, the clock played its chimes. They were as sweet as the song of a bird in Springtime, as sweet as a babbling brook rippling over the pebbles, as sweet as a baby cooing to its mother.

The Very Old Lady was happy, for she loved the clock and her thick storybook and her rocking chair.

But one day when the Very Old Lady sat reading, the chimes in the clock sounded tired. Every hour, as they rang out, the notes came more slowly. Finally, at six o'clock, the chimes did not ring at all. The only sound from the clock was its soft ticktock.

The Very Old Lady opened the glass door that covered the face of the clock. She took down a key and wound the spring. She tapped the clock very gently. Then she sat down in the rocking chair to wait.

The hands of the clock told the Very Old Lady that it was seven o'clock. But again no chimes sounded. Only the quiet ticktock of the clock could be heard. The Very Old Lady waited for another hour. But at eight o'clock the chimes did not play. At nine the Very Old Lady put away the thick storybook, turned out the light, and went to bed. She thought and thought about the chimes and wondered what could have happened to them. She wondered whether they would ever play again.

The Very Old Lady was almost asleep when she thought she heard a queer sound in the room. It was close to her ear. She sat up in bed and lighted the lamp. She got up and looked in all the corners of the room. There was no one there. She looked behind the door. There was no one there.

"It must have been the wind in the trees," said the Very Old Lady. And she turned out the light and went back to bed.

She closed her eyes. But just as she was drifting to sleep, she thought she heard the queer sound again.

The Very Old Lady sat up in bed and lighted her lamp. She got up and looked in all the corners of the room. There was no one there. She looked under the bed. There was no one there. She looked behind the door. There was no one there.

"It must have been a dog barking outside," said the Very Old Lady. And she turned out her light and went back to bed.

"Don't turn out the light! I can't see," commanded a tiny voice.

The Very Old Lady sat up and lighted the lamp. And there on a post of her bed stood a wee man no taller than the Very Old Lady's thumb. He was wearing a little brown hat, brown trousers, and a jacket as green as the grass in the meadow. On each of his boots glittered a golden buckle.

"My goodness!" exclaimed the Very Old Lady. "Who are you?"

"I'm Chymer," said the wee man. "I play the chimes in your clock."

"But the chimes didn't play tonight," said the Very Old Lady.

"I know!" said Chymer. "I'm tired of playing them. Every hour of every day for years and years I've played the chimes. I want a vacation. I want to travel. I want to see all forests and gray castles and white-topped mountains and blue oceans. I'm going to go places and see all these things!"

The Very Old Lady smiled and nodded her head. "Yes," she said. "They are beautiful. But those things are all many miles away. How will you travel so far?"

"I'm going to walk," replied Chymer. He pointed to his feet. "See my shiny new boots!" he said proudly. "They have thick soles; so they won't wear out."

"But you're so tiny!" exclaimed the Very Old Lady. "You will be stepped on. Dogs will growl at you. You'll soon be hungry and cold and tired if you start out to see all those things."

Chymer's face grew sad.

"Oh, dear!" he said. "I didn't think of that! Perhaps I'd better not go after all. But I can't play the chimes for you when I'm not happy. And I'll never be happy again until I learn all about the beautiful places and things in the world."

The Very Old Lady was silent for a few moments. She was thinking of the chimes that sounded like the song of a bird in springtime and a babbling brook and a cooing baby. She was thinking about the wee man who wanted to travel to tall forests and white-topped mountains and blue oceans. At last she spoke.

"I go traveling every day," she said. "Every day I read my thick story book. It tells me about many beautiful places and things in the world. If you will stay and play the chimes in my clock, I will read to you from my book. Then, in imagination, we can travel together all over the world."

And that is just what happened. Every day after that the Very Old Lady sat in her rocking chair by the window, with Chymer perched on her shoulder. The Very Old Lady read to him from the thick storybook. She read about the white-topped mountain in Japan, the gray castle in Spain with a thousand rooms, and the golden horse in Africa that could run faster than the wind.

After that every hour, day after day, Chymer climbed into his home in the clock and rang the chimes—chimes as sweet as the song of a bird in springtime, as sweet as a babbling brook rippling over pebbles, as sweet as a baby cooing to its mother.

Your father would rather have a gift you made than the most expensive present you can buy. Here is something you can make that will surely please him. Ask Mother to buy you a small pocket comb. Now lay this on a piece of paper, and trace carefully around it. By drawing another line 1/2 cm outside this line, you have a pattern for a comb case, just a little larger than the comb. Use using bright yarn. (Don't forget to have one end open, so that the comb can slide in.) Tie a small strip of felt around the last tooth of the comb, to make a little handle for pulling the comb from the case. There it's all finished, and doesn't it look nice?

The Land Of Story-Books

by Robert Louis Stevenson.

At evening when the lamp is lit,
Around the fire my parents sit,
They sit at home and talk and sing.

And do not play at anything,
Now, with my little gun, I crawl
All in the dark along the wall,
And follow round the forest track
Away behind the sofa back.

There, in the night, where none
(can spy,
All in my hunter's camp I lie,
And play at books that I have read
Till it is time to go to bed.

I see the other far away,
As if in firelit camp they lay,
And I, like to an Indian scout,
Around their party prowled about
So, when my nurse comes in for me.

Home I return across the sea,
And go to bed, with backward look,
At my dear land of Story-books

AUNT KITTY WISHES MANY HAPPY RETURNS TO FRANCIS REES, MICHAEL COLLELA, PETER FIRMIN, MARGARET CASTELAARS LESLIE POLLOCK AND DAVID VALDES

AUNT KITTY'S LETTER

Today is the very last day of November, and do you know what that means, children? It means that in only 25 days, old Saint Nicholas will come creeping down the chimney with his pack full of toys. Have you made out your Christmas list, Bonnie? And you, Peter and Michael, it's time to start being very good boys so that Santa will bring you more than a bundle of sticks! And all of you had better start thinking about making presents for your friends and families, because Christmas will soon be here!

ANTOFAGASTA

THE retiring British Ambassador, Sir Bertrand Jerram, K. C. M. G., arrived at Antofagasta in the M. V. "Sarmiento" on November 13th en route to England. His Excellency was met by the British Consul, Mr. Thomas Bates, O. B. E. As the vessel was to load minerals at Mejillones on the following day, Sir Bertrand accepted the invitation of Mr. L. V. Duff to stay overnight at Antofagasta. This allowed him sufficient time to enjoy a motor run towards the pampa, visit the Auto Club and to call upon the Intendente of the Province.

On re-visiting Antofagasta, the Ambassador took the opportunity to present the Insignia and Warrant of Appointment of membership of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire to the British Vice Consul, Mr. Stuart E. Sword. The presentation ceremony was celebrated at the English Club in the presence of the Dean of the Consular Corps, Don Max de la Fuente Locker, Consul General of Peru; the British Consul, Mr. Thomas Bates, O. B. E., don Ramon Yoma, Presidente of the Chamber of Commerce; Mr. Mansel McMahan, Vice Consul of the United States; and Mr. J. G. Macfarlane, Presidente of the English Club. Among others who were present were the Rev. J. B. D. Cotter, and Messrs. Malcolm E. Sword, E. McLean, P. Williamson, J. R. W. Stanfield, W. R. James, W. Hughes, L. V. Duff, A. P. Sexton, T. J. K. Barber, S. Daere, D. J. Dakin, J. L. Hill, C. F. Ferrand, C. Wood, R. Ferrand, J. W. Balshaw, W. E. Mitchell, G. W. Craig, Captain Wardale of the "Sarmiento" and Captain Rice of the "Salamanca".

"decoration to so loyal and long-standing a member of the British Consulate at Antofagasta. Mr. Vice-Consul Sword has been performing valuable duties at this Consulate, of which he has often been in charge, for a great many years, and is a highly respected member of the British community. Stuart Elliot Sword:— I am commanded by His Majesty the King to deliver to you personally, not by way of investiture, but in an official and ceremonious manner, the badge of a Member of the Civil Division of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire which the King was graciously pleased to confer on the occasion of His Majesty's last Birthday in recognition of your long and valuable services. I am commanded at the same time to hand to you the Grant of Dignity signed by the Queen Mother and bearing His Majesty's sign manual." Following the ceremony cocktails were served and the health of Mr. Sword was drunk by the assembly.

Punctually as the clock struck noon, the Ambassador was conducted into the room by the Consul and spoke as follows:—"It is with peculiar pleasure that, as my very last act as Ambassador in Chile, I obey His Majesty's command to deliver a

Sir Bertrand Jerram, accompanied by the Consul, proceeded to Mejillones by car at 10.00 a. m. on Wednesday to rejoin the "Sarmiento". His Excellency was attended by Mr. John Hopwood, M. C. and others before bidding farewell to Chilean soil.

In accordance with time-honoured custom, the majority of the ex-servicemen mustered at the English Club and, so far as is known, only one member failed to answer "Here" to his name and escaped the ensuing operations. He may have deserted by air, as he was not observed either wriggling across no-man's land on his stomach, or swimming from the wreck to a Cayley float.

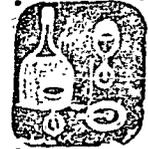

At the bugle's call, the troops were transported in mechanised vehicles of 1914 to 1945 vintage to the Rancho, where the roll call was taken and the survivors of the initial skirmishes were found to comprise the following veterans:— R. Ferrand, President, C. Wood, Vice-President, A. J. Brown, Secretary, R. L. Davies, Treasurer, D. H. Maird, J. W. Belshaw, T. J. K. Barber, J. K. Benson, M. M. D. J. Dakin, A. F. Daniell, E. S. Dyer, C. F. Ferrand, J. L. Hill, E. H. Holmes-Brown, J. Hopwood, M. C., I. McDowall, M. C., E. McLean, W. E. Mitchell, R. Pocock, R. P. Perez, R. A. C. Pritchard, H. F. Rooke, J. Sater, S. E. E., the American Vice-Consul, Mr. M. McMahan, and Mr. A. Grandys of the Dutch Forces had been recruited as guests.

Little time was lost in sounding "Come to the cook-house door, boys", to which there was a ready response. Since the close of the campaign some of the brave lads have been heard to opine that the rations were of such quality that the reply of the senior hand of the mess to the enquiry of the officers of the day was a saluted "No complaints, Sir". However, such was the confusion created in the ranks by thrust and counter thrust that it is difficult to determine precisely of what those rations consisted. Since an important feature of the general tactical strategy had seemed to consist of their being thoroughly washed down, it is possible that it was the iron rations that had been dished out.

The serious stage of the manoeuvres included the individual firing off of toasts, executed by numbers in Busley-like perfection by R. Ferrand who gave "The King", C. Wood who welcomed the "Visitors", S. E. Sword who recalled a host of "Absent Friends" and A. J. Brown who spoke of "Sweet-hearts and Wives"; but a Big Bertha blast was exploded by E. W. Witcombe. The force of the blast apparently knocked out the Sergeant Major, for he proved incapable of reporting exactly what it was all about. A wounded soldier who limped in imagines that the rollicking Major, dealt with such confident subjects as Montgomery and Massadeh, the triangle of error and love's sorrow, pinching noses on a lonely retreat and what Gladstone said in 1891, plus an expression of his opinion as to whether Scotch boys should wear hodpods or tw out every now and then to say to his say, but merely they were blue-eyed with rifle butte before they could say it again.

A rallying call of "Up, Guatils, and at 'em saw all tanks jump to it as they did at Waterloo. "It" being the hospitable Rancho Bar, behind which were ranked the invitingly grinning sappers who had valiantly blazed a way for the advancing sappers. The movement developed into a brisk general action that became further enlivened when a piano, which had been cunningly camouflaged in its dark retreat, was spotted and commandeered. Relentlessly frog-marched to the canteen, it was promptly stripped of every removable piece of equipment and clothing by the M. P. It threatened to collapse with shell-shock upon being displayed in all its pristine nakedness, but made a startling recovery when copiously lubricated with whatever class of medicine, strictly of a household nature, that came to the hand of the Sick Berth Attendants. The timely arrival of scouts with a prisoner, Bob Condi of the American Legion, saved the critical emergency that had arisen from developing into a military d'sastre. Bob proceeded to do his stuff, and if Sanlago Branch failed to hear the responses of the rank and file gathered around the camp fire, it was not the fault of the Antofagasta troops.

So continuous became the roar of barrack-room voters to a starting point by enemy skirmishers passed almost unobserved. They wormed their way to the rear, cleared the breach of landmines, and ambushed comrade John Hopwood whom they carried off in triumph to their base at Mejillones, despite the stout resistance he offered, a prisoner in dress, and the rest of the Lancers became ever fainter. It would seem that the "boys" who hazy as to the hour at which determining phases of the action occurred, or who were the direct strategists of this historic military event. Let us imagine then that the good-old hangings steel crossbar had clanged 2 a. m. and that unconquerable Arthur Seymour and John Brown (General) among the plotting General Staff. We would even amend the stricken hour to 230 thereby we could escape our martial (or unseemly) exasperation. In any case, the expert scrumming of a sticky-fingered "barn" "won" from heaven knows where a silver cup of fantastic proportions and unfathomable capacity. The order "Fall in" was given and the phalanx almost did fall into it, for it brimmed with a insidious brew concocted of ever liquid ingredient stocked in the canteen or in any neighbouring camp. Beer was betrotted to whiskey, liqueur linked with pisco-cognac coquetted with vermouth and each with one another; the falsified frivolous with the imported. This was first a hand conceived, get-together, one-a-all-united, one-for-the-long-long road loving-cup dram. Obedient to command and willing to serve every man did his duty and partook that probably was what finally ensured the hard-work victory, with its compensating glory for the maimed and wounded of the cheers of the welcoming homefolk when they reached their billets in time for breakfast. In short, as we stated at first, we celebrated another British Legion armistice dinner at Antofagasta.

(The editors are happy to welcome a new Antofagasta correspondent, Mr. T. Gaterling, well-known resident of the Port City. We feel sure that readers will join us in the wish that Mr. Gaterling's reports become a weekly feature of these columns —ED.)

Mrs. Ann Maclean and children, Miss Fred Dixon, left for Buenos Aires on the 18th September, from whence they left by the "Hornet Grange" for New Zealand. They expect to be absent from Punta Arenas for about six months.

We deeply regret to record the death which took place recently in Santiago, of Mrs. Kenneth Carr, an old resident of Punta Arenas, and take this opportunity of expressing our sympathy with Mr. Carr in his sad loss.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wells returned by air to Punta Arenas recently, after a holiday in Canada. We understand that in the autumn they will again leave Punta Arenas to take up permanent residence in Canada.

The Commandet in Chief of the Chilean Navy, Rear Admiral don Carlos Torres Heria, recently presented to the British Club a painting of the Cruiser "Chacabuco". The presentation was effected by Rear Admiral Carmona, Chief of the 3rd Naval Division, on behalf of the donor, at an informal Cocktail Party in the Club Rooms and the President of the Club, Mr. A. D. King, made a speech in which he asked Admiral Carmona to convey the sincere thanks of the Committee and Members to Admiral Torres for his generous gesture. Among those present at the ceremony was Rear Admiral don Olegario Rojas del Rio, who served as a midshipman in the "Chacabuco" in 1901.

On the 14th July a very enjoyable party took place at the Rio Seco Staff House, in aid of the Golf Club. The guests were requested to wear something reminiscent of the "Gay Nineties." Some of the set-ups were extremely clever, and greatly added to the hilarity of the evening. The "Tennis Girl" dancing "Boogie Woogie" with the "Churchwarden" was quite a sight to behold. On the 8th of September a similar party took place at the Staff House, the proceeds this time being divided between the Golf Club and Rio Seco Charities. The guests were asked to wear "Hidden Book Titles," and prizes were given for those who guessed the largest number of titles within a given time. These were won by Miss Leslie Stirling and Mr. E. C. Saunders, respectively. Among the cleverest representations were those of Mr. Eric Davies—"The Enemy Within," Miss M. Harper—"Great Expectations," Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Saunders—"We Took to the Woods," Mr. J. Price—"Cheaper by the Dozen," Mr. S. B. Robson—"The Seats of the Mighty," and Mr. E. I. Clifford—"Britannia Mews."

Among those who spent the Diez-y-Ocho holidays in camp were Mr. and Mrs. E. Buchan, who were guests of Mr. and Mrs. K. O. Maclean at "Rio Verde," and Mr. and Mrs. J. Price, who were the guests of Mr. E. I. Clifford at Estancia Punta Delgada.

Several Members had an "in-door picnic" at the Golf Club on Diez-y-ocho, those present being Mr. and Mrs. J. McElroy, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. King, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. King, Mr. and Mrs. G. Crew, Miss L. Stirling and Mr. F. P. Arthur.

During the winter months fortnightly "hops" were held at the British School, in aid of the Golf Club, the total profit thereon being in excess of $ 10,000.

Among those who came in from camp to attend the recent party at Rio Seco were Mr. E. I. Clifford, Mr. and Mrs. K. Maclean, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Davies and Mr. and Mrs. W. Macleay.

Last week a "Lyonair" plane brought nine racehorses to Punta Arenas.

Mrs. Noel Donaldson returned by air recently from a holiday in Córdoba with Mr. and Mrs. K. C. Ross.

The sector of the town which has been without telephone service for nearly ten months since the hurricane of November last, has now had that somewhat mixed blessing bestowed upon it once again. Mixed is the blessing indeed, as the day our phone was connected we were rubbing our hands in joy, and wondering to whom to give the honour of our first call, when we received our first call, which turned out to be... "wrong number." After that the blessed instrument went on strike, and for the next ten days, though it rang on an average of once every ten minutes, we could speak to nobody, not even the exchange. We understand that a representative of Erikssons is now in Punta Arenas, trying to come to an agreement with the local authorities which would enable automatic telephones to be installed, but up to the present nothing definite seems to have been arranged.

News has just been received of the death, which took place in England, of Mr. P. A. de Bruyne, father of Mr. H. B. A. de Bruyne, of Estancia Rio Verde.

The territory lost another of its pioneers recently when don José Menéndez Behety lost his life in a motor accident near Buenos Aires. His two sons, José and Arturo, who were with him, were injured, but we understand, that both are progressing favourably.

An improvement in the weather has taken place, and it is thought on the part of agriculturists with a view to the sowing of crops which is badly needed for the crops.

Alcaide don Jermain Saelzer Bolde returned from a visit to the Capital where in company with the Parliamentary representatives he visited the various Ministerial Departments with promising results.

It is announced that the construction of the new railway station in Calle Anibal Pinto has been definitely resolved, though nothing is stated about the initiation of its construction.

Progress of funds for the construction of the Intendencia Building which will house the Post and Telegraphs, the Corte de Apelaciones and the offices and private dwelling of the Intendencia, have also been made to the extent of Seven Millions which sum will be augmented when the work is advanced.

The 25th anniversary of the Cruz Roja de Hombres, Valdivia Branch, and of the Club Aéreo de Valdivia 13th anniversary were celebrated during the week. There was also an imposing ceremony in the Plaza on Friday last when the ladies and members of the Cruz Roja de Señoras processed through the principal streets and speeches were made from the bandstand.

On Tuesday last Alfonso Montecinos gave a pianoforte recital in the Cervantes Theatre which was attended by a numerous audience in spite of inadequate advertisement. His programme included works of Bach, Brahms, Chopin, Liszt and the modern works of Debussy, Ravel and Alford.

The Club is now the proud possessor of two handsome trophies, one, a Quail, having been presented by Mr. F. D. Paton, to replace the one lost in the fire, which had been presented many years ago by him and the late Mrs. Paton. The second of these trophies, the Warwick Cup, has been presented by Mr. W. C. Warwick, to replace the trophy presented by him on the occasion of his visit to Punta Arenas some years ago.

On Thursday there was a recital of dances by pupils of Herbert Becker in the Cervantes Theatre which attracted a large audience of parents, relatives and friends of the pupils.

On Saturday last the engagement of Mr. George Schuler López and Srta. María Eugenia Contreras Bertoglio took place in the house of the Contreras Bertoglio family and was celebrated by a large gathering of relatives and friends of the parties concerned.

The first regattas of the season were held on Sunday morning with the participation of the five clubs of the Association. They were of special interest owing to the innovation of regattas Single and Double Sculls and attracted an enormous crowd of spectators to the river front. The Arturo Prat obtained first place in points followed by Centenario and Phoenix-Valdivia, the last named senior crew participating in the respective event.

On Sunday afternoon the Nacional F. C. beat the Macallanes F. C. by 2-1 in a closely contested football match in the Municipal Park which was witnessed by a large crowd of spectators.

On the 4th. inst, the official inauguration of the new Club House at the Golf Course took place, and the opening ceremony, was largely attended. Mr. K. C. Ross, the new President, declared the building open, and then handed to Mr. Jorge Claude a silver ashtray from the Members, as a token of their gratitude for his kindness in designing and overseeing the construction of the new building, at the same time he presented a bouquet to Mrs. Claude.

BEAUTY AND YOU

DO YOU RUN LIFE... OR DOES IT RUN YOU

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Few of us run our lives. Our lives run us. If we are to lead responsible full lives this has to be so to a certain extent. However, over and over again I am impressed with the fact that few people consciously make choices. Few are firm in their determination to get from life that which has greatest meaning for them. Most persons go along in the usual groove with only a sideways glance at the things they long to accomplish; the things which have always held great interest for them.

We fail to realize that we should have an energy budget just as we have a money budget. We have only so much energy to spend without nervous exhaustion.

We should budget it in order to have time for the realization of some of those dreams and the accomplishment of some purely personal interests.

Is it more important to have a perfectly kept house, or a home where everyone is comfortable and you are gay and everyone is happy? Is it important to you to entertain formally and flawlessly or to have enough energy left to enjoy your guests when they arrive?

I am not advocating a messy house. This leads to fatigue and delectness. Charm of atmosphere and a certain amount of order are certainly essential.

Myriad small wastes in energy add up to fatigue. If your kitchen work table is not the correct height for you it will be a handicap. If you stand when you cook that is another. If you put your grocery lists carelessly those mad dashes to the store are tiring and hectic.

You can safely bet that those women you know who accomplish so much and still seem to have time and energy to enjoy life have learned to avoid many such small wastes in their energy budget. You can recoup your energy harder with short periodic ten minute rest periods.

Women are supposed to run houses but most houses run women to death. In this, as in all activities, you must choose what is really important to you.

Opening lead: king of clubs
An attempt to deceive the opponent as to what he has to speak for themselves.

South reached the perfectly sound contract of four spades and saw that fulfillment would be difficult if hearts failed to break.

which on percentage rated to be the case. West cashed the king and ace of clubs and shifted to the jack of hearts, drawing East's queen and South's ace. Burying his head in the sand, declarer, in ostrich like fashion, proceeded to lead all his trumps but one in the hope that someone would fall into the error of unguarding the hearts so that the king and another heart would establish the fourth card of that suit. This was the height of futility because the cards spoke for themselves and no player out of incarceration could hold onto diamonds and let go hearts.

Declarer would have been better advised to attempt to visualize the adverse holdings and he might have hit upon a scheme to win the hand without resort to chicanery. Declarer should start extracting trumps. When West shows out on the second round, he pulls one more, leaving East with the nine. Declarer cashes the ace of diamonds and then plays the king of hearts. If East ruffs he has nothing but diamonds to return, permitting declarer to dispose of his two losing hearts. If East refuses to ruff, declarer simply plays the three of trumps and for East to win with the nine. This is a 6-3 split for the forest diamonds return puts an end to the contest.

INTER-CITY MATCH IN VINA

The Inter-City match played at Vina last week-end was interesting enough to merit a commentary from R. C. R-G or E. W. Swanton. However, yours truly must suffice. The weather was fine. Lucky Chitran cricketers, as last year, Wisden pointed out to find this unexceptional.

Wonderful to relate the players were nearly all ready to start, as the secretary had ordained, at 10.30 a. m. sharp. However, nobody seemed to have faith in this coincidence and the game duly started at 11 a. m. Santiago won the toss and chose to bat. One Vina optimist was heard to remark that this was defeatism, choosing to play for a draw. But by lunch-time with Santiago 90 odd for one and Meredith seeing the ball football size there were some signs of complaisance amongst the Santiago players. Manning had by this time been exasperating the bowlers with his smothering tactics which effectively closed up one end while Meredith made hay. Even so it had not been fast moving and it looked as if the draw-prophecy was not without foundation. Jones had made a useful if lucky 26, Meredith was clear of his 50 and Manning was well still there. Manning, incidentally, was using a substitute run getter.

From Vina's point of view, the lunch interval, always a stiff hurdle for the batsmen, worked wonders. It broke Manning, who spluttered fitfully with a four, like golden-rain fire-works and then went out played-on to Ness. It made Meredith carefree and had him bowled by Freestone. Thereafter the score-sheet shows a steady fall of wickets until the end of the innings. Santiago were unlucky to lose Hobbsawn, run out on his own call, who had been shaping up well, but apart from him and Tenken there had been no other serious attempts to stop the rot. Ness had taken 6 wickets for 55 and Freestone 2 for 15 when Stuart's wicket fell caught at the wicket by Fairbrass off Maxwell at 3.30 p. m. Paine with 5 maidens out of 8 overs had been bowling with a consistency that was to be rewarded in the second innings. Apart from a few muffed catches the fielding had been keen and it was anybody's game. Although on paper it was then to be expected that Vina would be able to put on over 200 in reply and leave Santiago to make up the difference in their 2nd innings.

But the fates in cricket are no respecters of paper probabilities and Vina wickets fell with alarming rapidity. An over-energetic Paine played late and outside a fatally straight ball from Tenken. Sutton lost an L. B. W. suit to Meredith. Tenken teased Fairbrass into passing a fly-ball to Knowles and Freestone allowed Marshall to knock off his balls. Maxwell and Reid were in together after tea and looked as if they might pull the game out of the fire but Maxwell, the safer of the two, played a weak forward stroke to a good length ball from Meredith to be bowled. Then it was Yeomans' turn to go nibbled at Marshall and missing. And Moodie was out to the last ball of the day, being caught and bowled off a half-hearted stroke to a ball from Meredith. Reid was still there with 53 but there was Saturday night to come.

On Sunday it was not long before the Vina tail lay down and fled and the scores stood at 155 to 137 still anybody's game. In their 2nd innings Santiago were off to a bad start when Paine had Meredith caught at the wicket for 0.

Then came Manning, and the bowlers heaved a sigh of resignation, but 17 was a welcome stimulus to his team's fortunes and he left with 3 boundaries to his credit when once again played on to Ness. Then Paine bowled Jones who at 39 looked dangerous and the games' complexion changed perceptively. Knowles played some pretty strokes for his 14 but never looked safe, which is a safe commentary since he confessed to never having felt safe, but Busbridge scarcely gave himself time to settle down. Paine also removed Macqueen and Marshall winking them out as it were with the sharp pin of a consistent good length.

Once again Hobbsawn & Tenken held back the flood of Vina impatience, but once again Hobbsawn overestimated his fleetness of foot. "Getting too fat" he was heard to say in excuse although he had hurled himself headlong as bravely as any ball player making a base. His 25 runs had been well deserved and welcome to his side. The last two wickets fell to Paine bringing his bag up to 8 with an average of 5.9. Good winking!

Set only 130 to get at a rate of about a run-a minute looked well within Vina's capabilities but again the first 3 batsmen failed to come off. This time it was Fairbrass who had to hold the side together and his canonical 66 was delightful to watch. Yeomans and Reid played 1st and 2nd end stoppers while Fairbrass himself spoke his moral. The ghost was played by Freestone who though down as No. 7 was not allowed to bat. The crumbers Hardy divided the match though which it was who made the winning hit your correspondent is unable to relate since he was then relaxing under a shower. Tenken had bowled consistently with little luck and Meredith aggressively with some. Marshall was unusually dissatisfied with himself but seemed greatly improved on last season.

There had been two full days of interest and excitement.

LITCHER VEIN

The 11th December Bernard Baruch's friend spoke so often about his love for hunting that Baruch finally invited him to his South Carolina plantation for a turkey shoot. The friend tramped for two days, shooting madly, but he failed to hit a single turkey.

Mr Baruch made no comment. The next morning however, the friend was ambling along a path near the house when he saw a fat gobbler sitting motionless in a tree. He crept up close fired pan-blank, and was overjoyed when the turkey fell at his feet. It was only when he picked it up that he noticed a card tied around its neck. The card read, "With the compliments of Bernard Baruch"

"Have you been to any other doctor before coming to me?" asked the grouchy physician.

"No, sir," replied the meek patient. "I went to the druggist."

"You went to a druggist!" exclaimed the doctor. "That shows how much sense some people have. You went to a druggist. And what idiotic advice did he give you?"

"Why, he told me to come and see you," replied the patient.

Two would-be sportsmen from the city decided to rough it for a season and rented a cabin in the North Woods. Neither had done any hunting before, but they were well-supplied with equipment and enthusiasm.

The day of their arrival, Bill, who was particularly eager to get on with the hunting, said to his companion, "You make the fire, Joe. I'll go shoot a bear for dinner."

He had walked only a few hundred feet from the cabin when he saw a large black bear. Taking careful aim, he fired. When the smoke cleared, he saw he had made a direct hit. But the bear was not dead; wounded and enraged, she was charging Bill.

Dropping his gun, the amateur hunter made for the open cabin door, the bear in hot pursuit. Just before he reached the safety of the cabin, however, the hunter tripped and fell. The wounded bear, unable to slow down, went charging right on into the cabin where the hapless Joe was struggling to get a fire started.

Bill rose and brushed himself off. Strolling over to the door, he shouted, "Okay, Joe. You skin that blighter, I'll go get another one.

CHIC YOUNG

JOHN HARDBOTTOM
(Singed in the Great San Francisco fire)

"For some time I have read and enjoyed your weekly feature which 'Spotlights' various members of the English-speaking community. Interesting reports, but hardly typical. While most of the characters you have written of have lived rich, full lives and experienced everything from flood to famine, the average S. P. M. reader is not this type at all. The average S.P.M. reader is, in fact, as dull as glazed glass. May I describe him for you?"

His name is John Hardbottom. He lives in a tag-room apartment in Los Leones, not under a flat rock, as one would be led to believe from his appearance. He was educated in a private school and, to the infinite surprise of his parents, won his colours in ping-pong, a sport which he has since given up as too strenuous.

His first sex experience was when he stubbed his toe on a thick volume of Freud, and he has had nothing to do with the subject after this unhappy accident.

He has met his share of disasters. He was in Santiago during the great Chillan earthquake and was only seven months after the Great Fire. "Just think", Mr. Hardbottom says, "If Aunt Minnie had died a few months earlier, I might have been singed".

Mr. Hardbottom claims to have no special eccentricities, although he does admit, with a gully grin, to a liking for hard-boiled eggs. He declares hobbies in general as a waste of time although in his youth he had a collection of paper napkins "borrowed" from hotels. He engages in no special sports, but enjoys a brisk walk around the living room every morning before breakfast.

When asked just what he did do with time, Mr. Hardbottom replied that he is an enthusiastic linguist. "I have only been in Chile for 57 years", he says proudly, "and I am going to start using the past tense in my Spanish any day now". He also plays bridge, and often recounts the occasion when, in 1922, he bid a small slam. (Noble effort, but he went down three tricks). Mr. Hardbottom is candid in admitting that he likes to play for stakes, usually as high as one cent (avo) per hundred.

Hardbottom's casual letters. He uses the same razor blade half a hundred times and hasn't changed toothbrushes in years. "I understand," he told us, "that they are making the things of nylon these days." He buys his copy of "El Mercurio" from the same boy every morning of the world and the customer-seller relationship has grown through the years. "I've literally watched that boy as he grew a beard," Hardbottom reports. Also an avid reader of the S.P.M., he never fails to read a copy at the house of Dura Hardbottom, his spinster sister.

Present plans for Hardbottom include a trip to the country, possibly as far as Melipilla. "Too much hustle and bustle for me in the city", he reports. "It's the pace of life. I've had my share of excitement, now I just want to relax".

That, Dear Editor, is the typical S.P.M. reader, not the glamorous creatures that have been adorning your back cover.

Sincerely,
H. V. S.
Santiago.
