As you know, the captioned individual has been providing the Bureau with considerable information, much of it being of a very sensitive nature. It has been noted that in transmitting communications to Angleton some memoranda have been sent to the Director of CIA, Attention: James Angleton, in care of [E. F. Hall.] Other memoranda dealing with [redacted] matters have been directed to James Angleton, in care of [E. F. Hall.]

In order that the Bureau would have a uniform procedure in transmitting mail to Angleton, the Liaison Agent discussed the matter with Angleton on March 5, 1954. Angleton requested that in the future mail being directed to him be transmitted to the Director of CIA, "Attention: James Angleton." Angleton stated that the above request was being made with the approval of Allen Dulles, the Director of CIA. He further indicated that he desired the above method of designation in connection with correspondence dealing with [redacted] matters. With regard to Bureau reports concerning [redacted] matters, Angleton advised that such material is being retained under his personal supervision and control.

Angleton also asked when the Bureau found it necessary to disseminate information to him and other agencies, that his identity not be revealed to the other agencies. He explained that he is involved in several sensitive projects, such as [redacted] and if his identity were known to the other agencies, the security of CIA operations could be prejudiced.

ACTION:

Attached hereto for your approval is a Memorandum to all Section Chiefs.
