(BOOK REVIEW FILE)

Dear Mr. Greenewald:

Records responsive to your request were previously processed under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). Below you will find informational paragraphs relevant to your request. Please read each item carefully.

Enclosed are 4,124 pages of previously processed documents and a copy of the Explanation of Exemptions. This release is being provided to you at no charge.

Documents or information referred to other Government agencies were not included in this release.

Please be advised that additional records responsive to your subject exist. If this release of previously processed material does not satisfy your information needs for the requested subject, you may request the additional records for processing.

Requester Response

☐ Yes, process and provide me the additional records responsive to my subject.

☐ No, close my request.

Please submit your response within thirty (30) days by mail or fax to—Work Processing Unit, 170 Marcel Drive, Winchester, VA 22602, fax number (540) 868-4997. Please cite the FOIPA Request Number in your correspondence.

If we do not receive your decision within thirty (30) days of the date of this notification, your request will be closed.

For your information, Congress excluded three discrete categories of law enforcement and national security records from the requirements of the FOIA. See 5 U.S. C. § 552(c) (2006 & Supp. IV (2010). This response is limited to those records subject to the requirements of the FOIA. This is a standard notification that is given to all our requesters and should not be taken as an indication that excluded records do, or do not, exist.

For questions regarding our determinations, visit the www.fbi.gov/foia website under “Contact Us.” The FOIPA Request Number listed above has been assigned to your request. Please use this number in all correspondence concerning your request.

You may file an appeal by writing to the Director, Office of Information Policy (OIP), United States Department of Justice, Suite 11050, 1425 New York Avenue, NW, Washington, D.C. 20530-0001, or you may submit an appeal through OIP's FOIA online portal by creating an account on the following web site: https://www.foiaonline.gov/foiaonline/action/public/home. Your appeal must be postmarked or electronically transmitted within ninety (90) days from the date of this letter in order to be considered timely. If you submit your appeal by mail, both the letter and the envelope should be clearly marked "Freedom of Information Act Appeal." Please cite the FOIPA Request Number assigned to your request so it may be easily identified.

You may seek dispute resolution services by contacting the Office of Government Information Services (OGIS) at 877-684-6448, or by emailing ogis@nara.gov. Alternatively, you may contact the FBI's FOIA Public Liaison by emailing foipaquestions@fbi.gov. If you submit your dispute resolution correspondence by email, the subject heading should clearly state "Dispute Resolution Services." Please also cite the FOIPA Request Number assigned to your request so it may be easily identified.

EXPLANATION OF EXEMPTIONS

SUBSECTIONS OF TITLE 5, UNITED STATES CODE, SECTION 552

(b)(1) (A) specifically authorized under criteria established by an Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or foreign policy and (B) are in fact properly classified to such Executive order;

(b)(2) related solely to the internal personnel rules and practices of an agency;

(b)(3) specifically exempted from disclosure by statute (other than section 552b of this title), provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matters to be withheld;

(b)(4) trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential;

(b)(5) inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency;

(b)(6) personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy;

(b)(7) records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information (A) could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings, (B) would deprive a person of a right to a fair trial or an impartial adjudication, (C) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, (D) could reasonably be expected to disclose the identity of confidential source, including a State, local, or foreign agency or authority or any private institution which furnished information on a confidential basis, and, in the case of record or information compiled by a criminal law enforcement authority in the course of a criminal investigation, or by an agency conducting a lawful national security intelligence investigation, information furnished by a confidential source, (E) would disclose techniques and procedures for law enforcement investigations or prosecutions, or would disclose guidelines for law enforcement investigations or prosecutions if such disclosure could reasonably be expected to risk circumvention of the law, or (F) could reasonably be expected to endanger the life or physical safety of any individual;

(b)(8) contained in or related to examination, operating, or condition reports prepared by, on behalf of, or for the use of an agency responsible for the regulation or supervision of financial institutions; or (b)(9) geological and geophysical information and data, including maps, concerning wells.

SUBSECTIONS OF TITLE 5, UNITED STATES CODE, SECTION 552a

(d)(5) information compiled in reasonable anticipation of a civil action proceeding;

(j)(2) material reporting investigative efforts pertaining to the enforcement of criminal law including efforts to prevent, control, or reduce crime or apprehend criminals;

(k)(1) information which is currently and properly classified pursuant to an Executive order in the interest of the national defense or foreign policy, for example, information involving intelligence sources or methods;

(k)(2) investigatory material compiled for law enforcement purposes, other than criminal, which did not result in loss of a right, benefit or privilege under Federal programs, or which would identify a source who furnished information pursuant to a promise that his/her identity would be held in confidence;

(k)(3) material maintained in connection with providing protective services to the President of the United States or any other individual pursuant to the authority of Title 18, United States Code, Section 3056;

(k)(4) required by statute to be maintained and used solely as statistical records;

(k)(5) investigatory material compiled solely for the purpose of determining suitability, eligibility, or qualifications for Federal civilian employment or for access to classified information, the disclosure of which would reveal the identity of the person who furnished information pursuant to a promise that his/her identity would be held in confidence;

(k)(6) testing or examination material used to determine individual qualifications for appointment or promotion in Federal Government service the release of which would compromise the testing or examination process;

(k)(7) material used to determine potential for promotion in the armed services, the disclosure of which would reveal the identity of the person who furnished the material pursuant to a promise that his/her identity would be held in confidence.

Many schools of New Mexico have been teaching about communism, it's evils and fallacies for several years. However, not all schools have been able to give this instruction. In some instances local citizens have objected to the teaching about communism; in other instances teachers have felt the need of an approved guide and lists of resource materials, which were not available. Recently large number of citizens, associations and committees have requested that instruction about communism in the schools should be given approval with direction and assistance from the State Department of Education.

Some state legislatures have passed laws requiring that communism be taught at the high school level. Such laws have been passed in Florida and Louisiana.

The bibliography included in this publication has been evaluated and approved by persons recognized as knowledgeable on the subject of communism.

The use of communist materials, such as the communist manifesto, should not be excluded from the instructional program. However, when materials written by communists are used they should be carefully identified as such and students should be informed that the material is of communist origin. These materials should be used only to demonstrate the evils, fallacies and contradictions of communism.

Teachers should be carefully selected and thoroughly informed if they are assigned to teach a course about communism. Teachers who do not feel that they are properly prepared to teach about communism should enroll in special courses and get the proper preparation. Some of the colleges and universities of New Mexico will offer short courses for such teachers beginning in the fall of 1962, if enough teachers request the need for such help.

It is recommended that this course be taught in the eleventh or twelfth grades. This plan will give students an opportunity to be well informed on the American Heritage before they approach this course, and thus be better able to make wise comparisons. This plan provides time for the careful study about communism instead of acquiring a few irrelevant facts. This approach also equips the student to defend human freedom.

The enemy threatening human freedom today has manpower, resources and technological weapons for waging war. Our nation has repeatedly demonstrated faith in our heritage of democratic ideals and courage to praise freedom and also be free. Now we hope that each student in our schools will be imbued with a deep sense of responsibility to defend this freedom.

Recognition is due Ellen Hartnett Digneo who worked diligently in compiling and editing this material.

Superintendent of Public Instruction

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Many colleagues in the Department of Education and local school systems have provided valuable assistance in the preparation of this handbook. Special acknowledgment should go to George P. White, Chief, Instructional Services Area, who carried extra assignments to release my time for writing. State Superintendent Tom Wiley and Mr. White encouraged the pursuit of this task and assisted from time to time by reading the manuscript and making suggestions as did each of the following:

Mr. E. P. Ripley, Attorney, State Department of Education
Mr. Calloway Taulbee, Director of Secondary Education
Mr. Joe Lawler, Coordinator, Information Services Area
Dr. Lynn I. Perrigo, Professor of History & Social Science, New Mexico Highlands University, Las Vegas
Dr. Paige W. Christiansen, Head of Department of Humanities, New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology, Socorro
Nickie W. Meeks, My Secretary, has been especially helpful in the preparation of this manuscript.

The resource unit on Americanism vs. Communism published by the Florida State Department of Education and the guide Teaching About Communism by the Ventura County Schools have also been extremely helpful.

In particular, I wish to salute the teachers who will use this handbook and go far beyond the suggestions given here. For as the teacher expands the realistic teaching, the student will understand the nature of communism and appreciate the heritage of American ideals. They will also appreciate the rights, duties and privileges of American citizenship.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE IN NEW MEXICO

On June 27, 1961 Tom Wiley, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, with the approval of the State Board of Education, appointed a statewide advisory committee on citizenship to work closely with the Instructional Services Area of the Department of Education to assess current practices with respect to teaching good citizenship and to make recommendations for extension of citizenship programs.

The committee was directed to be concerned not only with evaluation of formal courses such as civics and government but also with classroom and other extra-curricular activities which lend themselves to the demonstration of good citizenship practices.

"Although the schools have always taken leadership in the development of good citizens", Mr. Wiley said, "in times like these we must insure that the schools are making maximum effort within their areas of responsibility."

The committee has met several times and has developed some suggestions which will be helpful in strengthening our teaching of American heritage in the schools of New Mexico.

The New Mexico Directors of Instruction chose the topic, "An Articulated Social Studies Program: Grades One Through Twelve", at their annual meeting which was held on the New Mexico State University Campus at Las Cruces, January 19 and 20, 1962. The impact of this two day program was very effective in arousing interest in planning curriculum materials for teaching about communism and in alerting this group of leaders concerning menaces to American democracy.

Ross Malone, Attorney from Roswell, addressed the banquet meeting of this group. His topic was, "Menaces to American Democracy". Copies of "Menaces to American Democracy" by Ross Malone are available by writing to Mrs. Ellen Hartnett Digneo, Director of Teacher Education and Social Studies, State Department of Education, Santa Fe, New Mexico.

On March 24, 1962 a statewide workshop was held on the campus of New Mexico School of Mining and Technology, Socorro, New Mexico. Dr. Paige W. Christiansen, Assistant Professor of Humanities, assisted by John Fanta, Director of Student Affairs and Mrs. Ellen Hartnett Digneo of the State Department of Education did the preliminary planning. About 100 teachers attended the meeting and showed an interest in continuing the study about communism.

The Roswell Public Schools have published an excellent booklet:

TEACHING ABOUT COMMUNISM, Roswell City Schools, Roswell N. Mex.

The Administration of the Roswell City Schools is acutely aware of the responsibility it holds in the present war of ideas and the crucial struggle for the minds of men. What the graduates of the Roswell City Schools think and know about our country and our way of life, together with what they think and know about our antagonist, communism, will directly bear upon the future of our great country.

This booklet was produced in the belief that the Patrons of the Roswell City Schools are interested in the part the schools are playing in this great struggle. It is designed to afford a quick over-all view of the minimum basic program being taught in the Roswell City Schools from grades seven through twelve in regard to our American heritage and the Communist danger. Most of the material contained in this booklet is simply an adaptation of material drawn from the courses of study for each of the following subjects required of all students:

Geography--Grade 7 (full year course)
U.S. History--Grade 8 (full year course)
Civics--Grade 9 (full year course)
World History--Grade 10 (full year course)
American History--Grade 11 (full year course)
American Government--Grade 12 (half year course)

The course of study for each of the above subjects is revised annually by the teachers themselves.

The statement that this booklet outlines the minimum basic program cannot be over-emphasized. Each teacher will go well beyond these required minimums in his own way and using his own choice of additional materials ranging from films and filmstrips through the teacher's own syllabus on communism which he may have developed.

The extent to which the teachers take the teaching of our American heritage and the communist threat beyond the required specifics of the course of study is well illustrated by noting that in one school year they use thirty-three school owned films, one-hundred-fifty school owned filmstrips, forty-three rental films, and approximately thirty films brought to us by private interests, all dealing with history and private enterprise.

But regardless of how much more any teacher may find the time and ability to do, the minimum requirements are met by all. LOS ALAMOS AND ALAMOGORDO PUBLIC SCHOOLS are also reorganizing their entire social studies program to give strength and a new emphasis on world affairs. These and other programs will be reported in the state Social Studies Bulletin, as we receive complete plans from the schools.

The Alamogordo outline shows how the American Heritage program in the lower grades will emphasize the American way of life and prepare students to meet the Communist threat.

SANDIA HIGH SCHOOL PROJECT, Albuquerque, New Mexico

Sandia High School's History Department developed an excellent unit in the area of teaching about communism this past year, 1961-62. In a series of History Department meetings devoted to instructional problems in teaching about Communism the following conclusions were reached:

1. There was a definite need for the instruction of this topic.
2. The World History classes, composed of seniors, were the logical ones to deal with this topic.
3. Under the present system there was no coordination among the teachers involved in the teaching of this topic on an individual basis. Some teachers were doing more in this area than others.

4. Some teachers felt they were not adequately prepared to teach about this topic.
5. It was generally agreed that the ideal situation would be one where every teacher would deal with this topic within the framework of his World History course. However, since some teachers were not able to do this for reasons of preparation, it was decided to experiment with an instructional approach that would involve the following:
   a. A basic and uniform unit on Communism would be presented.
   b. The World History classes in each of our six period daily schedule would be grouped together for the presentation of this unit.
   c. The instruction would be handled by a modified version of the team-teaching method. This would enable teachers to teach those phases of the topic in which they felt better informed. An important secondary aim in the use of this method was that it would provide an "in-service training" experience for those teachers who were weak in this area of subject matter.

Planning the Content Material

The staff was generally agreed that the content material that gave teachers the most trouble was the philosophy and theory of Communism. The historical events leading to, and including, the Russian Revolution as well as the development of the Soviet Union since the Revolution were considered as phases that could be easily covered by each individual teacher before the basic unit was presented.

It was decided that three basic topics, presented in three lectures, would serve as the core around which our unit would be constructed. These three topics were presented in the first three days of the unit. We attempted, with some success, to present the following stages of development for Communism:

1. The development of socialism as a reaction to the uncontrolled growth of the Industrial Revolution.

The social and political schools of thought in socialism that were sympathetic to democracy, as well as those that took anti-democratic positions, were discussed. This, of course, was to be a prelude to the "scientific socialism" of Karl Marx.

2. The origin of the Marxist philosophy and how it became the core of the communist ideology. Here, the basic principles of the political and economic theories of Marx were covered, and presented to serve as a background to the philosophy adopted by the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia.
3. The adoption and modification of the Marxist philosophy by Lenin and Stalin. Also included in this presentation was a summary of the doctrinal modifications effected by the Soviets in more recent times.

With these three presentations as the foundation, the group was then able to advance to other aspects of the unit, namely:

1. Why does Communism appeal to people? This was covered by a film.
2. What tactics are used by Communism? This was covered by a film.
3. Communist territorial expansion since World War II.
4. A statement on Communism by the F.B.I. This was presented by a tape recording. We had planned to have a guest speaker but circumstances did not permit it.
5. Aspects of international communism. Motives, tactics and objectives of the Soviet Union were presented through an interesting film featuring former Ambassador George Kennan.
6. The last topic was included to provide a bit of intellectual spice. It was presented by our psychology teacher who showed a genuine interest in participating in our team-teaching effort.

Instructional Materials

1. Library books dealing with the topic were placed on reserve and students were given a bibliography.
2. One tape recording borrowed from the local F.B.I. office.
3. The three films mentioned above were borrowed from the Fourth Army Film Exchange of Fort Bliss, Texas. Some of these films are also available from the Film Library of Kirtland Base.

Evaluation of the Unit

Subject Matter

A uniform test was administered to the 405 students who were involved in the unit. Test results generally followed the usual grade range pattern established by each individual class. In other words, we are safe in saying that we were able to put our material across with about the same degree of effectiveness as if we were engaged in individual classroom teaching.

Student Reaction

Each student was asked to express his reaction to the unit. At least 85% of the students expressed favorable reaction. More important, they were very constructive in their criticism, and many of their recommendations would certainly strengthen our unit if we were to present it again in the future to another group.

Most of the students felt they needed more time for this unit. Ten days did not give sufficient time for questions. Several students suggested that factual comparison of the two doctrines would have been very helpful.

General Teacher Evaluation

The unit was generally successful in accomplishing our basic objectives. Needless to say, we were guilty of many shortcomings that can be attributed to our lack of experience in this sort of thing. It is not certain that we will try the same approach next year, even though we all seem favorably disposed to do so, but if we do, we will try to incorporate the following recommendations in order to strengthen areas of weakness:

1. Better coordination of the lecture material presented by each teacher to avoid omissions and repetitions.

2. Inclusion of more current Soviet objectives and tactics.
3. Inclusion of a comparative analysis of the democratic system and the communist system.
4. Presentation, perhaps in dramatic form, of how Americans must be prepared to meet and refute anti-democratic arguments.
5. Allow more time for question and answer sessions after the lectures.

NEW MEXICO HIGHLANDS UNIVERSITY, Las Vegas, New Mexico

New Mexico Highlands University has had a special summer program of courses in American Studies sponsored by the Coe Foundation as a positive approach to the inculcation of American ideals. In the summer of 1961 and again in 1962 twenty teachers from New Mexico high schools were awarded scholarships for "refresher" studies in this program.

OVER-ALL COURSE

OBJECTIVES

1. To teach of the traditions, ideals and achievements of American democracy and of our economic and social institutions.

2. To develop an appreciation of the American heritage, democratic processes, freedom of opportunity, enterprise under law and the will to preserve that freedom.

3. To understand the world in which our young people live and the affairs about which they will be privileged to vote.

4. To understand Soviet Communism and the threats to the freedom of the people of our nation (ignorance is dangerous).

5. To understand that an informed thoughtful knowledge and discussion will strengthen Americans.

6. To understand the nature and implications of the policies we must combat.

7. Study and compare the political, social and economic life in the U.S.S.R. and the United States thus strengthening democratic loyalties and deepening understandings of democratic ideals.

8. To understand the appeal of Communism in Communist and Satellite countries.

9. To understand the varied and changing meaning of the term Communism through the past two thousand years.

10. To understand differing definitions of communism.

11. To realize that existing dictatorships have given new meanings to the term communism.

AMERICANISM

Americans usually agree that the individual has responsibilities as well as rights and privileges. One of these responsibilities is maintaining and defending freedom. If the liberty of an individual is taken away there is no freedom. The individual's right to own property, buy and sell in a free market and earn a fair profit for this effort makes up the strength of America's competitive system. America's courts of justice and political and religious freedoms protect our liberties and give worth and dignity to the individual.

> The worth of the state, in the long run, is the worth of the individuals compassing it...A state which dwarfs its men in order that they may be docile instruments in its hands even for beneficial purposes...will find that with small men no great things can be accomplished.
> Thus wrote John Stuart Mill, the English Philosopher, in his famous essay on Liberty (1859).

Americanism consists of many ingredients-a devotion to principles that enhance an ideal of religious tolerance, patriotism, freedom, courage, integrity and an abiding faith in the United States of America.

The American way of life is reflected in the lives of great presidents; Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Lincoln, Grant, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson, and many more. The inventors, the authors and artists all made a special contribution which permitted the light from the past to help us find the road to the future. Citizenship is strengthened by understanding our past: Knowledge alone will not make anyone a good citizen, but lack of knowledge will limit an individual's effectiveness.

History explains why we think, believe, and act as we do. When we study the principles cherished by the best and wisest men among our Founding Fathers and the corresponding leaders of the Twentieth Century, there is one principle which remains unchanged throughout the history of our country. This is the principle that each individual has dignity and worth. This principle is not so much the product of America as America is a product of it. Many Americans feel that the magnificent human struggle toward making this principle a part of the daily lives of citizens is truly the American way of life, or Americanism.

The importance of each individual, his dignity and worth is of utmost importance to Americans. As we study the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States, we feel the strength of the American ideal. The Declaration of Independence states that:

> All men are created equal; that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights; among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Government in America is the creation of the people and its power rests with them. Provisions for changing the Constitution (by ballot and majority rule) was provided by the founders of our country. Jefferson also maintained that legal rights and liberties of all individuals and minorities must be protected against the passion of the mob, the vigilance of the party, the power of the privileged, the tyranny of secret police, the caprice of officials and the ambition of mad men.

In 1960, the noted jurist, Learned Hand, wrote:

> The spirit of liberty is a spirit which is not too sure that it is right...which seeks to understand the minds of other men and women...remembers that not even a sparrow falls to earth unheeded...(it) is the spirit of Him who...taught mankind that lesson it has never learned but has not quite forgotten; that there may be a kingdom where the least shall be heard and considered...with the greatest.[1]

Liberty is expressed in the different way Americans support divergent views. Diversity is one of the marks of liberty.

America is a nation of laws, even though we do not all see every issue facing this nation alike. If we feel that a law is not good we are free to work through proper channels of government to repeal the law.

In America we believe in the philosophy of union with dissent and a freedom which permits the minority approach to a problem within the confines of unity and the framework of law and order.

Firmly established in the American principle of individual dignity and worth is the belief that only when individuals are given free access to all different competing viewpoints can they recognize what is honest and right and decide wisely which course to follow. The individual is given an opportunity through this method to direct his own destiny and to cooperate in the building of a strong nation. The cooperative efforts of individuals are important and fundamental in the American way of life. Jefferson impressed this upon us when he stated in the Declaration of Independence:

> With a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

Americanism is the recognition of the truth that the inherent and fundamental rights of man are derived from God and not from governments, societies, dictators, kings or majorities.[2]

Many Americans say that Americanism cannot be defined. It is indeed difficult to define adequately in a brief statement. Americans follow many creeds and many solutions are sought to solve the problems facing the citizens. However, we do know that cooperative efforts of individuals are essential in the American way of life.

> Americanism is expressed in the Declaration of Independence where our forefathers said that all men are created equal and that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights, chief among which are life, liberty and pursuit of happiness. From this Declaration and the well-established interpretations that have been put upon it from the beginning of the Republic down to the present moment it is clear that Americanism recognizes the existence of a God and the all-important fact that the fundamental rights of man are derived from God and not from any other source. Among these inalienable rights which are the gifts of man from his Creator are: (1) freedom of worship; (2) freedom of speech; (3) freedom of press; (4) freedom of assemblage; (5) freedom to work in such occupation as the experience, training, and qualifications of a man may enable him to secure and hold; (6) freedom to enjoy the fruits of his work, which means the protection of property rights; (7) the right to pursue his happiness with the necessary implication that he does not harm or injure others in the pursuit of this happiness. Upon this basic principle, the whole structure of the American Government was constructed. The system of checks and balances in the Constitution was wisely conceived and ingeniously constructed to provide every possible guaranty that every citizen of the United States would enjoy and retain his God-given rights. First, the Federal Government was specifically enjoined from exercising any power that was not expressly or by necessary implication granted to it in the Constitution. Second, such powers as the Federal Government was authorized to wield were wisely distributed between the three great departments, the exectuvie, the legislative, and the judicial. The essence of Americanism is therefore class, religious, and racial tolerance. It should be emphasized in the strongest language possible that the maintenance of these three forms of tolerance is essential to the preservation of Americanism. They constitute the three great pillars upon which our Constitutional Republic rests, and if any of these pillars is destroyed, the whole structure of the American system of government will crumble to the earth. Therefore, the man who advocates class hatred is plainly un-American even if he professes racial and religious tolerance. The converse of this proposition is equally true. It is as un-American to hate one's neighbor (who)... has more of this world's material goods as it is to hate him because he was born into another race or worships God according to a different faith.

The American Government was established to guarantee the enjoyment of these fundamental rights. It therefore, follows that in America the Government is the servant of the people. The rights of the people are protected through laws and their strict enforcement. For this reason, law and order are essential to the preservation of Americanism while lawlessness and violence are distinctly un-American.

Americanism means the recognition of the God-given rights of man and the protection of those rights under the Constitution through the instrumentality of an independent Congress, an untrammelled judiciary, and a fair and impartial Executive operating under the American system of checks and balances. Americanism likewise means the protection of an unorganized majority from an organized minority as well as the protection of a helpless minority from an inconsiderate and thoughtless majority.

The characteristic which distinguishes our Republic from the dictatorships of the world is not majority rule but the treatment of minorities. Dictatorships muster huge majorities at the polls, through intimidation and high-powered government propaganda, but these majorities are used for ruthless tyranny over minorities. The majority rule of the American form of government is distinguished by its recognition of certain rights of minorities which majorities cannot alienate.

All of these definitions of Americanism are based upon the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.[2]

WHY STUDY ABOUT COMMUNISM AND CONTROVERSIAL ISSUES

Twenty years ago Russia was not considered to be one of the important places or forces manacing American democracy. Many changes have taken place in the world. The changes are political, economic and social. With these changes have come problems, new issues and new sources of world tensions. Thus, America faces ever increasing threats to democracy. Ralph Linton, the noted anthropologist, has said, "One understands his own culture much better if it is held in focus with at least one other".

Since Lenin made the declaration that, "The future belongs to youth - To win the world's youth for communism is to win the future", an intensive effort has been made by the Party to attract youth to join the "Revolutionary Movement". Among the one-billion people, approximately one third of the world's population now controlled by communists, are many youths who must live under the totalitarian regime of communism.

Many young people of our state and nation know more about the communist conquest for world domination than we realize. Some have learned from youths from Cuba; some have read and studied about the communist conspiracy. We must be sure that all high school youth have the opportunity to study the history and conspiracy in order to thwart the Party's Plan to win youth for communism and also to strengthen our American freedom.

The instruction about communism should not be designed to create hysteria or despair. The study should foster sober understanding of the dangers. It should be remembered that the study about communism is controversial. Our country's security is threatened by its plan. "In spite of the problems encountered, teaching about communism is urgently required not only in the name of up-to-date education and also in the name of National Civil Defense", says Dr. Gerhart Niemeyer, Professor of Political Science at the University of Notre Dame.

We should teach the foundations of American democracy, citizenship and our American heritage in a manner which will develop patriotic Americans well rounded in an awareness of their privileges, opportunities and responsibilities.

If communist students can be inspired by their purposes of destruction, how much more American students should be inspired by the defense of truth, love and order.

Students should be given reasons for studying about the nature, evils, and fallacies of communism. The strongest reason for the study of communism today is that totalitarian communism is now the foremost threat to the American way of life.

The democratic process and American system is founded on free exchange of ideas. As we come to grips with problems, work out differences and make our decisions, the democratic process is at work. The schools play an important part in developing attitudes and competencies needed by the citizen of a democratic state. Well planned studies of controversial issues should help to prepare youths to resolve problems which they will meet in life.

Statement of Policy Important

A school can only deal with important problems of a controversial nature when it has the full support of the parents and school officials as well as the teacher. There are many problems - social, economic and political - which deal with everyday issues. A survey made by the N.E.A. showed various lay groups objecting to controversial issues listed here: religion, education, sex education, local politics, communism, socialism, public ownership, national politics, race relations, labor management, the United Nations. Therefore, teachers should have a clear written statement of policy from the local board of education before they begin this course on communism, rather than going forward fearfully or refraining from teaching that which should be taught.

The New Mexico State Board of Education, through adoption of this bulletin, is giving endorsement to the study about communism.

Local and national teachers' organizations are making resolutions endorsing the treatment of controversial issues in the schools. When a local board decides to give approval to the teaching about any controversial issue it is best to work through an advisory committee. This committee should then issue a policy statement that guarantees freedom to learn. The advisory committee should be made up of laymen, teachers and administrators. Working within the policies of the committee, teachers are protected from pressure groups and pupils can study and discuss significant issues in an objective atmosphere.

Many have questioned whether pupils should study problems which society itself has been unable to solve. However, it is important to realize that youth needs a sound introduction to the problems that confront the nation. Perhaps the proper study of these difficult topics will help develop some of the attitudes and techniques by which these important issues may eventually be resolved. Young people on the threshold of citizenship should be aware of, and able to grapple with, some of these unsolved problems. As the study unfolds, many varieties of opportunities develop for action. As pupils and teachers analyze and discuss chronic issues, and as they come to mutual agreement concerning solutions, the school is initiating one of the most potent forces for cultural improvement that education has presented to society. Children of all ages should discuss appropriate controversial issues. It is doubtful that communism should be studied seriously before grade eleven or twelve.

Here are two sets of criteria which will help in the decision concerning the study of controversial issues:

Set #1:

1. Does the study contribute to the achievement of social science goals?
2. Will the study deal with an important aspect of living which is significant to the pupils?
3. Is the study related to past experiences and will it lead to broader interests and study of other significant problems?
4. Is the study within the range and ability of the group?
5. Will the study provide opportunities to satisfy basic needs of the students?
6. Are there enough factual and reference resource materials available for the study?

Set #2:

1. Are the pupils mature enough to study this issue?
2. Is the issue of interest to the pupils?
3. Is the issue timely?
4. Has the issue been placed at the correct grade level for study?
5. Does the teacher feel prepared to handle the problem successfully?
6. Can study materials be provided for the study?
7. Is enough time allowed to justify the study?
8. Is the community ready for the study?

Three Purposes of the Study About Communism:

1. Education is the surest protection against agression of communist ideas. Education must create a strong will to resist attacks upon the American system of government.
2. The study of Russia and its system of government serves as an admirable vehicle for clarifying the meaning of our own ideas. All too little is done to instruct about the values of our way of life.
3. A third purpose for teaching about the Soviet Union is to impart information about its geographic and economic characteristics to pupils who need to know about the world in which they live. Aside from the ideological characteristics, the geographic facts about U.S.S.R. should be included in the education of every American citizen.

A thorough grounding in essentials of the American way of life is important. Even the unrealistic claims of progress by communists should cause the American to rebel against the price of liberty these gains cost. We should so love liberty that no material advantage would ever induce us to put it on a bargain counter. Education has no greater responsibility than to keep this principle alive in the hearts of each American. When this is done properly, nothing we learn about the U.S.S.R. can threaten our future.

Silence on the subject of communism in the school curriculum is not golden. To exclude a study of Russia and it's ideology serves chiefly to leave the pupil uninformed about the most dangerous adversary our country has ever known. Any timidity educators and boards of education may feel about introducing the study of the U.S.S.R. should be promptly suspended in favor of a carefully prepared program of instruction, said Carl F. Hansen, Superintendent of Schools, Washington, D. C.[3]

The new role of the United States in the Mid-20th Century is based on the recognition of the fact that the peoples of the world are interdependent. Point four and technical assistance programs; alliances and regional agreements, including military assistance to allies; re-examination of trade policies; loans for industrial development; participation in the United Nations and its agencies are all evidences of an increased awareness of American responsibilities outside American borders.

American citizens must realize world interdependence and the measures of cooperation that must be implemented by national states and by individual citizens.

A citizen is a member of a state which in return for allegiance or fealty guarantees its protection to persons and property and insures the enjoyment of civic rights and privileges. A state not only extends protection to citizens at home but also usually extends diplomatic protection when traveling or residing abroad.[4] The problem here is that few people realize their own individual part of the guarantee (in return for allegiance). Many Americans accept the enjoyment of civic rights as well as the privileges offered by the government without giving a second thought to the allegiance on their own part.

[4] World Book Encyclopedia, p. 1435.

Since our federal union was formed, American schools have given increasing attention to American History and Government. Even the elementary, junior high school, senior high school and college curricula have American History in one form or another firmly established. Courses in Civics or Government have also gained status. The rise of totalitarian governments in the 1920's and 1930's stimulated distinct and planned teaching of the traditions, ideals and achievements of American democracy and our economic and social institutions.

Many high schools have set up courses in the history and government of other nations. The offerings in European or World History have also increased during the past twenty-five years. Attention is also being given to the nature of democracy and it's totalitarian competitors.

The reason for requiring courses in history and other social studies is to develop an understanding by young citizens of the world in which they live and affairs about which they will be privileged to vote.

Some highly patriotic Americans have feared an understanding of Russia, and in particular, Soviet Communism. On the other hand many thoughtful people and responsible leaders in American public life have urged that understanding of Soviet Communism is essential to American citizens, that our loyalties must depend on informed and thoughtful knowledge and discussion rather than impressionistic feelings or prejudices.

The greater the threat of Communist propaganda or Soviet policy, the greater the need of our citizens to understand the nature of the appeals and the suggestions of the course of action we must fight against. Surely no one who has stopped to appraise our life in a democracy can believe that democratic institutions will suffer by comparison with life in U.S.S.R. The practical study about Soviet Communism should deepen understanding of and loyalty to democratic ideals and customs of our government.

All major nations and regions including the Soviet Union should be studied from the historic, the economic, the philosophical, the anthropoligical and the geographical point of view. As we proceed in our study of Soviet Communism, the analysis should bring about two understandings

First, we must understand how the meaning of the term communism has changed through the past two thousand years. Communistic life has appealed to idealists in many societies. Early Christians, the Settlers of Jamestown and Plymouth and followers of social reformers responded to idealistic theories that contemporary communists still exploit in the U.S.S.R. and other places. Marxian Communism promised the workers material gains and status; however, these ideals are still conspicuously absent in Soviet life. Americans need to know and understand the conflicting, differing definitions of communism. They must also recognize that existing dictatorships are giving new meaning to the term.

Second, our democracy is better understood when we study contrasting political, economic and social systems. Such a study brings out the privileges and responsibilities of our democratic citizenship.

As an aid to study communism a lengthy bibliography of readable materials is listed herein. These materials have been reviewed to assure reading for the average as well as the superior student. Much of the material is in terms of human experience such as reports of the U. S. Congress, House of Representatives, Committee on Un-American Activities, Senate Internal Security Sub-Committee, Contradictions of Communism and J. Edgar Hoover's Masters of Deceit. These are just a few of the many listed references. The references have been chosen to encourage reading about history, ideology, party, the Soviet System, also about leaders, Aesopian language, fiction, non-fiction and philosophies. The materials are mostly in the form of narrative and descriptive history since this type of material is usually more effective with most high school students. Many of these references have succeeded in presenting the danger of the vital issues we face today.

Records of history reveal the fact that authoritarian governments in one form or another have repeatedly threatened human freedom. Mussolini, the fascist leader proclaimed:

> There is no freedom of the individual; there is only freedom of people, nations and reces. The individual is only the means to achieve the noble purpose of the state. I spit upon the corpse of liberty.

Suppression of human freedom is the objective of totalitarianism today. Weapons technology makes the present form of communism extremely dangerous. The Soviet Union and Communist China, controlled by a small group of unscrupulous men, are using an organized system of terror to achieve their objectives.

Today the threat is the Totalitarian Communist Party that uses espionage, subversion, agitation, propaganda and infiltration tactics in its effort to conquer the world. Under these conditions, the free world must continue to possess military strength superior to that of the communists and see that each citizen of the free world is prepared to meet and defeat communism. This is the challenge that we face today in America's classrooms.

Adequate planning for classroom instruction takes time. There are two distinct related phases to proper planning. These are pointed out in Education for Survival:

1. Overall preliminary planning. Such planning provides for ordering books, periodicals, films, filmstrips and other needed materials well in advance of the time when they will be needed for classroom use. This privides opportunity for teachers to plan well ahead for the subjects they will be called upon to teach. It enables them to familiarize themselves with course content, suitable teaching materials and other instructional resources. It facilitates lesson planning.

2. The second phase of planning cannot be done adequately until the teacher knows the capabilities of students in the classes. Teaching plans must be appropriate to the level of the students understanding, their intellectual capacities, study habits and skills.

To facilitate lesson or teaching planning, some schools are providing time during the school day for selected teachers to prepare "resource units". Other schools are setting up workshops for principals, then they in turn will teach the teachers in an in-service program, the objectives, goals and program related to teaching about communism.

THE UNIT PLAN

The Unit Plan is an outline of purposes, content, problems, activities and materials related to a given topic. Although there are variations among units, the major sections of most are typical. While there are many ways to approach the study about communism, the unit plan gives a diversified approach and an opportunity for all students to work at their capacity. Following a textbook or a lecture pattern confines the student to a narrow field of study. Obviously, if studies on the evils of communism are to be effective, students will need adequate references and current materials. Every school should endeavor to build a social studies materials center with materials of various levels available, so that every student will find information within his understanding.

This simple outline for unit teaching may be adapted to your needs:

1. The title.
2. Background material or overview.
3. Purposes of teachers.
4. Purposes of students.
5. Introduction, initiation or approach.
6. Problems experiences materials and activities that will help to achieve the purposes of the unit should be included.
7. Culminating activities, summarizing the unit, a paper of research value, exhibit, play, test.
8. Evaluation - to see what has been learned.
   - Checklists
   - Charts
   - Test Items

9. Instructional resource references for students, references for teachers and lists of books.

A resource unit is a reservoir of information about a topic or area that teachers may tap for subject matter guidance about a specific topic (annotated materials, textbooks, films, filmstrips, recordings, agencies to contact, suggested learning activities).[3]

SAMPLE UNIT - TEACHING ABOUT COMMUNISM

I. Purposes of this study.

1. To develop a greater appreciation of the American Heritage.
2. To better understand democratic processes.
3. To appreciate freedom of opportunity such as Americans enjoy.
4. To understand enterprise under law.
5. To develop a strong will to preserve freedom.
6. To understand what the threat of communism means to the freedom of the people of our nation.
7. To obtain facts about communism in all of its aspects.
8. To understand the nature of communism.
9. To understand the evils of communism.
10. To know why free people have condemned communism.

II. Background information.

Read about the life of Karl Marx. Born May 5, 1818 at Trier in the Rhineland. His parents, Herschel and Henriette, belonged to the respectable Jewish middle class. His father was a lawyer and a descendant of a long line of Jewish rabbis. His mother was a descendant of a Jewish family which had originally come from Holland. Neither the mother nor father accepted the official religion of the Prussian State.
When Karl was twelve he entered the gymnasium at Trier. He was a brillant student at the age of eighteen. He entered the University of Bonn, with the intention of studying law.

Introduction or Initiation Statements:

Communism is not merely a set of ideas; it is an ideology combined with a combat organization. It is an organized ideological enterprise aiming to carry its ideology to power and to impose its power on the whole world.

Communism is admittedly committed to destroying capitalism as an economic system and democracy as a political system. The communists challenge every area of the American democratic way of life.

Communism is obviously in conflict with the democratic way of life which is accepted and supported by the people of the United States of America.

Communists have resurrected primitive approaches to life problems which substitute tyranny for democracy in government.

Communism can no longer be viewed passively. The people of the United States have come to realize that left alone communism has not faded away. It has continually grown in strength abroad until now it is a principal threat to the democratic way of life.

Current thinking encourages a full knowledge and understanding of the communist system.

The truth concerning communism is the greatest means at hand for meeting its challenge.

J. Edgar Hoover has stated, "Truth is the surest weapon against the lowering threats of communism. More than anything else communists fear truth for deceit is their strategy."

RESOLUTIONS ON TEACHING ABOUT COMMUNISM IN THE SCHOOLS

The American Bar Association, The American Legion and the National Education Association add support to the plan of teaching about communism in the following resolutions:

American Bar Association

> Whereas, we recognize the urgency of instructing all Americans in the full scope and aims of communism and the increasing threat it poses to the free world and to our democracy and freedom under law to the end that an informed citizenry may successfully defend and preserve our American heritage; and
> Whereas, our educational institutions, both public and private, especially at the secondary, college and adult levels afford the best means of developing sound programs of instruction in this area; and
> Whereas, these institutions and educators, in accepting this responsibility, must be given public understanding and support;
> Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved by the American Bar Association:
> (1) That through our members and the cooperation of state and local bar associations we encourage and support our schools and colleges in the presentation of adequate instruction in the history, doctrines, objectives and techniques of communism, thereby helping to instill a greater appreciation of democracy and freedom under law and the will to preserve that freedom;
> (2) That to insure the highest quality of instruction in this area, those responsible for our educational programs be urged to provide the appropriate training of instructors and to stimulate the production of scholarly textbooks and other teaching materials of professional excellence;
> (3) That we seek to implement this resolution through a special committee of seven members to observe and encourage progress in this educational program and to render annual reports to the Association, the committee to include the Chairman of our Committees on American Citizenship, the Bill of Rights, and Communist Tactics, Strategy and Objectives, and one or more of our members who are educators.

---Resolution adopted by the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association, February 20, 1961.

The American Legion

Whereas, The American Legion is vitally interested in the preservation of the fundamental principles of Americanism to the present and succeeding generations of citizens of these United States; and

Whereas, it is the belief of The American Legion that there should be a regular course of instruction in each high school in the United States and its territories and possessions, which would: 1st, clearly delineate the principles and policies which constitute the American system and why they are sound; and 2nd, teach the elements that comprise the Communist system and why it is evil,

Be it resolved, that the National Executive Committee does hereby urge each Department, District and Post of The American Legion to work with their education officials to the end that every public and private secondary school in the United States and its territories and possessions will institute as a part of their regular curriculum suitable courses designed to deepen understanding of and loyalty to American democratic ideals and institutions and expose the fallacies of Communism.

---Resolution adopted by the American Legion Convention, Register No. 23, September 10-14, 1961 (Consolidation of Resolution No. 216 and Resolution No. 355.)

National Education Association

The responsibility of the schools is to teach the value of our American way of life, founded as it is on the dignity and worth of the individual; our youth should know it, believe it, and live it continuously.

As a measure of defense against our most potent threat, our American schools should teach about communism and all forms of totalitarianism, including the principles and practices of the Soviet Union and the Communist Party in the United States. Teaching about communism does not mean advocacy of communism. Such advocacy should not be permitted in American schools. At the same time the National Education Association condemns the careless, incorrect, and unjust use of such words as 'Red' and 'Communist' to attack teachers and other persons who in point of fact are not Communists, but who merely have views different from those of their accusers.

Members of the Communist Party should not be employed in our schools. Communist organizations and Communist front organizations should be required by law to register with the Attorney General of the United States.

The National Education Association strongly asserts that all schools have an obligation to teach the rights, privileges, and the responsibilities of living in a democracy.

The Association charges the teaching profession with the obligation of providing the best defense of democracy through full participation in making democracy really live and work.

The Association again reminds the public of the repeated pronouncements of our military leaders and statesmen that education is the basis of our national security and that a well-planned, adequately-supported system of free public schools is fundamental to the perpetuation of the American way of life.

---Excerpts from platform and resolutions adopted at the Representative Assembly of the National Education Association, San Francisco, Calif., July 6, 1951.

...At the heart of a profession dedicated to the welfare of students lies respect for the human personality and forthe continuing pursuit of truth. Members of the Communist party, therefore, bar themselves from the teaching profession.

Communists may not join the National Education Association, nor should they be permitted to teach in American schools . . .

The program of the National Education Association is directed toward the following goals:

(1) Educational opportunity for every individual to develop his full potential for responsible and useful citizenship and for intellectual and spiritual growth.

(2) Balanced educational programs to provide for the varied needs and talents of individual students and for the strength and progress of the nation . . .

(f) Instructional programs which teach about--but do not advocate--communism and all forms of totalitarianism. . .

---Excerpts from platform and resolutions adopted at the Representative Assembly of the National Education Association, Atlantic City, N. J., June 30, 1961.

Other Suggestions for Introduction:

To stimulate interest and to introduce problems.

1. Plan bulletin board with students, exhibit news pictures from magazines and papers depicting dangers of communism to democracy.
2. Use current news stories and feature stories to create environment.
3. Cartoons from magazines and daily papers point up tense situations.
4. Have students prepare creative cartoons to tell the danger they see in Communism.

Many students will need very little stimulus for they are already extremely interested in the world situation and the part Russia plays in it.

Some teachers may prefer to begin with a well prepared questionnaire to see what understandings students already have.

A teacher may wish to read thought provoking articles or have the students read some of these magazine and newspaper articles.

General Objectives (For the Teacher).

1. To create an awareness that indifferent citizens are a great danger to democracy.
2. To develop the attitude that the democratic way of life must be guarded constantly from threats of totalitarian ideologies.
3. To strengthen students in their respect for the dignity and worth of every individual.
4. To help students develop a feeling of personal responsibility for the activities of groups in which they are members.
5. To give students an opportunity to learn to function efficiently in situations demanding judgments based on facts.
6. To encourage habits of critical thinking and careful evaluation based on knowledge and understanding.

Specific Objectives (For the Teacher).

1. To assist students in gaining knowledge and understanding of the restrictions of a totalitarian government, in limiting the liberty of the individual citizen.
2. Teach the fallacies inherent in all forms of totalitarian governments.
3. To teach an understanding of the basic ideas of communism as practiced today in the Soviet Union and its Satellites.
4. To teach how to get facts and understandings of the world today and policies used by communists to get world dominion.
5. To give students an opportunity to understand how communists use propaganda in furthering the cause of communism.
6. To develop the habit of accumulating and analyzing facts before forming judgments.

Student Objectives.

1. To study about the people who originated communism and to evaluate their motives.
2. To find out the major aims of the Communist Party.
3. To learn about the strategy of communists in getting control of governments.
4. To examine the theory of communism.
5. To do research in order to find out what life is like in communist countries.

6. To examine the threat of communism to the democratic way of life in the United States.
7. To learn to separate facts from propaganda.
8. To improve skill in the use of resource materials.
9. To learn to work with others in group activities.
10. To improve organization of understandings and ideas in order to communicate more effectively with others.

PROBLEMS AND TOPICS FOR STUDY

COMMUNISM

The word communism means different things to different people. To many political leaders in colonial nations, it implies revolt against the white man's rule, liberation from colonialism and rapid industrialization, aided by Soviet money or advice. To some workers it means defense of lower class interests and sympathy with Soviet foreign policy. Western intellectuals tend to regard it as a Utopian ideal tarred by inhuman practices. To the policeman it is an international conspiracy of power-made criminals. To the Soviet citizen, the word connotes, in one sense, a meaningful goal his society is striving to attain within the forseeable future, with its rewards and its hardships.[5]

Every Communist Party is a highly organized revolutionary group whose members are motivated by a zeal which rivals religious fanaticism in its intensity.[6]

Communism and its theory is more than rationalization. Undoubtedly, the thoughts and actions of communist leaders are determined in significant measure by the intellectual heritage of Marx, Lenin and Stalin. Their ideology must be faced as one of the strongest forces active in the world today.

Communism means an ideal, a political movement, a method of analysis and a way of life. The meaning of communism depends on time, place, circumstances and the point of view of the observer.

Communism is not an invisible power. Its movement is created by men: the operation is by men as are all of its movements. Communism as an ideal extends back to Plato's Republic. In every century men have tried to resolve a contradiction in our social order.

Communism according to classical theory aims to create a classless society in which all production, distribution and exchange are community owned.

For those who subscribe to it, Communism is a secular religion. The creed of communism subscribed to by those who follow it is primarily the product of four men. Marx and Engels in the last century set down the basic theory and Lenin and Stalin contributed to their doctrines.

Communist ideology emphasizes the "inevitable" triumph of communism over capitalism. This doctrine is based on the belief that they have the key to the history of economics.

Communist theory identifies five phases of human society as stages in historic progression toward communism: (1) primitive society (2) slaveholding society (3) feudal society (4) capitalistic society (5) social society. The final step is communism.

The schools of Russia are a weapon of the dictatorship. The Communist Party maintains and controls the schools. The schools are made to serve the purposes of the Communist Party.

Communism is a fanatical movement; it has the characteristics of repression and tyranny which are difficult to cope with. It has caused some of the gravest problems of our time. There is a definite drive on for world wide communism. The free people of the world must be ready to face this truth.

Study Topics - Committee Assignment.

Examine the ideals and principles of democracy and compare them with the communist.

Individual Assignment to Report On.

Examine democracy as a way of life. Why has freedom been basic in democratic society?

Class Assignment.

1. Review classifications of governments.
2. List contrasts which exist in governments classified as democracies and those classified as dictatorships.
3. Assign class to locate and read statements that describe communism.

THE COMMUNIST PARTY

The Communist Party grew up as a tightly organized and self-conscious faction within the Russian Social-Democratic Labor Party.

The Communist Party worked to gain full control over the Russian working class movement with the aim of making its own policies prevail.

The party leader, Lenin, did everything within his power to make it into an organization whose every move was well under his own control, rejecting and casting out all persons and groups who refused to submit to such control.

The party does not reflect the will of the people when the communists speak of the rule of the proletariat; "they actually mean the rule of the communist party". According to the view of the communists they are to lead and guide the workers in the revolution. By infiltration and stimulation of force they hope to establish communistic rule over the world.

The Communist Party has a war-like character. It uses all kinds of inconsistent methods to develop conflict. It is not organized for the purposes of a normal political party.

Russia was the first country in the world to fall under the communist movement. They have not been able to make the theories work in practice.

There were many problems of party policy organization unsolved when Lenin became ill. The death of Lenin brought out serious unsolved problems of party government.

No American political party is so fanatically bound by dogma as is the Communist Party which is devoted to the theories of Marxism-Leninism-Stalinism. Briefly this dogma is based upon the following false conceptions:

1. That all phases of American life, industry, education, religion, politics, the press, radio and films, even family life, are dominated primarily by an irreconcilable class struggle between the capitalists and the workers.
2. That our system of free capitalist enterprise (which has produced for the American people the highest living standards in the world) has actually outlived its usefulness and must be destroyed.

3. That the system of communism (with its slave labor camps, low living standards, and one-party dictatorship over every phase of human life) is superior to and must take the place of our system of free enterprise, thus abolishing the class struggle for all time.
4. That American democracy is not a government of, by, and for the American people but a capitalist dictatorship, which must be destroyed.
5. That this change to communism and a classless society can be brought about only by the violent overthrow of the capitalist system and our form of government.
6. That the Communist Party is destined to carry out this historic mission.
7. That Communists owe their highest and unreserved loyalty to the Soviet Union, where the Communist system has been finally established.[7]

Assignment for Students.

Organize and outline the history of the Russian Communist Party.
Locate information concerning the doctrine and environment in which communism was worked out; this will give a good understanding of communism.
Find the shortcomings of the party.
List major events and milestones in the history of the party that have made a lasting impact.

ECONOMIC FACTS

When the Bolsheviks seized power on November 7, 1917, they took over plants and industries as the first step in establishing the basis of socialism or communism. The departments which took over the management of economic life were left with a legacy of dying industries which they were trying to bring under concentrated control.[8]

One of the principles of early communism was that money is "a testimony of the right of the exploiter to obtain social goods with a view of speculation, profit and plundering the workers". Money thus ceased to serve its proper functions, when paper money was issued as a measure of value, unit of account, and medium of exchange. The government tried to move agricultural and industrial products without the use of money. This did not work. Trade bogged down. Towns were deserted.

[8]Alexander Boykov, The Development of The Soviet Economic System, Cambridge University Press, pp. 6-7.

In 1917 there was a decline in industrial production. This was followed by a decline in agricultural production. Despite the fact that the Russian people did not have a very high standard of living in the years before the First World War, production of both agricultural and industrial commodities was so much less in the first years of the Soviet regime that the standard of living declined even to lower depths.

> The Tenth Congress of the Communist Party met in March 1921, Lenin made his followers face the bitter facts:
> We are living-he said-in such conditions of improverishment and ruin, overstrain and exhaustion of the principal productive forces of the peasants and the workers, that for a time everything must be subordinated to this fundamental consideration-at all costs to increase the quantity of goods. * * * In our attempt to pass over to Communism, we had suffered by the spring of 1921, a more serious defeat that any previously inflicted on us by Kolchak, Denikin or Pilsudsky. Compulsory requisition in the villages and the direct Communist approach to the problems of reconstruction in towns-this was the policy which interferred with the growth of the productive capacity of the country and proved to be the main cause of a profound economic and political crisis which confronted us in the spring of 1921.
> It was at this Congress that the first steps were taken toward the introduction of the New Economic Policy (N.E.P.). Lenin himself described this policy in one sentence in the same speech:
> The New Economic Policy means the substitution of a food tax for requisitioning; it means a transition to the restoration of capitalism in no small degree.
> The New Economic Policy restored market dealings up and down and through the various sectors of industry. Even though the N.E.P. was announced when industry was practically stagnant and agriculture was in the early stages of the famine of 1921-22, some revival occurred at once. Wherever there was still some industry and where famine had not struck, production picked up. Hope was revived.

Trade was stimulated. Small industries started up again.[9]

HISTORICAL HIGHLIGHTS

The term communism was coined in the 1830's in the secret revolutionary societies of Paris. It originally meant the belief in and practice of common ownership, use and disposition of property. In that sense it stood for a protest against some existing social evils and injustices. It then represented an ancient religious Utopian ideal of a social system of economic and social inequality and political oppression. But communism did not remain an eloquent protest and social ideal very long. Soon it acquired a systematic program organized as a world wide revolutionary movement.

Russian domestic history from 1856 to 1917 is a dreary story. During this period attempts were made to introduce Western-style economic, social and political reforms and harsh reaction against reforms. The Russian Tzars of the period (who since 1613 had been chosen from the Romanov family) varied a great deal in their attitudes toward reform. Most of them resisted reform. The eve of World War I saw some progress. In 1861 the agricultural workers who were virtual slaves had now been emancipated. Attempts to build up modern industry had been made in the 1880's.

Following a major uprising in 1905 a constitution was issued providing for an elected assembly called the Duma. However, even in 1914 the propertied classes were favored, so the Duma was far from being a truly representative assembly. Most of the power remained in the hands of the privileged.

Russian history points out that the 1917 replacement of the Romanov dynasty by the Provisional Government was known as the March Revolution. Before the 1917 revolution the communist movement consisted of scattered groups and parties dedicated to overthrow capitalism. After Soviet Russia was established, Lenin was returned from exile to take personal leadership of the Bolsheviks, the most powerful of the socialist groups.

The German military high command was instrumental in effecting Lenin's return to Russia. They had two objectives in mind in connection with the move. They felt it would destroy the pro-allied Provincial Government and would weaken the Russian military against Germany. They were right, it did.

Lenin intended for his party to be a "new type". He conceived it to be the vanguard of the working class. His idea was to overthrow capitalism and then to construct socialism. The Bolshevik Party was created as a revolutionary combat organization composed of professional revolutionists. These people devoted themselves to semi-military discipline and the revolutionary struggle to overthrow capitalism. After Russia seized power in 1917, the function of the Bolshevik party was altered. It now aimed at the organization, direction and administration of the state, the implementation of government policy, and the maintenance of power. Lenin demanded far-reaching changes when he returned, such as: the control of industry by the workers' committees, immediate seizure of land by the peasants, an immediate end to war and the recognition of the soviets as the governing organs in place of the Provisional Government. "Peace, Bread and Freedom" and "All Power to the Soviets", were popular rallying cries of the Bolshevik revolutionaires in their attempt to replace the Provisional Government.

There were other socialist groups in the Soviet, however, Lenin soon maneuvered his party into a position of leadership in the Soviet. Lenin's followers succeeded in overthrowing the Provisional Government by the fall of 1917. The "October Revolution" marked the beginning of Bolshevik rule in Russia. In the following year the Bolsheviks became known as the Communist Party.

The years following the revolution marked a period of great confusion and turmoil in Russia. There was humiliating peace with Germany, the removal of the capital from Petrograd to Moscow, the murder of Tzar Nichols II and his family, protracted civil war in almost all parts of the old Tzarist Empire, half-hearted anti-Bolshevik intervention of the British, French, Americans and Japanese, and war with Poland and Rumania.

By 1921, when the last enemies had been driven from Russia, the nation was in a shambles of war. Private incentive had been ruined. By 1922 famine raged, with tens of millions of people starving or on a semi-starvation diet. Some historians say that five million lost their lives. This was the beginning of communism.

Lenin struck back. Slave labor camps were increased, dreaded secret police compelled conformity, churches were closed. Those who opposed Bolsheviks were ruthlessly executed as enemies of the people.

The result was the N.E.P., New Economic Policy. Peasants were now allowed to keep their surpluses of grain after taxation. They were no longer confiscated. They could even dispose of their surpluses as they chose and private trade was allowed to develop. In the industrial field many businesses were returned to private owners.

To the surprise of Bolshevik leaders, N.E.P. proved a relative success. Both agricultural and industrial production increased.

Lenin did not live to see the final results of N.E.P.

ORIGIN OF THE 5-YEAR PLANS

Many incidents led to the beginning of the 5-Year Plans. There was an increasing number of public enterprises, also the policy of direct control by workers was being followed by many factories. All of this led to the need of a high coordinating authority which would be divorced from actual administration. The State Economics Planning Commission, or Gosplan, was given this authority.

In February 1921, on the eve of the launching of the N.E.P., Gosplan was instructed to draw up a general plan for the national economy and to break it down into annual programs. It was the responsibility of Gosplan to formulate plans and programs for the control, expansion, and interrelation, of the entire economic life of the nation, including industry, agriculture finance, trade, and transport, whether nationalized, municipal, cooperative, or still privately owned and operated. It developed its planning work into an Annual Plan and a 5-Year Plan and a more general Plan indicating the course of development beyond the 5 years. This has become the central planning agency of the Soviet economic system, without which the various individual plans and projects would come into conflict with one another. While Gosplan does not administer or operate any elements of the national economy, it records the progress of the plans, its successes or failures in different sectors of industry and in different sections of the country, and works out modifications as experience dictates.

All through the period of the N.E.P., Gosplan was at work studying and engineering the economy as a whole. Areas of development and expansion were laid out in different industries and regions, and in agriculture, transportation, trade, and public construction. A basic decision was made to emphasize capital development for future growth in the broad outlines of a general economic plan, and there would have to be much tightening of belts to carry out this program.

In 1925, after a new stable currency had been introduced, Gosplan issued a report on the economic control figures of the U.S.S.R. for the year 1925-26. By that time the desperate need to increase food and raw materials for any broad program of Socialist construction seemed of the clearest urgency to the dominant leaders of the Soviet state. Increased raw materials were needed for the expansion of industry and for exports with which to pay for machinery and foreign supplies.[9]

The 5-Year Plans of succeeding years very largely set up specific programs which determined the rate of progress for the economy of Soviet Russia. They provided for:

[9] Ibid., pp. 4-5.

1. Collectivization of agriculture.
2. Rapid development of heavy industry.
3. Increase in basic materials.
4. Exploitation of vast eastern areas of the country.
5. Mechanization and electrification.
6. Improvements in the transportation.
7. Absorption of planned increases in urban population and of industrial employees.
8. Each industry had set goals of production.
9. Planned increase in productivity of labor.
10. Reduction in hours.
11. Increases in pay and the provision of social services.
12. Production costs to be checked.

Questions:

1. Tell about the work of the Gosplan. Why was it organized?
2. Did the First 5-Year Plan indicate that other 5-Year Plans would follow?
3. When was the First 5-Year Plan drawn up?
4. What specific provisions were set up in each of the 5-Year Plans?
5. What were the goals of the 5-Year Plans?

Discussion Topics:

Why was the period of collectivization called a man-made famine?
The communist laborers are required to read labor books. Every wage earner in the Soviet is required to have and read these books.
How would you feel about such a situation?

Debate Question:

Resolved that the 5-Year Plan was a success in every way.

AMERICAN SOVIET RELATIONS

On March 6, 1856, Commodore Matthew C. Perry predicted a Cold War between Russia and the United States. He said:

> It seems that the people of America will, in some form or other, extend their domination and their power until they shall have brought within their mighty embrace multitudes of the islands of the great Pacific.

> And I think too that eastward and southward will her great rival in future aggrandizement stretch forth her power to the coasts of China and Siam; and thus the Saxon and the Cossacks (i.e., Russians) will meet once more, in strife or friendship on another field.
> Will it be friendship? I fear not.
> The antagonistic exponents of freedom and absolutism must then meet at last, and then will be fought that mighty battle on which the world will look with breathless interest.
> On its issues will depend the freedom or the slavery of the world-despotism or rational liberty must be the fate of civilized man.[11]

The story of these two nations and how they have developed into superpowers and how issues grew is fascinating. It is interesting to note that American expansion occurred in the Pacific, as Russian expansion occurred in bordering lands.

We usually identify Russian control in Eastern Europe as a result or aftermath of World War II; we should not forget that the Russians had long exerted control over parts of Eastern and Central Europe.

Assignment - Problems to Consider.

> Trace the historical setting for American Soviet relations from the Mid-Ninteenth Century to World War I.
> How did the United States and the Soviet Union develop into such super-powers?
> Why are issues between the United States of America and the U.S.S.R. of world wide importance?

PRINCIPLES OF LENINISM

By 1921, Lenin was in firm control of Russia, but the expected world wide revolution failed to materialize. In order to appease discontent among the peasantry, Lenin instituted the New Economic Policy (N.E.P.) which consisted of incentives to produce grain by way of restoring some free enterprise on the farms. Meantime, Lenin died in January, 1924, and a power struggle ensued between Stalin, Trotsky, Tinoviev, Kamenev and Bukharin. By virtue of his control over party apparatus, Stalin emerged victorious. By 1928 he was in firm control and in that year he ended the N.E.P. and instituted the first 5-Year Plan.

Lenin was a master terrorist who marched to supremecy over the bodies of thousands of countrymen. His writings were the most widely read of any in modern history. Maxim Gorky said, "Lenin was a man who prevented people from living their own lives as no other man before him was able to do."

Lenin started with Marxism based on the promise that "the rich get richer and the poor get poorer." Karl Marx taught that the only way to eliminate inequality was through revolution. Everyone would receive a just return for his work under temporary "dictatorship of the proletariat", or working class. Finally a classless and stateless society would emerge in which all would receive "according to his need."

Lenin's "dictatorship of the proletariat" became a dictatorship over the proletariat. The classless society became one in which the elite class of communist party members controlled everything in the country.

Marx had never thought out the composition of the Party and such details; Lenin did. Lenin set up some rules which were as follows:

The Party must be small.
The Party must be tightly controlled.
Party members must be deeply loyal.
Fanaticism, not members was the key.
Members must live, eat, breathe and dream revolution.
Discipline must be rigid.
If an individual falters, oust him.
Revolutions cannot be won by clean hands, or white shirts only by blood, sweat and burning torch.

Marx thought up or created these ideas, but it was Lenin who put them into organized action.

In 1903 the Russian Social Democratic Labor Party or (Russian Marxist Party) met in Brussels. A dispute arose. Should the Party membership be restricted or open to anybody? Lenin fought for restricted membership and won. His group was called the Bolsheviks

(the majority). The losers were called the Mensheviks (minority). Lenin insisted that members should be trained revolutionaries. To allow anybody, curiosity seekers, weaklings and half-hearted joiners to belong would reduce the party's discipline, it's power and fanaticism. He felt that the masses could not be trusted to make a revolution. He often said they needed men willing to die because the Party told them to die. The principles of Lenin are in full effect throughout the communist world today.

Lenin was an able propagandist. He thought in terms of battle plans, tactics and strategy, not in theories or philosophical abstractions. He maintained a man was either your friend or enemy.

Lenin worked day and night for seventeen years to perfect his plans for the revolution. His opportunity came in March 1917. Revolution erupted in Russia. The cheka (secret police) instituted a reign of terror. A wide search for enemies racked the country. Pravda, the Party newspaper, urged drastic measures. Marx had prophesied that the revolution would take place in a highly industrialized nation. Russia was industrially backward.

During the revolution most industry was nationalized. Trade and commerce were officially abolished. The government tried to distribute manufactured articles to the people. Food supplies were confiscated. Poor peasants were assembled in committees to spy on their richer neighbors who might be hiding grain. Class was set against class. This was an established tactic of communism.

The nation was shattered by 1921 when the last enemies had been driven from Russia. Private incentive had been ruined, indistrial production was down and millions of people were starving and there was a great loss of life. This was Russia's introduction to Lenin's communism. The secret police compelled conformity; labor camps were increased and churches were closed. Anyone who opposed the Bolsheviks was executed.

Terror was not the answer. In March 1921, sailors of the Red Navy in Kronstadt, who were formerly Bolshevik supporters, rebelled. Lenin realized a change had to be made. The New Economic Policy (N.E.P.) was the result. It proved a success, as it gave the leaders a breathing spell they needed to consolidate gains. Both agriculture and industrial production increased. Lenin did not live to see the final results of the temporary N.E.P. Lenin's skill cannot be underestimated. Ruthless and iron-clad discipline surrounded his concept of Party supremecy. It was difficult for Western civilization to believe that men could operate under a state policy, where actions of brutality and terror were prevalent and human dignity disregarded, but this was the plan Lenin inherited and carried out.

Sayings of Lenin.

> As long as capitalism and socialism exist, we cannot live in peace; in the end, one or the other will triumph --a funeral dirge will be sung either over the Soviet Republic or over World Capitalism.

> Lenin used the word ruthless often which is a clue to his thinking.

> There is still too little of that ruthlessness which is indispensable for the success of socialism.

These sayings reveal the Lenin who has always been hailed by the Moscow ruling heirarchy as the guiding genius of communism in Russia.

Lenin's Ten Commandments of Revolution:

1. Never reject terror on principle.
2. Salvation lies only along the road of international Socialist revolution.
3. There are no morals in politics: There is only expediency.
4. Religion is the opiate of the people.
5. Let me teach the children, and the seed I have sown will never be uprooted.
6. Truth does not count unless it serves an end.
7. Our tactic; absolute distrust.
8. Regard all persons without sentiment.
9. Promises are like piecrusts; made to be broken.
10. Scheme...zigzag...retreat...anything to hasten the coming to power of communism.[12]

Problems for Study About Lenin:

1. What was Lenin's early background?
2. What role did his brother play in the formation of the young Lenin's political ideas?
3. Who were Lenin's key associates in the underground, and what became of them in later history?

THE STALIN REGIME

By 1926 the Soviet state, dominated by intellectual Marxian revolutionaries, settled down to save its home base, Russia. The theories of Karl Marx, which provided the core of the Soviet world outlook, consisted of two elements. One, the theory of progress toward higher forms of social organization. Collective forms of production constantly emphasized the collective aspects of the industrial economy. The other is the theory of revolution of a violent overthrow of the social and economic order, based on private ownership of the means of production.

Lenin had intended that his party would be a "new type". He conceived it to be the vanguard of the working class. Lenin passed away in January 21, 1924. Between 1924 and 1926, Stalin emerged as the undisputed leader of national communism. However, Lenin denounced Stalin shortly before he died, but too late to keep him from moving into his place. Stalin lacked the leadership of Lenin. He was more of a plodder. Once Stalin was well in control of the party, he adopted much of the program of his left wing critics and thus faced new opposition from leaders who were committed to a program of caution and slow reform. These leaders were purged, from positions of influence. This was the time when Stalin launched the program of rapid industrialization and the First 5-Year Plan. It was an ambitious and reckless program. Stalin himself later referred to the years of the First 5-Year Plan as another revolution.

The plan for industrialization disregarded economic balance, rationality or demands of the consumer. It was a desparate crash program; it brought untold human misery. The Russian population again suffered lean years with a drastic lowering of living standards. Every ounce of available energy, human as well as material, was pressed into service and pumped into investment. This introduced a new civil war against the peasantry in agriculture. Every year's harvest was sent to the hungry city dwellers. This was the only way to keep up industrialization. Private enterprise in farming was abolished. The peasants were forced into cooperation and collective farms. Here they were subject to controls. Here they used tractors and implements owned by the government.

Peasants' resistance to the attempt to "collectivize" them was bitter and persistent. The regime overcame the peasants through a virtual civil war in which thousands of peasants lost their lives, millions were left destitute. The agricultural economy of the Soviet Union suffered damages that were not mended until more than twenty years later. Right at this time a disastrous famine caused millions of Soviet citizens to die.

With industrialization came new radicalism in cultural and educational affairs. Soviet Russia moved further away from socialist goals and methods. The workers were totally subjected to discipline under a new managerial system. All agencies were now run by single managers with full authority and responsibility. Stalin was preparing for world conquest. Stalin became, in the Communists' eyes, a virtual god on earth. On March 5, 1953, Stalin died. The communist world went into mourning. His funeral was a state spectacle. His body was entombed in Moscow. Speeches told of his greatness. The whole world wondered what would come next.

THE PRESIDIUM

At the top of the Communist pyramid is the Presidium. It has grown from the seeds planted by Lenin. It is a huge bureaucracy or body of officials. It now includes six million men and over a million women who carry out the orders of the Party dictators. They run the Soviet government, they control the Red Army, direct the secret policy, rule the labor camps, supervise education, plan production and consumption of goods for over two hundred million people. They manage the factories, mines, railroads and all of the collective farms.

This top executive committee of the Party called the Presidium decides what the Party and the Soviet government will do. In 1919 it was the Politburo or Political Bureau. In 1920 the Politburo included just five members; Lenin, Trotsky, Stalin and two other old Bolsheviks. Lenin was chairman. In 1924 the membership increased to seven. During Stalin's dictatorship it averaged about ten members. In 1952 it increased to twenty-five. When Stalin died in 1953 its membership was reduced to ten. In mid-1957 it numbered fifteen.

Even though the Soviet constitution says the Party is ruled by the Congress of the Communist Party, the Party Congress obeys the Presidium. Party rules and the Soviet Constitution are not what they seem to be. The Party Congress is directed to elect a central committee and this committee is supposed to elect the Presidium. However, a few closely united members of the Presidium have always run the Congress and have chosen the members of the Central Committee.

The Communist Party Congress met at least once a year under Lenin. The Party Congress met only once in about four years under Stalin.

Members of the Supreme Soviet are elected every four years on a basis of what the constitution calls "universal, equal and direct suffrage by secret ballot". Every citizen who has reached the age of 18 is eligible to vote, irrespective of race, nationality, sex, religion, education, property status or past activities. The voter is presented with a single slate of candidates, one for each office.

> W. W. Kulski, in his book, The Soviet Regime describes the 1952 Party Congress:
> The Congress delegates were not elected directly by the rank and file members of the Party at the general meetings of the primary organizations (soviets). They were picked by the Party bureaucracy at regional conferences. . . The mode of electing delegates was determined by the Central Committee, which established in advance the agenda (program of discussions) that was subsequently unanimously adopted by the Congress itself. Local Party organizations were not asked to make suggestions about the agenda. Thus everything was staged in advance by the Central Committee, whose members supplied almost all of the Congress speakers. . . . The servility of Congress delegates to the leaders on whose good graces their daily bread depended was manifested from the open meeting.[14]

KHRUSHCHEV AND THE COMMUNIST DOCTRINE

Nikita S. Khrushchev is an optimist. He has said that our grandchildren will be Communists. He has said that Western culture and civilization will be buried by Communist culture.

Mr. Khrushchev bases his optimism on what he regards as a realistic appraisal of the international situation. In his Foreign Affairs article in October 1959, he challenges the United States to look at the "real" facts, the "real situation". He bids us not "to go against reality, against life itself". The clear implication of these statements is that if we see the "realities" of international politics, we too will recognize that communism is the wave of the future.

This contemporary expression of classic Marxist determinism and optimism has a bite to it because of the momentous events that have taken place since the Soviet Union was established. In his Foreign Affairs article Mr. Khrushchev makes this disquieting claim:

At present, the Socialist (Communist) countries cover about one-fourth of the territory of the globe, have one-third of its population, and their indistrial output accounts for about one-third of the total world output.

In short, the world's No. 1 Communist believes that the balance of power has shifted decisively in his favor. In his power analysis, Khrushchev includes ideological and psychological factors as well as economic and military factors.

This supreme Communist confidence that the future belongs to them has ominous political implications for the free world, and especially for the United States. We can see our dilemma most sharply in Berlin. According to Khrushchev's statements recorded in this study, he feels certain that Soviet power is preponderant and, therefore, he has the capacity to impose his "solution" upon the Berlin problem. He says openly that he favors "compromise", and "coexistence", but between the lines it is all too clear that he wants these objectives only on his terms.

According to my reading of history, says Senator Hubert Humphrey, the Communists are not destined to rule the world. I believe that the future is not closed, but open. The future belongs to those who deserve to inherit it. I believe that the open society, that genuine representative government, will not perish if those who believe in government by the people and for the people will be willing to work and fight as hard as those who believe in government by self-perpetuating elite. There is nothing automatic about the survival of democracy. As Edmund Burke said, Evil triumphs if good men fail to act. The values of free government and human dignity can survive only if we are willing to pay the price. And the price is high.[15]

Even though Khrushchev proclaims a doctrine of peaceful co-existance he has actually adopted the basic doctrines laid down by Lenin and Stalin.

Lenin in his hostility to the non-communist world said:

We are living not merely in a state, but in a system of states; and it is inconceivable that the Soviet Republic should continue to exist for a long period side by side with imperialist states. Ultimately one or the other must conquer. Meanwhile a number of terrible clashes between the Soviet Republic and the Bourgeois is inevitable.[16]

After Stalin had fully consolidated his dictatorial power in 1928, he declared:

The Soviet Union harbors no illusion as to the possibility of durable peace... Wars of proletarian dictatorship against world capitalism are inevitable and revolutionary.[16]

Khrushchev also believes in the triumph of Communism. In 1958 he said:

It is now becoming more and more clear that the end of the sway of capitalism is drawing near in other countries, too, and that capitalism is a system that has outlived its age and is bound to perish. The future is ours! The future is for Marxism--Leninism! The future is for Communism![16]

And Khrushchev elaborates:

. . . The Leninist principle of the peaceful coexistence of states with different social systems has always been and remains the general line of our country's foreign policy.

It has been alleged that the Soviet Union advances the principle of peaceful coexistence out of tactical considerations, considerations of expediency. Yet it is common knowledge that we have always, from the very first years of Soviet power, stood with equal firmness for peaceful coexistence. . .

In the countries where capitalism is still strong and has a huge military and police apparatus at its disposal, the reactionary forces will of course inevitably offer serious resistance. There the transition to socialism will be attended by a sharp class, revolutionary struggle. . .

Leninism teaches us that the ruling classes will not surrender their power voluntarily. And the greater or lesser degree of intensity which the struggle may assume, the use or non-use of violence in the transition to socialism, depends on the resistance of the exploiters. . .[16]

Khrushchev's Secret Speech of 1956:

In February of 1956, Khrushchev felt strong enough to destroy any of the existing Stalin philosophy. His whole speech was an effort to downgrade Stalin. He drew a picture of Stalin and presented him as a paranoid, megalomanic. He accused him of a series of criminal acts. The Communist world was shocked when it heard the violent attack. Stalin had been the godhead of the government for thirty years.

> Khrushchev had a number of reasons for making this attack on Stalin. He wanted to destroy the power of the old Stalinists completely and he wanted to give the people and the new elite class of managers some assurance that the rule of terror was over. He also thought that he could shake up the whole structure of the party at home and abroad by this method.
> Khrushchev wanted to create his own power regime. The downgrading of Stalin caused insecurity in the minds of party officials, but it raised the people's hopes and aspirations for a better life.[16]

The Council of Ministers is now headed by Nikita S. Khrushchev. By virtue of his official government he is the real executive head of government and is referred to as Premier Khrushchev.

There is constant danger in America since so many Americans believe every Soviet call for coexistence and the emotional schemes Khrushchev plans for disarmament. Some Americans are quick to believe that Communist leaders want to live in peace with us. From our past experiences we should know this is not true. They are aiming to dominate the world. We must not forget that the United States is their major target.

The Khrushchev policy includes:

1. To build up a strong Soviet military based on ballistic missiles.
2. Proposes to build a strong industry.
3. Supporting extreme nationalism in Asia, Africa and Latin America.
4. Giving economic and technical aid to Asia, Africa and Latin America.
5. Put his world-wide subversive apparatus in high gear.

It consists of local Communist parties, Communist front organizations, Communist espionage and Red propoganda. This then is Khrushchev's program. These are the tactics he is using to work toward what he describes as the inevitable trend of history: The victory of Communism.[17]

It is very difficult for us Americans to imagine what life in a Communist country is like. It is hard to believe that life in the Soviet Union, or China or one of the European satellites is as bad as the foes of Communism say it is.

The people of the Soviet Union have the same hopes, problems and fears as we have. It is the way Russia and communism treat their hopes, their problems and fears that makes them different. The love of a mother for her child is not confined to the non-communist world, but in Russia this family relationship is incidental to the whims of the government.

From the time of Stalin to the present day the history of the Soviet Union has been the story of a gigantic war of internal conquest. On one side were the few who ruled, on the other were the people of Russia. From the beginning of the First 5-Year Plan the tragic history of Russia had begun. The people of Russia have suffered human degradation and complete contempt for the moral and physical well being.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

We should guard against assuming that the harsh, inhuman methods of Stalin in forcing industrialization have left in the Soviet Union today a type of popular resentment which borders on revolt. There are several reasons why this assumption would appear to be incorrect.

First, Communist internal propaganda has sought to focus the popular gaze on the future and on the glories of building the Communist society. It has also played upon patriotic pride, especially during World War II and has stressed the themes of capitalistic encirclement and "overtake America". There can be little doubt that such "propaganda of the deed" as the Soviet successes in putting the first satellite in orbit around the earth or sending the first rocket to the moon also stimulate the patriotic pride of the Soviet people.

Second, since Stalin's death, much of Stalin's harshness has been denounced by Khrushchev. It is reported that many of the slave-labor camps of Stalin's day have been disbanded and the role of the political police has been curtailed. The Soviet people today thus might feel a greater degree of personal security than they did under Stalin. In this connection we should note that, although the Soviet people are deprived of the personal freedoms which Americans value so highly, historically most of these freedoms have never been experienced by more than a small minority of the Russian people

Third, although the average Soviet citizen may find life drab he also finds that he is making more money and receiving many more educational and health benefits than his elders did before the revolution.

Fourth, Khrushchev has changed some of the more objectionable features of life on the collective farms. He has also set up Regional Economic Councils for the purpose of "decentralizing" economic decision-making. Actually, as the Seven-Year Plan indicates, overall economic decisions are still made at the top, in Moscow. But most observers tend to agree that the Regional arrangement will give greater responsibilities to local managers which in turn may lead to greater efficiency in production.[11]

Khrushchev makes many promises to the Soviet people. He has promised a 40 per cent real income increase between 1959 and 1965. He has also promised a 40 hour work week by 1962 and an effort to reduce the work week to 35 hours after 1964. The work week in Russia today is 46 hours.

Today it appears that the Soviet people are willing to go all out to build up the Soviet economy. There are those who think that Khrushchev has opened the way for consumer demand and public opinion to have a part in the life of the people. The structure and functions of the Soviet government today are essentially as they were under Stalin. Soviet leaders are now asking how much freedom the dictatorship can allow without weakening the Soviet system. It would not be out of question for Khrushchev to reinstate the Stalinist terror if he feels a need of it.

The Soviet policy in recent years has undergone some changes and the Stalinist regime has been publicly denounced. However, the brutal activities employed in 1956 in Hungary were much like the Stalinist measures.

Even the literary people are curbed in Russia. In 1958, Boris Pasternak, a Russian writer, refused the Nobel Prize for Literature because of pressures and insults which he received from Soviet people. Boris Pasternak was an independent writer, poet, translator and novelist who wrote the novel Doctor Zhivago during the last Stalin years and the years following Stalin's death. The novel dealt with the Civil War era in Russia, the fighting, the horror and disorder. The author was objective in relating about the misery and want. He made a strong appeal for a return to Christian ethics. The Soviet publishers did not know whether they should publish the book and it was refused by various Soviet publishers. The novel was published in Italy in 1958 and translated into many languages. In October of 1958 the Swedish Academy awarded it the Nobel Prize for Literature. At first Pasternak was grateful, thankful, touched, proud, astonished and abashed. The Communist storm began. Pasternak was even asked to leave Russia. He was called a pig and a traitor. The Soviet Union of writers petitioned the government to strip Pasternak of his citizenship and expel him from the country.

Pasternak decided to denounce the Nobel Prize. He died May 30, 1960, after many heartaches and humiliating experiences. Thus we know the Soviet leadership will not tolerate writers who do not accept the Party line.

The Soviet people have set a goal, to catch up with the U.S.A. in production and even surpass it.

In October 1957 the world was stirred by the successful launching of the first Soviet earth satellite, the Sputnik. The success of the Soviet Sputnik made the achievements of the West look small. Russia felt it was catching up and overtaking America.

Russia's increased military power has been recognized, but the leaders of N.A.T.O. denied the superiority of Soviet military power as a total. They felt the Soviet advance was limited to intercontinental missiles, was temporary and would not last long. Many people do not believe all of the claims that Khrushchev makes regarding Russia's progress. Perhaps there has been progress but they still have a long way to go. The people are living in crowded conditions where decent privacy is next to impossible. Inadequate housing is mentioned in every report. A room for a whole family is standard in Western regions and barracks or crudely covered dugouts in the Siberian and eastern regions.

The inequalities among different classes contradicts many of Stalin's statements.

In 1932, William H. Chamberlin, an American journalist who represented the Christian Science Monitor in the U.S.S.R. counted seven different dining rooms in Magnitogorsk, the big iron and steel center in the Urals. The food served ranged in quality from plentiful, if heavy, food served to high plant officials and imported American engineers to subhuman diet allotted to the unfortunate Kulaks and political prisoners, of whom tens of thousands were employed on forced labor jobs.[18]

W. L. White also reported this cost system in the dining rooms of a Soviet motor factory which he visited. Much is written about the rest homes for workers, but nothing is said about the selection. Walter Citrine in his book, I Search for Truth in Russia, says an estimated three percent of the industrial workers had the privileges of a rest home in 1932.[19]

In the plant managed by Krovchenko at Nikopal near the Black Sea, where several of these resorts are located, only 57 out of 1,500 workers had been to a rest home during the year; however, all of the workers had deductions from their wages for this service. These are facts that the Russians try to keep from the public. The rest homes sound wonderful on paper; only investigations give the true picture.

Dr. Stefan T. Possony, Professor of International Politics in the Graduate School of Georgetown University and also Associate of the Foreign Policy Research Institute, University of Pennsylvania, summarized Khrushchev's speech of January 6, 1961, for the U. S. Senate Sub-committee to investigate the administration of the Internal Security Act. The entire report of questions and answers is well worth reading. However here are the highlights.

DR. POSSONY'S SUMMARY AND CONCLUSION

I now want to summarize my interpretation of Khrushchev's speech:
(1) This speech, together with the declaration of the Communist Parties of November 1960, has disclosed Communist strategy as it will be employed for the next 5 years or so. (2) The traditional goal of communism, the conquest of the entire world, is not only reaffirmed but is held far more strongly and hopefully than in the past. It is "unthinkable" that the Communists will abandon their goal of world domination regardless of the price they have to pay. They are willing to pay any price to attain their objective. (3) The Communists probably are honestly convinced that they are invincible (a) because of the alleged predetermination of history, (b) because of their combined military-political strength, (c) because of their anticipated military superiority, and (d) because of the anticipated demoralization of the free world.
(4) Communist strategy has become more sophisticated than it was under Stalin.
(5) The Communists believe that the final decision in the world struggle, and specifically the victory of world communism, will be attained in the present era of history. In their conception, this era seems to extend to 1975, approximately.
(6) Armed struggle is inevitable. Such specific forms of armed struggle, as liberation wars, uprisings, and "pressure from below" also are inevitable.
(7) A global thermonuclear war is not entirely inevitable. If the free world, and especially the strongest democratic countries like the United States capitulate, then such a war may be avoided. However, while preferable, such a development is unlikely.

(8) The Communist Parties in the free world and their sympathizers must do everything in their power to facilitate nuclear blackmail by the Soviet Union and to prevent military resistance by the free world.
(9) The Soviet Union and the Soviet bloc must not leave any stone unturned to increase their military power in order to fight the probable (albeit not inevitable) world war and to win a global thermonuclear conflict.
(10) For the time being, such conflict must be avoided. The turning point in history will come when the Soviet Union overtakes the United States, some time between 1965 and 1970. Khrushchev talks as though he conceives this competition in terms of an "economic" production race. It is more likely that he is thinking about a race in military technology. Consequently, the great turning point in history will come when the Soviet Union, irrespective of per capita production in industrial goods, achieves technologically superior armaments and attains a military force which qualitatively and quantitatively, will be superior to the military forces of the United States. If necessary, this force will be employed in the second phase of the current era.
(11) In the first phase, the armed struggle will mostly take the form of liberation wars and uprisings, plus deterrence by nuclear blackmail, on the part of the Soviets, of any military initiatives undertaken by the free world.
(12) Also, in this first phase the struggle must be intensified on the "active fronts in the underdeveloped areas." In particular, it must be pushed in Latin America.
(13) In this phase, strong efforts will be made to improve the effectiveness of uprisings. Henceforth uprisings will be planned as major military undertakings. The insurrectionists will be properly trained and be armed with the most modern equipment. They will be provided with strategic support and power by Soviet nuclear long range forces, under a coordinated strategy. International crises, such as threats of war and war alerts, may be exploited to launch insurrections.
(14) The achievement of a military, political, and psychological paralysis of the free world is a paramount objective of Soviet strategy.
(15) This objective can be attained by such means as peace propaganda, Parlovian conditioning, infiltration, threats, and diplomatic negotiations.

(16) Propaganda on disarmament, specifically nuclear disarmament and disarmament negotiations are an integral part of the Soviet strategy aimed at paralyzing the free world and strengthening the power of communism.
(17) Soviet strategy is based, on the one hand, on achieving optimal military power and building and strengthening Communist political armies throughout the free world. On the other hand, Soviet strategy utilizes massive deception to bring about, through (a) the unilateral military weakening of the free world, (b) the moral paralysis of free world governments, and (c) the demoralization of public opinion, the capitulation of the United States.
(18) Failing in this strategy, the Soviet intends to destroy the United States by nuclear weapons. I would like to conclude by voicing my conviction that however sophisticated this current Soviet strategy may be, it is not sophisticated enough to accomplish Communist victory. The hybrid of Khrushchev is reminiscent of Hitler and foreshadows his failure. I am fortified in this belief by my realization that the course of history, contrary to Mr. Khrushchev's assumption, is not foreordained. The cause of freedom in history often was considered lost but usually good sense prevailed after democratic hesitations, and one after the other, the main threats to freedom were defeated.
Still, I am concerned that the Kremlin may have become overconfident, apparently is overrating Soviet power, and is inclined to underrate Western power and resolution. There is no question but that free world policies are partially responsible for this dangerous frame of mind. Cockiness and cocksureness have been more frequent causes of war than a rational evaluation of risks, chances, and purposes.
The errors of free world policies will not culminate in the destruction of freedom and of the democratic system of government. But if we condition the Soviet leaders to expect final victory, even by "easy delivery," many millions of citizens all over the free world will pay with their limbs and lives. To convince the Kremlin that we are not about to commit suicide, nor are going to tolerate our destruction, superior strength, sustained firmness, greater willingness to assume risks, and at long last greater comprehension of the real nature of the Communist threat, are mandatory. True to its traditions, the United States will prove worthy of its responsibilities.[20]

THE COMMUNIST PARTY, U.S.A.

The average American does not realize that the Communist Party is constantly attempting to plant seeds of communism through all communicative media in the United States. They are trying to find ways to poison the channels of American public opinion. A portion of this tactic is successful because of ignorance about the conspiratorial organization controlled by a foreign power. With accurate knowledge of the Communist conspiracy, fewer Americans will fall victims to the wiles of Communism.

In the United States, the international Communist movement is represented by the Communist Party, U.S.A. As the history of the Communist movement in the United States proves, the Communist Party, U.S.A. has been inspired and completely controlled by the fountainhead of World Communism and the Soviet Union. Every phase of the Party's historical development has been determined, not by any factor innate to the United States, but rather by the urgent need of Communists seeking to extend their control.

The Communist Party in the United States was organized in 1919. From 1919 to 1929 this conspiratorial party experienced its birth pangs and growing pains.[21]

The Party openly proclaimed its revolutionary goals and pursued them with action. Social unrest, internal dissension and strikes found the Communists in the center of action.

The Bolshevik Revolution of 1917 was the inspiration for the Communist Party of this nation.

This is a new season, a new epoch, in the history of mankind. These words reflect the supreme confidence of the Communist Party, U.S.A., as it envisions "the inevitable triumph of socialism."[22] These Party leaders also underscore the fact that communism today poses a serious challenge to our nation's destiny. The followers of Marxism - Leninism are determined that their system of government will replace democracy. These conspirators will stop at nothing to further their evil aims.

Since the beginning of communism about one hundred years ago it has made great strides. In 1961 one-third of the world's population knew it's terror. One-fourth of the earth's surface was under its heavy yoke. There were 36,000,000 Party members in 86 countries--including our own United States, all working for the triumph of communism. Communism is more than a political or economic doctrine. It penetrates all segments of society; religious, educational and social.

In our own country the Communist Party, U.S.A. is an integral part of the entire Communist conspiracy. Although they insist on calling it a "political party in American tradition," it is dedicated to this alien ideology which is diabolically opposed to our American system. Party members vehemently uphold the tenets of Marxism-Leninism. To them, the Communist philosophy is a "guide to action",[22] a doctrine which they believe will direct them toward the goal of communism in the United States.

Gus Hall, General Secretary of the Communist Party, U.S.A. set forth the role of the Party in the February 1961 issue of the Party's theoretical journal, Political Affairs. Hall gloats that "imperialism is rapidly disintegrating in the face of rising socialism, and reiterates that reactionary forces cannot halt the advance of Communism. Capitalism is a doomed system".[21]

As Party leader in this country, Hall urges fanatical effort by Party members on a day to day basis. Full commitment of members is an essential ingredient of communism; the constant working day and night, year after year. Party members are urged to help ignite the revolution. He declares the Party cannot realize its goal if it merely engages in condemning capitalism.

The Communist Party, U. S. A. claims that it is now more virile and revolutionary than ever before.[21]

According to Hall the Party is growing in depth and breadth in the United States.

The Communist plan is to maintain close ties with the masses and without letting their identity known keep contact with the people in the shops, in organizations, in all walks of life. It means working closely with "the proletariat" and "educating" it as to where its real interests lie.

The tactic of infiltration is most important. The placing of Communists in organizations; such as civic, religious and economic groups and also in labor unions, is an effective technique in spreading communism.

Publicly the Communists boast that their purpose in "working in" organizations is to fight for higher wages, more jobs, peace and civil rights. Actually, they use these issues merely as subterfuges to advance the Cause of Communism. Listen to the words of Hall:

> The problem is not one of sending people into organizations. Many are already there. The central question is for us to help our members, our clubs, our leaders to carry on political activities where they are.[22]

Most vital is the Party's program among young people. In one speech Hall said:

> We must develop, train and draw in younger forces.

In the fall of 1961 a monthly publication called, New Horizons for Youth was launched. It is described as a "progressive" forum for discussing the issues confronting young people. Nowhere is it stated that the editor, Daniel Ruben, is none other than the National Youth Director of the Communist Party, U.S.A. This publication viciously criticizes this nation's institutions and parrots the Communist line.

The Communists have stepped up their activities with youths. The organization, which calls itself the Progressive Youth Organizing Committee, is fully supported by the Communists. Hypocrisy has seldom known higher limits of deceit.

The Communist Party, U.S.A. has been declared an agency of a foreign power (Russia) and all members are required under the Smith Act to register as foreign agents. No such registrations have been made and currently the Justice Department is pressing criminal charges against the party leadership for violation of the act. The New York Federal Grand Jury recently returned indictments against Hall and Company.

Some U.S.A. Party members have been first-generation Americans who found it difficult to become assimilated into American life. The Party has attracted the lonely, frustrated, unattractive and unpopular young people. However, the Party doesn't attract many neurotics.

Communist life is hard and disciplined; neurotics of any kind dislike discipline. Communists are highly distrustful of such people and, in general, keep them out of the Party by encouraging them as fellow travelers, a role in which they are extremely useful.[23]

They seldom become Communists, for they do not wish to share Communist discipline or hardships. But they run Party errands, give or raise money. They sometimes lend their houses for secret meeting places. They may receive secret mail for the Party. Often they prefer not to know the meaning of what they are doing. The thrill of doing it is its own reward.[23]

The Communist Party, U.S.A. is made up of more people from the middle class; however, there are some business men in the Party and there are even a few millionaires who give their money to the Party.

In his book, Where We Came Out, Granville Hicks, author and former teacher, has explained why a number of American intellectuals became Communists in the 1930's. The group for which he speaks was not composed of social misfits and failures. By and large, he says, they were men and women who were doing well in their professions and seemed as stable and as happy in their personal lives as the average non-communist . . .[24]

Hicks says, It was the switch in the Party line in 1935 that brought in many Communist sympathizers, including Mr. Hicks. In this fascinating story Mr. Hicks tells how he was tricked.

[24]Granville Hicks, Where We Came Out, Viking Press, New York, 1954.

The great evil of Communism, says Hicks now, is not that it uses vicious persons, as it sometimes does, but that it corrupts good ones. . . Most of them fortunately, got out of the Party before they were wholly corrupted, but not all. . . .[24]

The Senate Internal Security Subcommittee has developed some excellent information in, A Handbook for Americans, in the hope of alerting the American people to the real nature of the enemy in our midst and the insidious character of the methods employed by the Communist Party, U.S.A. We must realize that we are dealing with a movement which is constantly fluid, constantly varied and elusive. We must constantly be alert and informed to combat such a force.

HOW TO BEAT COMMUNISM

Every master of strategy in a competitive contest will testify that the best defense is a well-planned vigorous offensive based on thorough knowledge of one's opponent.[25]

We must take it upon ourselves to understand deeply the radical nature of communism. We must remember that we are dealing with a spirit that hates everything fundamentally Western. We must, therefore, cement more deeply Western unity; for it is the whole of civilization that is at stake.

We must work to win under conditions of peace, however, if we must go to war we must fight a decisive victory.

We must learn the apparent differences and contradictions between the diverse centers of communism.

We must never think of the people under Communist rule as being like their rulers. Even though some of the most rigid penalties against workers have been relaxed in Russia, the working man is one of the most down-trodden in history, living at a bare subsistence level, chained to a job which he may hate, he is at the mercy of a never-ending system of controls. Real wages have declined and the cost of living has increased, even when men work to the limit of their physical endurance they barely eke out an existence. The women too have been forced into the factories and sent to the farms. The state owned national nurseries take over the care of the three year old children to release mothers for work. In the nurseries the children are taught the doctrines and accomplishments of communist leaders with pictures and stories. These people are truly slaves. Surely many of these people would escape if they could.

We must be strong, wise and firm in our leadership.

We must recognize the manner in which Communists get others to do their dirty work.

We must assume the offensive against communism on every front.

We must forge ahead always. We must be able to anticipate the next communist move. "As the medical man must know the symptoms of an illness before he can diagnose it, the citizen must understand the nature of communism before he can combat it".[25] We should all be cognizant of the nature of the Communist enemy and reveal it to every American citizen.

Communism is the enemy of the intellectual, the true liberal, the Christian, the Jew, the Moslem - or anyone who believes in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Let us be the friend.

Educators must go beyond the dictionary definition. We must explore the evil which flows from the philosophy of communism and reveal the fate of our students.

Communism is fanatically opposed to religion. Men and women in the field of religion must play a vital role to inform our youth about this.

Since the Party's greatest appeal everywhere is to young people we must give our youth the knowledge to develop wisdom and discernment essential if we are to deal effectively with the enemy.

J. Edgar Hoover says, We must fight communism sanely for the Communist Party today is waging an aggressive campaign against all sectors of American national life.[26]

Always we must remember that Communists are atheists. They deny that God exists and disparage mortality based on religious principles. "Religion is the opium of the people", Karl Marx declared. "We remain the atheists that we have always been", echoed Nikita Khrushchev. The party takes every opportunity to criticize religion. The recent Soviet space flights are a good example.

"Yuri Gagarin (The Soviet Cosmonaut) really has given a headache to believers!" Izvestia, the Soviet newspaper commented in an article entitled, "What is God?"

"He flew right through the heavenly mansions and did not run into anyone: neither the Almighty, nor Archangel Gabriel, nor the Angels of heaven. It seems, then, that the sky is empty."[26]

The overwhelming majority of clergy, says J. Edgar Hoover are setting a wonderful example. The Communist realizes that these men of God are their opponents. But even one clergyman who in anyway gives aid to the Communist movement is one too many. We must all work together to protect the nation we love.

J. Edgar Hoover also says it is not enough to call communism evil, or a threat. It is important that we know what this threat constitutes - why we describe communism as something totally undesirable. We must know it's true nature, it's appeal and it's tactics. We must also know how to combat this danger in an effective manner.

There are many things we Americans can do to combat communism. Let us review briefly:

We must be informed.

We must be aware of the strengths of democracy.

We must be informed about American history, the heritage and traditions we believe in.

We must know the truth and our nations struggle for freedom.

Democratic heritage must come alive through example and our daily actions.

We must participate in community affairs.

We must exercise our right to vote.

[26] Ibid.

We must choose those who represent us with utmost care.

We must respect the rights of others to be individuals, for this is the essence of democracy.

We must allow truth, not prejudice, to sway our thinking.

We must be sure that our young people realize the advantages of freedom. The home, school and church should cooperate in this program.

We must teach each child to be a responsible citizen.

We must appreciate the privileges which come to us as a result of government in the home, school, community, state and nation.

We must appreciate the freedom of worship.

We must know the Pledge of Allegiance to our flag and live up to it.

We must know about the contributions made by our forefathers and respect the heritage which is ours.

We must understand our laws and obey them.

We must have knowledge and appreciation of our relations with our World Neighbors.

We must understand that our way of life appears as different to other nations as their way of life does to us.

We must learn to distinguish between facts, opinions and propaganda.

and finally;

Our responsibility, it seems to me, is to counter emotional outbursts with quiet, truth, amateurish approaches with professional presentations; and nonsense with facts.[27]

Dr. James B. Conont in his book, Germany and Freedom, warns us against impatience. Patience is a difficult quality for us Americans to acquire. It is, however, one of great importance in combating communism.

Teachers should seek materials from reference lists of national associations, state departments of education and reputable academic institutions and resist materials which have a distorted approach.

Intelligent use of factual and authentic knowledge about the aims, methods, strengths and weaknesses of communism is the most effective way to counteract it, says Dr. Richard I. Miller, Associate Director of N.E.A. Project on the Instructional Program of the Public Schools.[28]

Student Activities.

Learning Experiences and Activities.

Have students identify and label:
(a) Nations which are democracies.
(b) Nations that belong to the Communist bloc.

Have a panel discussion using the following topics:
(1) Trouble spots in the world today.
(2) Critical issues and the free world's problem.

Have an oral report on:
(1) Cold War.
(2) Areas of competition.
(3) Scientific developments in America and Russia.

Have Students Read and Report on:

"A President's Address That was Never Delivered", by Dwight D. Eisenhower, he planned to deliver this speech in Leningrad in May, 1960.

"The Meaning of Communism to Americans", by Mr. Richard Nixon. Here Mr. Nixon tells how to combat communism.

"Masters of Deceit", by J. Edgar Hoover.

Individual Students may prepare papers on selected topics such as:

The Soviet Party since 1917.
How Communism affects Americans.
How to fight Communism.

Plan a round table discussion in which individuals contrast communism with democracy.

Permit students to write an evaluation of the unit. Request suggestions for improving the unit.

Teachers may evaluate the growth of the students in the development of attitudes, appreciations and understandings.

Teacher evaluates his teaching by asking:

1. Does the student demonstrate respect for the dignity and worth of every individual?
2. Does the student have the proper knowledge about the United States of America?
3. Does the student appreciate the American way of life and the American heritage?
4. Does the student use good judgment in making decisions?
5. Is the student capable of critical thinking?
6. Does the student show a willingness to defend democracy?
7. Does the student understand the nature and purpose of communism?
8. Is the student equipped to withstand the brainwashing technique of the Communists?
9. Does the student know the evils of communism?
10. Has this unit helped to make the student a force that will inspire others to appreciate the American heritage of democracy?

COMPARING TWO SOCIETIES

DEMOCRACY AND COMMUNISM

RELIGION

In a Democracy	Under Communism
1. The individual may choose and support the religion of his choice.	1. The state says religion is the opiate for the people.
2. Churches are tax exempt. Social encouragement is practiced as is tolerance for everyone's choice of worship.	2. Religious worship is discouraged. Churches are penalized and churchmen persecuted to abolish religion.
3. There is complete separation of church and state.	3. The state uses the church as a propaganda tool.

EDUCATION

In a Democracy	Under Communism
1. Every individual has free choice of schools and studies.	1. The state directs education for its needs.
2. The individual is educated to have a high regard for intellectual and moral truth.	2. The Party dictates and trains mainly for technical skills and obedience to the state.
3. Everyone may pursue education to his extreme ability.	3. Only the ones who are politically reliable may graduate.
4. The individual is taught to think and to be creative.	4. Trains mainly for technical skills and obedience to the state. Discourages critical thinking.
5. Each individual may follow his own talents.	5. The state teaches what to think and what to create.

POLITICS AND GOVERNMENT

In A Democracy	Under Communism
1. Citizens have free choice of candidates.	1. There is only one list of candidates.
2. Individual may choose his party or be independent.	2. The state permits only the Communist Party.
3. Citizens are permitted secret ballot.	3. Outcome of elections predetermined.
4. Write in candidates are permitted.	4. Write in candidates are not permitted.
5. The constitution has real meaning.	5. The constitution is a propaganda device.
6. Any citizen may be a candidate for office if he so desires.	6. Party selects nominees for office.
7. The people live under a government of laws.	7. One man or a small group of men dominates.
8. Citizens control government along with a majority of his fellow citizens by his vote.	8. Government is controlled by the Communist Party.

HUMAN RIGHTS

In a Democracy	Under Communism
1. Each individual has freedom of speech, press, etc.	1. The state controls and censures all newspapers, radio, etc.
2. Everyone has free access to any outside sources of news and information.	2. All information is strictly controlled. Foreign radio broadcasts often jammed.
3. Criticism of government by private citizens, press, creative artists or political opponents is permitted.	3. All writings are subject to censorship. Choices of reading materials restricted to state approved lists.
4. Women are treated with added respect.	4. Women are assigned to tasks of heavy physical labor, degrading to the dignity of womanhood.

LABOR

In a Democracy	Under Communism
1. Unions are independent self-governing organizations free of government influence.	1. Unions are instruments of the state; dedicated to achieve Party goals in industry.
2. An individual may join a union if he wishes.	2. The state requires every worker to join a state dominated union.
3. A worker may bargain collectively with his employer.	3. The state prohibits bargaining.
4. The worker has a right to strike with his union.	4. The worker is penalized if he strikes.
5. The worker has a right to travel and work where he pleases.	5. The state requires the worker to have a permit to travel.
6. The worker is a free man and may work when and where he pleases.	6. The state employs slave labor. People are told what, where and when to work.
7. The laborer enjoys one of the highest standards of living in the world.	7. The laborer is allowed only a basic minimum of consumer goods.

TRIAL BY JURY

In a Democracy	Under Communism
1. The citizen has the right of habeas corpus.	1. The right of habeas corpus does not exist.
2. The citizen has a right to a speedy, fair and public trial.	2. Trials for citizens are indefinite and prolonged. Confessions are extracted by torture.
3. Citizens found guilty given chance to reform.	3. Citizens found in conflict with the Party are sent to labor camps.
4. The courts are independent of other branches of government.	4. The courts are instruments of the state.

ARREST AND SEARCH

In a Democracy	Under Communism
1. Police are subject to legal authority of the courts.	1. Secret police are required to be Party members with no legal restrictions.
2. Law requires a warrant or charge for arrest and search.	2. Secret police arrest and search without a charge or a warrant.

ECONOMIC PROPERTY

In a Democracy	Under Communism
1. The citizen has a right to private ownership of property. This right is recognized and protected.	1. The individual can own only personal property, small homes and household belongings.
2. Private persons may own factories and machines for production.	2. The state owns or controls instruments of production.
3. Production of goods is intended for the competitive market.	3. The state controls markets.
4. Goods are produced in response to demand of consumers.	4. Consumer preferences are ignored. The state decides what, how much and what quality.

Bolshevism

A term derived from the Russian word for majority. Bolshevism is what most people understand today as communism.

Bourgeoisie

A name applied to the capitalist class, which included the wealthy and the middle-class in Russia.

Brainwashing

A standard practice of all Communist parties which they call criticism and self-criticism. The mental torture may continue over a long period. The tortured finally accuses himself.

Cadre

The inner communist circle of trained members and leaders. The Party can depend on these members to carry out policies and programs without any questions or objections.

Capitalism

An economic system in which ownership of natural resources and the production, distribution and exchange of goods, are controlled by private enterprise under competitive conditions (Webster). Communists consider capitalism to be a form of exploitation of man by man. To them, capitalism is the last economic system of exploitation in the social evaluation of man. They feel that capitalism will be succeeded by socialism and finally will end in a world Communist society. Americans know better.

Centrism

A term of contempt to Communists, identifying those who deny undeviating obedience to the Party line. "Centrists" wobble between the "Lefts and the Rights". Centrism is a political concept.

Class

To Communists class means a section of a given population that occupies specific relation to the means of production; (1) The Capitalists or Bourgeoisie, and (2) The wage-earners or working class or proletariat. The Communists admit there is another group (as in the U.S.A.) called the middle class. This middle class is composed of small merchants, farmers, professional people and small businessmen.

Class Struggle

a perpetual warfare which is sometimes masked and sometimes open between oppressor and oppressed.

Cold War

A state of tension such as has existed between the Soviet Union and the Western powers.

Collective Farm

A government-operated farm, made up quite often of many small farms, confiscated by the Communist government.

Cominform

Nine Communist parties established a Communist Information Bureau or Cominform. The purposes of the Cominform were: (1) To consolidate Soviet power in eastern and central Europe (2) To intensify Communist political warfare in Western Europe (3) Create the appearance of equality and democracy in relationships among Communist parties in the Soviet world. The Cominform was officially disbanded in April, 1956.

Comintern

Created by Lenin, served as the general staff of the world revolution, founded in 1919 and dissolved in 1943.

Communism

An integrated, centralized, world-wide movement, motivated by the Marxist-Leninist ideology.

Communist China

Maoism developed by the top Chinese Communist leader, Mao Tse-tung, for Communist conquest of power in China. The vast majority of China's 650,000,000 people are peasants.

De-Stalinization

The downgrading of Stalin after his death in 1953.

Dialectial Materialism

Communists term for their theory of social change. It is adopted from a German philosopher, Hegel. Every force in the life of a society brings into existence an opposing force according to dialectical materialism. A third force then results from the clash between the two.

Dialetics

The word is derived from Greek, meaning the art of discourse, reasoning and debate.

Dictatorship of the Proletariat

Marx meant a dictatorship of the working class over the defeated capitalists, landlords and other exploiters.

Fifth Column

Traitors inside a country.

Iron Curtain

Where Communist nations have blocked free flow of persons and ideas across their frontiers.

Kremlin

Located in Moscow, the supreme seat of Soviet government.

Purges

The expulsion of undesirable members to keep the party pure.

Proletariat

Workers of working class.

Reds

Another name for Communists, derived from their Red flag.

Soviets

The Russian word Soviet means council. The first Soviet formed spontaneously in the Russian Revolution of 1905. Under Stalin, Soviets were essentially legislative in function.

BIBLIOGRAPHY AND RESOURCES

The State Department of Education has received inquiries concerning resource materials for teaching about communism. This Bibliography has been prepared to guide teachers in choosing materials. Most of the categories for study are included. There are, however, many other excellent references not listed. For the compilation of this list we have drawn heavily on the list prepared by the National Council for the Social Studies of the National Education Association, the U. S. Government Printing Office publications and those suggested by the American Bar Association.

*Items marked with an asterisk are indicated by publishers as being suitable for use by pupils.

OTHER PUBLICATIONS

Bauer, Raymond A.: Inkeles, Alex: and Kluckhohn, Clyde. How the Soviet System Works. New York: Random House, 1960. 296 pp. $1.25.

An investigation of Russian daily life, based on the data obtained through interviews and questionnaires administered to thousands of refugees from the Soviet Union in 1950-51, the social and psychological conditions in the Soviet system are described. The writers, sociologists and anthropologists, are affiliates of Harvard's Russian Research Center.

Bereday, George Z. and Pennar, Jaan, eds. The Politics of Soviet Education. New York: Frederick A. Praeger, 1960. 217 pp. $1.85.

A series of essays which provide information about changes in Soviet educational theory and practice since 1958-59. A general review of education plus consideration of certain specialized aspects--technical education, party control, class tensions, anti-religious aspects, teacher training and extra-curricular activities.

*Bohlman, Edna McCaull. Democracy and Its Competitors. Columbus, Ohio: Charles E. Merrill, 1960. 32 pp. 40¢.

This booklet gives a concise, clearly-written comparison between democracy and communism with substantial facts for defending the democratic system.

*Caldwell, John C. Communism in Our World. New York: John Day, 1956. 126 pp. $2.75.

The author speaks from an extensive experience with communism throughout the world and especially in the Far East and Korea. He says: "I have not attempted to go deeply into communist theory with its devious twists and turns.--Rather, I have tried to answer in simple language questions: What is communism? How did it begin? What is it like in actual operation? Why is it bad? What are we doing to protect ourselves?"

*Colegrove, Kenneth. Democracy Versus Communism. Princeton, N. J.: D. Van Nostrand, 1957. 424 pp. Text ed. $3.96.

A direct look at the realities of life under communism and under democracy and at the underlying principles of these two ideologies that are competing for men's allegiance today.

*Cronyn, George W. A Primer on Communism: 200 Questions and Answers. New York: E. P. Dutton, 1960. 192 pp. $2.95.

Questions were selected as typical ones most frequently asked on the subject. Presented in simple language, the material is designed to provide rudimentary knowledge of the subject while avoiding theoretical discussions of communist ideology.

Draper, Theodore. American Communism and Soviet Russia. New York: The Viking Press, 1960. 558 pp. $8.50.

Deals with the formative years of the communist party in the United States and the relation of American communism to Soviet Russia. Shows how the COMINTERN helped financially and directly to influence decisions of the local party.

Fearey, Robert A. The U. S. Versus the U.S.S.R.: Ideologies in Conflict. Washington, D. C.: Public Affairs Press, 1959. 48 pp. $1.00.

This monograph suggests that the contest between communism and Western civilization has deeper roots and will be decided on more fundamental issues than such matters as treaty alignments, industrial production rates, trade and aid programs, numbers of military divisions, and power and accuracy of missiles.

Garthoff, Raymond L. Soviet Strategy in the Nuclear Age. New York: Frederick A. Praeger, 1958. 283 pp. $5.00.

Includes a discussion of military organization, military posture, air power, sea power, land power and missile strength. Also, an analysis of strategy for 1970 and beyond.

Gunther, John. Inside Russia Today. New York: Harper and Brothers, 1958. 550 pp. $5.95.

The author says: "What I have tried to do most of all, with what measure of success I do not know, is give a picture of this cumbrous, slippery giant, with its evolving strains and issues--to try, perhaps vainly, to convey to the reader something of what it is like, its essential quality and atmosphere since Stalin's death. Also, I have included (a) some brief historical passages, because an indispensable key to what is going on in Russia is its continuity with the past; (b) an informal Who's Who of Russian leaders, especially those about whom information is otherwise scant; and (c) descriptive material about major Soviet sights and cities."

Hoover, J. Edgar. Masters of Deceit. The Story of Communism in America and How to Fight it. New York: Henry Holt, 1958. 374 pp. $5.00. Pocket Books 50¢.

"My purpose has been to assemble, organize and present basic, everyday facts of Communism which will be of maximum help to the people of our country in recognizing and fighting the enemy in our midst."

Hunt, R. N. Carew. The Theory and Practice of Communism, An Introduction. New York: Macmillan Company, 1961. 267 pp. $4.00.

The communist theory as enunciated by Marx and Engels; the influence of Marx's doctrine upon the European labor movement in the nineteenth century; and the revolutionary movement in which Lenin made his own interpretation of Marx's dogma make up the contents of this book.

Hunt, R. N. Carew. A Guide to Communist Jargon. New York: Macmillan Company, 1957. 169 pp. $3.50.

Fifty basic terms used by the communists to express their ideology are defined in current Soviet usage.

*Kirchner, Walther. History of Russia. College Outline Series. New York: Barnes & Noble, 1958. 329 pp. Paper $1.75; cloth $2.75.

A summary of events from earliest times with chronological table, maps and charts.

Keenan, George F. Russia and the West Under Lenin and Stalin. Boston: Little, Brown, 1961. 411 pp. $5.75.

A comprehensive treatment of events from the Russian Revolution to the end of the Second World War. Suitable for providing background information for teachers and advanced students. Based on lectures given at Harvard and Oxford.

*Lee, Baldwin, Capitalism and Other Economic Systems. C-A-S-E Economic Literacy Series No. 2. Washington, D.C.: Council for Advancement of Secondary Education, 1959. 122 pp. $1.00.

This book traces the development of capitalism, communism, fascism and socialism, and appraises each from the point of view of freedom and democracy. Helps the student to understand and appreciate more fully our own free enterprise economy.

*Lengyel, Emil. The Soviet Union: The Land and Its People. New York: Oxford Book, 1961. 92 pp. Retail 65¢; School 50¢.

The scope of this pamphlet is limited to a description of the land and its people, their historical background, some of their folkways, their manner of making a living and their political system. In this revised edition the material has been brought up to date and new material on the Soviet economic system has been added.

*Mansfield, Harold. How Wide We Stray. New York: Ballantine Books, 1960. 208 pp. 50¢.

A provocative, informative documentary novel based on an actual visit to the Soviet Union which took place in 1958. A fast-moving narrative with a love story and with suspense to hold the reader's interest while he rather unwittingly absorbs economic and ideological issues.

*Mares, Delia. Know Your Enemy: Communism's Challenge to This Generation. Houston, Texas: Gulf Publishing Company, 1961. 260 pp. $4.95.

"An admirably lucid and terse description of the true nature of the enemy, the good along with the wicked." Considerable attention is given to an analysis and description of the life and teachings of Marx, Lenin and Stalin. Contains a glossary of communist terms and a bibliography.

*Meyer, Alfred G. Communism. New York: Random House. 217 pp. 95¢.

This is an introduction to Communism in it's various guises, for anyone who wants to study the subject from Marx to the present day. The author is a professor at Michigan State University.

Mosely, Philip E. The Kremlin and World Politics: Studies in Soviet Policy and Action. New York: Vintage Books, 1960. 557 pp. $1.65.

A selection of twenty-five articles written by the author on Soviet affairs.

Overstreet, Harry A., and Overstreet, Bonaro. What We Must

Know About Communism. New York: W. W. Norton, 1958. 348 pp. $3.95.

A survey of Marxist principles and an examination of the Russian Revolution, present-day communism, the foreign policies of the Soviet Union and the significance of these policies for the individual American. Suitable for school use and for the general reader. Contains bibliography and index.

Pestrak, Lazar. The Grand Tactician. New York: Frederick A. Praeger, Inc., 64 University Place, New York 3, 1961. 296 pp. $6.00.

This book attempts to consolidate the information known about Khrushchev. It is not a biography in the usual sense of the word but a presentation of facts and circumstances which made it possible for Khrushchev to emerge as the strongest man in the Kremlin. Khrushchev's role in the Great Purge of the nineteen-thirties, in the glorification of Stalin and the collectivization of agriculture are revealed.

*Platig, E. Raymond. The United States and the Soviet Challenge. Chicago: Foreign Relations Series, Laidlaw Brothers Publishers, 1961. 67 pp. 75¢.

Presents the historical and geographical background of the Soviet Union. Examines some of the basic concepts of communist doctrine, relating them to Soviet domestic and foreign policy. Soviet-American relations are considered within the perspective of current issues.

*The Profile of Communism: A Fact-by-Fact Primer. New York: Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'rith, 1961. 119 pp. 95¢.

This book is in question and answer form and is based on the Freedom Pamphlet, "Primer on Communism," published in 1951. Part I deals with the Communist program, movement, tactics and techniques. Part II deals with the Soviet Empire, totalitarian nature of the Soviet world, economy and labor in the Soviet world, and Communist China.

Possony, Stefan T. A Century of Conflict: Communist Techniques of World Revolution. Chicago: Henry Regnery Company, 1953. 439 pp. $7.50.

The communist techniques in revolutions from 1848 to 1948 are depicted. The methods, tactics and strategy by which the author believes the communists hope to win a war with the United States are outlined. The author also suggests a strategy which he believes would permit the West "to work toward a gradual modification, contraction and replacement of Soviet rule".

*Raab, Earl. The Anatomy of Nazism. New York: Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'rith, 1961. 40 pp. 35¢.

This booklet focuses on the Nazi era as a particularly revealing example of totalitarianism in thought and action. In the concluding chapter the author examines the basic totalitarian accents of both Nazism and Communism and measures them against the accents of democracy. Supplemented by 20 pages of photographs and a bibliography.

Rossiter, Clinton. Marxism: The View from America. New York: Harcourt, Brace and Company, 1960. 338 pp. $6.75.

A critical study of Marxist teachings about man, society, government and history from the vantage point of American democracy. The author, one of our foremost students of government, proceeds to dissect Marxist teaching about the nature of man, society, government and history.

Rostow, W. W. The Dynamics of Soviet Society. New York: Mentor Books, 1954. 246 pp. 50¢.

An authoritative up-to-date interpretation of Soviet rule from its origins to the present day, prepared by W. W. Rostow and a group of outstanding political analysts from the Center for International Studies, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

*Scholastic Magazines. Freedom Answers Communism. New York: Scholastic Corporation, 1955. 64 pp. 50¢.

This booklet is based on a series of articles which appeared in Scholastic Magazines and which won the Freedoms Foundation medal for 1953. Presents a series of contrasts between the ways of freedom and communist dictatorship.

Shirer, William L. Rise and Fall of the Third Reich. New York: Simon and Schuster, 1960. 1245 pp. $10.00.

A history of the emergence of National Socialism during the crisis years that followed the first world war, its seizure and consolidation of power, its attempt to extend its sway over all Europe and its ultimate defeat and destruction. The author has consulted numerous published and unpublished documents and the mass of captured materials held at

Shub, David. Lenin. New York: A Mentor Book, the New American Library of World Literature, Inc., 501 Madison Avenue, 1948. 187 pp. 50¢ (paperback).

In this book Lenin appears as revealed by his relations with his family, his friends and his enemies and with leading figures in Russia's revolutionary struggle. The author of this book was a member of the Russian Social Democratic Party at the time Lenin was one of its leaders.

Teaching About Communism and Democracy: Case Studies. Reprinted by The Institute for American Strategy, 140 South Dearborn Street, Chicago 3, Illinois, 1961. 115 pp. $1.00.

The materials were selected as representative approaches to the problem of teaching about Communism by five public school systems: New Bedford, Massachusetts; Indianapolis, Indiana; Boston, Massachusetts; Chicago, Illinois; and the State of Pennsylvania.

*Weingast, David E. This is Communism. New York: Oxford Book, 1961. 178 pp. Retail $1.00, School 75¢.

Gives a panoramic view of the Communist organization at work on the American and world scenes.

Winance, Eleutherius. The Communist Persuasion: A Personal Experience of Brainwashing. New York: P. J. Kenedy & Sons, 1959. 228 pp. $3.95.

A personal account of the methods used by the communists in China to impose their ideology on the country and to transform its customs and institutions. In the first section of the book the author presents the technique and psychology used by the communists in China in brainwashing. The second section of the book includes the trial of the author and his expulsion from China. In the final section of the book, the author, after seven years of study, evaluates the role of brainwashing in winning over certain groups in China.

WHAT IS TRUTH

Truth is such a rare quality, a stranger so seldom met in this civilization of fraud, that it is never received freely, but must fight its way into the world.

"If two parties, instead of being a bank and an individual, were an individual and an individual, they could not inflate the circulating medium by a loan transaction, for the simple reason that the lender could not lend what he didn't have, as banks can do. Only commercial banks and trust companies can lend money which they manufacture by lending it." —Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale who died in 1947.

"... with contempt shall I fling my glove in the world's face, then shall I stride through the wreckage a creator!" —Karl Marx.

"The candid citizen must confess that if the policy of government upon vital questions is to be irrevocably fixed by decisions of the Supreme Court... the people will have ceased to be their own selves, having to that extent practically resigned their government into the hands of that eminent Tribunal."
—Abraham Lincoln

"The capitalist countries, stupid and decadent, will rejoice to cooperate in their own destruction. They will leap at another chance to be friends. As soon as their guard is down, WE SHALL SMASH THEM WITH OUR CLENCHED FIST." —Dimitry Z. Manuilsky, Presiding Officer UN Security Council, '49 From a speech before the Lenin School of Political Warfare, 1931.

TRUTH

Is such a rare quality, a stranger so seldom met in this civilization of fraud, that it is never received freely, but must always fight its way into the world. There is not a public school which teaches the truth about religion, money, government nor politics; There is not a pastor in the USA who dares preach exactly what he believes; There is not a man of wealth in the USA who would donate a dollar to promote the spread of light and knowledge of these subjects as it would ruin him socially and economically!

Few people want to see their own Idols fall. Many worship personalities. Because a personality is master of one subject does not make him a master of all subjects nor give him over-night experience in fields unknown to him.

POSTAL BILLS MEAN HIGHER TAXES

(Newspaper clipping):

It is a piece of legislative irony that while members of both parties in Congress are gravely concerned with measures to relieve the taxpayer, both houses of Congress have passed bills which in effect impose additional taxation. It is irony but we doubt that American taxpayers will find it funny.

The paradox lies in postal rate increase bills passed by the Senate and the House. The bills are now in conference. The proposed increase in first class mail rates, for 4 to 5 cents, in the Senate bill, would cost the American people $175 million a year. It is estimated the total increases in the two bills would amount to a staggering $700 million a year on users of the mails.

This is a strange way to relieve either the taxpayer or the recession. It becomes stranger when you consider other proposed postal increases, which go all the way down the line.

For the first time in American history, for example, the postal rate bills would differentiate between reading and advertising matter in newspapers and magazines, placing a higher tax on the latter. Since advertising is the most important--and valid--method of stimulating consumer interest, it does not require a crystal ball to foresee the crippling and in some instances disastrous effect this would have on businesses that depend completely on mass advertising.

We do not want to give the impression that Congress is deliberately practicing deception by voicing concern over taxation on the one hand and proposing more on the other. The fact is the postal bills were passed before the recession became serious.

There is a practical way out of this paradox. The bills are in conference. Let them die there.

"The Post Office Department is engaged in handling a public service--not a business in the strict sense of the word. And on a national basis, where a Federal agency is supposed to act as a public servant for the benefit of all the people, it would not be expected to make money. It was not established as a profit-making concern in the first place. One of the staunch supporters of the five-cent stamp proposal has been quoted in Washington as saying that 'the American people are no longer penny conscious.' Maybe not, but even with today's inflation, most of them are nickel conscious."--Watertown (NY) Daily Times

4¢ POSTAGE

The Postmaster General warns that he is going to ask Congress to increase the first class letter postage rate from 3¢ to 4¢. Some timid members of Congress admit this is sticking the public a little too much, but are willing to increase it to 4¢.

Actually the 3¢ rate is an imposition. This is the rate World War I brought to 2¢ postage and Congress promised to reflate it after the war. They never did. Neither did they ever rescind the 50% war hike in first class passenger rail fares.

The Postmaster General is on firm ground in desiring to balance his budjet; but he doesn't have to take it out on the public. The Assn of First Class Mailers charges that Mr. Summerfield is "trying to unload $392,000,000 of free and public welfare services onto the backs of first class mail users."

The AFCM points out that there would be little or no "deficit" if Congress would frankly appropriate this 392 million---as it does for all other government agencies---as straight welfare costs.

CN can help this plan by suggesting that all self-advertising activities of the various govt agencies by means of amateurishly-written press releases be done away with. These haven't the slightest value to the nation or the taxpayers.

They provide jobs for over 3,000 drones who failed as newspapermen and think they would like to get into "public relations." Every newspaper, including CN, gets every day a large amount of junk from these amateurs on the Federal payroll, some of whom wouldn't know a news story if it hit them in the eye walking down the avenue.

In addition to all of the free postage involved in this, the taxpayers would save the cost of countless tons of paper, envelopes and printing costs.

This alone could wipe out the post office deficit.

The whole matter of deficits and confiscatory taxes could be wiped out in one session of Congress, if too many of our solons hadn't been brainwashed since they came to Washington.

There is the little matter of $28½ billion dollars Congress votes (in hidden appropriations) to support a million payroll bums manning 731 illegal corposations within the Federal structure.

Ironically enough, the only business the Constitution gives the US government any authority to engage in is what Postmaster General Summerfield is doing--carrying the mail--which he is doing well. Neither Constitution nor statute permits anything else.

American Capsule News, Feb. 8, 1958

"Anne Smart, the young California housewife who discovered filthy and Communist books right in her son's high school, was a featured speaker before the CATHOLIC WAR VETERANS at their 1957 convention in Milwaukee. Her shocking speech so impressed the group that they have reprinted it in full, together with documentation and actual excerpts from the book. (The postoffice arbitrarily banned her excerpts, but did nothing to stop the pro-Communist books' themselves.) Copies of her speech and documentation, 15¢ to the C. W. V., 1012 14th St., N. The present (Postal) Fraud Law was written in 1874 and needs rewriting. Under the guise of the fraudulent use of the mails the Post Office Department has been suppressing health books (and others). The Post Office is a Constitutional Department. It is subject to the Free Press Amendment to the Constitution. The powers of Fraud Orders should be moved to the Dept. of Justice and all cases should be handled exactly as other criminal cases are handled, and tried in Federal Courts with Juries.

Health books which do not conform to "medical concensus of opinion" can, therefore, be banned from the mails at the whim of the AMA through the Department of Public Health, Education and Welfare, which operates through the Solicitor's Office of the Post Office Department.

Statement made by State Senator John J. Haluska at the Federal Court, Pittsburgh, Penna. "The doctors of the AMA have not given up their fight. Organized medicine has at this very moment succeeded in placing their personal emissaries in high places to advise and control Oveta Culp Hobby, head of Health, Education and Welfare, of which the Food and Drug Administration is an adjunct."

In July, 1955, a committee of five called on William C. O'Brien, Assistant Solicitor, at the Post Office Department in Washington, D.C., regarding a complaint for fraudulent advertising. During the conversation, Mr. O'Brien made the following statement, "there (fraud complaints) are usually started in the Department of Public Health, Education and Welfare." (See our book, The Poisoned Needle - $2.25)

One of our readers (who lost a million dollar "tax-free" institution through the income tax law, said:

"When these (forces) are offended they retaliate by putting in motion the police forces, the F. B. I., the district attorney, etc., who files claims or make arrests on the grounds of violation of (1) the income tax law, (2) the interstate commerce laws, (3) the medical trust laws, (4) the food and drug acts, (5) the federal trade laws, (6) the postal codes, (7) the espionage acts, (8) the immigration laws, (9) the anti-Communist laws and what have you, etc., etc.] When they are 'out to get' anyone for any so-called offense they are able to continue their harassment no end until they put their victim out of the way by death, imprisonment, or poverty. The only thing they respect, and must respect, is the enlightenment of the people." (See the book, The Drug Story by Morris Bealle - $3.25

Twenty-four years ago Dimetry A. Manuilsky, speaking at the Lenin School of Political Warfare in Moscow, said:

"War to the hilt between Communism and Capitalism is inevitable. Today, of course, we are not strong enough to attack. Our time will come in 20 or 30 years. To win we shall need the element of surprise. The bourgeoisie will have to be put to sleep. So we shall begin by launching the most spectacular peace movement on record. There will be electrifying overtures and unheard of concessions. The Capitalistic countries, stupid and decadent, will rejoice to cooperate in their won destruction. They will leap at another chance to be friends. As soon as their guard is down, we shall smash them with our clenched fists." (Sprech made in 1931)

This is the same Manuilsky who presided over the United Nations Security Council in 1949.

Khruschev - "We will bury you!; We shall conquer capitalism with a high level of work."

CO-DEFENDANTS

Also wanted for trial and impeachment, on the same charge, are: Justices Brennan, Black, Clark, Douglas, Frankfurter, Harlan and Reed.

The following are the Specific Acts contained in the charge: No. 1) The "DESEGREGATION DECISION", which aids and abets the plans of the Communist Conspiracy to (A) create tension between Negroes and Whites; (B) to transform the South into a BLACK SOVIET REPUBLIC; (C) to legalize and encourage intermarriage between Negores and Whites --and thus mongrelize the American White Race!

Documentary proof that this "Decision" directly conforms with Directives from Moscow is contained in the following excerpt from the book, "A RACIAL PROGRAM FOR THE 20th CENTURY", written by one Israel Cohen, a Communist Party top functionary in England:

"We must realize that our Party's most powerful weapon is racial tension. By propounding into the consciousness of the dark races that for centuries they have been oppressed by the whites, we can mould them to the program of the Communist Party. In America, we will aim for subtle victory. While inflaming the Negro Minority against the Whites, we will instill in the Whites a guilt complex for their exploitation of the Negroes. We will aid the Negroes to rise to prominence in every walk of life, in the professions and in the world of sports.

and entertainment. With this prestige the Negro will be able to intermarry with the Whites and begin a process which will deliver America to our Cause."

That book was written in 1913. . . .the ADL and NAACP were created immediately after that -- to carry out that DIRECTIVE!

NOTE: The above excerpt was entered into the Congressional Records of June 7, 1957, by Rep. Thos. G. Abernathy.

Further documentary proof: in 1935 the Communist Party's "Workers Library Publishers" issued a pamphlet entitled "THE NEGROES IN A SOVIET AMERICA". It urged the Negores of the South to rise up, form a Soviet state, and apply for admission to the Soviet Union. . . .it contained implicit assurance that the "revolt" would be supported by all American Reds. . . .on page 38 it promised that a Soviet government would confer greater benefits on Negroes than upon Whites, and that - "Any act of discrimination or prejudice against a negro will become a crime under the Revolutionary law. . . ."

AND THAT "DESEGREGATION DECISION" TRANSFORMED ALL THOSE COMMUNIST DIRECTIVES INTO RIGID LAW OF THE LAND!!!

Furthermore, by his own admission, Warren ignored our Constitution when he wrote that "decision" - admits he based it on the "modern scientific authority" of known Communists who have publicly proclaimed contempt for our Constitution and hatred for our form of Government.

Can there be any doubt that that "Decision" was framed to conform with those Communist Directives? . . . .There is one sure way to find out - through impreachment proceedings!

No.2) For 40 years the FBI has been the stone wall that stood between the Communist Conspiracy and the survival of our Country. Through all those years it was the FBI that smashed all the Reds' plots - and unmasked the plotters . . .it was the information in the FBI files that enabled the Congressional Committees to function - that enabled the Justice Department to convict the Rosenbergs and all the other Reds . . . .it was the FBI files that kept the Red rats impotent and skulking in their holes.

Throughout those 40 years the Reds and their allies frenziedly smeared and vilified and tried in every way to destroy the FBI - and to gain access to its files! But it (FBI) was invulnerable to all their attacks - it was protected by Congress, and doubly protected by the high regard and esteem of the American people. And it continued to stand as the impregnable barrier between the Enemy and our internal Security.

Hence - if the Great Conspiracy was to succeed the FBI had to be destroyed!

So, on July 17 of this year, Earl Warren and his Associate Justices handed down two "Decisions" - the "Jencks" and the "Watkins" Decisions . . . .Those two "Decisions" shatter the FBI as a barrier to the security of our nation . . . .they freed convicted traitors. . . .they muzzle our Congressional Committees . . .they nullify all our protective laws against the Communist Conspiracy . . . .they open wide the FBI files to all the shysters who defend the Reds and renegade American traitors!

Those three Decisions, if allowed to stand, will completely destroy all of our defenses - they clear the way for the destruction of our Country and the conquest and enslavement of our people by the Communist Conspiracy!

Under our laws, giving aid and comfort to an Enemy in time of war is TREASON. Communism is a known mortal Enemy of the United States and the American people. Call it "cold" or call it "hot", we are at total war with that Enemy. Those three "Decisions" unquestionably give aid and comfort to that Enemy. By that token, they are acts of TREASON!

A soldier, be he a General or a GI, who would commit similar acts of aid and comfort to the Enemy, would promptly be Court Martialed, and, if found guilty, shot as a traitor.

A Supreme Court Justice is no more immune for acts of aid and comfort to the Enemy than a General - or a Julius Rosenberg. For him there is also a form of Court Martial, to wit: IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS. For their acts, Chief Justice Warren and all the Justices who concurred in those "Decisions" must be haled before Congress, and, if found guilty, they should not only be impeached, but should get the same kind of punishment that a Court martial would mete out to a General who would betray his army on the field of battle - or that was meted out to the Rosenbergs!

Only Congress has the power to place a Supreme Court Justice on trial - via the impeachment process.

Every member in both Houses of Congress has an obligation and a sworn duty to protect and defend the United States, the Constitution, the American people.

Hence, this is an urgent appeal by the American people to all members in both Houses of Congress to fulfill their oaths - to summon forthwith for proper trial all those Justices who collaborated in those three treason-packed "Decisions."

U. S. Government (TOP SECRET) Bulletins provide DOCUMENTARY PROOF that UN is planned Death-Trap for U. S.

RITA ("Thieves Paradise"). . ."All the American Boys who were killed in Korea were really murdered by the UN."

On Sunday evening, May 20, 1956, Myron C. Fagan's play "Thieves Paradise" opened at the Shubert Theatre in Washington, D. C.

The play was written for just one purpose--to warn the American people that the YALTA plotters created the UN to destroy the U. S. and transform our country into an enslavee unit of a Communist One World Government. . .it was produced in Washington so as to put the UN on open trial before all the Members of Both Houses of Congress--from now on there can be no "I didn't know" alibis!

"Thieves' Paradise" revealed all the different phases of the diabolical plot--how the UN was a "Trojan Horse" sneaked into the U. S. to serve as a Sanctuary for Red Spies, Saboteurs and American traitors. . .how it was to destroy our Freedoms through "Treaties," such as "GENOCIDE". . .to brainwash our Youth through UNESCO . . .to drain us of our wealth through UNRRA, "Marshall Plan" and Foreign Aid give-aways. . .and to finally transform the U. S. into an enslaved unit of their Communist One-World Government. But the vilest, foulest, most revoltimg of all the phases was the secret agreement between Alger Hiss and Molotov, under which the post of Chief of the UN Military Staff Committee was PERMANENTLY to be held by a Moscow Communist. CALL FOR 'SURVIVAL COMMISSION'

Country in Desperate Peril; 'Republicrat' Party of Treason Can't Save Us

RIGHT hereby calls for Congress to set up a non-partisan "SURVIVAL COMMISSION" to be composed of respected patriots whose urgent job it will be to fully investigate the reasons why the United States is trailing Russia in certain technological, nuclear, aeronautical and missile fields.

For over two years RIGHT has been tirelessly pointing to evidence that Russia was ahead of the United States in many respects. Few listened. Then came the two Spurniks and for the first time since the War of 1812 the American people began to feel a sense of physical insecurity and fear of an overseas Power.

There is only one conceivable explanation of how Soviet Russia gained her lead. This is because of the policies of giveaway, sellout anti-anti-Communism and downright treason of the "two" parties.

Now, self-seeking, unprincipled politicians of "both" parties seek to blame the other party for the situation and to whitewash their own filth-covered party.

Haven't the American people had enough of this subversive, immoral treachery? Is it not time for honest men to clean our the scoundrels of "both" parties who are responsible for the predicament? Do the American people wish to survive?

In actual, sober fact there are not two parties in America. There is only one: The "Republicrat" PARTY OF TREASON. And any politician who at present is in good standing with his party is a partner to treason. These are harsh words. But the facts upon which they are based are much harsher.

All reputable evidence indicates that the state of domestic security and the effectiveness of anti-Communists has never been as weak as it is now, under "God-Man" Eisenhower. Read this quotation from Robert Morris, Chief Counsel for the Senate's Internal Security Subcommittee:

The fact of the matter is that all of these Court decisions, and these Administrative decisions, have created among devoted intelligence officers, prosecutors, internal security officials and Congressional staffs--a demoralizing sense of frustration and despair. There is more hopelessness today than I have ever experienced before in all my days in Washington. Never before has the morale of internal security reached the low that prevails today.

And Robert H. W. Welch, in his factual magazine, ONE MAN'S OPINION (668) says, "The best informed authorities say that there are at least 30 huge Communist espionage rings operating in this country today, against the only two or three that have been partly exposed."

And Igor Gouzenko, who exposed the Communist spy ring in Canada, wrote a fruitless letter to Eisenhower the other day and said:

The fact that the United States, with its advanced scientific and material resources, was not able to launch the first earth satellite, should be the subject of serious thought and investigation. In my opinion, it indicates the work of well-organized Soviet spy rings in the United States missile-production system. These rings, on the one hand are pumping out of the United States valuable scientific and other information and on the other hand are sabotaging and delaying the United States missile effort under all kinds of seemingly logical excuses.

This fact, then, of America's weakness in her security setup, combined with Russia's powerful and growing potential to destroy us, adds up to the urgent necessity for desperate measures before it is too late.

The only way that the American people can save themselves at this late date is to force their Congressmen and Senators to set up a non-partisan "SURVIVAL COMMISSION" with enough power to fully investigate the entire Executive and Judicial departments and ferret out all rotten, perverted or treasonous personnel. The SURVIVAL COMMISSION must be composed of men of the same stature as those lonely heroes who have fought a losing battle for the last 25 years against the international socialist enemies of the American people. They cannot be pussy-footers and must not be beholden to either of the "two" parties.

When thinking of the patriots who are qualified to lead or staff the SURVIVAL COMMISSION, many names comes to mind. A few of them are Bryton Barron, adm. John G. Crommelin, Gen. P. A. delValle, Gen. Bonner Fellers, John T. Flynn, Maj. George Racey Jordan, Charles Lindbergh, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Dean Clarence Manion, Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, John O'Donnell, Westbrook Pegler, Dan Smoot, Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Burton K. Wheeler and Gen. Robert E. Wood.

There are many others. Here are some who would be eminently qualified to staff the SURVIVAL COMMISSION if they would break completely with their present political party or otherwise show that they are not beholden in any way to any government influence: Richard Arens, Rep. Martin Dies, Sen. James O. Eastland, Col. William F. Heimlich, J. Edgar Hoover, Sen. William E. Jenner, Sen. George W. Malone, Judge Robert Morris and Rep. Francis E. Walter.

These are the men who have been unashamedly right in the past and today, are more right than ever. These are the men who have been fillified, purged, silenced and all but murdered by the Invisible Government, which controls the Republicrat Party of Treason, the newspapers, radio and all means of communication. These are the men who can save America if the people want to be saved.

The SURVIVAL COMMISSION is merely a vigorous restatement of Joe McCarthy's own wishes which he expressed to the Senate April 25, 1956:

I suggest we set up a committee, to investigate the missile program and to keep a vigilant eye on its progress. If the program is not on an all-out basis, find out why; if we are falling behind the Soviet Union in the development of the weapon that might permit communism to conquer us, then we must find out who is responsible and what has motivated who are responsible.

With all the earnestness it can muster, RIGHT urges all patriots and patriotic groups to demand that Congress establish this SURVIVAL COMMISSION. Nothing less can hope to dig the facts out--and with the facts, the crawling things who even now are betraying their country.

This is the opportunity that partiots have been searching for for years. With the question of national survival now plainly staring us all in the face, "both" rotten old parties can be blown to bits by the impact of facts and truth, honestly and fully presented. As the terrible story of America's plight begins to sink into the befuddled, scrubbed brain of the average American they will become more frightened and willing to listen to reason.

In the names of Joe McCarthy, Senators McCarran and Welker, James Forrestal, General Patton and all the ohher great patriots who have laid down their lives for their country in its battle against the forces of evil and darkness, RIGHT prays that patriots all over America will be able to rouse the American people and once and for all put an end to the unholy power of the liberal-communist cabal. There is little time left.

SCIENCE & SPUTNIK

A RIGHT Exclusive.

Wernher von Braun is a great scientist in his field and no doubt the best that America has. But Administration spokesmen have always claimed that he was head of the Peenemunde Rocket Base, and was responsible for the German V-2. This is untrue. Actually, von Braun was only the assistant to one Professor Nebel and Nebel was in charge of Peenemunde. Where is Nebel? He seems to have "mysteriously" disappeared. Since he's not in America nor Britain and apparently nowhere to be found in Germany it may be assumed that Eisenhower-acting true to form--saw to it that the Russians kidnaped him (along with some 60,000 other technicians) and that we got only the No. 2 man, von Braun. This hardly jibes with Eisenhower propagandists who stridently claimed that America and Britain got the "cream of the crop" and that the Reds were given only the picked-over second-raters.

Another of the top-notch Germans that Eisenhower gave Stalin was Dr. Helmuth Grottrup, who was responsible for all the electronic equipment on the V-2.

Bringing Ike's subversion down to date, the October 21 issue of AVIATION WEEK carried the exposure that for "more than two years" Army Intelligence had been tracking Russian 1500-mile and even 5000-mile missiles from a supersensitive radar base in Turkey. Comments the magazine editorially, "It is high time the American people asked President Eisenhower why, in view of the overwhelming evidence available to him during the past two years on Soviet technological progress, he is still purusing a policy that is slowing the pace of our military technology and tapping our future military strength."

RIGHTISM & RELIGION

The devotedly anti-Communist, fundamentalist INTERNATIONAL COUNCIL OF CHRISTIAN CHURCHES(26) has grown mightily in the ten years of its existence. It has just announced that it will hold its Fourth Plenary Congress in Brazil, August 12-21, 1958.

The EVANGELICAL METHODIST CHURCH, which believes in Wesley's 25 Articles of Religion and in fundamentalist Bible doctrines, met in Rector, Ark., last Novermer and issued a call to sincere Methodists to obey the Word of God and repudiate the pro-Communist National Council of Chruches. Information on the 1958 Conference, to be held next October, may be had from Dr. W. W. Breckbill, 2923 Oak Ave., Altoona, Pa.

Charles Smith, editor of the TRUTH SEEKER(843), is a very courageous and outspoken patriot who is also a Freethinker. Because of his anti-communism he has been viciously attacked by many liberals and pro-communists and so replies thusly in the December issue:

Where stand the Freethinkers in the fight for human quality? Nearly all of them other than readers of the TRUTH SEEKER, it seems, worship the new false god of Equality and Marxist collectivism . . . . With most Christians and Communists they march in unison to prostrate themselves before their totem. How they rage . . . their numerous letters are similar to those of orthodox Christians and party-line Communists.

JOB FOR IKE'S PARATROOPERS--Rape and robbery are against the law in New York state. Segregation is legal in Arkansas. Thirteen-year old schoolgirls are being raped on school property in New York; other students are being robbed of their lunch money by young hoodlums with switchblade knives.

The NY Police seem powerless to prevent rape and armed robbery. We can't wait for Ike to send his paratroopers into the NY schools to protect school children against real crime. He called them out in Little Rock where no crime was being committed, except by a Federal judge who upheld the Supreme Court in its unconstitutional foray into power politics.

--American Capsule News, Washington, D. C., February 7, 1958 ($10.00 per year).

SEGREGATION IN VIRGINIA - Gov. Almond has asked the Legislature to grant him power to close any public schools at which the Federal govt attempts to force racial integration at the point of bayonets. And the legislature will probably do it.

Virginia's negro children do not want to go to school with the whites. The exceptions are those whose parents have been agitated or paid by the Negro Ku Klux Klan (NAACP) as was the case in Little Rock. Forcible integration is not only unConstitutional, but illegal in all Southern states.

--American Capsule News, Washington, D. C., January 18, 1957

COMMINIZING THE SCHOOLS--For years the US Office of Education has existed, apparently for the one purpose of Communizing American Schools. No more useless body of bureaucrats ever existed in Washington--or elsewhere.

Staffed by a crowd of long-haired over-educated professors, the "office" has been shoving out queer propaganda for years. Some millions of dollars of good tax money has been spent on brochures, booklets, leaflets, pamphlets and so-called news releases. It has all assayed as so much hogwash except in Moscow and NY's Union Square.

The National Education Assn, a teachers' lobby with munificent headquarters in Washington, has done nothing to counteract the Office of Education propaganda. So--

They, or Moscow, or someone has sold our gullible President a bill of goods on education. Ike now wants to Communize our schools (no kidding). This is regardless of how our 5,000-odd city and county school boards feel about it. These individuals have been handling school problems over 150 years--and doing an excellent job of it.

Now, Mr. Eisenhower, in his two talks on the Spurnik, said (or so he seemed to say) we need schools like the Russian schools to turn out scientists. And to do this the national government must be in charge.

In this connection, the Office of Education has just falsified a report on Russian schools, apparently to keep the American people (or such as read any Office of Education baloney) from knowing how the Russian schools actually are run and what they do.

The young lady who edited the original manuscript, and who obviously isn't on the payroll now, blew the whistle on the conspirators this week. She said that not only were errors not corrected in the "work", (Education in the USSR) but it was so crudely cut that her original work had been hopelessly distorted and garbled.

That's one way to keep the people from knowing the truth.

In an article reprinted in VOICE OF THE NAZARENE, J. Edger Hoover says, "Let's Wipe Out the Schoolyard Sex Racket!" Patriots must take steps to stop the insidious circulation of pornography by human vermin who peddle it to children. Most people are unaware of the wide circulation of such filth among children. Thanks to novels like PEYTON PLACE and rags like TIME magazine, which finds nothing repugnant in the circulation of pornography among children, the business is flourishing.

The Supreme Court has ruled that ONE, a magazine published by and for homosexuals, is not obscene. Well, for once it is easy to understand a Supreme Court decision. Obviously, no bunch of perverts would find perversion obscene! Only normal people find it so.

--RIGHT, P. O. BOX 180, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA ($3.00 per year)

CRIME DOES PAY--With the help of the US Supreme Court, that is. Washington police are trying to halt what is practically a reign of terror in the nation's capital. Little school girls are being raped in New York and lunch money is stolen from 12-year olds at knife point.

Washington police blame their troubles on the infamous Mallory "decision" of the Supreme Court, in which a confessed and convicted negro rapist was turned loose by the "high" court, under authority it did not posses either by Constitution or statute, on the ground that the police had held him prisoner while they investigated and got the evidence they needed to corrobrate his confession.

A DC judge said the Supreme Court had tied his hands. Detectives had taken a suspect to headquarters, instead of to a committing magistrate, obtained a confession and then charged him. The Supreme Court scofflaws said they don't want police to do this to a prisoner. Mallory has already committed another assult since he was turned loose.

Washington's police chief says hoodlums are well aware of the Supreme Court's infamy (our words) in the Mallory case and are deliberately taking advantage of it.

Under neither the Constitution nor Federal statutes has the Supreme Court any power to do any of the things it has done recently to destroy law, order and the peace of the community. CN for Dec. 7 last showed that the high court has no legal powers whatsoever except to review decision of a lower court which has declared an act of Congress unconstitutional.

All of their misinterpreting and malinterpreting of laws and the Constitution is done in the same way a burglar takes your money or your life at the point of a gun. Congress isn't blameless because no one has moved to impeach these scofflaws, something Congress is not only legally impowered, but morally obligated, to do.

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

NOTHING MYSTERIOUS NOTHING UNCERTAIN

Juvenile delinquents just don't happen. The production of the annual crop of youthful criminals is carefully planned and cleverly explained in the lectures of Psychopolitics as taught in the Lenin Institute in Moscow. The lecturers tell the students who aspire to graduating as Freudian Psychiatrists that "Under the saccharine guise of assistimg youth, rigorous child labour laws prevent children from earning money and FORCE them to depend on grudging parents who are always in economic stress. Thus the child can be driven in its teens into revolt. Delinquency will then ensue".

Beria in an address told medical students "You must dominate as respected men the fields of psychiatry and psychology. You must dominate the hospitals and universities. You must make mass treatments common and accepted. You must labour until every doctor and psychiatrist is either a psycho-politician or an unwitting assistant to our aims. You must labour until we have domination over the minds and bodies of every important person in your nation."

The lecturer also informs his class that by using such methods the national pride and religious affiliations of juveniles can be destroyed so that loyalty to God and their flag no longer exist. He assures his pupils: "If we can effectively kill national pride and patriotism in ONE generation we will have won the country".

The students are told the role of the psychopolitical operator enables him to adivse all manner of destructive measures. He can instruct the individual child how to repulse parental control in the home and he can, in an optimum situation, instruct the parents of the entire nation how to handle children with the results that the children run wildly about with no responsibility for their nation or themselves.

The psychopolitical student is then told how they are to infiltrate into police forces, the departments of district attorneys, and even become judges, in order that they may obtain absolute control of the criminal population without whose help a revolution can never be accomplished."

Psychopolitical students are also told that: "By making readily available drugs of various kinds, supplying them with liquor, by praising their wildness and stimulating them with sex literature, and introdicing them to practices as taught at the Sexpol, the psychopolitical operator can create the necessary attitude of chaos, idleness, and worthlessness into which atmosphere he can then introduce the idea the Communism provides complete freedom.

The lectures emphasize that strong ethical leaders of youthful groups must be inveigled carefully into criminal channels and then controlled by blackmail or other means. In the case of a youthful leader who cannot be led from the straight and narrow path, he is to be "framed" in order to bring him into the hands of the juvenile authorities in the hope that he can be brought under the care of a psychopolitical operator employed as a child advisor, then, in the security of the jail, and protected by the process of law, the psychopolitical operator can destroy the sanity of the juvenile. Particularly brilliant scholars, athletes, and group youth leaders must be handled in either one of these two ways the Psychopolitical student is told.

The aspiring psychopolitical operator is informed that guiding the activities of juvenile courts is one of his easier tasks. In juvenile courts, he is told, there are always persons with strange habits, if such habits do not exist they can be created. By making young boys and girls available to these perverts in the security of the detention homes, cameras and recording tapes can be obtained which will make the perverts obedient to the psychopolitical operators under any and all circumstances. This explains why such an extraordinary number of homosexuals obtain employment in the Civil Serivce of Canada, the U.S.A. and Great Britain.

PREDICTS AMERICA'S DOOM UNLESS PEOPLE WAKE UP

Msgr. McGrath Sees Fulfillment of Lenin's Prophecy That U. S. Will Be Sovietized Without War

By Rt. Rev. William C. McGrath, S.F.M., P. A. (Reprinted from "Scarboro Missions," 2685 Kingston Rd., Toronto 13, Ont.)

Ten years more, that's about all! Fifteen, maybe, at the outside! By then the Reds will have taken over America.

No war. No hydrogen bombs. No mass slaughter--till after the victory has been won.

The coup d'etat, in course of accomplishment even while you are reading these lines, will be engineered to final success by the entrenched and untouchable traitors in high places, aided and abetted by their strategically placed cohorts in the nerve centers of the Nation.

The men who sold 500,000,000 Chinese into Communist slavery will finally betray America. The saboteurs who ordered ignominious defeat in Korea will at last achieve the utter destruction of the nation that has too long stood between Russia's Communnist leaders and a bloody Communist world.

It will be the fulfillment of the prophecy made by Lenin in 1923: "First we will take Eastern Europe, then the masses of Asia, then we will encircle the United States, which will be the last bastion of Capitalism. We will not have to attack. It will fall like an overripe fruit into our hands."

-Cites Fate of Anti-Reds-

Who are these traitors? In what key spots are they located right now?

Apparently we are not to know until it is too late. Its worse then useless, it is military or political suicide for any individual to attempt to track them down. For the end is ever the same; character assassination, disgrace or death.

From Patton to Forrestal to Wedemeyer; from MacArthur to Lawton to McCarthy our shores are littered with broken men, among them some of the greatest Americans of our generation.

McCarthy came nearest to success. He was "dangerously" close to pay dirt in his attempt to unearth the mysterious forces avowed to encompass our destruction.

That was why his disgrace had become an absolute necessity and would serve as a deterrent to the McClellans and Jenners and J. Edgar Hoovers who might be stupid enough to continue this expose of treason.

That was why a petition against his censure, signed by 10,000,000 Americans was brazenly ignored.

Public opinion must not be permitted to count any more, as witness the treatment accorded General MacArthur who was given the greatest public acclaim ever tendered to anybody in the history of the Country and is now the forgotten man.

This grim prospect for America was given to us in strictest confidence by two outstanding experts on Communist tactics of subversion and whose names I may not reveal. They are firmly convinced that the Nation is doomed; that nothing really effective is being done or can be done to arrest the progress of the great betrayal.

Ten to 15 years they say, before the massacres in the streets and convents and churches and seminaries; before the brainwashing and diabolical torture and the boatloads of broken human heading northwards toward Siberia and death.

In China, since its "liberation" by the Communists, 15,000,000 innocent people have been done to death. But in China, a Red officer recently told a departing missionary, they were not cruel enough. "We will be 100 times as cruel when we take over America."

Not only will this verdict of the experts not be generally accepted but it is virtually impossible today to convince people as a whole that America is even in danger.

So long have we been inoculated and anaesthetised with subtle, soporific party-line slogans about peace and security and "co-existence" that "the soul within us has died"; the mere thought of resistance, even to the menace of Communist enslavement, has come to be regarded as a sort of treason to a peace-loving world.

North America today comprises in its population a truly alarming number of naive defeatists; of innocent lambs ready--"eager", one would be tempted to say at times--to be lead to the Communist slaughterhouse.

Let anybody advocate a strong stand against Communist agression and immediately there is a hue and cry of "warmonger." We must be "realistic" about the present last stand of freedom in Asia. Pay any price, for another "cease fire" anywhere on earth, even the price of handing the whole of Asia over to Red domination.

See to it that there never will be any further attempt to liberate the Chinese mainland. Eliminate the troublesome Chiang Kai-shek. Bottle him up forever on Formosa or for that matter, in exile and make use of the mighty U. S. Seventh Fleet to ensure the surrender of some of his vital off-shore islands.

Invite the murderers of priests and Sisters and American uniformed men to the conference table and welcome them as "respected" members of the United Nations.

Condone. Appease. Pretend. But above all forever surrender.

Peace in our time, wherever we've heard that before. Bury your head in the sand while Russia enslaves the rest of the world and hope --oh, just somehow--that it cannot happen here.

-Says Catholics Are Asleep-

Thank Heaven not all people have given up. A few brave souls in America are trying to arouse the Country from its sleep of death. Magazines like the "American Mercury" and the "U. S. News and World Report." Columnists like Sokolsky, Lawrence and Budenz. Radio commentators such as Winchell, Fulton Lewis, Jr., and John T. Flynn.

I have before me an interesting letter from one such lecturer not perhaps so well-known, a lady who has consistently spoken against the Communist menace, who has been hounded and persecuted and finally forced to sell her home and move out of her home State.

Hear what she has to say on this subject: "I believe the same diabolical plans will be duplicated in America, for the men who are dedicated to the worship of Lucifer are bound to crucify the followers of Christ. They are a bunch of sanctimonious, holier-than-thou hypocrites. Watch them crucify McCarthy.

"Yes, we do need many prayers. But let me ask you this. Do you think the general run of Catholics have any inkling of the dangers all around them? Is it not a fact that people do not pray for help unless they believe they need it?

"Despite all of Bishop Sheen's telecasts, the Fatima Crusade, the Rosary Crusade, etc., I do not find Catholics in general recognizing that there are serious dangers to their souls, their homes, their families, their way of life. When I try to draw their attention to what I know, they look at me with a blank, dubious stare. Human being do not come to their senses until they suffer themselves. So I suppose we are going to have to suffer before there is an awakening."

I have heard Bishop Cuthbert O'Gara discuss this subject at length. He is distressed and deeply disturbed over the failure of people in this country to recognize the danger of the Communnist threat. And Bishop O'Gara knows all about Communism from first-hand experience. For he spent 24 months in solitary confinement in China in an old hut located between a pigsty and a latrine.

A recent interview he granted the Catholic press in Pittsburgh should do much to awaken those who still favor appeasement of Red China.

"The people of the United States" he stated, "do not appreciate the magnitude of the defeat the West has suffered since 1945.

"It is incredible that such a small group of pro-Communist pseudo-intellectuals should have effected in so short a time one of the greatest turn-overs in the history of mankind."

-Quotes Bishop O'Gara-

Bishop O'Gara said that this defeat could not be blamed on stupidity but had been deliberately and cold-bloodedly engineered.

"No group of Americans," he said, "could be that stupid. The deliberate throwing away of victory after World War II is confirmed by the whole list of 'stupidities' since VJ day. And these stupidities are still going on. Someone is still directing the sell-out."

Apropos of what would happen in America should the Reds take over, I have before me at the moment a document that affords fruit for meditation. It is a list of 192 priests, some of whom I knew personally, who have been murdered in China and the list is admittedly incomplete. Read for yourself the nature of the treatment meted out to those martyred servants of God and then ask yourself if our fight today is not against Principalities and the Powers of Darkness.

Father Charles Osnagui, buried alive, February, 1942; Father Humbert Verdini, burned with some 30 christians, July, 1942; Sister Anne Chang; dragged to death, March 1948; Father Joseph Chang, dragged, beaten, shot, October, 1947; Archbishop Cyril Jarre, O. F. M., died in jail, March, 1952; Father Francis Hsiao, died after tortures, Good Friday, 1950; Father Seraphin Shih (and many of his fellow Trappists), head crushed between stones.

And so the story goes for all of the 192 who were done to death.

All this at the hands of the Red Chinese murderers who still hold some 900 Americans in their filthy dungeions and who, if our nitwit liberals have the final sayso, will be permitted to shoot their bloody way into the United Nations.

Truly--whom the gods wish to destroy they first make mad.

-Apathy the Obstacle-

An important objective of Communist propaganda has been to keep the American people uninformed about and apathetic to the extent and progress of Communist infiltration into American government and life. When those who have studied the strategy and tactics of Communism and who recognize it for the menace that it is attempt to combat it the biggest obstacle they face is an uninformed and apathetic people. How do they react? Read the article on page five by Msgr. William C. McGrath, who is known to most of our readers as the priest who accompanied the "Pilgrim Virgin" throughout the United States, including the Diocese of Brooklyn. The reading will be beneficial though not conducive to complecency. (From the Managing Editor's Desk)

COMMITTEE OF 1,000 CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS

Christian scientists Organize for Defense

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 15--To "defend The Christian Science Monitor" is the purpose announced in a new charter just issued to the Committee of 1,000 Christian Scientists, by the Michigan Corporation and Securities Commission. The Committee is a national group, with headquarters at Plymouth, Michigan, and is in opposition to the present management of The Christian Science Monitor in Boston.

According to R. Roy Pursell, one of the incorporators and its executive secretary who has been a Christian Scientist for 50 years, "The Christian Science Monitor is in trouble. Just as Alger Hiss got into the State Department so have many questionable writers gotten into the Monitor. For instance, there was the well-known leftist writer William Henry Chamberlin who has publicly confessed he was 'a devout Soviet sympathizer' when he was hired by the Monitor in 1922 to report to the nation from Moscow. After 12 years' watching communism bring misery to the Russians he completely changed his position and now stands four-square for limited government.

"Our group of dedicated Christian Scientists," explained Mr. Pursell, "is demanding that a house--cleaning be made and the paper restored to the high level its founder, Mary Baker Eddy, dedicated it."

The recent Gaither Committee report to the President, "portrays a United States in the gravest danger in its history . . . It finds America's long-term prospect one of cataclysmic peril and of a powerful, growing Soviet economy and technology which will bring new political, propaganda and psychological assaults on freedom all around the globe."

Everywhere people are asking the question: "How come the mad men of Moscow have succeeded in gaining such scientific and technological advantage over the United States?" There is a reason. But the real reason is given very little notice in a liberalistcontrolled press.

A United Press report carrying date line of December 20, is a sample. "Professor Bruino M. Pontecorvo, the former British physicist who fled to Russia in 1950, has been named research director of the nuclear problems laboratory of the joint institution for nuclear research," the Moscow Evening News reported.

SAMPLE OF SOVIET HYPOCRISY

It was this same Portecorvo, who, in explaining why he left the Capitalist Nations, said, "I fled to Russia because of preparations in the Capitalist Nations to build up atomic arsenals."

The records show, "the U. S. Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee estimated in 1951 that Pontecorvo, with the British Scientist Klaus Fuchs, advanced the Soviet Atomic energy program at least 18 months beyond where it otherwise would have been." However, our liberalist-controlled press that could find unlimited front page space for the political crucifixions of Senator Joseph McCarthy and Senator Herman Welker is strangely silent on this real cause for our world dilemma. Without exception, every outstanding American who has effectively challenged the Red menace, has been subjected to political smear, political crucifixion, and political assassination.

Informed people know America's great dilemma has been brought about through a "liberalism" that has made the way for Russian agents and their fellow-travelers to infiltrate our Government, our churches and our schools. This has been the real source of the Kremlin's amazing progress. This is the one thing that has put into the hands of mad men, a power of world destruction. It is largely through political-trickery on the part of religious and political apostates that the end-time developments foretold in Bible Prophecy are fitting this generation into the Prophetic picture for the closing of this age.

CLERGYMEN PROMOTE COMMUNISM VIA "FRONTS"

The communist conspiracy has been highly successful in using clergymen in their front groups. Herbert Philbrick said, "The front is an effective dual-purpose device--it pushes communist influence outward, and it draws membership in." Pushing communist influence outward is far more important than the few members pulled into the party through fronts.

The front technique, as invented by Lenin and the conspirators, has had 50 years experience to perfect it. The front organizations are just as essential a part of the communist conspiracy as the communist press, their training schools, and espionage cells. All are directed by a central high command and are coordinated to achieve the overthrow of our government by force and violence. It is a deliberate tactic of the conspiracy to conceal the complete integration of the communist-front apparatus with the whole communist conspiracy. Deceitfulness is the essence of the front organization. ANYONE who supports a communist-front organization is supporting the communist conspiracy and helping to destroy the American republic.

Testifying before the House Committee on Appropriations on December 9, 1953, J. Edgar Hoover said, "One of the principal mediums for the attainment of the goal of the Communist Party is through Communist-front organizations. . . . The fronts are being utilized in an ever increasing degree . . . they are excellent sources of revenue for raising funds for the party".

Before the creation of front organizations, the number of ministers who carried out the instructions of the Communist Party or collaborated with it were small. The first important communist front organization in the United States was the American League Against War and Fascism organized in 1933 and headed by Prof. Harry F. Ward of Union Theological Seminary. Earl Browder was vice chairman and there were several ministers and rabbis on the National Executive Committee. The House Un-American Activities Committee said of this front organization, "An examination of the program of the American League will show that the organization was nothing more or less than a bold advocate of treason". The League had branches in most large communities and cities all over the country and most branch leaders were members of the clergy. As a result the program was widely circulated throughout church organization.

Since this first important communist front success, American clergymen have continued to collaborate with the communist conspiracy in their diabolical front organizations. Many large and influential fronts have been headed by clergymen.

A recent communist front in which Protestant clergymen make up by far the largest single group of supporters is the "National Committee to Win Amnesty for the Smith Act Victims" organized in 1953. Its chairman is Edward K. Barsky and the treasurer is Carl Marzani. Both have served prison terms--one for contempt of Congress and the other for perjury. Purpose of the organization is to win amnesty for communist leaders convicted of conspiring to overthrow our government by force and violence. The Daily Worker of July 5, 1953, boasted that "religious leaders have been more receptive to the amnesty appeal than leaders of any other single group". The printed matter of the organization shows the names of 191 Protestant clergymen from 42 states and the next largest group are educators of whom there are 83 listed.

On January 30-31, 1953, the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee held meetings in the First Presbyterian Church in New York City. A group of liberals, headed by Prof. George Counts, branded the committee as a communist front well in advance of the affair. Of the 41 sponsors of this pro-communist conference, 17 were Protestant clergymen who made up, by far, the largest single group of supporters. Three of the sponsors resigned over the communist issue but Dr. John A. Mackay, moderator of the General Assembly of the Northern Presbyterian Church, stubbornly stuck on.

To Dr. Mackay these communist fronts are good causes and he has announced his intention to continue joining such groups. This is not guilt by association but guilt by willful collaboration with a treasonable underground apparatus. Dr. Mackay has also published his support of American recognition of Red China and its admission to the United Nations. Dr. Mackay continues to get away with these infamous activities merely because most Presbyterians do not realize what is happening and do not understand our enemies.

Eight of the translators of the new Revised Standard Version of the Bible have communist front affiliations and they have been active in some of the most dangerous of the fronts. One of the translators, Dr. Walter Russell Bowie of Union Theological Seminary, has been named on 15 communist or communist front organizations.

These samples hardly scratch the surface of communist front activities among clergymen. Generally you will find the same clergymen who collaborate with the communist front organizations leading the drives against congressional committees exposing communists, for an appeasing foreign policy, and for a collectivist type government which they now call "the responsible society". You will not hear any noise from these same ministers protesting vicious falsehoods about Congressional investigators or demanding release of American boys from Communist dungeons.

IMPEACH WARREN

Myron C. Fagan, a great American patriot, is satisfied that there are men serving on the United States Supreme Court playing prominent parts in shaping the destiny of our nation, who ought not be there. He writes convincingly in a little book just published under the title, IMPEACH SUPREME COURT JUSTICES.

Chief Justice Earl Warren is portrayed as one of the most dangerous men in public life today. Mr. Fagan wishes to see him retired to private life.

Mr. Fagan feels that the common man should be aroused to what he believes to be "a clear and present danger." Thoughts like the following came to the mind of this reviewer while reading his dynamic discussion of the high court . . .

---The penalty good men pay for indifference to government is to be ruled by evil men. All that good people have to do for the triumph of evil is nothing. Bad men are elected to public office by good men who fail to vote. Christians have a responsibility for keeping God in government, ad infinitum.

Mr. Fagan agrees with Attorney General Louis C. Wyman of New Hampshire who, addressing the 1957 convention of the National Association of Attorney Generals at Sun Valley, Idaho, charged that, "decisions by the Supreme Court have set the United States back 25 years in its effort to control Communism." He showed exactly how the tribunal had aided and abetted the Communist cause under Warren's management.

Here are a few sentences from Fagan's fact-finding reservoir:

"Even in his college days Earl Warren was known as a 'Liberal'--in today's accepted meaning of that word. Then, when he married a Swedish girl with strong Socialistic convictions, he veered so far to the Left that some of his friends of those days referred to him as 'Comrade'.

"When he entered upon his political career he was smart enough to keep his ideological convictions under cover. Even so, his record while Governor of California establishes that he was as pro-Communist as any man in such a high office would dare be. He was palsy-walsy with the notoriously pro-Communist Anti-Defamation League. Senator Byrd, in a speech on the Senate floor, openly charged him with being in collusion with the pro-Communist NAACP. He continuously pandered to Harry Bridges and other notorious Reds.

"He repeatedly tried to force the Communist F E P C plot through the California Legislature - also a law socializing medicine. He tried to prevent the recision of the UWF Resolution to transform the U. S. into a unit of a UN One World Government. He appointed notorious Reds, among them the ADL chieftain, Isaac Pacht, to judgeships and other high offices. And that only scratches the surface of his Marxist activities and associations."

Charles Evans Hughes' wise counsel to Warren G. Harding in 1921 is recalled. The late President was then faced with the responsibility of making appointments to the Supreme Court. Chief Justice Hughes admonished him as follows:

"We are under a Constitution, but the Constitution is what the Judges say it is . . . As George Washington would have said, place none but Americans on the Supreme Court bench - the kind of Americans who will interpret the Constitution for the safety and welfare of the United States and the American people."

After listing some of the "crimes against the American people," of which the present court is guilty, Mr. Fagan asks, "Can we get them impeached?" . . . and answers "Yes." Then he proceeds to explain how!

The legal processes for removing Supreme Court Justices are explained. A plan of action is suggested. Congress is the ultimate battleground.

"Now let's alert thousands of people to tell their Representatives in Washington, in no uncertain language, that Earl Warren and all the Justices who joined in the betrayal of our country and the rape of the FBI files must be impeached; that is our first job--and for love of God and our Country, it is a must job," says Myron C. Fagan.

VIEWING THE NEWS

NEW YORK--FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover appeals to Americans today to keep up their guard against a conspiratorial Communist movement which "has been and is engaged in an all-out war against American freedom."

Despite convulsions, flipflops, defections and setbacks, the Communist Party's hard core in the United States still is a vast reservoir of spy material posing a "tremendous and present danger" to American security, the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation warns in a new book, "Masters of Deceit," published today by Henry Holt & Co.

Something New

When the party was founded in 1919 by a rag-tag group of grotesque revolutionaries on the Bolshevik model, it planted an infection which, though limited to a relatively few, could spread dangerously, Hoover says.

"Something utterly new has taken root in America during the past generation; a Communist mentality representing a systematic, purposive and conscious attempt to destroy Western civilization and roll history back to the age of barbaric cruelty and despotism, all in the name of progress," the FBI director writes. "Evil is depicted as good, terror as justice, hate as love, obedience to a foreign master as patriotism."

The attempt to create a "Communist man" will fail, Hoover says, "but we cannot afford the luxury of waiting for it to run its course," because its weapons become more formidable as guards are lowered.

Is Close Survey

Moscow normally tries to separate the party from spy activities, Hoover says, the the party's thousands of members still play an important role in Soviet espionage.

WORLD GOVERNMENT: The American people have become accustomed to having their money taken away from them and their rights and liberties confiscated, one by one, on demand of social planners who now exercise complete custody over human welfare. If these tax-ridden citizens figure, however, that every evil thing possible has already been done to them and that they will be called on to make no further contribution to the perfection of a one-world Utopian state, we have a surprise for them. Two thousand political psychiatrists and social psychologists, in solemn conclave assembled, have formulated a macabre program of such gruesome and ghastly proportions as to curl the hair of a Mohawk Indian. It is a plan for mass thought control which reveals that their next grim objective is to take over our minds, cleanse them of all preconceived ideas of right and wrong, debunk them of outmoded moral conceptions and - having mentally castrated us - to turn us back to society with completely remodeled and over-hauled cranial equipment guaranteed to ensure our acceptance, without protest, of the one-world government being prepared for us by the experts. If this sounds like a bad joke or a horror story from a lurid comic cook, the reader had best not laugh or shrug it off until he has checked with the same source from which we got our material on the subject - the reverend and highly esteemed United Nations World Health Organization located in the City of New York and supported largely by American dollars which the producers and workers of this country sweated to earn, but which they were never permitted to hold in their little hot hands.

IN THE MERCURY'S OPINION

Planned Events III - November 1956

In recent issues we have been reviewing those individual tickings of the clock of history that so many of us tend to forget in the clatter of here-and-now. Some readers have asked if we are "trying to prove something." The answer is emphatically "No!" Only history will prove whether our nation ignored the warning signals so vital to its survival. We can merely supply the incontestable evidence. And that is all we have been doing: presenting seemingly unrelated events in many fields which confirm the enormity and complexity of the insidious pattern of the years gone by--events which, although familiar to a few of us, often were lost in memory.

Last month's review brought us through some of the events preceding World War I, Now, to test yoru memory of some other facts. . .

DO YOU REMEMBER WHEN. . .

Bolshevist revolutionaries in Russia murdered adults and children of the royal family and many others, thus launching their regime in blood? It was in 1918.

Bernard Baruch, testifying at a Congressional inquiry, said: "I have more power than any other man in the war?" It was in 1918.

The Versailles Peace Conference imposed on Germany the harsh conditions that sent the nation reeling toward Communism, depression and, finally, despotism? It was in 1919.

The Communist International was created? It was in 1919. In America? It was in 1919.

Baruch was invited to become the Soviet Union's peacetime adviser on industry and resources? It was in 1919.

Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were arrested for a holdup killing that mushroomed into the political cause celebre of the era? It was in 1920.

The infamous Wall Street bomb explosion killed 30 persons and injured 100? It was in 1920.

Henry Ford, Sr., warned his countrymen in the "Dearborn Independent" of an international banking "conspiracy"? It was in 1920.

Planned Events IV - For December, 1956

As the Mercury has been reminding its readers over the past few months, memory is one of our most fallible faculties. Events that shaped history a handful of years ago are lost in a fuzziness of time for many of us. Yet, for each event in history, time is an essential dimension. Without such a dimension, things can seem a tangle of threads. With such a dimension, history again becomes a full-bodied fabric, a tapestry of design, sweep and color. To test whether it is a tangle or a tapestry.

DO YOU REMEMBER WHEN. . .

President Roosevelt issued his famous "Clear it with Sidney" instruction, referring the Sidney Hillman, then an American labor leader, but earlier a leader of the abortive 1905 Russian Revolution? It was in 1932.

International banking circles began taking gold from the country, thus precipitating the run on banks that eventually closed 24,000 institutions? Only 18,000 reopened. The balance were available as bargain-basement purchases for the financial group who precipitated the runs. It was in 1932.

President Roosevelt ordered his famous "bank holiday?" It was in 1933.

President Roosevelt following the 1912 blueprint of Woodrow Wilson's sinister adviser, Colonel Edward Mandel House, broadcast his first "Fireside Chat"? It was in 1933.

The chances for Russian liberty were doomed by America's recognition of the Soviet Union and the godless tyranny that had created it? Russian Ambassador Maxim Litvinov came over to the U. S. to engineer the double-cross. It was in 1933.

When Hitler was Chancellor of Germany, the N. Y. Times reported on Aug. 7, 1933: "Mr. Samuel Untermeyer presided over Int. Jewish Boycott Conference, held in Amsterdam last month, and was elected president of the World Jewish Economic Federation . . ."? This suddenly focused the attention of the world on Germany. It was in 1933.

Unaided by the rest of the world, more than 6,000,000 Greek Orthodox Christians died of starvation during the enforced Soviet famine of the Ukraine? It was in 1933.

Father Charles Coughlin becme the center of a national controversy by warning his extensive audiences of "the schemers within"? He was driven off the air. It was in 1933.

Roosevelt made an attempt to pack the Supreme Court? It was in 1936.

AND DO YOU REMEMBER WHEN. . .

Communist Russia and Germany signed their non-aggression pact? It was in 1939.

Lauchlin Currie, who had been naturalized only four years earlier, was appointed administrative assistant to President Roosevelt? Later, when an investigation was started, he left the country, lost his citizenship and is now a citizen of Colombia, South America. Many years ago, Currie was identified as a Communist agent. It was in 1939.

General George C. Marshall who had been relieved of his command by General MacArthur was named Chief of Staff in preference to vast numbers of senior officers? It was in 1939.

Felix Frankfurter, nephew of the late Louis Dembitz Brandeis, was named to the Supreme Court? The mantle of Frankfurter's reputation was extended to cover the careers of such proteges as Alger Hiss and Dean Acheson? It was in 1939.

Harry Dexter White, as Director to our Monetary Research, was on his way along the path of sensational promotions that took him to the top echelons of the Treasury Dept.? This look place in spite of warnings from the F. B. I. It was in 1939.

WHAT IS THE BRETTON WOODS AGREEMENT?

The Hon. John Francis Neylan in an analysis of the Bretton Woods scheme printed in full in the Congressional Record of April 4, 1945, pointed out:

"The document embodies so many basic contradictions, and is so loaded with ambiguities it defies understanding as anything but an elaborate contrivance to give away American money and fetter the United States in the post-war era, almost like a conquered nation.

"The real author of the Bretton Woods Agreement, with what he has termed its 'epoch-making innovations for international plans', is Lord John Maynard Keynes, a director of the Bank of England, adviser to the British Exchequer, and the most brilliant exponent of the project of substituting economic imperialism for political imperialism with London and other European capitals as the seats of empire.

"Lord Keynes frankly stated that his proposal might become 'the pivot of the future economic government of the world.'

"The day of imperialism is dead and gone, and the attempt to perpetuate in under a new guise is doomed to failure.

"The Bretton Woods Agreement does not contemplate a new world order based upon freedom and expanding development of all the human race. It is a document which seeks to create an economic strait jacket for the benefit of a continent which for centuries has drained the treasure of the rest of the world to finance its wars and to support it in intervals of peace . . .

"The United States seems to contain the only considerable body of persons who consider devotion to Country rather absurd, while Europe and the rest of the world seem crowded with fanatical nationalists who are experts in matters of international exchange and currency.

"Already it is certain that the 12,000,000 in the armed services of the United States, fighting all over the world, are coming home to the grim reality of a martgage of more than $300,000,000,000. . . They will experience difficulty in understanding some of the additional burdens being piled upon them while they will be facing the grim and heart-breaking difficulties of readjustment to the all-important responaibility of supporting themselves and their children.

"It would seem equitable that these men should have some voice in determining whether the resources which belong to them and their children are to be squandered to enable old political imperialisms to transmute themselves into economic empires and perpetuate their dominion over hundreds of millions of human beings and vast territories they could neither protect nor liberate.

"The implications and possibilities of the scheme are so tremendous as affecting the future welfare of the United States, it would seem no public servant with a respect for his trust would fail to scrutinize it with "anxious concern."

LET A CONGRESSMAN TELL YOU THE TRUTH

WASHINGTON, March 9,--Representative Hatton W. Summers, Democrat of Texas, a veteran of thirty-four years in Congress, today called the Federal Government an "instrumentality of favoritism, tyranny, oppression and corruption" as he announced he would not seek re-election.

Sumners, 70 years old and long-time chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said in a statement:

"I have watched what my own generation, under administration of both parties, has been doing to the greatest system of democratic government ever evolved through the processes of the ages.

"By ignoring principles and the lessons of history, and accepting the theories of men and political expedience for our guidance, we have made vassals of our States and dependents of our people.

"By concentration of governmental power and drafts upon the Federal Treasury, we have now a financially busted, great piled-up mass of governmental confusion beyond human comprehension, impossible of democratic control, extravagant, wasteful, inefficient, and by its nature the instrumentality of favoritism, tyranny, oppression, and corruption, and the destroyer of the self-reliance and self-respect and governmental capacity of the people, qualities without which no people can remain free.

The Texan added that hope for a brighter future lies in recognition by the people of a "common danger and a common duty."

WHAT IS BEHIND THE BRITISH LOAN?

London, Dec. 17th, 1945.

The Duke of Bedford, speaking before the English House of Lords re the proposed American Loan to Britiin, castigated the proposal on the following terms:

"I find that opposition to the Bretton Woods scheme, which is one of the conditions of the loan, is almost universal among people of widely different political and economic outlook. . . . I find that the really fine and enlightened people in America are as much against Bretton Woods and all that it stands for as I am. . . .

"Then there is the very grave objection indeed that we are proposing to hand over the control of our economic life, in a very large measure, to a gang of representatives of Wall Street finance who are responsible to no one and are above every Government.

"The addiction of the Bretton Woods Fund to gold gives the lie to the claim to be world philantropists.

"It has been suggested that if the House (of Lords) should do so (reject this loan) . . . the Labour Government might feel tempted to punish us by political extermination, but even in that dire event I would say that we at any rate will have gone down fighting for the deliverance of our Country from economic servitude, and indeed for the protection of the whole world from the most impudent attempt history has ever known to establish an economic and financial dictatorship."

YOU ARE BEING ROBBED

From American Mercury, July 1957

For 125 years--from 1789 to 1914--28 presidents of the United States spent less than 23 billion dollars altogether.

In 1912, Bernard Baruch ushered Woodrow Wilson into the White House. William H. Taft, Wilson's predecessor, spent less than 3 billion dollars during his entire administration. Wilson advised by Baruch, spent 47 billion dollars.

The citizens of these United States struggled to regain their sovereign authority during the administrations of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover. These three presidents spent only a fraction of Woodrow Willson's reckless, irresponsible, international spending.

President "Pearl Harbor" Roosevelt spent almost 400 billions of dollars. Harry Truman, the "Red Herring pet of the International bankers, spent 191 billion dollars from 1946 to 1949. What "High Tax" Harry alone spent would have provided a $5,000 house, free and clear of any mortgage, for you and 38,200,000 families in the United States.

President Eisenhower promised to reduce spending. His West Point education was nullified by his "training" at Columbia University. As a result he currently prepared a budget of over 86 billions of dollars per year, the largest peace-time budget in the history of our conntry. The international bankers continue to "advise" him. Lenin predicted that "We will spend the United States into bankruptcy." Lenin's "plan" is being directed and followed.

How long will Americans play the role of "sucker" while their "invisible government" continues to tax their earnings--and to scatter what doesn't stick to their fingers to economic vultures throughout the world?

The annual interest alone on our national debt now equals 7½ times the total debt before our presidents had "international advisors." Unborn generations will stagger under our astronomical debts.

CAN 150,000,000 PEOPLE BE WRONG?

OPEN LETTER IV February 7, 1957

FROM
THE BOSTON NUTRITION SOCIETY, INC.
John D. Pearmain, Chairman Educational Committee

TO
DR. NATHAN M. PUSEY, PRESIDENT OF HARVARD UNIVERSITY

-30-

ON THE MATTER OF

STANDARDS OF RESEARCH UNDER DR. FREDERICK J. STARE, HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT OF NUTRITION, HARVARD SCHOOL OF PUBLIC HEALTH

Re: National Food Deficiency, Synthetics, the 'Unholy Alliance'

Dr. Pusey, in this our 4th letter, we intend to prove our contention that Dr. Stare's Nutrition Department is doing more to destroy this country than will ever be done by Communism. Our people have FREEDOM OF SPEECH and PRESS with which to fight the latter but they have no such freedom on the subjects of Health, Food, Drugs or Disease.

Dr. Stare's public utterances, writings and court testimony are all designed to uphold the business status quo be belittling the devastating effects of our denatured 'counterfeit' and poisoned foods and by ignoring the increase of degenerative diseases. We can understand this attitude when we read that he received in the past six years $378,000 in gifts largely marked for his personal direction, from the very commercial interests who stand to profit most by keeping out people in ignorance as to the truth about those foods and our national health.

Dr. Stare writes, "The successful cooperation of agriculture, industry and the medical profession has produced a nation of healthy people blessed with the best food supply in the world". (See letter #1)

As against this statement we read from Harper's Magazine, September 1951, in an article by James A. Rorty:

"THE HUMBLEST INDIANS AND MESTIZOS (in Mexico) OFTEN SUFFER LESS FROM MALNUTRITION THAN DOES THE AVERAGE MIDDLE-CLASS FAMILY IN THE UNITED STATES" is the story in brief of a LONG-TERM STUDY PARTICIPATED IN BY THE MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY'S DR. ROBERT S. HARRIS, Head of its Nutritional Biochemical Laboratories, and the UNITED FRUIT COMPANY.

"The studies were made to determine food values in terms of protein, vitamin and mineral energy content . . .

"'The idea', said Harris 'was to determine first what a country had in the way of plant food resources . . . Next, what the people were actually eating. Then . . . what was their nutritional and health status?'

"Despite their poverty which was often extreme, the M. I. T. - UNITED FRUIT STUDIES showed that the humblest Indians and Mestizos often suffer less from malnutrition than does the average middle-class family in the United States . . .

"'The superior nutritive value of the foods', writes Harris, 'and the unspoiled dietary habits and customs of the people are two important reasons for their superior status.'"

"A year later, the same group of technicians, as a preliminary to the establishment of a Mexican school lunch program, conducted a clinical study of 1,000 school children in one of the poorest districts of Mexico City. The families of the children averaged 7 persons, and they subsisted on a total family income of about 64 cents a day.

"To the surprise of the investigators, these poverty-stricken Mexicans showed less evidence of malnutrition deficiencies than did Michigan school children.

"Analysis of all their foods by Dr. Harris' group showed that the Otomis (Indians dwelling in the arid Mesquital Valley north of Mexico City) like the slum dwellers of Mexico City, were obtaining nearly adequate quantities of all nutrients except riboflavin, in fact, their nutrition was definitely superior to that of the average person living in the Boston and New York areas of the United States."

From the Book 'Diseases of Metabolism' containing articles by 20 of the most famous medical men in America we quote from an article by Dr. Tom D. Spies, M. D., chairman of Department of Nutrition and Metabolism, Northwestern University Medical School; Professor of Nutrition and Metabolism, Hillman Hospital, Birmingham, Alabama:

"Investigation of the diets of large groups of people correlated with laboratory studies and direct examination has led to the startling observation that the margin of safety against deficiency diseases is narrow rather than broad, that the presence of nutritional inadequacy is widespread and not limited to the lower economic group. As information is increasing, it is found that relatively few people in the United States consistently eat diets that are adequate in all respects." (page 555)---

"A noteworthy paper by Baker, Wright and Drummond traces the increasing use of white flour to the introduction of silk bolting cloth in 1840 and of roller mills in 1870 to satisfy greater demand. They estimate the "the best fed members of the population today are getting twice as much vitamin B_1 as people on a low income level, yet consume less vitamin B_1 than the parish poor of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries," We are realizing more and more that decortification of grain is dangerous, that there must be some change in milling methods. Greater care in guarding against loss of vitamins and minerals through processing, marketing and storing of foods would undoubtedly improve the quality of many diets." (page 557)(underlining by this editor)

Yet Dr. Stare writes for public consumption: "Actually we get as much food value from refined foods which have been 'enriched' as from natural foods and sometimes more."

Enriched with what--with synthetic man-made vitamins, a prolific and most profitable product of the chemical concerns who so richly donate to Dr. Stare's Department. Dr. Stare thus continues to recommend the addition to our breads of individual components of the vitamin 'B' complex in synthetic form such as Thiamin (B_1), Riboflavin (B_2), and Niacin.

What do scientists who are NOT controlled by or donated to by the Food Processors & Refiners or the Chemical and Drug interests have to say on "enrichment" with synthetic vitamins?

In the British Medical Journal for March 31, 1945 in an article entitled, "IMBALANCE OF VITAMIN B FACTORS", Marion B. Richards, M.D. D. Sc. of the Rowell Research Institute, Aberdeen, Scotland writes:

> "Recent experiments on rats in this institute have produced clear cut evidence of the advance effects that may be caused by a disturbance of the balance of the vitamin B factors in the diet, and have shown that overloading with one component B1 can produce a definite deficiency of another component, B6. It is becoming increasingly recognized that in the treatment of pellagrins with nicotinic acid it is essential to provide other members of the B complex and to prescribe a liberal and well-balanced diet. Our experiments would suggest the necessity for adopting a similar procedure for other B factors, and in particular, when B1 therapy is indicated, for supplying the whole B complex instead of the single vitamin. . .The present results emphasize the need for caution in any attempt to improve the diet of these populations by indiscriminate addition of large supplements of single synthetic B vitamins." (Underlined by this editor)

These experiments have been backed up in this country by Dr. Tom Spies and associates (see above), by Agnes Fay Morgan of Southern Calif. University (see Leter #2) and recently by Dr. Estelle Hawley, Associate Professor of Pediatrics and Nutrition at Rochester University. Dr. Hawley carried out a series of experiments in which so-called 'enriched' commercial white bread was fed to one group of rats and another group fed on bread made according to Dr. Clive McCay's Cornell formula. The rats on the McCay-Cornell bread thrived, as did their offspring and descendats thru the fourth generation. The rats on the 'enriched' white bread became sickly and starved looking and produced stunted offspring. All died off the the strain became extinct before the fourth generation.

Incidentally, the McCay-Cornell bread was made of unbleached flour enriched, not with man-made synthetics but with natural foods, (wheat gern, soy bean flour and dried milk). But the 'Big Boys' did not like this type of competition so they got their 'Gestapo', the Food and Drug Administration, after this Cornell bread and in 1952 the Food and Drug Administration ruled that bread made according to the Cornell formula was too good to come under its ceiling regulations for quality; hence, it was not to be sold in interstate commerce as "white bread". Thus, the F. D. A. not only tolerates the sale of nutritionally inferior bread which contain poisonous chemicals and synthetic vitamins, but protects the refiners, the bakers and the chemical companies from good bread competition.

Thus, Dr. Pusey, we find Dr. Stare's Nutrition Department 'abundantly' backed by the Chemical and Drug Interests and the National Food Processors who donated from 1950 to 1956:

(a) Chemical concerns Dupont, Merck and Upjohn --$50,250

(b) The Sugar Foundation composed of the large sugar interests (the 2nd largest contributor) -- $67,750

(c) The Nutrition Foundation (the largest contributor) Dr. Stare's article in McCall's Magazine, January 1956, (see letter #3) in bold type called attention to the statement, "Approved by Committee on Nutritional Education of the NUTRITION FOUNDATION". $113,000

(d) Other contributions largely from food processors. $147,000

Total - - - - - - - -$378,000

Just what is this NUTRITION FOUNDATION whose so-called Educational Department "approves" Dr. Stare's writings. It consists of about 45 of the leading FOOD PROCESSORS, CHEMICAL, and DRUG COMPANIES represented officially by the Chrirman of the Board or other leading Executive of each. Some members of this NUTRITION FOUNDATION are:

Armour & Co.
Abbott, Inc.
American Sugar Refining Co.

Dr. Pusey, we doubt if you realize that your University through Dr. Stare and his 'so-called' "Nutrition Department" has been used as a base of operations for the destruction of our two most cherished possessions, namely:

(a) Our basic Freedoms of Speech and Press, and
(b) Our National Health.

As proof of (a) we refer you to a speech by Arthur I. Connell, then the American Legion National Commander, January 28, 1954 before the Veterans Affairs Committee of the U. S. House of Representatives in which he deplored the existance of a 'code of cooperation' which provides that newspapers, radio and television stations shall clear 'all matters of health or medical news' through established medical channels before proceeding to publication or broadcast?

The Code reads: "A list of current spokesmen of the State Medical Society shall be supplied to representatives of the press and radio (also television stations) and shall be kept up to date."

Commander Connell said, "This code is in reality a contract which has had the practical effect of suppressing presentations to the public of many facts in the controversy over medical care for America's 21 million ex-service men and women." (OBVIOUSLY THIS 'GAG RULE' APPLIES EQUALLY TO OUR ENTIRE POPULATION.)

Thus we have the Food Processors and Refiners, the Chemical and Drug Industry, and 'Old Guard Fishbein-Type Leadership' of the American Medical Association and the Controlled Press, Radio, and T. V., with the Food and Drug Administration acting as their tool and 'gestapo', all joined in one giant conspiracy to 'brain wash' our people and keep them in ignorance by destroying their Constitutional Freedoms. And, it's all done for a profit motive and at the expense of our National Health.

Dr. Pusey, it wouldn't require much thinking on the part of the average layman, if he knew who was supporting your Nutrition Department, to see why the members of this 'unholy alliance' would logically work together. One group, the Food Processors, destroy our foods, thus causing malnutrition and disease. The Chemical and Drug Interests and the members of the American Medical Association all stand to profit most when disease is greatest. The Press is controlled through voluminous advertising and by the A. M. A. 'GAG RULE'. All have the blessings of the Food and Drug Administration which has played along with BIG BUSINESS in complete disregard of the public health, ever since they kicked out Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the originator of the Pure Food and Drug Act.

By the destruction of our FREEDOM OF SPEECH and PRESS the public can get only one side of the HEALTH, DISEASE and 'COUNTEREEIT' FOOD PICTURE. Dr. Stare, as the 'mouth-piece' for the combine, is keeping our people satisfied with and in ignorance of the effects of these DEFICIENT and POISONED FOODS. This process of National Health destruction will go on, Dr. Pusey, as long as YOU permit Dr. Stare's Department to be financially supported by the very groups most interested in keeping our people in ignorance as to the rising tide of chronic degenerative diseases, and their underlying CAUSE.

Dr. Pusey, your public utterances have sincerely pointed out this danger. But are you fully cognizant of the fact that this situation can completely destroy this nation and is a far greater menace than hydrogen bombs, guided missiles, or Communism?

"West Germany is the most advanced nation in the world where the public and individual health is concerned.

"Briefly—

(1) It has banned white bread, with all of the vitamins processed out of it and a deadly poison mixed in the dough to make the loaf whiter and "prettier";

(2) It has banned forced innoculations of humans with diseased animal pus, which American states force on innocent victims under the superstition that it will "prevent" this thing and that thing---theories always disproven where mass innoculations have been perpetrated.

(3) Its great University at Heidelberg includes up-to-date courses in chiropractic and naturopathy along with its medical course."

Monday, July 8, 1957 - Congressional Record - Appendix (Obtainable in most public libraries) - Hon. Usher L. Burdick of North Dakota in the House of Representatives brought up the hearings of James J. Delaney, of New York, to determine the poisonous or deleterious effects of the use of chemical additives in the Nation's food. This committee reported in 1952 that 276 of the 704 chemical food additives then being used had not been satisfactorily tested. This committee recommended that the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act of 1938 needed strengthening to require all food processors to prove by scientific pretesting, beyond a reasonable doubt, that any chemical food additive was safe for use.

"Why were these recommendations never put into effect? Who is blocking them, and why? Why should the captive American consumer be treated like an aggregation of guinea pigs?"

"When the American housewife wheels her cart around the supermarket, she is wholly unaware that the safety of the Nation's food supply today is being seriously questioned by leading doctors, due to the tremendous increase in the use of chemical food additives over the past 10 years."

"I have served in Congress several years with the Representative from New York; the Honorable James J. Delaney, and as an earnest and conscientious, faithful worker for the people he has no superior. After years of setbacks his message on poisoned foods is finally reaching the people. I am aiding him all I can, and am sorry I cannot do more, for the eating of poisoned foods is doing more to destroy the United States than any power on earth. We can stand economic pressure, we can repel military forces, but the battle against poisoned foods is right here among ourselves. Either it is the idea of profits to food processors or it is a calculated plan to weaken the people of the United States through drug additives to food.

"Is this whole field of poisoned foods a Communist plan to defeat the United States? The people of this country must remain on guard. As Washington said in the days of the revolution, 'Let none but Americans be on guard tonight.'"

The entire article is two pages in fine print. We believe that this is important enough to reproduce to mail out by the millions -, so that the American public will take action through their representatives in Washington, D. C. Write your United States Senators and Congressmen, requesting favorable action on Hon. Usher L. Burdick's H. R. 212 of Mar. 25, 1957. (Note: Send .25 for 10 copies - $1.25 for 100 copies; $4.00 for 500 copies of this entire bill - actual photograph of A5399 (1957) Congressional Record - Appendix.

THE PEOPLE ARE NOT ALLOWED TO KNOW THE TRUTH

We do NOT agree with the statement in McCall's July 1955 article; "Are You Being Fooled by the Food Quacks" which says "Refined and processed foods are a favorite target of the 'food specialist' who would have us believe these foods are not nutritious. Actually we get as much food value from refined foods which have been enriched as from natural foods, and sometimes more."

We DO agree with the statement made by Dr. William Coda Martin of New York before the recent convention of the American Academy of Nutrition in which he said the "Americans are poorly nourished because the quality of food is depleted by refinement and processing which removes minerals and vitamins. The humblest Indians in South America suffer less from malnutrition than the average middle class family in the United States." (Why are there so many hospitals, so many unfits rejected from the Army, so much Polio, Arthritis and Heart Disease?)

A 'nutritionist' from the American Baking Institute toldone group of teachers that if they had in their school libraries any of Adelle Davis' books, they should lose no time in removing and destroying them! The Special Interest Groups continue to run our country - causing so much ill health. Adelle Davis, B. A., M. S. holds her degrees from the best Universities in the country and proves by actual practice what her methods of diet will do for the human body. We highly recommend her books (used copies as listed below):

Vitality Through Planned Nutrition - cloth, 524 ind. pgs.	$2.50
You Can Stay Well - cloth, 317 ind. pages	2.50
Optium Health - cloth, 247 ind. pages	2.00

(Read the above and you'll be amazed at what will happen to your family in 60 days time - we may have to make mild substitutions if one title has sold out).

Harvey W. Wiley, M. D., former director of the Pure Food Bureau, U.S. Department of Agriculture, said: "I have made no effort to determine the number of diseases which are directly dependent up diet, but I believe I would not be far out of the way if I should say, every disease to which man is heir." Yet to-day (1958) Adolphus Hohensee is in prison for selling whole grain wheat (violation of the Food and Drug Act) and the owner of a very well known organization which sells vitamins on the house-to-house plan and claimed that practically all illness and diseases of mankind are due to improper nutrition was sentenced to a year in prison for violating the 'Food and Drug Act'. Be sure and read the--

A MEDIC SPEAKS - Dr. Malcolm M. Hargraves, blood expert at Mayo Clinic, said that the use of poisonous insecticides, including DDT, helped cause certain serious diseases. He named three: leukemia, Hodgkin's disease, aplastic anemia. Dr. Hargraves said that most other blood experts in the U. S. concurred in his opinion.--Feb. 21, U. S. News & World Report.

SENATE MAY LOOK INTO PURE FOOD & DRUG - Washington--The Senate Anti-Monopoly Committee, headed by Senator Estes Kefauver, is seriously considering launching an investigation of the Pure Food & Drug Administration, NHF has been advised. The annual convention of NHF went on record asking for such an investigation on grounds FDA has helped protect monopoly and has hindered small research organizations, small manufacturers, vitamin manufacturers, etc.--

THE WILEY FOOD AND DRUG BILL---Congressman Williams of Mississippi has introduced HR 10404 designed to force the Food & Drug Hoodlums to observe the Wiley Food & Drug Act of 1906. When the bill was first passed, the Vice President of the US and a powerful Senator were in the food business. They effectively stopped its enforcement.

And its enforcement ever since has been stopped as to large food and drug producers, nowadays those owned or controlled by the House of Rockefeller. CAPSULE NEWS has been the only newspaper to expose this crime against the public, where the food and drug trusts are allowed by the US Food & Drug Admn to adulterate food with preservatives, colorants and prettyfiers that have never been tested for toxicity---and some of which are known cancer producers.

A Prediction: The Food & Drug Hoodlums will spearhead a drive by the Food Trust to prevent the bill ever getting to the floor of the House.

American Capsule News

EMBALMED CELERY---Celery eaters who have been wondering why their supermarket celery tasts "sweetish" and has no "life" any more have good cause to wonder. It seems that in order to make larger sales (by making celery keep longer), the Food Trust has taken to dipping it in an embalming fluid, the trade name of which is formaldehyde.

Good green celery should have a slightly bitter taste because of the organic iron in it, a mineral absolutely necessary for health and strength. Since this emblaming fluid kills the iron content, it makes celery about as useful as an embalmed body.

CAPSULE NEWS has systematically exposed the worst of the 500 chemicals and poisons the Food Trust is putting in the food we buy at the supermarket and the restaurant. This is put in to preserve, prettyfy and other wise make it attractive to the buyer. These poisons are all put in foods in violation of the Food & Drug laws.

But the US Food & Drug Admn always looks the other way when the violators are what Teddy Roosevelt used to call "malefactors of great wealth." The F&DA is quick to jump on the little violator. And if no law violation is committed at all, but a natural vitamin distributor who has grown big enough to hurt the profits of the food and drug trusts, this citizen is framed up by the Food & Drug Bandits (as they are aptly called in informed circles) and a Federal judge is always found to put a peculiar constriction on the rules of evidence and assist the frame-up.

Now comes the Food & Drug bandits with an amazing admission that they are going to wink at further violations of the laws to protect the consuming public. The Scripps-Howard papers quote George Larrick, the chief F&D bandit, as saying there's no limit to the expanding list of chemicals that may find their way into our food supply.

The CAPSULE NEWS exposures were based on a list of 500 such which the National Research Council said were used to adulterate food with the connivance and consent of Larrick and his fellow racketeers. It said that Larrick admitted 150 of these poisons had never been tested to determine their toxic, or even lethal, effect on the human system.

We quote from the Scripps-Howard article, which appeared in no other newspapers:

"Fifty years ago a few chemicals went into certain foods, mostly to preserve them. Today there is no limit to this expanding list of chemicals that may find their way into our food supply, says George P. Larrick, chief of the Food & Drug Administration. For example there are chemicals that ---

(1) Keep foods from changing color when the air hits them;

(2) Makes certain products look more appetizing than they would naturally;

(3) Keeps liquids from separating with all the oil going to the bottom of the bottle;

(4) Prevents foods from foaming over the top of the pan while being cooked."

What the Scripps-Howard people didn't say was that all of these substances kill the vitamins and minerals in the food in addition to putting this poison in the human system to accumulate until a serious or lethal disorder results. The article also could have added that more chemicals than anything else are used as "preservatives"---to make foods look good and/or last longer on the shelves and bins of the supermarket.

And that the most powerful preservative is the embalming fluid (formaldehyde). It was this formaldehyde that the criminal packers of Chicago in 1898 put in the spoiled meat it sold to the stupid Commissary General of the US army. And that this embalmed beef killed more soldiers in 1898 than were felled by Spanish bullets.

Mr. Larrick is quoted as saying "there oughta be a law." There is a law, a good law, but under Government of Big Business, for Big Business and by Big Business, it is honored in the breach more than in the observance.

American Capsule News - Washington, D.C.; March 9/57

WHY ARE WE ALL SICK?

Extract from an address made at the 68th Annual Convention, Texas Bankers Association, Galveston, on May 12, 1952, by Joe D. Nichols, M.D.

"We live in a country where we have more good doctores, more great medical schools and more hospitals, more education, and more great scientists; and more money than any other place on earth. But despite all this, everybody in the country is sick. The first great fundamental reason why all of us are sick, from the standpoint of nutrition, is because the land is worn out. Poor land grows food that is poor in vitamins, poor in minerals, poor in enzymes and proteins of poor quality.

"The end result of chemical farming (fertilizers and poison sprays) is always disease, first in the land itself, then in the plant then in the animal, and finally in us. There is only one way to make land rich, and that is exactly like the good Lord does on the floor of the forest. He puts back into the land three parts of dead plant matter and one part of dead animal matter. That is what leaf mold contains. The end result of the decaying process is amino acids and carbohic acids. How can a plant produce proteins of high quality when it had no amino acids present in the beginning?

"Fertile soil is full of both life and death. Death and decay of organic matter and life in the form of bacteria molds and earthworms.

"The next reason we are all sick is because we no longer eat natural food. . .that still has in it the natural vitamins, enzymes and minerals that nature put there. 80% of the food consumed by the average American has them all taken out. Why is all the good part removed? It is a selfish commercial reason. It is done so that the suger (flour, rice or cereal) will keep . . .stored in 100# cloth sacks for years in dirty warehouses and still be sold for a profit. It is true that the love of money is the root of all evil. It is also the root of most of our disease.

"The kernel or wheat germ and the outside layers of the grain are removed in the milling of white flour. This means that crackers, spaghetti, macaroni, noodle soup, cake mixes, etc., are no good because the essential nutritents have been removed. The germ is also the richest source of natural vitamin E. . .essential to normal reproduction. One of the reasons why we have so much sterility in our young women is no doubt because 80% of the food they eat has had all the life taken from it.

"If a sack of meal is not good enough for a weevil, I doubt if it is good enough for a man. I tell all patients that they should never buy any food that has been enriched or has had a vitamin added. If the food is so sorry to start with, that synthetic chemical vitamins have to be added, then it is not worth the money."

"The introduction of the powerful drug, diethylstilbestrol, into the nation's food supply prompts consideration of the actions of this compound. IT IS KNOWN TO INDUCE CANCER. It has also been found to stimulate weight gain, and for this reason there has developed a practice of administering this drug to poultry and beef cattle.

"It has been estimated that more than 30,000,000 chickens per year, and half the beef cattle in the country, are innocualted with pellets of diethylstilbestrol or given feeds to which this drug has been added.

"Toxicological data shows that administration of estrogens (of which diethylstilbestrol is one of the most potent) has led a wide range of pathological changes in human beings and animals. In mice, rats and guinea pigs, estrogens cause polyps, fibroids and cancers of the uterus, cancers of the cervix and breast."

POTENTIAL CANCER PERIL IN SOME FOOD CHEMICALS

(From Labor, August 25, 1957)

A top government cancer expert warned this past week that some food dyes, even though now certified as harmless, may be proved to cause cancer in man. This testimony highlighted new hearings before a House subcommittee on bills to strengthen Federal regulation over food additives.

Food dyes are now widely used in bakery products, candy, soft drinks, on the skin of fruit and elsewhere. So too are a growing number of other food additives.

Dr. C. W. Heuper of the government's National Cancer Institute noted that "an appreciable number of chemicals has been shown to cause cancer in man" and warned that some of these are very similar to those introduced into our food supply.

For example, he said, a considerable number of dye workers producing a certain dye have come down with cancer of the bladder. "Several certified food dyes contain this dye as part of their chemical molecule," he added.

In addition, said Dr. Hueper, three certified food dyes have been shown to cause a cancer-type disease in rats. Another such dye, fed to dogs, broke down into a new chemical which causes bladder cancer in dogs and man, he declared.

Dr. Hueper noted that these facts don't prove the dyes cause cancer in man. However, he stressed that there's a very large list of chemicals, including some used as food additives, whose safety in relation to cancer just isn't known yet.

"From the evidence we have," he said, "we must assume that some of these agents will eventually be found to cause cancer in man."

Dr. Hueper urged that any chemical that's even a potential cancer-producer should be rigorously excluded from the nation's food supply.

Similar views came from the American Cancer Society, who urged in a letter to the subcommittee that Congress require cancer testing of food additives on animals and impose a complete ban on any additive found to cause cancer in humans or animals.

Bills to accomplish these aims have been introduced by Congressman James J. Delaney (Dem., N. Y.) and Congresswoman Leonor K. Sullivan (Dem., Mo.) The House subcommittee is also considering some weaker bills, backed by the chemical and food industries.

AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION CORRUPTION AGAIN BETRAYS PUBLIC BY "APPROVAL" OF WATER FULORIDATION

By Emanuel M. Josephson, M. D.

The A.M.A. approval of mass poisoning by dumping of fluoride (rat poison) into water supplies, came as no surprise to those acquainted with the venality and corruption of its politics. An advertising quack abortionist, "Doc" George H. Simmons, "reorganized" the Association in 1901, wrote the "Code of Ethics" for it, and dominated it until he died in 1937, as related in my book, YOUR LIFE IS THEIR TOY. He still dominates it in spirit through his heir, Dr. Morris Fishbein, who admired him so greatly that he dedicated his book on Quacks and Fads to his master and mentor, Quack Simmons. Since the Rockefeller-Hearst interests employed Dr. Fishbein to help put over fluoridation in New York at the time of the hearings on the subject before the Board of Estimates, with an article in the New York Mirror, it was inevitable that his henchmen would approve it without regard to the truth or facts. But in view of the ugly record of the A.M.A. and its bosses in betraying public health in the past, the public would do well to beware of their "approval".

Poisonous Radium Drinking Water was approved by the A.M.A. for a considerstion, in 1913, at the same time as it rejected cod liver oil as a "worthless putrid oil". Its Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry urged its use on the medical profession and on the public as a "safe" remedy for a wide array of ailments, including arthritis. In the decade that followed, a multitude of victims were poisoned and killed by radioactive poisoning that destroyed their bones and joints, caused by the A.M.A. "approved" remedy. It was not until millionaire A. M. Byers was murdered by the poisonous Radium Drinking Water "approved" by the A.M.A. and prescribed by his high-priced doctor, that public scandal and outcry forced the ruthless A.M.A. politicians to withdraw their "approval" of the poisoned water and forego the revenue that they derived from advertising it to the victim public and the profession. This strikingly illustrates the danger of poisoning water with A.M.A. approval.

In the 1930's, quack specialist Dr. Morris Fishbein recommended to the profession and the public, through the columns of the Journal of the A.M.A. and through the columns that he wrote for popular consumption in the newspapers, poisonous dinitrophenol as a "safe reducing remedy". After it had poisoned a multitude of victims foolish enough to accept this quackery, blinded numerous by cataract formation, aborted women, and caused some to give birth to monstrosities, I was able to secure publication of proof experimentally secured of the poisonous action of the drug. As a consequence, its sale was barred by law. This is the "authority" on whose say-so, we are asked to poison the water supply of communities with fluoride (rat poison).

The poisonous action of fluorides and the mechanism of its action have long been known. As early as 1937, a distinguised scientist, Hans Borei, published a book entitled INHIBITION OF CELLULAR OXIDATION BY FLUORIDES, which was a report on half a century of research on the poisonous action of fluorides by many scientists. A copy of the book was given to the New York Academy of Medicine Library by the Rockefellers who nevertheless now advocate water fluoridation. The principal use of fluorides up to now has been as rat poison; and for the poisoning of chemical reactions that are vital to life, in researches.

The Pharmacy Act of many States, including New York, define fluoride as POISON, and require that it be handled and labeled as such. For political experiency, the A.M.A. has undertaken to support the medically ignorant American Dental Association, and betray the learned profession of Pharmacy and urge defiance of criminal character, of the Pharmacy Act -- mass poisoning through water supply by fluoridation. LET THE PUBLIC BEWARE OF ACCEPTING THIS VENALLY AND POLITICALLY DICTATED RECOMMENDATION BY THE A.M.A. OF WATER FLUORIDATION, THE CHIEF WEAPON OF THE "COLD WAR" BEING WAGED ON US!

CAN FLOURIDATION OF YOUR WATER SUPPLY CAUSE CANCER?

Water flouridation was forced on the inhabitants of Grand Rapids, Michigan by the U. S. Public Health Service in 1945 and cancer mortalities have increased to fantastic proportions.

It was proved years ago that soidum flouride water in very low concentrations promotes, catalyzes and accelerates cancer. It was proved by the doctors at the College of Physicians and Surgeons with rats, and this is a matter of record (H. R. 2341 hearings page 110).

Dr. Howard Richardson, formerly Cancer Research Administrator at the University of Oregon, showed in a research paper that the flourine salts act as a catalyst in the cancer process and their combination with a carcinogenic agent (such as X-Rays) produces cancer.

Communist infiltration of the U. S. Public Health Service (which is promoting universal water flouridation) is so obvious that it has been mentioned in the Congressional Record by Congressman Clare Hoffman of Michigan (June 1, 1954, pages A-4069-4070).

Senator McCarthy was getting very close to the U. S. Public Health Service subversive dentists when he began inquiring about the dentist Peress, and this is probably why he had to be stopped and immobilized at any cost.

The Communist master plan is to slowly DESTROY OUR MILITARY MANPOWER, concentrating especially on our children, so that we will not be able to raise an army when the necessity arises. It must be done in such a way that a sufficient number of our population will already be doomed by incipient cancer before it becomes obvious that the methods used are harmful.

If your city is now having flourides added to your water supply, or if your city government is considering such a move, you should investigate the situation. Write to your Congressman in Washington to send you copies of the hearings on H. R. 2341. Note especially pages 374-377 and page 110 which indicate the relationship between flouridation and the increase in cancer type diseases.

If you wish to get full details concerning this Communist plot write to this newspaper, FREE MEN SPEAK, 7314 Zimple Street, New Orleans, La., and enclose $1.00. You will receive a complete information kit giving you instructions on how you can fight this menace to public health.

AN EXPERT SPEAKS ON COMMUNISM

The Devastating Job Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation has done on Communism in his new book, "Masters of Deceit," is recommended reading. He has thoroughly demolished the fiction that Communism is just another political philosophy that has to be tolerated and defended as a "right" in a free country.

Nearly 40 years of intensive study have convinced Mr. Hoover that the real and only purpose of Communism in America is to destroy human freedom, and he proves the point to the complete satisfaction of all who read his book with open minds, and with total refutation of all who dispute its truth.

Tolerance of Communism, as Mr. Hoover says, it not a virtue but a folly. It is a philosophy that goes to "the utter depths of depravity, hate and human venom."

Communists do not seek merely to change or remodel or reform the American form of government. Let Mr. Hoover describe their real intention.

"They would tear it to the ground, destroy all opposition, and then create a new government, an American province in the Soviet world empire."

That is what Communism means.

That is what American Communists intend.

That is what Americans who are tolerant about Communism, complacent about it and apologetic for it, lend themselves to. They protest their innocence as to any affiliation with Communism, but they give it the shelter and the nourishment and the encouragement of their defensive attitudes, and are partners in the contemplated destruction of American liberty.

HERBERT C HOLDRIDGE, Brig. Gen. U. S. Army (Ret.) - 1430 "N" Street, N. W. Washington, D. C.

March 25, 1958

TO: THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

SUBJECT: Petition For Criminal Action Against The Agents Of The Private Corporation Of The Federal Reserve Bank and Its Collaborationists.

As one member of the "sovereign people" of the United States, and as a public enforcement officer sworn to defend the Constitution of the United States against all who would destroy it, I present this petition, THIS DEMAND, for criminal action against all officals of the Federal Reserve Bank, and against all collaborationists among our politicians and others who have given aid and comfort to these public enemies.

On January 7, 1958 I presented an indictment against these officials for participating in a gigantic criminal conspiracy to destroy the Constitution by usurping the power of the Congress of the United States over the coinage of money and the regulation of the value thereof, with guilty knowledge and open connivance of officals of the Executive, Legislative and Judicial branches of government. No action has been taken by any of these responsible officials relative to my indictment, this criminal neglect of duty involving them ever more deeply in the web of this gigantic conspiracy.

This issue is urgent and remedial action mandatory. The swindling operations of the Federal Reserve Bank, acting as the instrument of sedition for the international money cartelists, are primarily responsible for the current depression, which has already brought disaster to millions, may cause the destitute to resort to violence with blood flowing in our streets, and threatens to destroy our Republic. In view of this urgency, and as a starting point for bringing economic order out of chaotic depression, I now demand, in the name of the Constitution, that a joint committee of Congress be designated to investigate and publicize the full facts concerning the establishment and subsequent operation of the Federal Reserve Bank, with special reference to the following:

(2) The complicity of Senator Aldrich and other political leaders in promoting the conspiracy through the Congress, and in strengthening its power thereafter.
(3) The names of all officials of the Federal Reserve Board, and of branch banks, since 1913.
(4) The names of all stockholders of the bank since 1913, the resources (if any) contributed by each to the bank, and year by year, the amount of profits paid to each. If the stock was held in the name of a corporation, the names of principal officials of such corporation.
(5) The names, specifically, of any and all public officials included on such list, with amounts of profits, year by year, received by each.
(6) The details of operations of the bank, with special reference to the techniques established to require our taxpayers to pay interest, on our own bonds, to this corporation which performs no public service.
(7) The means used to cause a press, radio and TV black-out on all public discussion on this issue to prevent the truth concerning this grand conspiracy from becoming known to our citizens.
(8) The methods used by the owners of the banks to capitalize on mass murder of international wars, on mass destitution during the current and earlier depressions, and to confiscate the resources of the individual and the nation.
(9) Proposals for vigorous action to bring the guilty before Federal Courts for trial and punishment.

Failure of the Congress to act on the above petition will necessitate vigorous action by other means. I do not propose to be thwarted in my determination to fulfill my oath to defend the Constitution of the United States, particularly by lawless public servants who have taken a like oath. Crimes have been committed. Any member of Congress who fails to act to expose the crimes and to punish the guilty becomes, himself, guilty of compounding a felony and must be punished. I am asking my friends to countersign this petition, on separate communications.

THE GREATEST STEAL IN AMERICAN HISTORY

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SHOEMAKER: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record at this point, and to include therein a little statement by the President of the United States of about 100-words.

The SPEAKER: Is there any objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no answer.

Mr. SHOEMAKER: Mr. Speaker, during the past few weeks I have been cooperating with Mr. E. W. Mason, intermediary officer, Progressive Party, Congressional Block, Washington, D. C., developing the facts in the greatest steal ever permitted by a legislative body in American History. If refer to the passage of the law which extended the rights of the Federal Reserve banks to borrow money on United States Securities. The great unanswerable question is, Why do we keep on in this camouglage and financial policy of issuing tax-exempt interest-bearing securities when we know the law permits the collossal steal I wish to call attention to here?

The Federal Reserve Banks now have about three billions of United States funds, drawing interest from 2 7/8 to 4 per cent.

This old law provides that upon the tender of the Federal Reserve Bank, a private corporation; to the Federal Reserve agent, a United States Government Official, of certain collateral and the cost of printing the bills - which is now 0.007 cent each - the Government shall coin and pay the Federal Reserve bank currency equal to the collateral tendered.

All the benefits, such as interest and premiums, go to the bank and not to the government. The collateral is stored in the safety deposit vault of the bank itself.

This bill specified that United States securities - bonds - may be used for a limited number of years.

It has been found that seven-tenths of a cent per bill the cost of an average $1,000 purchase is anywhere from 26 cents to 40 cents, according to the denomination ordered. A $5 bill and a $10 bill cost exactly the same, viz: $0.007. In the calculation I am making here I shall figure on the basis of 30 cents per thousand dollars being the cost of the bills.

President Roosevelt wishes to float nine billions in bonds.

Here is the possible workout:

FIRST OPERATION

Federal Reserve Bank tenders the United States Government $1,000,000,000 of present-owned bonds and $300,000 in currency and asks for a billion of new currency.

The Government deposits the bonds in the box at the bank. These bonds still pay interest to the bank. The $300,000 which pays for the cost of the printing goes to the United States Treasury in Washington. The Treasury delivers to the bank $1,000,000,000 in new currency.

The bank takes the billion and returns it to the government for a billion of new bonds drawing 2 7/8 per cent interest - Secretary Morganthau's "bargain rate" announced in the papers.

The Government delivers the bonds to the bank. The bank now has a new billion. This new billion takes the place of the billion put up as collateral in the course of this first operation. Thus the bank has spent only $300,000 (the cost of printing the bills) and their interest on the new billion of bonds during the first year is $28,750,000 at a net advantage to the bank of $28,450,000 the first year, and $28,750,000 each succeeding year until the bonds are paid. When one remembers that Civil War Bonds are still outstanding - perhaps forming part of the billion of bonds tendered by the bank in this operation - one gathers an idea of the immensity of the steal.

SECOND OPERATION

The bank tenders the new billion of bonds to the Government and $300,000 is currency for a billion in new money. The Government deposits the bonds still drawing interest in the bank, in the banks own vault and sends the $300,000 to the Treasury to cover the cost of printing.

The Government delivers to the bank one billion in new currency.

The bank returns the billion to the Government for a billion of bonds. The Government delivers the bonds and the bank now have two billions of bonds, with an annual interest of $57,500,000 for an outlay of $600,000.

THIRD OPERATION

The bank tenders $300,000 and the billion of bonds from Operation Two to the Government for a billion of new currency.

The Government delivers the money.

The bank returns the money for a billion of bonds.

The Government delivers the bonds and the banks now has three billions of bonds at interest; at an investment of $900,000 and an annual interest income of $86,250,000. You will notice that the interest is greater than the new investment by nearly ten times.

FOURTH OPERATION

Just the same as the preceeding. The investment is increased to $1,200,000 and the annual interest is $115,000,000.

FIFTH OPERATION

Same as preceeding. The investment is now $1,500,000 and the annual interest has slipped up to $143,750,000.

SIXTH OPERATION

Investment.....	$ 1,800,000
Annual Interest.....	172,500,000

SEVENTH OPERATION

Investment	$ 2,100,000
Annual Interest	201,250,000

EIGHTH OPERATION

Investment	$ 2,400,000
Annual Interest	230,000,000

NINTH OPERATION

Investment	$ 2,700,000
Annual Interest	258,750,000

The 9th billion dollars in bonds is now free and clear and substitutes the original billion that was used as collateral in building the first billion dollars of currency. The real cost of the interest privilege of $9,000,000,000 is but $2,700,000.

To recapitulate:

Total Investment	$ 2,700,000.00
Daily Interest	708,904.11
Yearly Interest	258,750,000.00
Daily Interest on $1	.26255
Yearly Interest on $1	95.83

Usual yearly rate of interest 6 per cent; annual rate of interest on this investment of $2,700,000 - $95.83.

It will be seen that the banker makes a "loan" from the Government on his collateral (bonds), for an indefinite period, at .003 per cent. When the farmer wishes to make a loan on his collateral (farm) he pays every year 0.045 per cent. The laboring man pays every year 0.06 per cent. In other words, the farmer pays 150 times as much in one year as the banker pays during the life of the currency, and the laborer pays 200 times as much in one year as the banker pays during the life of the currency.

The Frazier-Lemke Bill would make the farmer pay only 50 times as much as the banker, or 0.015 per cent.

You will notice that every dollar invested by the banker draws a yearly interest of $95.83 - or a daily interest of $ .26255.

You will also notice that the extra tax burden the President is putting on the people is about $1,000,000 for every working day of the year for the interest on the $9,000,000,000 of bonds.

Further, the only difference between giving these $9,000,000,000 of printing press money directed to the people instead of selling it to the bankers and buying it back again is that the bankers are paid by the Government $258,750,000 a year by the latter method. It is still printing press money. I want to call your attention here to the difference between 'sound' and 'unsound' money. 'Sound' money pays interest to the bankers. 'Unsound' money pays them no interest.

A further point: We have seen the President's plans referred to as of socialistic origin and tendency... In the question of bonds - which are bondage - Norman Thomas, Socialistic Party candidate for the presidency even called on the President and urged him to issue twelve billions of relief bonds instead of five billions then proposed. Senators Cutting and La Follette worked for days to get Roosevelt to issue more 'relief' bonds - more bondage - but the President bravely (?) held down to only nine billions for the robbers, making a small daily dole for the impoverished bankers of $708,904.11.

Other profits, probably greater than the interest on the bonds tabulated above are possible by the ability of the bankers to loan that credit money at high interest rates. Ten to fifteen billions or more could easily be juggled in a credit structure. Then, there is the possibility of the bankers never having to repay the deposit itself; as, due to the clearing-house custom, it is clearing-house 'balances' that have to be taken care of; in the long run, the deposits above equalling the withdrawals. The possibilities and figures in connection with this latter point are dazzling but are based on speculation only and I do not attempt here to give you even an estimate of them.

As a sample of this, note that any bill destroyed in circulation goes to the credit of the bankers.

The history of the Civil War, Cleveland Panic, and Panama Canal Bonds - now due to the refunding, known as 'consols' - is that they have already cost the Government in interest more than their face value. Presuming that history will repeat itself with the present proposed bonds, it will eventually represent a profit to the bankers of over ten billions on an actual investment of $2,700,000. But if we suppose these bonds are issued only once - that is, not refunded but paid in full in ten years - we have the following figures:

Interest (10-years)	$287,500,000
Only actual cost	2,700,000
PROFIT	284,800,000

This means a possible profit in ten years of $1,064.07 on every dollar invested. That would be $10.64 on every single penny invested.

My brain reels as I write these figures, but they are true, though they seem absurd they are so startling. This law was an administrative measure. The president personally called up Representative Patman and other members of Congress, who were working consciously against the measure, and asked them to stop, promising them that he would later "Hit the money-changers between the eyes." The President gives them from $2,873,300 to about $18,000,000,000 - and then says he proposes to 'hit them hard'! By calling them names?

The President whole-heartedly goes back of the Federal Reserve Bank in these words, which appear in the Federal Reserve bulletin of February - a publication of a private corporation printed by the public printers - viz.

It gives me pleasure at this time to express my appreciation of the splendid services that the Federal Reserve System has rendered in connection with our efforts to bring about recovery. It has been an institution of incalculable value throughout the twenty years of its existence; soon after its organization it was an important factor in enabling this country to aid in winning the war; and more recently it has given firm support to the governments efforts in fighting the depression. It has stood loyally by the interest of the people by supplying them with a sound currency, by placing at the disposal of member banks a large volume of reserves available to finance recovery, by exerting a powerful influence toward the rehabilitation of the commercial banking structure, and by cooperation in every way with the government's financial program. (Franklin Delano Roosevelt).

Press dispatches indicate that the Treasury Department has effected a deal with the Morgan firm to float the bonds. Secretary Morganthau announces a 'bargain interest rate on the bonds of 2 7/8 per cent'. The Washington Herald blazed in their issue of January 27th, in big head-lines, that the Morgan Company, are cooperating whole-heartedly with the administration in stabilizing our monetary system at $0.60 in international exchange. No stronger evidence could be had that the administration, or at least that part of it, are determined that the monetary policies of the Government are a part and parcel of the manipulation. It is not an experiment and I wonder if when the President was penning the words, quoted above, in praise of twenty years of this gigantic lobby, if he thoroughly understood how big good intentions and popular standing among the masses of the nation was being used to further this diabolical scheme by men who are misleading him.

The forgotten International Bankers have been taken care of to the tune of at least $287,500,000 in interest and possibly an ultimate final profit of $18,000,000,000 while they are being called 'money changers' in a deprecating sense.

The big question now is, "Shall we give a thousand dollars to the banks for thirty cents and charge the farmers forty-five dollars for a like amount, and forty four dollars and seventy cents more than the bankers have to pay?" Incidentally, the workers, who are not farmers, can obtain the same thousand for sixty dollars or fifty-nine dollars and seventy cents more than a banker.

On February 28th, 1934; this bill known as "Senate 2766" was reported from the Committee, was unanimously agreed to by the full Banking and Currency Committee of the Senate and reported on the floor to be unanimously passed without protest by the Senate. In the House, I am proud to say, that among the thirty-eight members who voted against this measure, when it was passed on March 3rd, that we find the five Farmer-Labor Members, including myself, who were aware of the dangers lurking in a bill of this kind, and could not bring ourselves to sell out the people of the United States in this subtle way.

HIGHER MATHEMATICS--College professors who invent new and more complex ways to handle the ten numerals have been left a trillion miles in the shade by Washington lamebrains and spenders of other people's money.

That $28½ billion a year, handed out to those 1,000,000 odd payroll bums who man those 731 illegal corporations (within the govt) is chicken feed compared to what has been handed out to foreign governments (and their politicians) in the last 12 years.

This total, plus the $17 billion "loaned" to our enemies and "friends" of World War I to make both war and peace with, has reached the astronomical figure of $515,446,000,000. It is safe to say that over half of this money has been shoveled into the foreign rat holes without authorization by the Congress, a serious criminal offense.

This adds up to the sum of $3,032 that has been slugged out of every man, woman, and child in the United States.

Something Congress should investigate and take positive action on is how $341,741,000,000 of this $515-odd billion has been shoveled into NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) and the last nine years. This is supposed to be "buying security" but no one has yet placed his finger on any security it has bought for or brought to the United States.

When the Russians announced they had sent up a man-made Moon, there was panic in Defense and State Departments and the White House. The first reaction was, "whatever nation first reaches the Moon will dominate the Earth." They figured the $341,741,000,000, slugged out of American tax-payers and sento to NATO, was so much money wasted.

Prof. Medford Evans, writing in the Magazine AMERICAN OPINION, says Americans regard this NATO money as "a means of defense" but Europeans think of it as a source of income.

The Bureau of Accounts in the Treasury Dept, which is supposed to keep a record of all moneys paid out by the US Treasury, told us they couldn't tell how much had been sent to foreign lands. They passed the buck to the State Dept and before we got thru we had been shunted around to 24 different bureaus. We ended up right where we started.

Then we quit and later took another hitch in our pants. We inquired from the Treasury Department huckster (press agent). He courteously and helpfully sent us a 44-page mimeo. When we got thru this welter of confusion we adduced that all this country had ever sent to Europe in the past 12 years was $59,998,000,000.

We knew this was false so we began to dig into other Bureaus, and into figures the late Congressman Lawrence Smith (Wisc) procured thru the Library of Congress and put into the Congressional Record Jan 14th last.

The result is in the following box:

BOX SCORE OF THE SHELLACKING AMERICAN TAXPAYERS HAVE BEEN GETTING THRU THREE ADMINISTRATIONS---

Roosevelt, Truman and Eisenhower
Net Foreign "Grants and Credits", 1945 to 1957	$ 59,998,000,000
World War I "Loans", still unpaid	17,886,000,000
Lend-Lease operations, US taxpayers holding the bag	3,122,000,000
Export-Import Bank "Operations"	2,603,000,000
Mutual "Security" Act give-aways	38,726,000,000
European Recovery Plan payments (Marshall Plan)	48,700,000,000
NATO Payments, mostly unauthorized by Congress	341,741,000,000
Slugged out of the American Taxpayers	$515,446,000,000

The most amazing thing was this $341,741,000,000 sum which NATO has gotten in the last nine years. A staff member of House Appropriations lamely tried to "explain" it by saying that NATO appropriations are hidden in our defense budget.

This breaks down and blows up when we find the defense budget usually totals around $35 billion a year, and that some $20 billion of this has to go to man the 42 Army posts ringed around the Mid-East oil fields to protect that 100 billion barrels of Rockefeller oil in Saudi-Arabia.

Last year's NATO handout alone totalled $46,149,000,000 which was 77% of the total "contributed." The European nations, which presumably got this "income" gave only $13,437,000,000. How can one take $46,149,000,000 for NATO and $20 billion for Standard Oil out of $35 billion and leave anything for defense has our mathematicians stumped and gasping for breath.

The Dept of Justice is a part of the Administration that committed this crime against the American taxpayers. It cannot be expected to observe the oaths taken by high officials and prosecute those responsible for this grand theft. We fear it may reach higher than the Attorney General.

The Congress is the only body authorized under the Constitution and statutes to authorize expenditure of taxpayers' money. Congress itself abuses this authority too much, but in this instance, some one in Washington-located on Pennsylvania avenue between 15th Street and West Executive Avenue-is guilty of the greatest grand theft ever conceived in the mind of man.

Since the Dept. of Justice has no intention of prosecuting those responsible, the Congress is America's only recourse. If too many members of this legislative body are brainwashed, or don't have the courage to take up for their country, then the sky will be the limit.

Until the aim of the Rockefeller-Soviet Axis---to bankrupt this country into the arms of World Communism---is achieved the taxpayers can expect to be robbed more and more. We urge every reader of Capsule News to copy these figures and write their Congressmen and Senators.

Ask the point blank question. What are they going to do about it?

If Congress does investigate, it shouldn't stop with those Washington lamebrains and scoundrels who put their fingers in the national till.

It should take its investigation up to New York City, and into Rockefeller Center, where they will find the orders for this grand theft had been issued.

The House of Rockefeller doesn't operate its Council on Foreign Relations for nothing.

A NEEDED BILL

"THE LOWER HOUSE of Congress has given its approval to a measure designed to prevent the unwarranted and unnecessary suppression of information by officials of the Federal Government, and the Senate would be well advised to give the bill final passage.

The facts are that a 168 year old statute has been increasingly misused in recent years to cover up bureaucratic mistakes, that officials with a passion for making public business their own personal affair have wielded a dangerous power, and that the American people have been deprived of their basic right to full information about their own government.

There is nothing in the proposed legislation to weaken security safeguards.

There is adequate provision in the measure for keeping unauthorized persons out of government files and records where indiscriminate invasion might do irreparable injury.

But it would put an end to the stupid business of incompetent and even corrupt officials assuming the power to say what the people shall be told and what they shall not be told.

The power to suppress information makes the bureaucrat the master of the people, and the people the servants of the office-holders.

Bad government flourishes in an atmosphere of suppression and concealment. The public interest is best served when the Nation knows the whole story and not just the half-truths about the conduct of national affairs."

WAKE UP, AMERICANS

By Otto Garr Tague

In yesterday's column I quoted two sentences which I believe express the most alarming unAmerican principle and purpose I ever have seen put into words . . . Study them . . . Burn them into your memory . . . I repeat them:

"They said that during and after World War II, the majority of its officers had worked with the office of Strategic Services, the State Department and the European Economics Administration under directives which called for an alteration of the social structure of the United States so as to make co-existence with the Soviet Union possible." When it was suggested that the public be made aware of these objectives, ". . . their answer was a horrified 'No! Such a move would be unthinkable!!"

That is the statement of Norman Dodd, a very reputable economist, who was research director of the Reece Committee which was investigating tax-free foundations . . . He was referring to what was said by the officers of one of the largest of these foundations.

Apparently, somebody higher up had issued a directive to modify the social structure of our country in order to accommodate it to co-existence with the Soviets . . . Without letting our people know what they were up to . . . And presumably, as officers of the tax-free foundation they felt impelled to continue that policy with the millions of funds at their disposal . . . Millions made possible by the social structure they were to sabotage!

Now, go back to Yalta . . . Follow through with Potsdam . . . Then the surrender in Korea . . . The treatment of MacArthur . . . The compromise since made with the Soviets in the International Labor Organization and elsewhere . . . The failure to support the Hungarian people in their rebellion . . . The billion given to Tito, Poland and other Communist regimes . . . The treatment accorded McCarthy and the Reece Committee . . . The Supreme Court decisions freeing Communists and crippling the Federal Bureau of Investigation!

. . . And you come up with the darndest mess of coincidents you ever tried to unravel . . . Or are they co-incidents? --

THE POWER OF LETTER WRITING

RECOGNIZED BY PRESS

The people of the Republic possess the greatest power of influence of any people anywhere, namely: the privilege of writing letters expressing their opinions to their elected representatives, and to the editors of newspapers.

We have always maintained that both representatives in Government and editors of newspapers highly regard the letter writer who has the courage to express his opinion of approval or opposition. The "Letters To The Editor" department is the most intimate contact newspapers have with their readers.

The following item in Roy Erwin's Column, Editor and Publisher, November 5, 1956, page four confirms this belief:

"Letters to Ed Are NEWS

A reader earnestly inquired of the Washington Daily News why it published leters-to-the-editor inasmuch as the public forum column "doesn't necessarily represent a cross-section of public opinion and some writers are bigoted and narrow-minded." He wanted to know how letters are selected for publication.

The editor's note explained:

"Maybe it isn't as obvious as we thought, but letters to the editor are news. All kinds and conditions of -- men and women -- write them, and at least at the moment of writing feel strongly enough to take pen in hand, although we prefer them typewritten. The writer, not to coin a couple of phrases, are the salt of the earth and the letters are the spice of life. They don't always represent a cross-section, but they supply clues to what is going on in the minds of every strata of the community, and in people's emotions, too. We select them precisely on that basis -- as news."

Mr. Erwin gave a more detailed evidence of the power of letter writing in a full page feature story under title:

Dear Editor,

Letters To Editor's

Record Public Pulse

on pages 38-40 of the February 22, 1958 issue of Editor and Publisher.

Human Events, Vol XIII, No. 40 -- Oct. 6, 1956, paid great tribute to the power of letter writing to legislators

The late Frank Gannett, Founder of the Gannett Newspaper Chain, recognized the power of letter writing and paid them tribute.

Editor and Publisher, Page 2, Dec. 8, 1956, carried the story "The Pungent Pen". - Letter Writers Dined By Gannett, Editors."

And even as the newspaper Editors welcome sincere, honest letters expressing the conviction of the writer so do representatives in Government welcome such, and be assured both weigh the contents of letters -- on civic and national matters.

COMMUNISM

"In June, 1957, Nikita Khrushchev, Soviet Communist Party boss, was interviewed before a nation-wide American television audience. With calm assurance, he stated:

". . . I can prophesy that your grandchildren in America will live under Socialism. And please do not be afraid of that. Your grandchildren will . . . not understand how their grandparents did not understand the progressive nature of a Socialist society."

William Z. Foster, long time National Chairman of the Communist Party of the United States, also reflected the hope that this Nation will one day become Communist when he stated in 1949, in dedicating his book, "The Twilight of World Capitalism":

"To My Great-Grandson Joseph Manley Kolko Who Will Live in a Communist United States."

These words of Russia's top party boss and one of the highest ranking Communists in the United States reveal the nature of the enemy we face. To make the United States a Communist Nation is the ambition of every party member, regardless of position or rank.

He works constantly to make this dream a reality, to steal your rights, liberties and property."

INTERNATIONAL COMMUNISM

(The Communist Mind)

United States House of Representatives, Committee on Un-Amer. Activities

Mr. Arens. Could I interpose this question to perhaps clarify our record: Khrushchev, as we all know, had charge of the liquidation of the Kulak class. About 10 million of his countrymen were liquidated, what we would call murder. A crime of such enormous scope that the average human mind could not begin to comprehend it. In your appraisal of the Communist philosophy and motivation in life, could Khrushchev, as a dedicated Communist, have a twinge of conscience about those murders?

Dr. Schwarz. None whatsoever.

Mr. Arens. Why, Doctor?

Dr. Schwarz. Because these murders were in the interest of the advance of Communist power and world conquest and in the direction of history's will; therefore, they were moral and righteous acts. Any twinge of conscience would be a remnant of Khrushchev's burgeois upbringing and a failure of his Communist personality.

Mr. Arens. They overlooked the Christian philosophy.

Dr. Schwarz. They wiped it out entirely.

Mr. Arens. The philosophy that the end never justifies the means.

Dr. Schwarz. The end creates the means. Any act, however brutal, and no matter how many people are killed, that advances the Communist conquest, is a peaceful act.

Mr. Arens. Certain people in high places in government have professed that the Communist regime in Soviet Russia wants peace.

Dr. Schwarz. They do want it.

Mr. Arens. What kind of peace do they want?

Dr. Schwarz. You have to understand that their basic concept is that class war is a fact of being and that peace is the historical synthesis when communism defeats the remainder of the world and establishes world Communist dictatorship, which is peace. If you ask a true Communist to take a lie detector test and ask him if he wants peace, he would pass it with ease. He would look at you with a light in his eye and say he longs for peace.

Mr. Weil. Communist peace, not peace as we understand it.

Dr. Schwarz. Every act that contributes to the Communist conquest is a peaceful act. If they take a gun, they take a peaceful gun, containing a peaceful bullet, and kill you peacefully and put you in a peaceful grave. When the Chinese Communists murder millions, it is an act of peace. When the Russian tanks rolled into Budapest to butcher and destroy, it was glorious peace. Peace is wonderful and within their framework of ideology whatever helps their conquest is peaceful, good, and true.

Dr. Schwarz. The tragedy of communism is not simply that it murders, but it transforms murder into a moral and righteous act. When a person does evil and he is conscious he is doing evil, you have a basis of approach; but when evil becomes good, you have no starting point, you have nothing about which to argue. The great evil rests in the philosophic, basic concepts of communism when it rejects God, when it materializes and bestializes man, and when it denies the inherent dignity and value of human personality and individuality. Upon that ruthless, amoral, materialistic basis it builds an edifice which destroys evermore every civilized, moral, ethical, and spiritual value.

Dr. Schwarz. Exactly. This is the paradox. Here are our very precious, cherished liberties that did not come about by accident, that are the envy and admiration of the rest of the world; here is a group of people. The Communists, openly dedicated to their total destruction and yet these Communists are able to take advantage of these very liberties and to hide behind these liberties for their purposes of destruction and to recruit as their "runners of interference" well meaning American citizens. This is the paradox that confronts us. The problem is, and I know this is a problem that confronts your committee all the time, how can we rout them out, expose and disarm them without doing damage to the constitutional system and liberty under law which are so cherished in America? I believe it can be done, it must be done; and it is being done.

When we want people of the world to resist the Communist idea and to embrace the idea of freedom, we think that if we give them material benefits this will automatically come to pass, and so the idea is to give economic aid and military assistance in the expectation that communism will lose its appeal and freedom will triumph.

The foundation is wrong. Materialistic measures do not control the minds and the hearts of the people. This must be done in a more direct fashion. We need a scientific approach that will utilize the moral, cultural, and spiritual values in each of these countries. We need a loving, friendly, co-operative spirit and a direct approach to their minds and hearts to mobilize them against communism.

Mr. Weil. What must be done if we are to survive?

Dr. Schwarz. We must face honestly the gravity of the situation. We must give it priority in our thinking and in our actions. We must build a strong base of freedom-loving people articulate in their faith; in their love of country, in their love of God, in their love of home, and in their love of law, and we must rally the spiritual forces in the heart of man and recruit dedicated personnel to raise barriers against communism in every area of the world.

The fundamental foundation of opposition to communism is an informed public opinion and a dedicated public character. On these alone the necessary legislative, administrative, judicial, military, and economic and educational programs may be built.

We have to set to work urgently building the foundation for Communist defeat. Most of our present programs, such as the military program and economic program, are temporary measures which may hold back the flood for a short period and give us a little more time to find a permanent solution.

CAN FLOURIDATION OF YOUR WATER SUPPLY CAUSE CANCER?

Water flouridation was forced on the inhabitants of Grand Rapids, Michigan by the U. S. Public Health Service in 1945 and cancer mortalities have increased to fantastic proportions.

It was proved years ago that sodium flouride water in very low concentrations promotes, catalyzes and accelerates cancer. It was proved by the doctors at the College of Physicians and Surgeons with rats, and this is a matter of record (H. R. 2341 hearings page 110.)

Dr. Howard Richardson, formerly Cancer Research Administrator at the University of Oregon, showed in a research paper that the flourine salts act as a catalyst in the cancer process and their combination with a carcinogenic agent (such as X-Rays) produces cancer.

Communist infiltration of the U. S. Public Health Service (which is promoting universal water flouridation) is so obvious that it has been mentioned in the Congressional Record by Congressman Clare Hoffman of Michigan (June 1, 1954, pages A-4069-4070). Senator McCarthy was getting very close to the U. S. Public Health Service subversive dentists when he began inquiring about the dentist Peress, and this is probably why he had to be stopped and immobilized at any cost.

The Communist master plan is to slowly DESTROY OUR MILITARY MANPOWER, concentrating especially on our children, so that we will not be able to raise an army when the necessity arises. It must be done in such a way that a sufficient number of our population will already be doomed by incipient cancer before it becomes obvious that the methods used are harmful.

If your city is now having flourides added to your water supply, or if your city government is considering such a move, you should investigate the situation. Write to your Congressman in Washington to send you copies of the hearings on H. R. 2341; note especially pages 374-377 and page 110 which indicate the relationship between flouridation and the increase in cancer type diseases.

If you wish to get full details concerning this Communist plot write to this newspaper, FREE MEN SPEAK, 7314 Zimple Street, New Orleans, La., and enclose $1.00. You will receive a complete information kit giving you instructions on how you can fight this menace to public health.

The Roosevelt version appeared seven years before it also was plagarized by another member of the Order of Illuminati, Moses Mordecai Marx Levy, alias Heinrich Karl Marx, in Germany. It embodies a blueprint of the New Deal, its NRA and other devices, that became the tradition of the Roosevelt Dynasty. It is the pattern of an American dictatorship which they seek to impose. Their progress in imposing this dictatorship was slow until the present century. "Bring Ushiba, Saionji, or Yokota in order that we may have someone from the very inside of Japan . . .

"Bring von Trott from Berlin . . . and hold him here until a week before America enters the war."

Major General Charles A. Willoughby, Allied Intelligence Chief at Tokyo, testified that Rockefeller's IPR employed and sent to Japan, where they joined the Richard Sorge spy ring, a group of agents, including Agnes Smedley and Guenther Stein; and that Saionji was one of the key Japanese agents in Sorge's spy ring that turned the Japs from a projected attack on Russia to attack Pearl Harbor. This makes it quite clear that:

". . . Rockefeller's Institute of Pacific Relations controlled the spy ring that instigated the attack on Pearl Harbor, and that they knew in advance, to the very day, when it would occur and involve us in the war."

COSMIC LAW OF HEALTH

(1946)

We live in a world of FRAUD. To hide that fact, the masses are kept in darkness, and "Better Schools Build Better Communities", is one of the tricks used for that purpose.

One of the worst and most dangerous frauds is medical art, and so declared by leading doctors from Hippocrates to Alexis Carrel.

Prof. Alonzo Clark, of the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, said: "Physicians have hurried thousands to the grave who would have recovered if left to Nature". (How Nature Cures, Dr. Emmet Densmore, p. 250).

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, professor of Anatomy at Harvard University, in his "Border Lines of Knowledge", wrote:

"The Disgrace of medicine is that colossal system of self-deception, in obedience to which mines have been emptied of their cankering minerals, the vegetable kingdom robbed of its virulent toxins, the entrails of animals taken for their impurities, the poison bags of reptiles drained of their venom, and all the inconceivable absurdities thus obtained thrust down the throats, or injected into the veins, of suffering human beings."

The celebrated French physician Majendie, lecturing to his medical class, said: "Gentlemen: Medicine is a great humbug. Doctors are merely empirics when not charlatans. We (doctors) are as ignorant (of the body and its functions) as a man can be. Who knows anything about medicine? . . . I know nothing about medicine, and I don't know any one who does." (Densmore, p. 208).

A DANGEROUS MAN

When a certain doctor was only a boy and saw sick children die under the doctor's care, it frightened him. So, he began an investigation that he pursued all his life; and his findings are shocking discoveries.

Years ago he began writing to give the world the essence of his findings. Then he found that the Four Freedoms, so loudly proclaimed by the late President Roosevelt, are only for a privileged class.

Few thinkers are born in each generation; and when they grow conspicuous by getting too far ahead of the masses, they are assassinated or persecuted out of existence. History contains a partial list of these cases, but many go unrecorded.

The name of this doctor has now been added to that illustrious list. He is a member of the preferred class, having received the highest honor that can be bestowed upon an author of Health Literature.

This man may be the only doctor in the U. S. A. holding an Honorary Degree from the biggest Naturopathic School in Great Britain, conferred by the British Naturopathic College of London in recognition of his remarkable writings in the realm of Health and Hygiene.

He is one of the few doctors in the U. S. A. who has the distinction of being so dangerous with his pen in exposing the incompetent, blundering work of medical doctors, with their poisonous, habit-forming drugs, chemicals, vaccines and serums, that he came to be considered a formidable enemy of medical art, with its dangerous work that fills the land with incurable patients and the cemeteries with the bodies of its trustful victims.

So, the Medical Trust set spies on his trail, and the scheme to silence him burst into the open. The spying continued for five years, at the tax-payers expense, and resulted in being successful by having the U. S. P. O. Dept. bar him from the mail on charges of FRAUD!

The nature of the alleged fraud was the teaching of the sick how to get well without an orthodox physician and his poisons called "medicine".

There is no such thing as medicine. No one knows anything about medicine. No doctor can make a drop of blood; much less can he make anything to help the body when injected into it.

That is the "fraud" this doctor was committing. The charges were based on the three of his publications considered "fraudulent" because they contained so much sound health advice. Two were published in 1924, and the third in 1939.

BIBLICAL SYMBOLS AND PARABLES

This doctor was a graduate in law and of the various schools of drugless care of the sick. His writing included books on how to live for health, and three correspondence courses.

Then he stepped up from the physical to the astral plane, and wrote a series of amazing works based on the Lost Wisdom of the Ancient Masters, in which he interpreted puzzling symbols and parables of the Bible.

He showed that the Book with Seven Seals mentioned in the Bible, is man's body with its Seven Chief Electric Batteries. (Rev. 5).

The Lamb which looked like it had been sacrificed (Rev. 5:6) was the trembling Neophyte, prepared for the ordeals of initiation, in which he would be taught how to ascend to the Plane of Seership by activating those Seven Batteries and awakening the dormant Sixth and Seventh Sense Powers.

The Great Red Dragon, mentioned in the Bible, is a symbol of Carnal Lust in the Blood (Rev. 12).

THE FLAME DIVINE

The greatest shock came when this doctor revealed that the Silver Cord, mentioned but once in the Bible (Eccl. 12:6), is a cosmic beam of Astral Light which penetrates the skull at the Fonticulus Frontalis, then transforms into nerve fibers in the brain, and becomes the Spinal Cord from which nerves extend to all parts and organs of the body, creating The Flame Divine (Man) on the terrestrial plane.

Even modern science declares that "Without a nerve system there is no animal" (Wilder, Hist. of Med. p. 287).

The Ancient Astrologers taught that as Astral Radiation strikes the earth's aura, an Aeriferous Substance is created that surrounds the earth, extending some 6,000 miles into space and containing the Virility of all Life.

This was the Astral World of the Ancient Masters. It later was changed to the "Spiritual World of Christianity" when the Masters were assassinated and their scriptures were stolen and distorted.

According to the Astrologers, the Astral World is the Creative Realm from which springs all living things on earth. The Sun is the Generator, and if the Sun should set and never rise again, the earth would become as barren as a stone and devoid of all Life. Therefore, as Life goes with the Sun, so Life comes with the Sun.

In the case of Man, an Astral Beam, containing the Seed or Ego, dips down from the Creative Realm and forms a physical body, in which dwells the Flame Divine or Celestial Man, who returns in the "born again" process to the Astral World.

This is the Cosmic Cycle of Creation in which all Entities travel.

COSMIC LAW

This doctor based his treatment of the sick on the Cosmic Law of Creation, and that method will not change until the law changes. The hogwash and hokum about "medical progress" is pure propaganda published to deceive the masses.

This doctor tested his method for years in practice, losing not one patient. Most of them were physical wrecks, coming to him only as a last resort after being cast off by other doctors as incurable.

In treating these cases this doctor applied the triadical phases of Creative Processes as follows:

1. Man can live for weeks without eating, but he stops living as soon as he stops breathing. To preserve health, the air must be in motion and free of pollution. Stagnant air in homes, hospitals, bed-rooms, medical offices, etc., is foul like stagnant pools of water. So he put his patients in fresh air, kept in circulation with electric fans.

2. Water is next. The greater part of blood and body consists of water. To promote health all water entering the body must be pure and free of all pollutants (purifiers) used by health boards to breed bad health and provide business for doctors. So, his patients got pure rain water that had not touched the ground.

3. Greatest freedom of function is next, and secured by fasting, taking no food but air and water, the two foremost foods for man.

Under this natural regime the patients recovered as if by magic. Here is more evidence to prove medical art is a fraud.

ONE DISEASE -- ONE TREATMENT

This doctor's work proved that disease is an imaginary entity existing only in the doctor's mind. The world's great doctors have declared that there is no disease! There are Good Health and Bad Health only.

The symptoms of Bad Health doctors are trained to study, group together and give them empty names (diagnosis) which mean nothing, and term them diseases that may kill the patient if not treated and "cured".

As there is no disease, then disease never killed any one. When the remedies kill the patient, the doctors quite logically hide the fact by falsely putting the blame on "disease".

In 1835 Dr. Samuel Dickson, of Eginburgh, published a work in which he asserted that all diseases "are one and the same" (Wilder's Hist. of Med. 1901, p. 357).

That simple truth swept into oblivion as frivolous and absurd the whole complicated and inconsistent classification of diseases, with their multifarious names and stupid distinctions, exposing as false a scheme of plunder and murder supported by centuries of false teaching, by which a profession of supposedly honorable men has created a false psychology of disease that sends thousands to early graves each year while yielding great profits to its exponents.

INDOCTRINATION OR EDUCATION

Mary L. Allen
Caxton Printers - publ.

MRS. ALLEN, the mother of two children and the wife of a civil engineer, has during the last few years become vitally interested in what goes on inside the classrooms of the United States. Her daring book exposes a conspiracy which comparatively few Americans understand . . . for the same reason that one may be so close to the trees he cannot see the forest.

Dr. Dewey once said: "Education is likely to be one of the great battle grounds upon which is waged an intense and desperate struggle for power."

Mrs. Allen defines the areas of this struggle and turns up the underneath side of a colossal conspiracy to revise the American social order and change the pattern of government that has made the United States the envy of all nations. What goes into the schools in one generation, comes to fruition in the next.

"The most complicated problem can be reduced to simple factors . . . and in this case, the simple fact is that a body of extreme leftist educators have developed a system of thought control, starting at highest educational levels and filtering all the way down even through the grade schools.

"They comprise a closely knit group with arms reaching out into educational organizations, the teaching profession, publishing houses where text-books and various types of teaching literature are processed . . . and into other fields. Education in the United States has been taken out of the hands of taxpayers and placed under the control of an intellectual oligarchy.

A master plan has been named, with a long range objective of imposing a new social order on our Nation. Enemies have sown tares while good people slept, which serves to remind one of Plato's trite statements: "The penalty good men pay for indifference to public affairs, is to be ruled by evil men."

A reviewer of "Education Or Indoctrination" speaks of the confusion which exists in "the minds of Americans concerning their schools" and goes on to say:

"Mary Allen sorts through the confusion and unfolds the plan of radical educators to impose a new way of life on Americans through their public schools. Facts, unknown to the general public, have been assembled and organized in order to expose the national plot to subvert education. This is the first book to reveal the actual experience of a community in dealing with a school administrator who attempted to bring about extreme changes in the social pattern through education."

The "community" referred to in the foregoing sentence was Pasadena, California. Events viewed in retrospect, leave no doubt that Mrs. Allen correctly states the facts by starting her discussion of the Pasadena story with these words: "The planners of the new or modern education, alias progressive, launched a full-scale invasion of the schools in Pasadena under the leadership of Willard E. Goslin. There seems little doubt that Pasadena was the testing ground for the nation. Therefore, it behooves those in other communities to know what really happened in this conservative city."

The story that follows seems utterly fantastic. When citizens of Pasadena became alerted to what was happening and revolted, they were confronted with a nationwide propaganda machine which turned on them savagely as enemies of the public schools.

Lenin's dictum was put into operation by accusing others of doing the things of which reds themselves are guilty. Patriots of Pasadena were systematically vilified by vicious attacks in the press, over the air and through the columns of educational publications. They were branded Fascists and otherwise misrepresented before the public. Mrs. Allen was in the thick of the fight.

Americans who wish to understand the master plan as mapped by leftist conspirators for perverting modern education and turning classrooms into breeding places of subversion, need to read the Pasadena case history as penned by this talented and courageous writer. Incidentally, it is a gripping story, readable as a mystery novel, which keeps the reader wondering what to expect on the next page. It is documented throughout.

Unquestionably, this is a book that will provoke the interest of all persons concerned with the welfare of the public schools and patriotic loyalty of the rising generation. It will be welcomed by parents, teachers and citizens who feel that something is happening in their schools which jeopardizes the very foundations of the America we love.

* * * *

MRS. ALLEN is a native-born Californian. During her university training she majored in philosophy and economics. This was followed by courses in accounting, general insurance and short story writing. As a member of the local Parent-Teacher Association and the mother of children, she became aroused by the leftist conspiracy to pervert the Pasadena school system, rolled up her sleeves and decided to do something about it!

The Santa Ana, California Santa Ana Register (January 24, 1956) stated in its editorial:

Merely saying that "It can't happen here," simply isn't good enough for we have been given one demonstration after another that it CAN happen here—whether we are talking about here in Orange County, California, or the entire nation.

Specifically, we are talking about all of the various mental health bills that are, for some mysterious reason, being pushed down the throats of the American people from every angle.

More specifically, we are talking about the H. R. 6376 which is not something that can't happen here but something that has happened. And what happened was that H. R. 6376 has won, by voice vote, in the House of Representatives and is now being studied by the Senate.

* The House today (Jan. 18 - Associated Press) approved by voice vote a $12,500,000 mental health program for Alaska.

"It passed and sent to the senate a bill authorizing the federal government to give the Territory $6,500,000 million acres of U. S. land to the Territory of Alaska "for the hospitalization and care of the mentally ill in Alaska" (part of this is to be used for revenue purposes, however). One million acres is roughly a little more than 1,562 sq. miles. The state of Rhode Island has a land area of 1,058 square miles and a population of 791,896. Alaska's area is 586,400 square miles with a population of 128,643. The total of Alaska's mental cases over the years averages 345 patients. By comparison with Rhode Island's area and pop. figures, you can see the possible number of buildings and persons one million acres of 1,562 square miles could contain.

A mentally ill person is defined as "an individual having a psychiatric or other disease which substantially impaires his mental health. . . ." This is such a broad definition as to include anything from dandruff, headaches, toothaches or fallen arches.

Commitment of the "proposed patient" (purpose: to nominate for membership in a group) may be in a number of ways. It may be upon the written application of an interested party; or it may be by "any health welfare, or police officer who has reason to believe that an individual is mentally ill. Without a written authorization, he may 'take the individual into custody, apply to a designated hospital for his admission and transport him thereto."

Judicial proceedings for commitment will be held under the direction of a United States Commissioner who may omit notifying the prisoner of such a hearing and said prisoner need not be present at the hearing. In fact, the Commissioner may exclude anyone from the hearing and the Commissioner need not be bound by the rules of evidence.

The Commissioner may make commitment for an indeterminate period or for six months. Although the patient may communicate with persons in or out of the hospital, this privilege is at the discretion of the head of the hospital.

Originally, H. R. 6376 contained Section 128 which related to punishment for willfully conspiring to cause the unwarranted hospitalization of any individual. This section 128 has been stricken from the amended bill now in the Senate for passage.

According to House of Representatives' Report No. 1399, the mentally ill from Alaska are presently cared for in a private sanitarium in Portland, Oregon, though a contract from the Dept. of Interior.

This legislation, say it's oppohents, will place every resident of the United States at the mercy of the whims and fancies of any person with whom they might have a disagreement, causing a charge of "mental illness" to be placed against them, with immediate deportation to SIBERIA, U. S. A.

* The House of Representatives has passed the bill which is now before the U. S. Senate. Every American who is opposed to communistic rule in America should write his U. S. Senator at Senate Office Bldg., Washington, D. C., and demand this insane proposal be killed at once. ---end of quote . . . from SANTA ANA REGISTER.

Certain interested parties WOULD HAVE THE PREROGATIVE OF PUTTING A CITIZEN IN THAT INSTITUTION, FROM WHICH ESCAPE WOULD BE NEARLY IMPOSSIBLE. WHO ARE THESE INTERESTED PARTIES WHO COULD GET RID OF ANY ONE OF US? The subtle wording of this bill makes it appear on the surface as a piece of philanthropic legislation, but careful study reveals it to be vicious and un-American.

Be sure and ask your representative when the bills will come up - and what will be any new numbers of such bills!

"Any person having knowledge of the facts may file in the superior court a petition alleging there is a person who is over the age of 65 years, who has been a resident of the county and state for the period required for eligibility for old age aid under Section 2160 fo this Code, who is in indigent circumstances, and who is in need of MENTAL TREATMENT or medical treatment required in treating a mental condition other than psychosis, and asking that an examination be made of such person, and that provisions be made for the welfare of such person as provided in this part." (Section 7556 of A. B. 3300)

This should be serious reading for anyone past 65 years of age and over! In other words they can put you in a mental institution even though you are not a mental case but only need medical attention? And since this is a part of A. B. 3300 we believe all of that bill will apply to the age. It means that any member of your family, or any friend can force you into a mental institution and everything you own today, your pension checks, old age security checks, EVERYTHING CAN BE TAKEN AWAY FROM YOU. A. B. is not a good law.

Some bills in California and in Florida and other states will work in with this Alaska Bill. Be alert in your State - watch for new bills and new numbers of OLD BILLS!

WHAT DOES MENTAL HEALTH REALLY MEAN?

WHAT IS PLANNED FOR YOU?

"With the institutions for the insane, you have in your country prisons which can hold a million persons, and can hold them without civil rights or any hope of freedom. AND UPON THESE PEOPLE CAN BE PRACTICED SHOCK, AND SURGERY SO THAT NEVER AGAIN WILL THEY DRAW A SANE BREATH."

This was the welcome of Commissar Lavrenti Beria, former head of the Soviet secret police, to a group of American students at the Lenin University in Moscow. Commissar Beria continued:

"You must dominate as respected men the fields of psychiatry and psychology. You must dominate the hospitals and universities. You must carry forward the myth that only a European doctor is competent in the field of insanity, and thus excuse amongst you the high incidence of foreign birth and training. . . .

"Use the courts, use the judges, use the Constitution of the country, use its medical societies and its laws to further your ends, . . . And when you have succeeded you will discover that you can now effect your own legislation at will and you can . . . make the CAPITALIST himself, by his own appropriations, finance a large portion of the quiet conquest of the nation."

The textbook used by students at the Lenin University in Moscow was "The Communist Manual of Instructions for Psychopolitial Warfare." Kenneth Goff, former member of the Communist Party, has identified this as the textbook he studied here in America, at the Eugene Debs Labor School in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

This "Communist Manual of Instructions for Psychopolitical Warfare" has been briefed or condensed into a pamphlet, "Brainwashing." Here is set forth the complete program for the psychopolitical conquest of the United States. You will at once recognize this as the MENTAL HEALTH program, already far advanced in our nation at the local, state and federal levels, and in citizen groups. You can see how our great nation is being conquered, just as the Communists boast, without the "firing of a single shot."

The following are exact quotations from the pamphlet "Brainwashing."

CHAPTER I.

Psychopolitics is the art and science of asserting and maintaining dominion over the thoughts and loyalties of individuals, officers, bureaus, and masses, and the effecting of the conquest of enemy nations through "MENTAL HEALING."

CHAPTER II.

. . . the individual must be directed from without to accomplish his exercise, education, and work. . .

The tenets of rugged individualism, personal determinism, self-will, imagination, and personal creativeness are. . .antipathetic to the good of the Greater State. These wilful and unaliged forces are no more than illnesses. . .

CHAPTER III.

. . . one must . . . create and continue a semi-privation in the masses in order to command and utterly control the nation. . .

. . . Such success as the Income Tax Law, had it been followed thoroughly, could have brought the United States and not Russia into the world scene as the first Communist nation. . . .

Communism could best succeed if at the side of every rich or influential man there could be placed a psychopolitical operator, an undoubted authority in the field of "mental healing" who could then. . .upset the economic policies of the country and, when the time comes to do away forever with the rich or influential man . . . administer the proper drug or treatment to bring about his complete demise in an institution as a patient or dead as a suicide. . . .

The Capitalist does not know the definition of war. He thinks of war as an attack with force performed by soldiers and machines. . . .The Capitalist has never won a war in truth. The psychopolitician is having little trouble winning this one. .

CHAPTER IV.

. . . Without pain there can be no desire to escape from pain. Without the threat of punishment there can be no gain. . . .Without rigorous and forthright control, there can be no accomplished goals for the State. . . .

CHAPTER V.

. . . ANY MAN WHO CANNOT BE PERSUADED INTO COMMUNIST RATIONALE IS, OF COURSE, TO BE REGARDED AS SOMEWHAT LESS THAN SANE, AND IT IS, THEREFORE, COMPLETELY JUSTIFIED TO USE THE TECHNIQUES OF INSANITY UPON THE NON-COMMUNIST. . . .

When the loyalty of an individual cannot be swerved . . .it is usually best. . .to see to it that he disposes of himself by suicide or by bringing about his demise in such a way as to resemble suicide. . . .

It is a firm principle of Psychopolitics that the person to be destroyed must be involved at first or second hand in the stigma of insanity. . . .

. . .One of the first and foremost missions of the psychopolitician is to make an attack upon Communism and insanity synonymous. IT SHOULD BECOME THE DEFINITION OF INSANITY, OF THE PARANOID VARIETY, THAT "A PARANOID BELIEVES HE IS BEING ATTACKED BY COMMUNISTS". . . .

Under the saccharine guise of assistance to them, rigorous child labor laws are the best means to deny the child any right in the society. By refusing to let him earn, by forcing him into unwanted dependence upon a grudging parent. . .the child can be driven in his teens into revolt. Delinquency will ensue. . . .

If we could effectively kill the national pride and patriotism of just one generation we will have won that country . . . .

The handling of youth cases by courts should be led . . . into "mental problems" until the entire nation thinks of "mental problems" instead of criminals. This . . . ces vacancies everywhere in the courts. . .which could then be filled with psychopolitical operators. . .and into their hands comes the total control of the criminal, without whose help a revolution cannot ever be accomplished.

By stressing this authority, . . .even the armed services will use "authorities on the mind". . . .AND WHEN THIS OCCURS THE ARMED FORCES OF THE NATION ENTER INTO OUR HANDS AS SOLIDLY AS IF WE COMMANDED THEM OURSELVES. . . .

CHAPTER VI.

Any organization which has the spirit and courage to display inhumanity, savageness, brutality, and an uncompromising lack of humanity, will be obeyed. Such a use of force is, itself, the essential ingredient of greatness. . . . . .
. . . IF YOU WOULD HAVE OBEDIENCE YOU MUST MAKE IT CLEARLY UNDERSTOOD THAT YOU HAVE NO MERCY. . . .
. . . Only when a person has been beaten, punished, and mercilessly hammered, can hypnotism upon him be guaranteed in its effectiveness. . . .
The subject of hypnotism is a subject of belief. . . .
Despicable religions, such as Christianity, knew this . . . . . .
The earliest Russian psychiatrists. . .understood thoroughly that hypnosis is induced by acute fear. . . .
. . . The psychiatrist is aptly suited to this role, for his brutalities are committed in the name of science and are inexplicably complex, and entirely out of view of the human understanding. As long as the psychopolitical operative or his dupes are the only authorities as to the difference between sanity and insanity, their word as to the therapeutic value of such treatment will be the final word. . . .
It is to the interest of the psychopolitical operative that the possibility of curing the insane be outlawed and ruled out at all times. . . .
. . . THE ENTIRE FIELD OF HUMAN BEHAVIOUR. . . CAN, AT LENGTH, BE BROADENED INTO ABNORMAL BEHAVIOUR. Thus, anyone indulging in any eccentricity, particularly the eccentricity of combatting psychopolitics, could be silenced. . . .
The entire subject of psychopolitical hypnosis. . .depends for its defense upon continuous protest from authoritative sources that such things are not possible. And, should anyone unmask a psychopolitical operative, he should at once declare the whole thing a physical impossibility. . . .

. . . CHAPTER VII.

Having no independent will of his own, Man is easily handled by stimulus-response mechanisma. . . . .
. . . an entire chain of commands . . . . can be beaten, shocked, or terrorized into a mind, and will there lie dormant until called into view by some similarity. . . . to the incident of punishment.
The body is less able to resist a stimulus if it has insufficient food and is weary. Therefore it is necessary to administer all such stimuli to individuals when their ability to resist has been reduced by privation and exhaustion. . . .
Exercises in sexual attack on patients should be practiced by the pyschopolitical operative to demonstrate the inability of the patient under pain-drug hypnosis to recall the attack. . . . .

CHAPTER VIII.

In order to be conquered, a nation must be degraded. . . .
. . . Continual and constant degradation of national leaders, national institutions, national practices, and national heroes must be systematically carried out. . . .
The first thing to be degraded in any nation is the state of Man, himslef. Nations which have high ethical tome are difficult to conquer. . . .
. . .it must be educated into a populace under attack that EVERY INDIVIDUAL WITHIN IT WHO REBELS IN ANY WAY, SHAPE, OR FORM AGAINST EFFORTS AND ACTIVITIES TO ENSLAVE THE WHOLE MUST BE CONSIDERED A DERANGED PERSON, whose eccentricities are neurotic or insane and who must at once have the treatment of a psychopolitician.
. . .Unless these reatless individuals are stamped out. . .there will be nothing but trouble as the conquest continues. . . .
This educational program. . .can best be followed by bringing about a compulsory training in some subject such as psychology. . .

CHAPTER IX.

PSYCHOPOLITICAL OPERATIVES SHOULD AT ALL TIMES BE ALERT TO THE OPPORTUNITY TO ORGANIZE "FOR THE BETTERMENT OF THE COMMUNITY" MENTAL HEALTH CLUBS OR GROUPS. By thus inviting the cooperation of the population as a whole in mental health programs, the terrors of mental aberration can be disseminated throughout the populace. Furthermore, each one of these mental health groups properly guided, can bring. . .legislative pressure against the government to secure. . .government grants and facilities, thus bringing a government to finance its own downfall. . . If a group of persons interested in suppressing juvenile delinquency, in caring for the insane. . .can be formed in every major city. . .the success of a psychopolitical program is assured. . .

. . . It is not too much to hope that the influence of such groups could bring about a psychiatric ward in every hospital in the land, and psychiatrists in every company and regiment of the nation's army, and whole government institutes manned entirely by psychopolitical operatives, into which ailing government officials could be placed. . .

The financing of a psychopolitical program is difficult unless it is done by the citizens and government. . . .

CHAPTER X.

The psychopolitician may well find himself under attack as an individual or a member of a group. . . .

. . .the best defense is calling into question the sanity of the attacker. The next best defense is authority. The next best defense is a validation of psychiatric practices in terms of long and impressive figures. The next best defense is the actual removal of the attacker. . . but it is dangerous. . .

PSYCHOPOLITICS SHOULD AVOID MURDER AND VIOLENCE, UNLESS IT IS DONE IN THE SAFETY OF THE INSTITUTION. . .

Should any whisper, or pamphlet, against psychopolitical activities be published, it should be laughed into acorn, branded as an immediate hoax, and its perpetrator or publisher should be, at the first opportunity, branded as insane. . . .

CHAPTER XI.

. . . In the United States we have been able to alter the works of William James, and others, into a more acceptable pattern, and to place the tenets of Karl Marx, Pavlov, Lamarck, and the date of Dialectic Materialism into the textbooks of psychology, to such a degree that anyone thoroughly studying psychology becomes at once a candidate to accept the reasonableness of Communism.

AS EVERY CHAIR OF PSYCHOLOGY IN THE UNITED STATES IS OCCUPIED BY PERSONS IN OUR CONNECTION, OR WHO CAN BE INFLUENCED BY PERSONS IN OUR CONNECTION, the consistent employment of such texts is guaranteed. . . .

Constant pressure in the legislatures of the United States can bring about legislation to the effect that every student attending a high school or university must have classes in psychology.

CHAPTER XII.

. . . Starting from a relatively low level of violence, such as strait-jackets and other restraints, it is relatively easy to encroach upon the public diffidence for violence by adding more and more cruelty into the treatment of the insan. . . .

Gradually the public should be educated into electric shock, first by believing that is is very therapeutic, then by believing that it is quieting, then by being informed that electric shock usually injures the spine and teeth, and, finally, that it very often kills or at least breaks the spine and removes violently the teeth of the patient. . . .

The more violent the treatment, the more hopeless insanity will seem to be.

The society should be worked up to the level where every recalcitrant young man can be brought into court and assigned to a psychopolitical operative, to be given electric shocks, and reduced into unimaginative docility for the remainder of his days. . . .

CHAPTER XIII.

The psychopolitical dupe is a well-trained individual who serves in complete obedience the pyschopolitical operative. . . .
The promise of unlimited sexual opportunities, the promise of complete dominion over the bodies and minds of helpless patients, the promise of complete lawlessness without detection, can thus attract to "mental healing" many desirable recruits who will willingly fall in line with psychopolitical activities.

CHAPTER XIV.

. . . The magnificient tool welded for us by Wundt (i. e. Psychopolitics) would be as nothing if it were not for official insistence in civilized countries that "scientific practices" be applied to the problem of the mind. . . .
It must be carefully hidden that the incidence of insanity has increased only since these "scientific practices" were applied. Great remarks must be made of "The pace of modern living" and other myths as the cause of the increased neurosis in the world. . . .
. . . You must recruit every agency of the nation marked for slaughter into a foaming hatred of religious healing . . . .
. . . YOU MUST WORK UNTIL "RELIGION" IS SYNONYMOUS WITH "INSANITY."

. . . Any movement to place clergymen in charge of institutions should be fought on the grounds of incompetence and the insanity brought about by religion. . . .
A country's laws must carefully be made to avoid any rights of person to the insane. Any suggested laws or Constitutional Amendments which make the harming of the insane unlawful, should be fought to the extreme, on the grounds that only violent measures can succeed. If the law were to protect the insane, as it normally does not, the entire psychopolitical program would very possible collapse.
. . . NO RECOVERY OF THE INSANE FROM AN INSTITUTION SHOULD BE POSSIBLE BY ANY PROCESS OF LAW. . . .
Any inquest into the "suicide" or sudden mental derangement of any political leader in a nation must be conducted only by psychopolitical operatives or their dupes. . . .

CHAPTER XVI

The failure of Psychopolitics might well bring about the atomic bombing of the Motherland (Russia). . . . .
. . . THE SPREAD OF COMMUNISM HAS NEVER BEEN BY FORCE OF BATTLE BUT BY CONQUEST OF THE MIND. In psychopolitics we have refined this conquest to the last degree.

DOCUMENTATION

Beria laid down the rule in his address to American students: "You must dominate as RESPECTED MEN the fields of psychiatry and psychology." Following are a few facts about some of the RESPECTED MEN in our local field of "Mental Health."

WAYNE McMILLEN - organizing "mental health program" in West Los Angeles. . . with $46,606.00 of State money to make a survey and set up clinics.* - California Senate Reports on Subversive Activities include him in the list of those affiliated with 11-20 Communist Front organizations. (4th Rep. p. 375) Among these are:

*It is alleged that Wayne McMillen owes his appointment to Albert G. Feldman, Pres. of the Welfare Planning Council.

Cooperator & Sponsor of Communist periodical "Social Work Today," pub. in N. Y. (See 1948 Report).

Sponsor of "World Peace Conference, member of Nat'l. Council of Arts, Science, and Professions" (Fifth Report, 1949 - p. 481)

American League Against War & Fascism - pledged to "work toward the stopping of the manufacture and transportation of munitions and all other material essential to the conduct of war. . .To support the peace policies of the Soviet Union . . ."(1949 - p. 488)

Member of American Committee for the Protection of the Foreign Born (cited as subversive by Attorney General-(1949 - p. 502)

Member of Committee of Welcome for the "Red" Dean of Canterbury (1949 Report - p. 507)

Member of Medical Bureau and North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy (cited as subversive by House Committee on Un-American Activities - 1949 Report - page 510)

Member of National Federation for Constitutional Liberties (cited by Atty. General as subversive - 1949 Report - page 512).

Signer of the statement of praise of Wallace's open letter to Stalin - May, 1948 (page 531).

Vice-chairman of Social Workers Committee of American League for Peace and Democracy (on letterhead April 6, 1939).

He is also mentioned in the testimony of Matthew Czetic in the Expose of the Communist Party of West Pennsylvania - Part II (House Un-Mner. Activ. Comm. D. 2498 - 1949).

HYMAN FORSTENZER - Assistant director, Community Mental Health Services Division, New York State Department of Mental Hygiene.

Prominent Speaker at the Mental Health Conference at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, on August 4, 1957, attended by officials of 300 community agencies and sponsored by the California Association for Mental Health and its affiliates, including the Mental Health Foundatioh of Los Angeles County.

Dr. Bella Dodd, former Communist, knew Hyman Forstenzer as a fellow party member and her assistant as Legislative Representative in the Teacher's Union. She said he later became Deputy Commissioner of Mental Hygiene in New York State. (Sub-Committee of the Judiciary, U. S. Senate, 84th Congress - 2nd Session - 1956 - Sec. VII - page 116.)

HON. ISAAC PACHT - Active for several years in Mental Health Organizations in Los Angeles County.

Sponsor of Hollywood Democratic Committee with known Communists such as Donald Ogden Stewart, Marian Spitzer, John Howard Lawson. (Cited as subversive organization by House Un-American Activities Committee - HUAC -- Appendix IX - pp. 779-784).

Hollywood League for Democratic Action - with practically same membership as above - same reference.

Member of Lawyers Committee on American Relations with Spain (Cited as subversive by HUAC - Appendix IX - pp. 962-966).

In list of national officers and directors of Ambijan Committee for Emergency Aid to the Soviet Union (HUAC - Appendix IX - pp. 1067-1069).

Member of Dinner Committee of the American Committee for the Settlement of Jews in Birobidjan (HUAC - Appendix IX - p. 1085).

Member of Emergency Committee on KFI - permitted prosoviet, red-slanted propaganda programs from commentators (California Senate Report on Un-American Activities in Calif. -1947 - pp. 180,182).

Member Progressiae Citizens of America (Calif. Senate Report - 1942 - pp. 238-240).

Member Committee of the American Civil Liberties Union (Calif. Senate Report - 1948 - page 109).

Sponsor of First State-Wide Emergency Legislative Conference (Calif. Senate Report - 1948 - page 239).

Hollywood Anti-Nazi League (Calif. Senate Report - 1948 - page 250).

Mobilization for Democracy (Calif. Senate Report - 1948 - pp. 308-309).

Member of National Lawyers Guild--called the "legal arm of the Communist Party." (Calif. Senate Report - 1948 - pp. 331-332).

The California Senate Committee on Un-American Activities reports Isaac Pacht as being one of the committee's "more notorious critics" - but that he has never denied any of its charges.

"Principles of mental health cannot be successfully furthered in any society unless there is PROGRESSIVE ACCEPTANCE OF THE CONCEPT OF WORLD CITIZENSHIP. World citizenship can be widely extended among all peoples through the applications of the principles of mental health." (Mental Health and World Citizenship. Pages 7 and 8.) GREATEST SUBVERSIVE PLOT IN HISTORY--REPORT TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ON UNESCO

Extension of Remarks of Hon. John T. Wood of Idaho In The House of Representatives, Thursday, October 18, 1951

Mr. WOOD of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I am herewith appending an article published by the American Flag Committee, 876 Granite Street, Philadelphia, Pa., bearing the title "A Report to the American People on UNESCO."

How anyone who venerates and loves Old Glory as the symbol of the deathless march of the United States through the years to fulfill its destiny as a free and independent Republic can read this documented evidence of the greatest and most malignant plot in history against the future of this country, and its children's children, is more than I am able to comprehend.

Just how careless and unthinking can we be that we permit this band of spies and traitors to exist another day in this land we all love? Are there no limits to our callousness and neglect of palpable and evident treason stalking rampant through our land, warping the minds and imaginations of even our little children, to the lying propaganda and palpable untruths we allow to be fed to them through this monstrous poison?

It is my sincere hope that every parent of every child in America may be able to read the inroads that this infamous plot has already made in the educational system of America, and, reading, may feel impelled to do something about it, both locally and nationally; and particularly at the voting booth.

A REPORT TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ON UNESCO BY THE AMERICAN FLAG COMMITTEE

UNESCO, the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization, is a subversive association. It is consciously furthering a campaign calculated to pervert the teaching profession in this country, and so destroy the worth and integrity of America's first bulwark of freedom--our tax-supported public schools.

Strong words? Yes, but not strong enough to alert you and the American people to a proper understanding of the UNESCO menace, which, unless met squarely and eradicated by the concerted action of parents, teachers and the general public, may shortly transform our schools into laboratories for the systematic destruction of all sense of national allegiance and loyalty in the minds and hearts of America's school children.

SCHEME TO PERVERT PUBLIC EDUCATION

UNESCO's scheme to pervert public education appears in a series of nine volumes, titled "Toward World Understanding," which presume to instruct kindergarten and elementary grade teachers in the fine art of preparing our youngsters for the day when their first loyalty will be to a world government, of which the United States will form but an administrative part. The booklets bear the following individual numbers and titles:

I. Some Suggestions on Teaching About the U. N. and Its Specialized Agencies.
II. The Education and Training of Teachers.
III. A Selected Bibliography.
IV. The U. N. and World Citizenship.
V. In the Classroom With Children Under 13 years of age.
VI. The Influence of Home and Community on Children Under 13 years of age.
VII. Some Suggestions on the Teaching of Geography.
VIII. A Teachers' Guide to the Declaration of Human Rights.
IX. Some Suggestions on the Teaching of World History.

COLUMBIA HOTBED OF BRITISH FABIANISM

These booklets are cheaply priced for maximum distribution and are printed by Columbia University Press, New York. This seems appropriate, considering the role Columbia's Teachers College has long played in developing new methods for radicalizing and internationalizing public education in this country. The insitution has become well-known as a hotbed of British Fabianism, that peculiar type of creeping socialism which sired the present Labor Government which has reduced England to a fourth-rate power and a star boarder in the European section of America's world charity ward.

TEACH DISLOYALTY TO CHILDREN

UNESCO's booklets read like the propaganda put out by United World Federalists, Inc., which has been denied tax exemption because of its specifically political nature. They begin by advancing the totally un-American doctrine that the prime function of public education in the United States must be that of capturing the minds of our children, at the earliest possible age, for the cause of political world government. The teacher is urged to devote every classroom minute to this end, and every subject taught must serve, or be revised in such a manner that it is made to serve, this same central objective.

The program is quite specific. The teacher is to begin by eliminating any and all words, phrases, descriptions, pictures, maps, classroom material or teaching methods of a sort causing his pupils to feel or express a particular love for, or loyalty to, the United States of America. Children exhibiting such prejudice as a result of prior home influences--UNESCO calls it the outgrowth of the narrow family spirit--are to be dealt an abundant measure of counter propaganda at the earliest possible age. Booklet V, on page 9, advises the teacher that: "The kindergarten or infant school has a significant part to play in the child's education. Not only can it correct many of the errors of home training, but it can also prepare the child for membership, at about the age of seven, in a group of his own age and habits--the first of many such social identifications that he must achieve on his way to membership in the world society."

POISONING THE MINDS OF TEACHERS

Following this same line of attack upon patriotism and its parental encouragement, the same booklet, on pages 58-60, goes on to further poison the minds of our teachers by adding:

"As we have pointed out, it is frequently the family that infects the child with extreme nationalism. The school should therefore use the means described earlier to combat family attitudes that favor jingoism. Education for world-mindedness is not a problem that the school can solve within its own walls or with its own means. It is a political problem even more than an educational one, and the present position of teachers does not, in general, permit them to intervene in the field of politics with the requisite authority. We thought with cautious optimism that educators could also try to influence public opinion. Certain members of our group thought that educators might now besiege the authorities with material demands in the manner of a trade union. In our opinion it is essential that, on the one hand, a children's charter should secure for all children such education as is summarized in this report, which alone can create the atmosphere in which development of world-mindedness is conceivable, and that, on the other hand, a teacher's charter should secure for all members of the teaching profession the liberty to provide such an education by the means they decide upon, as well as the right of access to commissions and councils responsible for the organization of public education."

Aside from encouraging the public school teachers to make war upon the ideals of patriotic national devotion which UNESCO sees as infecting our children in the home, precisely what kind of instruction would the authors of these UNESCO booklets introduce by influencing public opinion, besieging the authorities with material demands in the manner of a trade-union, and by pressing for a Children's Charter and a Teachers' Charter, which refer to instruments prepared in treaty form, making UNESCO principles the supreme law of the United States? Let's see.

TEACHERS URGED TO SUPPRESS AMERICAN HISTORY

First of all, teachers are urged to suppress American history and American geography, which might enhance pro-American sentiments which UNESCO wishes to sterilize. Here is how booklet V, on page 11, treats the problem as it affects children aged 3 to 13 years:

"In our view, history and geography should be taught at this stage as universal history and geography. Of the two, only geography lends itself well to study during the years prescribed by the present survey. The study of history, on the other hand, raises problems of value which are better postponed until the pupil is freed from the nationalist prejudices which at present surround the teaching of history."

Translated into less abstruse phraseology, the teacher is instructed to purge American geography from the elementary school classroom, by divorcing it from its national element, and to completely ignore the teaching of history until the pupil enters high school, since this subject cannot be similarly internationalized, and so is too risky to advance until the youngsters' patriotic spirit has been thoroughly emasculated. Parents who take a bit of time to investigate may find (as we found in eastern Pennsylvania) that a number of elementary schools have already dropped American history as a standard, required subject.

LOGICAL TEACHING METHODS TO BE DISCARDED

Logical and orderly teaching methods are also to be discarded if found to obstruct UNESCO's program for de-Americanizing the minds and hearts of little children. Discussing the usual method of teaching geography, booklet V, page 11, continues:

"One method much in use now is to teach geography in a series of widening circles, beginning with local geography (i. e., the classroom, the school building and its surroundings, the village, the country) and proceeding to a study of the nation and the continent. Only when that routine has been accomplished is the child introduced to the rest of the world.

"This progress from the particular and the immediate to the general and the remote may be logical, but does it serve our purpose?"

The booklet goes on to conclude that it certainly does not, since it is found that this manner of presentation will lead pupils to the mistaken conclusion that what is nearest to them is the most important and vice versa. UNESCO-indoctrinated teachers must therefore reverse the procedure, upset the rule of logical sequence, and begin by teaching the 8-year old child about the distribution of land and water, or of air and sea currents, hydrography, climate, occupations, etc. But, even before this, and certainly before the youngsters are given any kind of formal study of their own country, every opportunity should be taken to enlarge the child's imagination and encourage him in an interest in all that is remote and strange. This is accomplished by occupying the impressionable mind of the very young child with the games, occupations, tools, domestic animals, etc., of foreign lands. The purpose of this is not simply to teach our kindergarten and elementary pupils about alien peoples, but to cause them to identify themselves in their imagination with people different from themselves.

TRUTH IS TO BE SUPPRESSED

Truth, like orthodox and reasonable teaching methods, is to be suppressed wherever and whenever it stands in the way of glorifying those things which are foreign above those which are particularly American. On page 14, booklet V, there appears the following advice:

"Certain delicate problems, however, will arise in these studies and explorations. Not everything in foreign ways of living can be presented to children in an attractive light. At this stage, though, the systematic examination of countries and manners can be postponed, and the teacher need seek only to insure that his children appreciate, through abundant and judicious examples, that foreign countries, too, possess things of interest and beauty, and that many of them resemble the beauty and interest of his own country. A child taught thus about the different countries of the world will gradually lose those habits of prejudice and contempt which are an impediment to world-mindedness."

And there you have the UNESCO instructions on geography and history: Suppress American studies in these fields: accentuate, by abundant and judicious examples, all that is especially worth while and attractive in foreign modes of living; but, as soon as the point of unfavorable reporting seems to be approaching, simply postpone further study, leaving the children with the false and truly prejudiced notion that the nations of the other continents are paragons of virtue, beauty and over-all perfection.

LIKE A PASSAGE FROM MARX COMMUNIST MANIFESTO

What else does UNESCO's teachers' guides recommend that our little ones be taught? For one thing (booklet V, p. 16), "the methods for putting the resources of the glove at the disposal of all people," which reads like a passage from Marx Communist Manifesto. Following the same line, page 51 of the same work proposes an international anthem for American classrooms (and tomorrow (for) all the inhabitants of the world). It is interesting to note that the booklet we are reviewing was prepared in 1949, and that a United Nations anthem was previewed by the U. N. in 1950, being presented to the public on October 1 of that year in California's giant Hollywood Bowl. The anthem describes how things will be when its flag (the spiderweb banner of the U. N.--editor waves over every land.

We have quoted extensively from booklet V, because it contains the most flagrant of UNESCO's anti-American propaganda, and develops it the most extensively. Now, in the space left us, let's quote from other volumes in the series:

OBJECTIVE: A ONE-WORLD GOVERNMENT

Booklet IV, on pages 13-14, sympathetically deals with the various methods for converting the United Nations into an actual world state. The original concept of the U. N. as an assembly of delegates representing free and sovereign governments is being challenged, teachers are informed, in an effort to break up the concentration of political power in the hands of national governments, especially the great-power governments, which includes the United States of America. There are two alternative proposals. The first, to popularly elect U. N. representatives; the second, to appoint representatives who will be organized specialists in limited fields. The latter proposal follows the Fascist ideology which developed the corporate state of Italy, under Benito Mussolini. UNESCO is not perturbed on this score, however, since "it would be a beginning of functional world government based on transnational rather than international cooperation."

CORRUPTING THE MORALS OF YOUR CHILDREN

Booklet VI contains a series of research suggestions which indicate an intention to stimulate ultimate classroom expeditions into the field of detailed sex-education. Here are a few samples of the type of questions which UNESCO, which is heavily subsidized by the tax dollars of many Americans who feel that sex training rests within the domain of the home or of the tenets of their own particular religious faith, propounds for our public-school teachers: "Are there devices * * * for limiting the family?" "What are supposed to be the typical feelings of pregnant women?" "Do parents undress before the child?". "What is he (the child) told about where babies come from?" A sense of propriety prohibits us from quoting the even less modest projects which appear with the above.

YOUR JOB AS A LOYAL AMERICAN

Space does not permit us to further examine the other booklets in the series, but this brief analysis should serve to alert the citizen to the manacing nature of UNESCO's activities. Once alerted, then, it is his job--your job as a loyal American--to take the next step. Contact your friends and neighbors, show them this Newsletter, ask them to join with you in forming a local committee to obtain further data and fight this danger. Order those nine booklets of UNESCO, and also the heavier paper-bound book titled "A Handbook for the Improvement of Textbooks and Teaching Materials," which suggested another UNESCO project (to eliminate Americanism from schoolroom reading material) which we may deal with in the very near future. Read this material for yourselves; then, as a committee, go into action.

Firstly, prepare your own report and submit it to your local school board. Introduce the matter before your parent-teacher association. Interview the teachers in your community and ask their assistance in obtaining action. Join with the American Flag Committee in demanding that your United States Senators introduce and support legislation withdrawing our Government from UNESCO membership and terminating its activities in this country. Many other ways will occur to you, in which you can help safeguard our American system of public education from infiltration and undermining by UNESCO's America last propagandists.

UNESCO MUST ASSUME RESPONSIBILITY

One further word remains to be added. Several of the booklets discussed bear a preface which states that the views expressed are those of their authors, and that they do not represent the official views of UNESCO. If this weak-kneed attempt to avoid responsibility is brought to your attention by a UNESCO apologist, tell him that one who administers poison to a Nation's youth is guilty of a crime, whether the prescription is official or other.

Princess Illeana of Roumania says in "I Live Again," Ladies' Home Journal, March 1952, that deposed dictator Anna Pauker claimed America is to be taken over via the water supply, by disrupting electric power, by a shift of some items on grocery shelves etc.

"Lenin advised: "Get control of the public health agencies and furnish the keystone in the arch of the SOCIALIZED STATE."

"Manuilsky, secretary of the Communist International, told a gathering of American agents in Moscow in 1930: "In the United States, for instance, the Communists just launch a powerful movement for social insurance." Manuilsky explained that compulsory state medicine would be used to further promote Communism in America.

"The propaganda being promoted by the proponents of fluoridation of water supplies comes from one source, the U. S. Public Health Service (USPHS), dominated by Oscar Ewing who is making his various 'preventive' health programs serve his own political and 'Fair Deal' purposes. Ewing claims he spent more than Louis Johnson on Truman's election campaign. For it he became head of the Federal Security Administration (FSC) in 1947, with its 11 semi-autonomous bureaus, including the Office of Education, the Children's Bureau, the Food and Drug Administration, the Public Health Service, the Social Security Administration, etc., (Sat. Evening Post, 7/8/50; Collier's, 4/4/50.) Ewing has an annual budget of $2 billion dollars and a force of 36,000 to help spread his propaganda for SOCIALIZED HEALTH PROGRAMS. While the doctors defeated his COMPULSORY HEALTH INSURANCE bill he is going serenely ahead with preparations for bringing all medical sevices and 'preventive medicine' under government domination by inveigling the people to vote for the socialization of different projects, as the FLUORIDATION OF WATER SUPPLIES, as a 'preventive' measure."

DO YOU WANT RAT POISON IN YOUR DRINKING WATER?

Excerpts from "WASHINGTON SQUIRREL CAGE", Washington, D. C. by M. A. Bealle

Twenty years ago the Aluminum Company of America was owned mostly by Andrew Mellon. Since his death the company, which is known as the Aluminum Trust, has been taken over by the House of Rockerfeller. Although the stock ownership is carefully hidden, Rocherfeller's Guaranty Trust Company is listed as Alcoa's agent.

As soon as the Rockerfeller Mob gained control of the Aluminum Company they decided it wasn't making enough profits. So a waste product known as fluoride, must be marketed. Since this was a deadly poison nobody wanted it.

Mocdy's Manual of Industrials shows that the Aluminum Trust only made $95,122,649. profits in 1950 on an actual net worth of $314,725,398. So the Big Brains in Rockerfeller Center were put to work and they came up with the answer about six years ago. It was to FORCE MUNICIPAL WATER PLANTS TO PUT THIS DEADLY POISON IN THE PEOPLE'S WATER. They would explain that only one part fluoride to a million parts of water would make it "perfectly safe". The UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE, whose boss is Oscar Ewing (the Alcoa's $750,000 lawyer) could be depended on to bring every possible pressure on municipalities to Poison their water supplies.

Dentist's know that children's teeth can be painted with fluoride AND THE DANGER OF TAKING IT INTERNALLY AVOIDED. It has never been necessary TO POISON THE WHOLE WATER SUPPLY OF THE COMMUNITY to prevent tooth decay in its children under 12.

Fluoride is known to be a deadly poison. It is the principal component of a well-known cockroach exterminator. Anything that will kill cockroaches will kill rats. Anything that will kill rats will kill humans.

To date the Aluminum Trust, with the help of DRUG TRUST STOOGES in Washington, city health departments and P. T. A. groups, have gotten away with this plan in about 200 communities.

A particularly devastating blow was given the aluminum racketeers by Congressman Alfred Miller, a practicing medical physician when he is back home in Nebraska. Mr. Oscar Ewing of the Aluminum Trust, in his capacity as head of the U. S. Public Health Service, was jamming through the House of Representatives a bill to fluoride the water of the residents of the District of Columbia. THE GENTLEMAN FROM NEBRASKA OBJECTED -- AND HOW. "The chief supporter of fluoridation of water is the U.S. PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE." he shouted on the floor of the House. "This is part of Mr. Ewing's Federal Security Agency. Mr. Ewing is one of the highly paid lawyers for the Aluminum Company of America."

Five years ago the lobbyists from Rockerfeller Center induced the city heads of Newburgh, N. Y., Grand Rapids, Michigan and Evanston, Illinois to carry out a ten year experiment, with fluoridation and in urging cites to purchase expensive equipment and to stockpile tons of Alcoa's waste material (fluorine) at every water pumping station.

Mr. Ewing of the Alcoa couldn't wait until the experiments had been conducted as promised. Before the halfway mark was reached or any conclusive results obtained, he began beating the tomstoms for universal water poisoning with the Alcoa's waste product.

When "Experts" of the U. S. Public Health Service said "no one need fear from properly administered fluoridation of drinking water," Dr. Miller asked them if they had investigated "the possible effect of fluorides upon older people, those with high blood pressure and chronic disease, and upon pregnant women." They had not. THE FLUORIDATION OF WATER HAS NEVER BEEN PROVEN BY ANY SCIENTIST TO BE ANYTHING BUT HARMFUL.

The CITIZENS MEDICAL REFERENCE BUREAU of New York City, says: "No one knows today how many people with diseased kidneys, or other disorders, are having their life spans shortened by daily incorporation of minute quantities of various toxic agents, including the fluorine supplied in water. We do know that it is precisely this segment of our population which furnishes the medical profession with most of its problems in the treatment of degenerate disease, including the illnesses caused by the failure of the kidneys to eliminate the various toxic agents."

FLUORIDE CAUSES CANCER. Turner's Chemistry says that, of all known substances hydrofluoric acid, into which the gastric juices of the stomach change sodium fluoride, is the most destructive to animal matter. When a drop the size of a pinhead comes in contact with the skin, "instantaneous disorganization takes place and is followed by deep, malignant ulceration." The University of Texas biological institute had found that sodium fluoride CAUSES cancer in mice they have experimented on.

Dr. E. B. Hart, of the University of Wisconsin warns that, when the fluorine level in the diet and the water reaches the point where the capacity of the bones to store fluorine has been met, there will be an overflow into the soft tissues with the possibility of damage to the kidneys, liver and heart."

DANAGERS IN FLUORIDATING PUBLIC WATER SYSTEMS.

Charles A. Brusch, M. D.
Medical Director
Brusch Medical Center
Cambridge 39, Massachusetts

The issue today is whether or not we have the right to add artificial fluoride one part per million (p. p. m.) to our public water supplies, for the sole purpose of helping to delay the decay of teeth in children up to and including twelve years of age. This proposed treatment of an individual condition, which is not a communicable disease, brings up many problems of a moral, legal, economic and scientific nature.

If we familiarize ourselves with some of the facts involved, it will perhaps be easier to understand just what these problems are.

God, our Creator, gave us not only a material body but also a soul and a free will to control the same. It is man's free will that gains for him the inalienable right to choose to say or not to say, to do or not to do, those things that will either benefit or harm him.

An outstanding theologian at the Catholic University of America here in Washington has written, in an article entitled "FOR TOOTH'S SAKE," in essence, that "civil officials who wish to use fluoridation must have sufficient proof to provide moral certainty that it will not be harmful."

Leaders of the Christian Science Church and many other outstanding religious groups also believe that the individual has the right to choose for himself in this matter.

The civil rights of man are protected by the articles of federal and state Constitutions. These have long prohibited the contamination or pollution of our food and water supplies with harmful substances, and about fifty years ago the Pure Food and Drug Act was enacted to set up further protection from such dangerous practices.

There have been two congressional hearings on fluoridation within the past few years and a great number of reports have been published in the Congressional Record. One of these was the famous Delaney hearing and the other was the Weir Bill discussion. After lengthy testimony by outstanding witnesses on both sides, the finding in the Delaney hearing was: "Go show with fluoridation."

Economically fluoridation is very expensive. Only about one-tenth of 1% of our water supply is used for drinking purposes, to that the fluoridation of 99.9% of our water supplies would be a sheer waste. 1.7 grams of pure sodium fluoride added to 2 gallons of water would give 1 teaspoonful of 1 mg. of fluoride a day for two years at one cent a year. This dosage is equal to 1 p.p.m. fluoride.

Also, since it is very difficult to distill the fluoride out of water, fluoridation seriously interferes with the production of such commodities as drugs, canned goods, beers, tonics, batteries, etc. Some manufacturers have been obliged to install expensive equipment to defluoridate their water supply. This has been done with some baby foods, to make them safe for consumption.

Yet again, fluoridation has created a problem for the raisers of animals and livestock, particularly cattle. It has been reported that the breeding of expensive chinchillas has been seriously affected.

It now becomes necessary to enter the realm of chemistry - more specifically that branch of the science known as biochemistry in order to examine the composition of the human body and the effect upon it of certain chemical compounds known as fluorides.

About five hundred years ago, the greatest and most versatile genius of the Renaissance, Leonardo da Vinci, wrote that "Man is composed of air and fire and water." Modern scientific research has proved that da Vinci's hypothesis was correct and that many elements - carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, phosphorus, sulphur, etc. - in various combinations enter into the composition of man's body, thus binding him up indissolubly into the natural universe.

All the elements in nature, alone or combined, have certain chemical actions regulated by volume, concentration, temperature and pressure. All have certain atomic weights, so that they may be differentiated one from the other.

By their nature, elements are of three types - essential, inert or harmful. The essential elements, such as foods, water, etc., are useful and physiollgically necessary for the growth and repair of tissues. The inert elements fill no apparent need and occur mostly as contaminants in food or water. The harmful elements, such as mercury, arsenic and lead, combine with the body cells and interfere with their physiological functions, being classified as toxins or poisons. To this class also belongs sodium fluoride, although it is now said to be necessary or essential.

Fluorine is the most active member of the halogen group of chemicals, occurring in nature in three forms - gas, liquid and solid. In the human body, fluorine is a variant factor and is ingested in water, air or foods. The halogens as a class are saltformers and fluorine has an affinity for calcium wherever it occurs, whether in the soil, in plants or in man. Together they form the chemical compound known as calcium fluoride.

Fluorides occur abundantly in the first mile of the earth's crust. Sea water contains 3 p.p.m. Water, plants and animals absorb fluorides - plants from the soil and man indirectly from plants and animal-flech.

There are two main classes of fluorides: Those occurring naturally, such as calcium fluoride, and those produced chemically, such as soldium fluoride. Calcium fluoride, is not as toxic as sodium fluoride, because it has a higher atomic weight and therefore does not dissolve as readily in water. The lower the atomic weight, the more active the electron.

The atomic weight of calcium fluoride is 99, that of sodium fluoride 41.997. Sodium fluoride has a solubility of 1 part in 25 parts of water and is 85 times more toxic than calcium fluoride.

Sodium fluoride is a highly toxic, cumulative protoplasmic poison. In minute doses, over a long period of time, it reduces immunity, activates the disease processes, especially of inherent factors. It may act as an acute sudden poisoning or as a chronic show poison over a period of time and also as an allergenic substance.

An example of acute poisoning occured in an institutional kitchen, where sodium fluoride was mistaken for powdered milk in the preparation of scrambled eggs. Out of a group of 263 persons, 47 fatalities were reported. It is a known fact that the mortality of fluoride poisoning is very high.

We are here rather interested in the slow, chronic type of poisoning occurring after ingestion of small amounts over a long period of time. Sodium fluoride blocks in the body much like such contaminants as arsenic or lead.

While all Fluroide compounds have some toxic effect, the chemical reactions vary greatly because of atomic weight. Thus stannous fluoride at 2 p. p. m. is more active than 10 p. p. m. of sodium fluoride, and the fluorapatite at 700 p. p. m. is equal to 1 or 2 p. p. m. of sodium fluoride. This last is an interesting fact, because it is in the fluorapatite form that the fluorides, however contacted, finally do their destructive work in the body. You see, to be assimilated by the body, a mineral must first be converted by plant or animal life. Man is much more sensitive to fluorides than animals, generally speaking.

Every individual has a certain allergic tendency. As we know, a person may be allergic to such essential elements as wheat and eggs. Milk may cause a rash in one child, while another may be sensitive to strawberries or penicillin. The ingestion of sodium chloride affects every cell or every system of the body to some extent.

Since sodium fluoride is pharmacologically classified as a protoplasmic poison minute doses ingested over a long period of time are capable of producing an allergic response, precipitating the loss of immunity and activating inherent sensitivity factors.

In this connection, it might be interesting to note the results of studies made at the Brusch Medical Center. It was found that, in over one thousand cases of varying allergic manifestations, every one was alergic to sodium fluoride to a greater or lesser degree, depending on the inherent rate of allergy or immunity loss. The Healy Blood Allergen Diagnostic Method was used. In this test, the blood in gel-media is tested directly with sodium fluoride 1 p. p. m., and the preparation of specimens calls for 5cc. of venous blood from the antecubital vein and 5 cc. of tap water. As many as 120 basic factors are used, including common pathogenic bacteria, common pathogenic molds, indoor and outdoor dusts, contacts, drugs and industrial substances of all kinds. In this series of tests, sodium fluoride was rated a "high sensitizer" or an allergen outside the basic or common everyday factors.

The recognized allergic symptoms or varying kind and degree manifested are: vasomotor disturbances; wheezing (asthma); gastro-intestinal disturbances; urticarir (hives) and acne (dermatitis); circulatory changes (rheumatic, joint, cardiac, etc.); migraine; anemias; and bone changes (arthritic, calcium loss or displacement).

The amount of fluoride necessary to cause cell intoxication depends on the volume and concentration of the drug in the blood stream. It is well nigh impossible to have a fluoride-free diet, and since the advent of fluorine chemistry about twenty-five years ago, there is more fluoride in the air, in the form of dusts, fumes, vapors or sprays. It is all around us, at home and abroad. We contact it in natural and in unnatural radiation, in fluorescent lighting, in television and at the movies.

Today almost every industry uses fluorides in some way. It is used as a flux in tanneries and bleacheries, and plays a part in the production of varnishes, plastics, rubber goods and emeries. This has given rise to many medical books and papers on industrial fluorosis, acute and chronic, and on sensitivity effects on the skin, lungs, kidneys, bones, blood and teeth of individuals handling fluorides daily in the form of hydrofluoric acid or cryolite.

Life in all of its phases involves a constant variety of energy changes. These produce amazing transformations in matter, whether of the soil, the air, the water or the human body. Take the latter, composed as it is of trillions of cells and each cell conducting an efficient chemical laboratory for the transformation of matter. In the adult as well as in the child, all life's processes are carried out by the cell functions. They absorb and secrete essential elements like sugars, salts, fats and proteins and transform them into useful and necessary chemicals for the body machine - namely, enzymes, vitamins, amino-acids, hormones, etc. - which are oxidized to produce warmth and energy, growth or repair. They also provide for the assimilation of foods - essential elements - and for the removal of waste products and ash.

Basically the problem of health is the problem of the normal cell and its activity. These are biochemical in character. Now the make-up of the body is predominantly protein-carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, hotrogen, phosphorus, sulphur and all kinds of combinations and recombinations of these elements. Modern studies have brought about medical recognition of atoms and molecules and knowledge of their presence in the cell substance.

In considering the rate of absorption of fluorides into the body chemistry, there are a number of factors to be taken into account:

a. The condition of the body, or its ph-(acid-base equilibrium). If the body is already acid, more acid will be absorbed.
b. If the liquid is acid, more acid will be ingested.
c. If a person were to drink one quart of water at a time, not as much fluoride would be absorbed as if the same amount of water were drunk over a long period of time in small amounts.
d. Most of our water contains chlorine, which has been added to kill the contagious bacteris. If sodium-fluoride were added to the water, a compound known as silico-tetra-chloride would be formed. In wartime this is known as smoke screen gas, an irritating substance. Other chemicals may have other more irritating reactions.

e. Such beverages as tea have 100 to 500 p. p. m., beer 4.5 p. p. m. and milk 5 p. p. m.

f. When water is boiled, the fluoride content becomes concentrated, so 1 p. p. m. becomes 2 p. p. m. Foods cooked in this water have a higher degree of fluoride content.

g. Fluorides in water are four times more toxic than in foods.

h. Soft waters absorb more fluorides than hard waters, containing buffers like calcium and magnesium, silicates and bicarbonates.

Colorado	2.6 p. p. m.	100% total mottling
Woodstown, N. J.	2.6 p. p. m. plus 485 p. p. m. total solids	No mottling

Factors influencing absorption of fluorides in the human body:

a. Infants and elderly people absorb more.

b. Small amounts frequently ingested mean more absorption. Dead tissues absorbs more.

c. Infections with fever cause more fluoride to be absorbed. Tooth decay is greater after illness.

d. Glandular dysfunctions cause greater absorption.

e. Females absorb more than men.

f. The higher the fluoride content of the soil, the more absorption from foods and water.

Here is the fluoride content of a few common foods: Baking Powder - 3,000 to 4,000 p. p. m.; Buckwheat - 700 p. p. m.; Cabbage - 74 p. p. m.; Fish - 28 p. p. m.; Liver - 1.5 p. p. m.; Rice - 9 p. p. m.; Spinach - 6-8 p. p. m.

Fatty foods absorb more than carbohydrates and stay longer in the system. Foods high in minerals (calcium, magnesium, aluminum), less Fluorine is absorbed. Foods rich in vitamins, less fluorine is absorbed.

Various diets give various combinations of fluorides.

The physiological action of a fluoride varies with the manner of contact - whether it is ingested, absorbed, inhaled or injected.

Fluorides also have a different action on different cells and at different ages.

In passing, I would like to say that it is very difficult to control equipment for the measurement of sodium fluoride 1 p. p. m. and its distribution in the water supplies. Mechanical interference due to erosion of pipes from fluoride action causes many plumbing difficulties.

It will now be seen why it is so important to have pure water, especially when you consider that every cell in the body contains from 65 to 85 percent water. These cells are dependent on waterintake to hydrolyze essential elements for assimilation for the physiological needs of the various cells.

When sodium fluoride is taken into the system, it is absorbed in the upper part of the small intestine and carried by the blood stream into the various cells, organi or tissues in the form of calcium fluoride, robbing the body of calcium. If there is a deficiency of calcium in the system, it will combine with other minerals, displacing them from their essential use and disrupting their function. Just as it acts as a flux in a metal-processing laboratory, so in the human body it activates an insidious demineralization under varying conditions and in varying lengths of time.

It may either enter the cell or remain outside of it, forming an insoluble precipitate which impedes the feeding or breathing of the cell. As a result the cell may lose some of its functions or it may die. Some of the calcium fluoride is carried to connective tissues and bones, where it is stored. Some is excreted through the gastro-intestinal tract, some through perspiration and o.l part through the salivary glands. It has been known that sodium fluoride has been excreted by the kidney's as much as a whole year after its ingestion had been stopped.

It affects the enzymes such as enolase, phosphatase, lipase, urase, and adenosine triphosphate in various ways. There are predominantly protein substances and, as catalysts, have a metallic portion and when this is depressed, their action is nullified.

Thus the formation of adenosine triphosphate is hindered and the action of lipase is decreased by 50% in dillutions of 1 to 15 million.

The inhibition of the enzyme phosphatase results in progressive degenerative changes in nerve tissues throughtout the body by altering the phosphorus-calcium ration and blocking the utilization of vitamins B and B_1, affecting to a large extent the cerebral area.

The kidney enzyme urase activates the glomeruli, which are the absorptive cells of the kidney. Its depression, blocking or loss causes an increase of uric acid accumulation and formations of crystals.

The primary gland in the body, the pituitary, is interfered with seriously. This affects the growth and development of bones, teeth and reproductive organs. As a result, we have bone disturbances of mild to severe degree resembling arthritic and rheumatic changes, often with cartilage involvement. Mottling of teeth, mild to severe, also occurs, as well as softness of teeth and periodontal disease. A nutritional deficiency from failure of this gland causes a mineral imbalance which can bring about premature births, stillbirths, abortions, miscarriages or sterility. Embryonic tissue, which is rich in primary gland substance, especially from the first week to the third month of pregnancy, is affected.

The fluoride replaces the iodine radicle in thyroxin, the active substance of the thyroid gland, which is a key to body matabolism. This action is very important, because the thyroid gland has to do with mentality, achievement, and also the beauty and perfection of the human body. When carbohydrate metabolism is injured, disbetic symptoms such as an excess of sugar in blood or urine may appear. Chronic fluorine poisoning affects the section of the brain concerned with volition and the will to resist. (The same area is affected by hypnotism). Experiments on rats have shown a marked deterioration in mental alertness accompained by a state of passive beeilderment.

Normal adrenal action is interfered with by the prevention of absorption of vitamin C. Then we feel dull and tired for no apparent reason. Very important too is the muscular asthenia or weakness - sometimes even complete loss of function - or again hyperactivity of the muscles.

Fluoride poisoning can also produce persistent blood dyscrasias with resultant changes in ciruulation. Blood-cholesterol may be increased and coagulation retarded from six to twenty times. It has also been found to hasten the course of the disease in mice with cancerous tendencies, because of lessened immunity. Autosclerosis may also be induced.

Common symptoms are affections of the skin, mottled or flecked fingernails and thinning or loss of hair.

Factors contributing to tooth decay are: heredity; glandular metabolic dystrophies; nutritional metabolic dyscrasias; infections, bacterial and viral; traumata; and poor or negligent hygienic practices.

Composition of the teeth: Enamel - 90% tri-calcium phosphate.
10% calcium carbonate

The amount of fluoride in the teeth varies from none or a minute trace, to over 500 p. p. m. in the apatite form.

Due to individual hypersusceptibility, the teeth may become mottled or soft. Mottling may be a mild to severe cosmetic disfigurement. It is not possible to predict who will get mottled teeth. Teeth may also become brittle and break. Fluorides can affect the pulp chamber of the tooth as well, causing periodental disease. Many cases of such a condition are characterized by an allergy to wheat. More teeth are lost from pyorrhoea after thirty years of age than from tooth decay.

TREATMENT:

A properly balanced diet with a smaller amount of highly refined foods.

Forsythe Dental Infirmary records show that children on a balanced diet have had a decrease in tooth decay from 3.51% to .73%

The early teaching of a proper regard for teeth because of their general correlative importance to general body health. Making good dental hygiene a constant habit.

An appreciation of the cosmetic value of good teeth.

Because the tooth germ-cells are laid down so early in the formative stage of a new life and because they are so susceptible to virus of fluoride contact of any kind, the health of the mother must be stressed and measures taken to insure it before, during and between preganancies.

SUMMARY

Since the exact cause of tooth decay is not known nor can it be shown that fluoridated water will prevent it, and because we are already getting plenty of fluorine through our foods and are practically surrounded by it, it is clear that we can have good teeth without fluoridation but not without plenty of essential minerals (calcium and phosphorus), especially not without essential vitamins and a properly balanced dietary intake and of course not without well taught habits of dental hygiene.

Because sodium fluoride is a protoplasmic poison that may accumulate in the body - especially in injured or weakened tissues - fluoridated water cannot be said to be harmless.

Tooth decay is an individual condition and not a contagious or waterborne disease. Therefore sodium fluoride should not be put into the water supplies from which all and sundry must drink. On the contrary, water should be kept as pure as possible, since it is the universal cell solvent so vital to human physico-chemical relations.

Statistics available on decrease in tooth decay are not reliable because they fail to take into consideration that:

Water intake varies with each individual. (Thus an athlete or manual laborer will drink more water than an office worker.)

Fluoride intake varies with diet.

No comparative studies have been made in this regard.

No consideration is taken of the chemical composition of water.

Migrations of the population have not been considered.

If there is a decrease in decayed teeth, an increase in good teeth should appear.

How inconclusive statistics can be was strikingly demonstrated recently in New York State. Dr. Forest of the University of the State of New York reported an increase of 33 1/3% in damaged or destroyed teeth in the fluoridated city of Newburgh over the unfluoridated city of Kingston. Later a Dr. Ast reported 50% more tooth decay in Kingston Newburgh.

When we hear of fluoridation being put into effect at Army and Air Force bases here and abroad, we wonder why the public is never notified that the fluoride is a harmful substance and why it has so often been put secretly into water supplies throughout the country.

Are mass medication and experiment to be forced on the entire population from birth to death, whether they want it or not? Have we no longer the right to personal care by our own family physician or dentist? Is this right to be taken over by police power?

Why is it that we hear only one side of the story from newspapers, radio, television and town meetings? Is this to be the American way of Life?

Organizations and groups everywhere have endorsed this measure whole heartedly with no consideration of its systemic effects. I trust that this will enlighten other women's groups on plans to fluoridate the national water supplies and also see to it that women and mothers everywhere understand the dangers pertinent to the drinking of water containing 1 p.p.m. sodium fluoride by themselves, their children and their children's children. I deem such action one of national defense and the success of such action definitely patriotic to the highest degree.

Women's groups all over the nation are pressuring their representatives to fluoridate water supplies. Especially PT-A groups and other national organizations. These mothers are well intentioned women who have been misinformed. It is your duty to get this information to them before they are successful in doing something they will regret all their days.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT! At least 10,000 babies are born each year with cerebral palsy. There are 7,000 babies born each year with cystic fibrosis. The U.S. has 500,000 cases of multiple sclerosis, which usually strikes people between 20 and 40. There are over 200,000 cases of muscular dystrophy, of which at 50 per cent are children between three and 13. Myasthenia gravis effects about 100,000, mostly infants and older children.

Those are estimates given out by the following organizations: United Cerebral Palsy Association, Inc., National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation, National Multiple Sclerosis Society, Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America, Inc., and National Foundation for Muscular Dystrophy, Inc., National Nephrosis Foundation, Inc., and The Myasthenia Gravis Foundation, Inc. Those have been founded since the advent of fluoridation. Apparently there was no need for them prior to that time, for the diseases were rare. Today they are common. Except in multiple sclerosis, the chief victims are infants and children. Mortality is from 50 to 100 per cent. Treatment of these diseases, symptoms of which are similar to fluorosis, is not based on elimination of the cause. Is the cumulative poison fluorine killing and crippling scores of thousands of our children every year, as it has killed and crippled herds of cattle near aluminum plants in the Columbia River Valley, and in the vicinity of the United States Steel Corporation plant at Provo, Utah? The United States Steel Corporation has settled 900 lawsuits for $4,450,234 as a result of fluorosis in cattle.

The burden of proof that fluorine is not a causative factor in these diseases, should be placed on proponents of fluoridation including the American Medical Association, the American Dental Association, and the United Stated Public Health Service.

Those facts were taken from a bulletin received from the Florida Pure Water Association.

RESURRECT THE U. S. CONSTITUTION!

Report By LESTER O. WISLER
Secretary of the Committee.

The United States Constitution was established for six specific purposes. Of these purposes, Congress has, by legislation, annulled, in whole or in part, these three purposes — establish Justice, promote the General Welfare and secure the Blessings of Liberty. Laws have been passed by Congress enabling a comparatively small group, the bankers, to conspire to rob a large portion of the rest of the people. This certainly is not Justice. It is cruel exploitation. It does not promote welfare nor secure the blessings of liberty.

These purposes as given in the preamble of the Constitution and statements made by Banjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and many other patriots make it evident that they wanted us to have economic liberty as well as political liberty. They planned an American debt-free money system, but American and British financiers moved in on the first Congress and persuaded a majority of the members to commit treason to the people, disregard the Constitution and saddle us with the English banker controlled money system. Alexander Hamilton managed to get his bill, establishing a so-called United States Bank and giving it the power to issue money, through Congress. Thomas Jefferson was bitterly opposed to the bill, called it unconstitutional and urged President Washington to veto it, but in the end Hamilton won out and Washington signed the bill. This was the first nullification, the first act to take sovereign power from the people and give it to the banks. Congress has followed this policy, maintained a debt-based money system which has piled up an unpayable national debt on which billions of dollars in interest must be paid annually.

The banks not only control Congress, but they control practically all our educational agencies. The schools dare not teach the truth about how money is issued. The newspapers and magazines will not print a truthful description of our money system. Of all the clergymen in the nation, only one man undertook to expose the evil in the system. He was silenced and made to recant.

The National Bank Act was very pleasing to American financiers, but it did not satisfy the European central banks. They wanted more central control. So they sent Paul Warburgh, a German banker, over here to advocate a centralized system. In 1910, Senator Nelson Aldrich, Warburgh and five or six other big New York bankers went on a secret trip to J. P. Morgan's hideout in Georgia and drew up the Aldrich banking and money plan. This plan, under the title "Federal Reserve Act," was enacted into law December 23, 1913. And as one writer said: "On that day the Constitution ceased completely to be the governing covenent of the American people, and our liberties were handed over to a small group of international bankers."

On May 18, 1920, the Federal Reserve Board and about fifty big bankers met in Washington and agreed to bring on a big deflation by instructing the member banks to call in their loans and not grant new loans. This made money so scarce it forced prices of products so low that borrowers were unable to pay their notes and the mortgage holders got their property at a fraction of its real value.

One million five hundred farmers were bankrupted, leaving them destitute and without homes. It reduced the value of farm products from thirteen billion five hundred million to five billion three hundred million. This 1920 deflation was really a part of the 1929 and 30's great depression.

In 1927, the heads of the three largest central banks in Europe came over here and persuaded the Federal Reserve Board to lower the interest rate and take other steps to cheapen the cost of money. This increased the stock market boom. Then, in 1929, the Board reversed its policy and ran the interest rate up high. The resulting scarcity of money caused the stock market crash and the depression.

The Federal Reserve Board put us into the depression, but they, seemingly, could do nothing to get us out. Do they have any means of preventing a depression in case a combination of factors tend to bring it on? We are now said to have peace and prosperity, but out economy is still bolstered by preparation for war. If we should get real peace — peace with disarmament, and the millions of men in the Armed Forces and munition plants come home and look for work to produce consumer goods, then what? Especially do we need to consider that now when power machines are increasingly taking the place of man labor.

It should be possible to so balance production and consumption that an adequate supply of money in circulation can be maintained with causing inflation.

SAYS LINCOLN WAS SLAIN IN BANKER'S PLOT

OTTAWA, May 2 --(AP)--A claim that John Wilkes Booth was hired by "international bankers" to assassinate Abraham Lincoln has been advanced by a Canadian lawyer-history student.

Testifying before a parliamentary banking committee here, Gerald G. McGeer of Vancouver went back to 1865 and said Booth was the tool of a bankers' plot hatched in Canada to assassinate the American president because of his policy of greenback currency.

"They (the bankers) were the men interested in the establishment of the gold standard money system and the right of the bankers to manage the currency and credit of every nation in the world," McGeer asserted.

"With Lincoln out of the way they were able to proceed with that plan and did proceed with it in the United States. Within eight years after Lincoln's assassination silver was demonetized and the gold standard money system set up in the United States."

THE HAZZARD CIRCULAR

The following is the well known "Hazzard Circular," sent out from London to American bankers during the Civil War period:

"Slavery is likely to be abolished by the War Power, and all chattel slavery abolished.

"This, I and my European friends are in favor of, for slavery is but the owning of labor and carries with it the care of the laborers; while the European plan, led on by England, is that capital shall control labor by controlling wages. The great debt which capitalists will see to it is made out of the war must be used as a means to control the volume of money.

"To accomplish this, bonds must be used as a banking basis. We are now waiting for the Secretary of the Treasury to make his recommendation to Congress.

"It will not do to allow the Greenbacks (U. S. Treasury Notes) to circulate as money for any length of time for we cannot control that.

"But we can control the bonds and through them the bank issues."

IMPORTANT

"There is an important sense in which the Government is distinct from the administration. One is perpetual, the other temporal and changeable. A man may be loyal to his government and yet oppose the principles and methods of the administration."

ECONOMIC INJUSTICES CAUSE WARS!

AND MONEY IS THE "KEY"

Economics deals with all the physical needs of mankind: food, clothing, housing, equipment, chemicals, machinery, transportation, etc. So long as economics are controlled by the inimical forces, (the self-seeking exploiters), greed and avarice will continue to crush the finer impulses of mankind. Finance Capitalism, (the invisible power subtly controlling most legal governments) is the crystalization of these forces, and usury (interest) in all its shrewd methods is its shackle. The building of Empires and enslaving hundreds of millions of human beings through finance manipulations, and hogging the natural resources of foreign lands, have been possible by the prostitution of what should be men's greatest Public Utility--MONEY.

HONEST MONEY: ECONOMIC COMMON SENSE

An A. B. C. on SCIENTIFIC MONEY

U. S. Senate Document No. 23, 73rd Congress, 1st Session contains many brief quotations from Eminent Men.

Here are a few of them:

JOHN ADAMS: "All the perplexities, confusions and distress in America arise from downright ignorance of the nature of coin, credit and circulation."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN: "The colonies would gladly have borne the little tax on tea, etc., had it not been that England took away from the Colonies their money, (which was issued costlessly) which created unemployment and dissatisfaction."

HORACE GREELY: ". . .by our iniquitous money system we have nationalized a system of oppression, which, though more refined, is not less cruel than the old system of chattel slavery."

BENJAMIN HARRISON: ". . .the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer, under metallic currency."

WOODROW WILSON: "The growth of our nation and all our activities are in the hands of a few men (who control our credit). We have come to be one of the worst ruled governments in the civilized world—a government by the opinions and duress of small groups of dominant men."

CHARLES LINDBERG, SR: "Under the Federal Reserve Act panics are scientifically created; the present one (1920) is the first scientifically created one worked out as we figure a mathematical problem."

THOMAS JEFFERSON: "I believe that banking institutions are more dangerous to our liberties than standing armies. Already they have raised up a monied aristocracy that has set the government at defiance. The issuing power should be taken from the bank and restored to the people to whom it properly belongs."

ROTHCHILD BROS.,: "The great body of the people, mentally incapable of comprehending the tremendous advantage that capital derives from the system (check money and credits), will bear its burdens without complaint, and perhaps without suspecting that the system is inimical to their interests." —London, England.

VINCENT C. VICKERS: FOR 22 years a great munitions merchant, and 9 years a director of the Bank of England: "The existing system (world money system) . . . . creates poverty . . . and is the root cause of war."

ROBERT H. HEMPHILL: former credit-manager of Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta, Ga., "Some one has to borrow every dollar we have in circulation, cash or credit (and billions more that do not circulate). Our present civilization may collapse unless the money problem is widely understood."

F. W. PETHICK-LAWRENCE, financial secretary to the British Treasury, said in 1930: "I am convinced that unemployment as it exists today is not an economic but a monetary phenomenon."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN: "Money is the creature of law, and should be an exclusive monopoly of National government. Money possesses no value other than given it by circulation. Money will cease to be master and become the servant of humanity."

THOMAS A. EDISON: ". . . .the people have an instinct which tells them that something is wrong and that the wrong somehow centers in money. If the nation can issue a dollar bond it can issue a dollar bill. . .both are promises to pay; but bonds fatten the usurer and the bills help the people."

THE BREAK IN THE DIKE---Daughters of the American Revolution (185,000 strong) at its convention here last week, startled the mossbacks and other brainwashed Washington gentry out of their boots by adopting a series of resolutions designed to hand the American government back to the American people. Such as ---,

1. Congress should curb the Supreme Court's unconstitutional and illegal activities and force it to stick to judicial activities as laid down in the Constitution.

2. Abolish the income tax and those 731 illegal corporations which are (illegally) draining the Federal Treasury of $28½billion per annum.

3. Abolish so-called Foreign Aid "which is a definite Communist plan for destroying countries founded on the free enterprise system."

4. Repeal the GATT (free trade) agreements, which are destroying many American industries and factories for the benefit of a few industrial behemoths.

5. Withdraw recognition of Russia and all its satellites. The DAR pointed out that Russia has violated 50 of its 52 agreements with the United States.

6. Get the United States out of the United Nations, and the United Nations out of the United States.

7. Defluoridation of all government and municipal water systems that have had sodium fluorides (known to all CN readers as rat poison) dumped in them at the prodding of the Communists and the Aluminum trusts.

8. Put the brakes on the move toward socialized medicine.

9. Have Congress investigate the use of state mental health bills to commit to state asylums persons guilty of political activities against the cliques in power.

10. Uphold the integrity of the races God put on this Earth, and oppose miscegenation.

11. Condemn the political, economic, socialistic and one-world activities of the (Communistic) Council of Churches of Christ.

12. Opposition to the haphazard and confusing proposal to "merge" the three major armed services "under one uniform."

If enough members of Congress could be un-brainwashed long enough to put these 12 principles into the laws and practices of the land, the U. S. would again be something like the heritage our founding fathers left us.

These 12 points sound exactly like the platform of the Constitution Party. And like the editorial policies of CAPSULE NEWS, which it has been battling for during the 2½ years of its existence.

This could be the break in the dike, because the Daughters are one of the most respected patriotic bodies in the world. If the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Federation of Labor, American Bar Assn, Farm Bureau Federation and all the small business men's organizations would follow the trail blazed by the DAR, America could again become the America it hasn't been since 1933.

Expect nothing of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and National Manufacturers Assns., because they are too tightly tied to the apronstrings of the House of Rockefeller.

The DAR resolutions weren't taken any too graciously by a large segment of the press---particularly the Kept Portion. The sourest note was struck by Drew Pearson, known to Washington newsmen as the Biggest Liar since Ananias.

His "column" attacking the Daughters was typical--about 10% truth. His claim that New York City's water has been fluoridated in spite of local DAR's was typical. Every CN reader knows it hasn't and knows why. And knows that NY's Communist "health commissioner" has been called to Russia for further instructions.

An attack by Pearson is always a boost, particularly to a patriotic organization. Pearson's record shows him to be a bigger traitor to his country than Benedict Arnold.

In his "column" of Dec. 30, 1950, he printed the numbers and dispositions of the American troops in Korea, something the Russian General Staff would have paid a billion dollars and sacrificed 1,000 spies for. (See Morris A. Bealle's RED RAT RACE; $3.50, Columbia Publishing Co., Box 1623, Washington, D.C.)

All the Russian Ambassador had to do was to pick up the Washington POST that morning and cable Pearson's column in toto to Moscow and Peiping. The FBI investigated the "leak" and sent its findings to the Dept of Justice, where it was promptly suppressed.

Pearson's column was intended to smear MacArthur. Someone high in Administration circles was using him to get up courage to fire our greatest general before he chased the Chinese Communists back into Russia.

How many American boys died in Korea as a result of the Pearson-Rockefeller-Truman hatred for MacArthur will never be known. But there were plenty.

RUBBER MONEY--CAPSULE NEWS' discovery of what looks like a $308,000,000,000 shortage (bookkeeping or otherwise) in NATO military aid accounts, between Washington and Paris, has met with two distinct types of reaction in Washington--mystification and indifference.

The mystification is on the part of the Defense Dept officials; the indifference on the part of Congress, most of whose members definitely are brainwashed. The Controller General, who should have disallowed all payments not appropriated by Congress is also hard to pin down.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) which has its headquarters in Paris says definitely and without equivocating or pussyfooting that, in the last nine years, it has gotten $328,280,000,000 from the American taxpayers, $66,726,846,000 from the taxpayers of the other 12 nations which form the NATO bloc.

The Defense Dept officially says that all funds sent to NATO comes from appropriations for so-called Mutual Security Aid, known as MSA. Total appropriations, however, for MSA during the 9-year period in question have only been $46,188,000,000.

The U. S. Treasury would have to issue rubber money, with a 17-1 stretchability, to send $328 billion from $46 billion.

At the Big Gas Factory on Capitol Hill, where the House of Rockefeller is taken care of first and the people last, they shrug it off with two alibis.

One is that "NATO may have been financed with both Defense Dept and MSA appropriations." This is ridiculous because the total Defense Appropriations for these nine years have been $287,734,000,000;MSA $38,726,000,000.

If these sums, which don't even total the NATO figures, were spent it would leave nothing for our nuclear experiments and other routine things.

One Senator's Palace Guard points to the conflicting statements on the NATO records on which CN!s "protest" is based.

One part of it says these figures represent payments actually made. This is logical because, under this NATO statement, Uncle Sap is providing 83% of the funds to protect the 12 European countries from Soviet "aggression."

Another part of the statement says "Total defense expenditures of NATO countries, 1949-1957." The figures themselves give the merry haha to this theory. France's total contribution to NATO in nine years is given at only $25,000,000 and Italy's less than $8 million.

France is spending more than this every month on their Algerian "police action," so it's silly to even suggest that these figures may be the total defense appropriations and expenditures of these countries, in the nine years involved.

The Defense Dept is more rational in its explanations. It says frankly that only $19 billion has been sent to NATO, and most of that is supplies and material.

It also lets another cat out of the bag with the statement that 92% of all money spent for material is paid out to American firms in both Europe and the U. S.

This means the House of Rockefeller. The Big Five of American industrial imperialism in Europe are Standard Oil, Socony-Mobil, General Motors, General Electric and IBM---Rockefeller units all.

The thing that breaks down the alibi of the Brainwashed Brethren is a comparison of the money reported by NATO from the 13 nations involved:

Belgium 142,218,000,000 francs, worth $2,844,000,000 in U. S. money.
Canada $13,679,000,000.
Denmark (6,492 million kroners), $938,094,000.
France (9,795,000,000 francs, worth less than ¼¢ each) totalling $25,000,000.
West Germany (5 years only 24,865,000,000 marks) $8,211,816,000 in U. S. money.
Greece (27,523,000,000 drachmaes) worth $834,000,000.
Italy (4,374,000,000 lire worth $.0016 a piece) $7,998,000.
Luxenburg (3,499,000,000 francs @ 2¢ each) $69,980,000.
Netherlands (12,000,000,000 guilders) worth $3,224,460,000 in U. S. money.
Norway (7,286,000,000 kroner) in U. S. currency $1,022,238,000.
Portugal (17,164,000,000 escudos) $600,740,000.
Turkey (7,938,000,000 liras) worth $476,280,000.
United Kingdom (12,382,000,000 pounds) $34,793,240,000.

THE COMMIES ARE COMING!

Through the income taxes, through the schools, through the Supreme Court, Churches, farming, immigration, NATO, Mental Hygiene, press, radio, television, foreign aid, water supplies, various innocent organizations---

Ralph Courtney in his latest letter, No More Special Privileges, Threefold Farm, Spring Valley, New York, says:

"The American Republic, established for the protection of the individual, has become a society of special interest power groups." The remedy is, he says, to establish a new, no-special-privilege party.

"All businessmen should read Congressman Ralph W. Gwinn's recent speech, The State of the Unions -- Now. Here, Mr. Gwinn--an outstanding libertarian leader and respected spokesman for conservatism--gives the facts to the American businessman straight. In brief, Washington is all but lost because the business community has not risen to its responsibility to elect good men while the labor bosses have practically established ownership over Congress. Trade associations have miserably let their members down and share responsibility for what has happened. Prompt political action is needed now unless "Red Walter" Reuther is to be a dictator of America.

"Apparently, businessmen, notoriously apathetic and ignorant of politics and always suckers for politicians, are beginning to suffer for their blind support of Eisenhower in 1952 and especially in 1956, against the strong advice of publications like RIGHT."

WHAT TO DO.

If you do not want to be a citizen of a second rate nation. If you do not wish your children to be forced to begin their school day by repeating the atheistic creed "There is No God." If you do not relish meeting the communist firing squad or deportation to Siberia or a Mental Institution in Alaska (or in your own state), because you own a business... We suggest that you begin an old fashioned letter-writing campaign to your representatives at Washington and at the State Capitol level. The pen is mightier than the sword!

The power of correspondence defeated the Cancer Quack Bill in California. This power of correspondence should be constantly employed - to pass the Delaney Bill, for instance. There are many networks over the country who meet twice monthly (or as often as they wish and can). They spend the day or a long evening writing letters or cards to Congressmen, Senators, State or local lawmakers, on bills of immediate importance. The advantage is that all information concerning the bill under question is typed and right before them, names of committee members, addresses, and even sample letters to encourage the beginner. A group of fifteen to twenty women can get out about five hundred cards and/or letters a day, working just what time they spare from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

If you would be interested in forming such a group among your own neighborhood, most of all of whom are good patriots who are willing to fight for our Constitutional rights and freedoms, let me know and I will send further details and help in getting started. Please enclose a few stamps to help us with our printing and postage. Thank you.

Those who will contribute and make the statement that they wish to preserve the Constitution and the old-fashioned American way of life - please so state that you are a Patriot. We will then place a key on our addresso-graph plate and you will receive (1). National News & View of Laws, etc. (2) If you live in the state of California - you will be notified of bills pending, etc. Stamps to help us in our work will be appreciated at all times.

OPEN LETTER TO GOVERNOR KNIGHT:

Governor Goodwin J. Knight
State Capitol
Sacramento, Calif.

Dear Governor Knight:

According to reports in the papers you are asking for $3,000,000 of public funds to furnish Salk vaccine to California adults under 40 years of age as well as to the children.

As a taxpayer and a spokesman for a large group of thinking people, I feel justified in asking why you are wasting this large sum of our tax money to promote a scheme that has not proved to be either safe or beneficial in the light of true investigation. We know this vaccine has killed many people and caused paralysis in many more who would, undoubtedly, have been well today without the shots of Salk toxoid.

In spite of all the high pressure sales talk and advertising technique, plus the false reports and garbled statistics designed to sell the people and their leaders this dangerous vaccine, enough of the truth has leaked out so that 17 states have already rejected their supplies of Salk vaccine. Why should our great state be the slowest to wake up to this monstrous fraud?

According to an AP report (Dec. 13) "Only 4 states have used up their grants from the $53,600,000 federal appropriation to aid states in providing free vaccine to people under 20 years of age." It is evident that the people do not want this deadly vaccine and have not been induced to use it up. It is bad enough to have President Eisenhower rob us for this large sum, but why should you rob us again for the same thing?

Health Director Peterson of Idaho didn't mince words when he stated, to the press, that polio struck only vaccinated children in areas where there had been no cases of polio since the preceding autumn. "In 9 out of 10 cases the paralysis occurred in the arms in which the vaccine had been injected."

After the American Public Health Service announced that there had been "168 confirmed cases of poliomyelitis among the vaccinated with 6 deaths..." the Salk promoters clamped down a rigid censorship on the reporting of Salk casualties and the people were told that there were none and that the vaccine was safe and successful.

Even Surgeon General Scheele admitted (to the closed session of the convention of the AMA) that "Salk vaccine is hard to make and no batch can be proved safe before it is given to children." Yet, the public was immediately told that the vaccine was SAFE. They also announced that it was the intention to vaccinate 57,000,000 people before Aug. 1955 (before the propagandized people had a chance to learn of its dangers.) One paper reported that the promoters expected a five billion dollar profit from the vaccine. (See page 29 HIDDEN DANGERS IN POLIO VACCINE. enclosed.)

We elected you because we had confidence in your integrity and ability. If you have been deceived by these ruthless promoters of a multi-million dollar racket it is time to turn the tables and open an honest investigation. On the other hand if you are associated with them and knowingly fostering a program that is doing damage to the people under your leadership you will, sooner or later, have to face charges that will not be altogether pleasing.

I am enclosing the booklet titled HIDDEN DANGERS IN POLIO VACCINE which is a compilation of some of the latest findings on the Salk vaccine program and its hazards as well as other vital information about polio. We believe it is worthy of your serious attention. It is to be hoped that this information will help you to gain a broader view of the subject that will help you to reverse your decision on this life and death issue. We ask that you withdraw your call for public funds to support private rackets.

300 BIRD ROAD — January 8, 1958 — CORAL GABLES, FLA.

Dr. LeRoy E. Burney
U. S. Public Health Service
Washington, D. C.

AN OPEN LETTER TO DR. LEROY E. BURNEY:

When you report to the Associated Press.. "the incidence of all types of Polio declined 62% in 1957 as compared with 1956, and Paralytic cases declined about 73%"...upon what FACTS do you base such a ridiculous statement?

If these figures are a brain child of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, that alone will label them worthless as far as being truthful is concerned. Knowing the inner workings of this corrupt group from their President down to their local "hatchet-men", I trust giving out these false percentages was not intentional on your part. Why continue taking the public on an expedition into Alice of Wonderland?

First, their President, Basil O'Connor, KNOWS of clinics in their country who have long successfully treated Polio, has received invitations to visit the clinics and even when he is in their vicintiy he ignores them... WHY??? Does he place GOLD before GOD???

Second, an M. D. lecturing for them at a public meeting admitted they had no immediate positive diagnosis for POLIO... so for the past several years it is very clear that they "juggle" the figures erroneously, simply to brainwash and lie to the public. We expect the TRUTH from public servants.

If a sick child were brought into your office, could you, any member of your Department, or any member of the A. M. A. that you know give an immediate, correct and positive diagnosis as to Polio. I doubt it.

You'll recall the "puppets" in the old fashioned side-show where they danced, sang, etc., yet didn't have a brain in their head but were simply doing the planned wishes of the "experts" pulling the strings. It looks like the Money-beggars and the monkey-juice peddlers are pulling the strings with our Health (?) officials, dancing and singing while innocent little children die from the unnatural injection of a foreign protein into the body in violation of every law of God and Nature.

Polio is a CONDITION...as is a sprained ankle. It is not a disease caused by any mysterious live virus, as no such virus exists. Polio vaccine has NEVER prevented, or mitigated Polio in even ONE child or adult...yet look at the DEATHS on the doorsteps of vaccine.

An honest Congressional investigation would shock this nation. I suggest you call for such an investigation immediately. Let us bring order out of chaos, eliminate this shameful "racket", prevent further suffering, deaths and disgrace. You may rest assured I'M eager and willing to cooperate without any personal recompense.

Will greatly appreciate a copy of the department's findings of fact which you no doubt have had prepared to support the Press release referred to in the first paragraph of my letter.

Respectfully,

Duon H. Miller

TAXES

Many Americans learned for the first time how devastating the tax "TAKE" is when a 14 year old boy, who won $100,000 on "The Big Surprise" ended up with only $25,000 -- after paying Federal and New York State income taxes.

An economist for the Brookings Institute of Washington says of hidden taxes: "If I were compelled to answer to answer the question concerning the number of taxes reflected in the price of a loaf of bread, my answer would be not less than 10,000 and probably as many as 50,000. The essential point, of course, is that there is no logical point at which to start counting."

Ex-U. S. Official Charges Marxism. A former top Eisenhower administration official said today (January 8, 1958 - INS), "the subtle principles of Karl Marx" have invaded the federal tax system.

"Slowly but surely," said former assistant Secretary of Commerce Lothair Teetor, "federal income and estate taxes are siphoning off every pool of personal wealth in this country, and destroying the source of funds from which business ventures obtain the capital to start and grow."

The end of the road, he said, is the "destruction of free competitive enterprise and our precious personal freedoms."

Sen. Morse (D-Oreg) said he will demand a Senate investigation of federal regulatory agencies, on top of a House inquiry now bogged down in internal row.

"We are giving away our tax dollars all over the world. The foreigners are sending the dollars back to New York, or establishing dollar credits in Federal Reserve Banks--for the purpose of sapping our vital gold reserves."

The Income Tax can be Stopped!!

Did you know that government owned corporate activities, plus "foreign aid" to communistic and socialistic nations, is costing American tax-payers an estimated $33.5 billion per year? YOUR SHARE -- $2,094.00

This expense can be stopped when we adopt House Joint Resolution 123:

> "The Government of the United States shall not engage in any business, professional, commercial, financial or industrial enterprise except as specified in the Constitution"; and House Joint Resolution 232:

> "Congress is prohibited from laying taxes on personal incomes, inheritances or gifts."

Write your Representatives and Senators in your State Legislature as well as in Congress, and in your own words request immediate action on both measures.

Did you know that... In Foreign Socialist and Communist Countries YOUR income tax dollars helped finance such "projects" as:

(1) Highways for Communist Yugoslavia
(2) Bath-houses for camel driyers
(3) A model city for Communist-sympathizer, Nehru of India
(4) Allowed Great Britain to reduce its personal income tax!

This unconstitutional use of your tax dollars is called FOREIGN AID. For such purposes the U. S. Government in 1954 spent - $4.5 Billion*

Chief Justice Marshall was right in saying "The power to tax is the power to destroy." Not only has the 16th Amendment nullified most of the clauses of the Constitution which protected our system of free enterprise, but it is driving us into socialism or welfare stateism and pauperism.

More than a hundred years ago Karl Marx said, "There is only one way to kill capitalism— by taxes, taxes and more taxes."

SEGREGATION AND THE SOUTH

IT IS INDEED an honor to be invited to address the distinguished membership and guests of the renowned Commonwealth Club of California.

I have been invited to speak on "Segregation and the South," and I have been requested to do in twenty-seven minutes that which cannot adequately be done in several hours.

I will do my best to present the case for the South and I know you will give me a fair hearing. I shall try to be objective, but if I fail in this regard, I assure you that I can and will be truthful.

I earnestly hope that no one will be offended. I shall remember that I am your guest, but let me assure you, I will not sacrifice truth on the altar of courtesy.

Integration is defined by Webster: "To bring together the parts; to give the sum total of; V. I. to pass from a complex and unstable state to one relatively simple and stable." It means therefore, a blending or flowing together.

Segregation is defined by Webster: "To separate or set apart from the others or from the rest; to isolate."

It is essential that you realize that in the twelve Southern States, segregation means something quite different from what it means in the other states.

In the South, segregation is something more than a definition in a dictionary. It is something more than securing the Negro's block vote. Segregation in the South is a way of life. It is the means whereby we live in social peace, order and security.

It is the guarantee whereby our wives and children are afforded the common decency and protection which is essential if any harmonious relationship is to exist between two different races. Segregation exists not merely because we prefer it, but because we must maintain it. Self preservation, the first law of life requires that we do so. It is our shield and buckler -- our refuge, our fortress. It is the first commandment and not the last.

Ninety-eight per cent of both races prefer segregation. Integration is urged by the NAACP, a few Southern mulatoes, Northern Communist-front organizations and leftwing labor groups who would use the unsuspecting Negro as their tool. It does not work any economic hardship nor deprive the Negro of any of his constitutional rights.

Negroes Not Hated

I want you to distinctly understand that the South does not hate the Negro. I dare say you know little, if anything about the true Southern Negro. Among the finest characters I have ever known are Negroes.

There is a great deal of genuine affection and understanding between the races. We have lived harmoniously together with a minimum of violence and bloodshed. We have nurtured the Negro, taught him, provided for him, educated him and endeavored to make of him a worthwhile citizen.

The Negro has made great strides and the Southern white man is largely responsible for these advancements. In Mississippi, and other Southern States, Negroes who have desired to do so have become well educated and wealthy. Millionaires are included in this group.

This group has among its numbers doctors, lawyers, teachers, business men, insurance executives, merchants and plantation owners. There is no field of economic endeavor which has been barred to the Negro.

It is only in the social sphere that the barrier is raised.

There are many reasons why the Southerner must refuse to permit integration with the Negro in the social planes of our life. Time will not permit analysis of all of them, but the basic ones can be enumerated.

First, the high percentage of Negroes in the South is of gravest importance, and constitutes one reason.

The national average which the Negro bears to the white man in America is only 10 per cent. In Mississippi, however, it is 45.3 per cent, in Georgia and South Carolina it is 38.8 per cent. The great State of California has but 4.4 per cent.

The State of New York, that yearns so for the welfare of the Negro in Mississippi, has but 6.2 per cent; New Jersey 6.6 per cent; Pennsylvania 6.1 per cent, and Oregon has but eight-tenths of one one per cent. Montana and Nevada have two-tenths of one per cent and South Dakota has one hundredth of one per cent, or 275 Negroes.

In the states of New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, where so much turmoil and strife have arisen over the desegregation of the public schools, where mass demonstrations of violence have taken place, just as they have in Tennessee and Arkansas, if these States had 45.3 per cent of their population Negro, I shudder to think what violent clashes would have taken place between the Negroes and the whites.

If, in San Francisco County, California, as in many other counties in Mississippi and other Southern States, the Negroes outnumbered the whites five and six to one, I wonder how willing you would be to have complete educational and social integration.

There is, as every honest socialist knows, a distinct correlation between the degree of segregation of the races and the numerical strength of the Negro. The reason is obvious.

If in the South the Negro was permitted, as he is in some Northern States, to obtain the ballot by simply reaching 21 years of age, it would mean that no qualified white man in many qualified white man in many counties throughout the South could ever hold public office.

It would also mean that in the halls of Congress, seats now held by competent white representatives would be held by ignorant, incompetent Negroes.

The Negro I. Q.

While I regret that I must do so, I must nevertheless comment upon some of the intellectual and moral aspects of the reason why the South must remain socially segregated.

The average vocabulary of the Negro in the South consists of approximately 650 words. I hesitate to estimate the I. Q. of the average Negro of the South, since the Federal Government refused to give me the results of the intelligence tests given in World War II and in the Korean conflict. The NAACP objected to the furnishing of this information.

I can, however, safely say that based upon the tests which are available from World War I, and from personal experience, there is a vast gulf of difference between the I. Q. of the Negro of the South, as well as in America, and the average white man.

It is because of an inherent deficiency in mental ability, of psychological and temperamental inadequacy. It is because of indifference and natural indolence on the part of the Negro.

All the races of the earth started out at approximately the same time in God's calendar, but of all the races that have been on this earth, the Negro race is the only race that lacked mental ability and the imagination to put its dreams, hopes and thoughts in writing. The Negro is the only race that was unable to invent even picture writing.

An exhaustive study of the program and results of integration in the schools of Washington, D. C., which the NAACP and other leftwing groups fostering integration said would be a model for the rest of the United States to follow, clearly reveals that the average white student who was integrated in the class room with the Negro has been retarded two to three years in his educational progress.

Therefore, it is not to the best interest of America that the white children, particularly in certain congested sections, be retarded three years in their educational advancement.

Never forget that the left-wing socialist groups are forever grading down, never grading up the intelligence, the industry and the genius of this country! They wish to equalize, thereby reducing to a low minimum the intelligence of America.

There is certainly less than one per cent of the white people of the South who would ever agree to marry a Negro. Miscegeneration has largely taken place, I am glad to say, North of the Mason-Dixon line, and whatever laxity which has heretofore existed in Southerners permitting clandestine relations between Negroes and whites has almost entirely disappeared. The rule is now hard and adamant. This is taboo in the South! We presently do not fear miscegenation.

Moral Reasons

The main objection to social integration of the races in our schools or elsewhere by Southerners is for moral reasons. I again repeat, there are exceptions to the rule, and among the finest citizens I have known are numbered Negroes. They are, however, exceptions.

In a remarkable treatise, "Where Is The Reign of Terror?" by Representative John Bell Williams of Mississippi, published in the Congressional Record, on school integration in Washington, it is succinctly shown that the white boys and girls of Washington were subjected to unspeakable vulgarity, immorality and filth.

The truth is often brutal, but I must speak it! As revealed in this exhaustive study, objectively made, the white children of Washington, D. C. were retarded two to three years in their educational advancement.

The obscenity, vulgarity, immorality and brutality which came about requires the constant maintenance of policemen in the halls and corridors of many of the schools.

Obscene pictures and notes were placed on the desks of white girls by Negroes. The radiators, stairs and halls were utilized as rest room urinals by Negroes. The carrying of concealed weapons, the vicious aggravated assaults, the actual rape and attempted rape of white girls and even teachers are some of the results found in this model example of what integration in our high schools can produce.

Make no mistake about this, the Southern fathers and mothers are not going to permit their daughters to be humiliated or insulted by Negroes, or by anyone else!

They are not going to permit their daughters to have to resist the lewd advances of Negro boys. They are not going to permit their sons and daughters to be subjected to the abysmal vulgarity of Negro children who are urged to take every possible advantage of the white children.

Possibly, I cannot speak for the South, but I can speak for Mississippi, and I tell you this, we have already, by constitutional amendment, authorized our legislature as other Southern States will do, to abolish the public schools if the Negro and white children are ever integrated therein.

Make no mistake about it, we will abolish our public school system and establish private schools for our white children, and we will still provide and see that the Negro is educated separately. It will cost dearly, but we will do it.

Few isolated assaults with deadly weapons have taken place in either white or colored schools in Mississippi. Such assaults are numerous in Washington, Chicago, New York and other cities where the Negro and white children have been integrated.

Moral Standards

The Negro, in so far as sex is concerned, is not immoral, he is simply non-moral. He merely follows his natural instincts. The pregnancies and illegitimate births which have occurred in schools in Washington are not abnormal, they are merely astounding!

The high percentage of venereal diseases among the Negro children is tragic. In the South, we have not and do not punish the Negro except in rare instances for desertion, illegitimacy or bigamy.

To have two or more common law wives along with a legal wife is not unusual for Negro men. The white race is now on the verge of forever abolishing incest. The Negro is still far behind. In the South, we punish the Negro for incest and there are now on my Docket, as is frequently the case, indictments against Negroes who have begotten children by their daughters.

We cannot count for nought the natural indolence and indifference of the Negro's nature. We cannot disregard his utter disregard for the laws relating to theft. We cannot overlook his proclivity for drunkenness and dope addiction. We cannot overlook his natural tendency to immorality and violence and subject our children to the terrible consequences resulting from such traits through integration.

In California, the Negro constitutes 4.4 per cent of your total population, yet 19 per cent of all crimes committed in California were committed by Negroes.

In the State of New York, the Negro constitutes only 6.2 per cent of the total population, and yet 40.1 per cent of the prison population of New York is Negro.

In Mississippi, the Negro constitutes 45.3 per cent of the population and commits 73.4 per cent of the crimes.

In the District of Columbia, the Negro's mecca of America, according to the 1950 census, the Negro constituted 35 per cent of the total population, and the Negro prison population is 70 per cent, or twice the ratio of Negro population to that of white population. This is a national disgrace.

The District of Columbia has more Negro convicts than either Louisiana, or Mississippi, Arkansas, Alabama, Florida, Texas, Kansas, or Maryland.

Experienced Southern officials and honest sociologists with experience on the subject, point to the presence of segregation as one of the principal contributions to the low incidence of crime in the Southern States.

"They are firm in the conviction that segregation serves as a restraint on the exercise of imagined license, which the Negro confuses with liberty."

WASHINGTON, D.C.

The most completely integrated city in America is our national capitol. Let us see what integration has produced for the citizens of Washington where, since 1940, the Negro population has increased by 186,000 and the white population has increased by 9,000.

Since the last census of 1950, it is estimated that Negroes compose almost 45 per cent of Washington's adult population, and 71 per cent of the public school population. Yes, the Supreme Court's order to stop discrimination and to embrace the Negro race was issued from a city which had already tried it with what result.

In 1955, as disclosed by the Honorable Evetts Haley of Texas, of every seven murders committed in Washington, six were by Negroes. Of every eight cases of rape, seven were committed by Negroes.

Of every five burglaries, four were committed by Negroes. Of every twenty juvenile crimes, nineteen were committed by Negroes. Of every forty-one cases of venereal diseases, forty were Negroes.

Desegregation has come home to roost. It comes with ironic justice to roost in the city of the Supreme Court itself -- Washington, D. C.

Segregation is but one distinguishing characteristic of the South. It has other attributes.

The South is the citadel of conservatism. It is a bastion for constitutional government. For years Mississippi and the entire South have been gravely concerned over the socialist trend of our Federal Government.

The South has constantly disapproved the prodigal give-away program to the Communist and socialist countries abroad. It resented the competing by the Federal Government with private industry. It deplored the tolerance shown the Communist and left-wing groups in America.

None of these stimuli, however, were sufficient to precipitate a genuine "grass roots" movement, but Mississippi, South Carolina and Louisiana did boldly cry protest in 1948, when these States walked out of the National Democratic Convention in Philadelphia, organized the States' Rights Party, nominated and voted for Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi as its presidential and vice presidential nominees.

The conservative constitutional people of the United States had an opportunity then to vote for two men who were bitterly opposed to the gradual socialization of America and the destruction of the sovereign rights and powers of the forty-eight states by a totalitarian inclined Federal Government. Our stand provoked only ridicule and abuse.

It was only when the Supreme Court of the United States, on May 17, 1954, handed down the infamous Black Monday decision that the people of the South realized that the "die was cast," that the "Rubicon had been crossed," and that they had no alternative except to organize completely and resist the ultimate result of that illegal, sociological and unconstitutional decision.

Citizens' Councils

Thus it was the Citizens' Councils were born. It is the medium whereby the South proposes to and will nullify this illegal decision. The Citizens' Council is the counterpart of the old New England Town Meeting. Membership, however, is selected and restricted.

The Citizens' Council is a good cross-section of that City or County it represents. Among its members are lawyers, doctors, ministers, industrialists, merchants, employees, farmers, plantation owners and laborers.

Jews, Catholics and Protestants alike become members when they subscribe to an oath of non-violence and pledge to support in every legal way possible the maintenance of segregation and preservation of the rights of the States of this Union.

There are in Mississippi 362 Councils with approximately 85,000 members. Throughout the South, there are more than 300,000 Council members. Each Council is completely autonomous and has obtained from the State a Charter.

There is moreover, in each State a board of directors which represents every Council in that State; and there is a south-wide co-ordinating agency in which eleven of the twelve Southern States are represented, known as the Citizens' Council of America.

The Citizens' Council paper has a circulation of 65,000. It is sent into every State of the Union and is placed on the desk of every State Legislator and important public official. Every high school library receives it. Every member of Congress and the personnel of many Federal Agencies likewise receive this paper.

Primarily, the Councils are dedicated to the preservation of segregation and the sovereign rights of the States of this Union. They are opposed to the communizing and socializing of our labor organizations, churches and schools.

The Citizens' Councils are determined to do everything within their power to prevent the broadening of the powers of the executive branch of our Government, and the usurpation by the judiciary of powers vested solely in Congress.

They are determined to resist the enormous and unwarranted pressure which is brought to bear on both major political parties and on all branches of our Government by the left-wing minority groups.

The Councils will resist to the bitter end the proposed welfare state and its destruction of the obligations and liberties of the citizens of this country. Above all, the Councils are dedicated to non-violence and have prevented lynchings and mob action in the South.

The Councils firmly believe that within the confines of the true constitution of this Government and within the Constitutions of the respective States, an orderly, peaceful and legal means exist whereby these objectives can be secured and maintained.

The NAACP

Though there are many facets to the movement to completely integrate the Negro in the South, the basic cause we know is of world wide Communist origin and design.

In 1910 four white persons and one Negro founded the NAACP in New York City. They were Wm. M. Walling, a Russian-trained revolutionary; Mary Ovington White, and Oswald Garrison Villard, a socialist and descendent of a Civil War Abolitionist; Dr. Henry Moskowitz; and W. E. B. DuBois, its present Negro "Honorary Chairman" with not less than 72 citations of Communist, Communist-front and subversive activities entered against his name.

The president, executive secretary, special counsel and chairman of the board of directors of the NAACP; eleven of its twenty-eight vice presidents, its treasurer, twenty-eight of its forty-seven directors -- and many other associates are cited in the files of the Un-American Activities Committee or designated by the Attorney General as affiliated with or participating in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling, or subversive organizations.

We realize that the drive for complete integration of the races in the South is but a small segment in the over-all plan to first socialize and then communize America.

Positive proof of this can be found in the Communist Party's National platform adopted on May 25, 1928, which included every demand for Negroes which is now found in TARGET FOR 1963, a pamphlet published by the NAACP in 1956, giving its program and objectives.

The Communists have decided that every adult Negro in the South shall be franchised so that the Negroes will hold a large number of the seats in the State Legislatures and will occupy the Southern seats in Congress.

The report of the National Committee of the Communist Party of October 5, 1955, concluded with this advice: "Pass civil rights legislation! End segregation! Full equality for the Negro people -- now!"

The February number of the Red magazine, "Party Voice," said, "Victory would mean desegregation, majority rule and Negro representation. Victory would mean the replacement of the Dixiecrat delegations to State and National Legislature by spokesman for the Negro people, labor and poor farmers."

Negro Legislators

What would happen to the country if the twenty-four Southern United States Senators were replaced by ignorant Negro and Communist labor leaders.

I cannot help but wonder how the rights of Californians and the people of all the States would fare if the seats of the United States Senate which have been filled by men such as Cordell Hull, James F. Byrnes, Walter George, Harry Byrd, Bankhead, Thurmond, Ellender, Lyndon Johnson and James Eastland were usurped by Communist Negroes or labor leaders.

What would happen to this country if the hundred odd Southern members of the House of Representatives of Congress were replaced by Angelo Herndons and Reverend Kings.

It is a fact that Communist sympathizers and left-wing organizers, founded the NAACP and largely control it. It is indisputable that the Communist groups have infiltrated some of the labor unions, our colleges and our churches, and are all chanting for integration. A war is being waged by them to capture the American mind.

The South above all other sections of the country has stubbornly resisted and fought these groups which are communizing our Government. The NAACP knows this, labor knows this, and the Communists know this; and we are, therefore, the target of their resentment and unending hate.

We have grown accustomed to the misrepresentation, vituperation and abuse that is daily heaped upon us by Northern left-wing news media and vote hungry socialist politicians.

We can take it, because we are waiting for that day, and believe that it is not far distant, when conservative Americans will unite and all constitutional, liberty loving citizens in this country will rise up in our defense and join hands with us in waging our lonely fight to protect and preserve America from Godless Communism.

A. Phillip Randolph, A Negro and a vice president of the AFL-CIO, and director of the NAACP, outlined the methods to be used in organizing the white and the Negroes in unsegregated unions in the South in this publication, "The Messenger."

He wrote, "The time is ripe for a great mass movement among the Negroes, revolution must come; we mean a complete change in the organization of society, the capitalist system must go and its going must be chastened by the workers themselves; a bullet is sometimes more convincing than a hundred prayers, sermons, protests and petitions; we are especially thankful for the Russian Revolution -- the greatest achievement of the Twentieth Century."

The Real Victim.

Two of the Communist aims calculated to destroy the conservative South have been accomplished: First, the infamous illegal Black Monday decision of May 17, 1954, outlawing segregation in the schools.

The second great victory for the Communist is the Civil Rights Bill recently enacted by Congress on August 29, 1957. This bill inaugurates a Second Reconstruction Era in the South. As Congressman William Colmer has said, it will affect, however, not only the South because the sovereign rights of every State in the Union have been violated.

This iniquitious act, like a loaded pistol, is aimed at the South which has contributed so much to the foundation and perpetuation of our Republic.

It is not the South, the Democratic Party or the Republican Party which will suffer the most. The real victim in the tragedy which was concluded will be the Republic itself, for once the trigger is pulled, the freedom and basic rights of all sections of this country will be further curtailed.

The powerful arm of an already powerful Federal Government will be further stretched out into every metropolitan center into every town and hamlet of this great country, North, South, East and West, for the further regimentation of our citizens.

This could well be the final step next to achieve the goal of the true proponents of this legislation -- the complete destruction of the sovereignty of the States and the centralization of all power of the people in one strong centralized Government under the dome of the capitol in Washington.

As R. Carter Pittman of Georgia has written in his splendid booklet "The Broken Constitution!"

"As we in the South once more pass into our garden of Gethsemane, thence to bear our social, judicial cross, we plead with our brothers to the North and to the West not to let their sympathy and understanding be limited by latitude or longitude."

We will fight the good fight, we will run the straight race, we shall not resort to violence. We condemn and deplore the sporatic acts of violence which have occurred in the South and in the North. We will fight within the confines and powers of our respective State Constitutions and the Constitution of the United States.

If this country is to be saved from Communism, as Carter Pittman has said, "It must be saved by the white people of the South and West." We did not ask for this burden, but we will bear it.

"Our Yankee friends to the North and East may not want to be saved, but they should be saved too, and also the white and the Negro race. Let it be known, however, that we in the South do not intend to obey men, however exalted their seats or black their robes or hearts. We intend to obey the laws of God and to obey the laws of this country which are made in accordance with our Constitution.

We will live as free men, or die as becomes the descendants of those who died that we might live in the freedom to be different, with the liberty to be left alone."

Finally, so that there may be no vestige of doubt in your mind how we feel regarding segregation, I now fervently say, Dum vivamus, tum segregabimur et post mortem, Deo volente, etiam nunc sic erit, which literally translated means, "As long as we live, so long shall we be segregated, and after death, God willing, thus it will still be!"

Though you may not agree with what I have said, it is indeed a great honor and sacred right for you to have permitted me to say it.

The message produced herewith was delivered by Judge Brady before the Commonwealth Club of California at San Francisco. This august body has been addressed by seven United States Presidents beginning with Theodore Roosevelt, and by many of the distinguished leaders of this and other nations.

Judge Brady presides over the Fourteenth Circuit Court District, located at Brookhaven, Mississippi.

SUPREME COURT VOTE GETTERS

The Supreme Court, in the last few years, has rendered 16 "decisions," designed to solidify the Communist vote for the Republican Party. And four designed to get back for the GOP the solid negro vote which Republican leaders cry was "stolen" from them by Franklin Roosevelt.

As CN has shown before, the Supreme Court has no power to make any of these "decisions" which are nothing more than new laws and amendments to the Constitution. The Constitution merely created a Supreme Court and an unnamed number of lesser courts.

They put it up to the Congress to name the lesser courts and give powers to the USSC. Congress has never given the "high" court, which is now pretty low in public esteem and justifiably so, any power except to review decisions of lower courts which contest the Constitutionality of acts of Congress.

Many of the laws passed by the Supreme Court have been subversive, to say the least. One ties the hands of all police depts and makes it difficult to solve crimes of violence. Another ties the hands of the efficient FBI in keeping Communists from boring from within our Govt. bureaus and stealing defense secrets.

One brazenly says the law enforcement people can't do anything about plotters to overthrow the Govt by violence, even tho there are definite laws to protect the US. In a brazen "decision" those nine intellectual baboons said the FBI must wait until the acts have been committed and damage done before doing anything.

Protection of the American people against the force and violence of Communist plotters is against the left-handed principles of the USSC.

The amazing thing is that governors and Congressmen and county and city authorities take this hogwash seriously. If a few state legislatures would interpose it might bring the people to their senses.

If nearly every member of Congress wasn't brainwashed, the court would have been impeached long ago. The Supreme Court problem far transcends its act in destroying good race relations and putting back integration, in states that want it, 50 years.

If the GOP leaders would get wise to themselves, they would note that the Segregation crime has backfired on them. In the off-year elections in New Jersey, New York and Virginia, 20% of 1956's negro Republican votes deserted to the Democrats.

The Senate Internal Security Committee hit the nail on the head when, in a report filed with the Senate last month, it said the net result of these 16 "leftist" decisions has been comfort for Communists and criminals, frustration for law enforcement officials, serious interference with Congress' self-informing function and destruction of all efforts of the American people to protect themselves against subversion at home thru their State governments.

Why, then, doesn't Congress act to impeach all nine?

AT LAST, A FEDERAL JUDGE WHO HAS READ THE CONSTITUTION.

Federal Judge Lemly of Arkansas has taken his place alongside Federal Judge Atwell of Texas as two Federal Judges who know the Constitution. There may be others but they have been afraid to come out and say so.

Now that the laws of Arkansas and the Constitution of the United States have been reactivated in Little Rock, the question is "Where do we go from here?"

The Negro Ku Klux Klan has announced that it will immediately appeal to the nine intellectual baboons in Washington who ripped the US Constitution to shreds in the first place. Since the "high" court is on a binge of destroying the American way of life; and aiding in the projected Soviet "take-over" of America, it won't be surprising if they throw another monkey wrench in the machinery of race relations.

Governor Faubus of Arkansas hit the nail on the head when he said, of Judge Lemly's legal decision:

"The Negro citizens of our community would do well to accept today's ruling, which will do much to re-establish the normal friendly relations which prevailed here before. However, this is not a final settlement of the problem.

"Had my plea (either in Little Rock or in Newport, R.I.) been heeded by Mr. Eisenhower, nine months of turmoil and tension would have been avoided, as well as the saving of more than $5 million of public funds."

Judge Lemly was told that the net result of the illegal actions of the Supreme Court and President was at least 40 fires in the high school locker rooms, suspension of some white students, expulsion of a negro girl and general disrespect for laws that would let a court in Washington flout both the US Constitution and the laws of Arkansas.

And the South isn't the only part of the country the USSC has messed up, insofar as race relations are concerned. Pennsylvania has its local segregation laws and in one instance (Levittown) it flared into the open. In Philadelphia the "old town" is declared the black belt. White property owners and real estate men will not sell or rent to Negroes in the newer sections of town.

In New York City segregation is a fact. The negroes of Harlem have their own segregation laws which they enforce with switchblade knives.

In New York those who don't want to rent houses to Negroes don't do so and we find similar situations in Chicago, Detroit, and elsewhere.

Washington's public schools have badly deteriorated since integration. A Committee of Congress found that the standard of education has been lowered about two scholastic grades by the Supreme Court's illicit "law." Washington's white population have uprooted themselves and moved into Maryland and Virginia to such an extent that 70% of the national capitol's resident population is now colored.

Virginia has solved its problem and protected the integrity of its own laws and the US Constitution in its own state. The Legislature vested in the Governor power to close any public school, in which sufficient Federal pressure has been exerted to force integration into that school's registration.

It has also provided the money and empowered the Governor to send all Virginia children, white and black to private schools, operated within the state law and the Constitution of the United States.

Most members of the House and Senate are brainwashed before they are elected. Otherwise they wouldn't vote like so many sheep on the Rockefeller foreign aid and other programs. They are brainwashed by a bombardment of propaganda from their party headquarters in Washington. Therefore, few of them have ever read the Constitution and those who have are badly confused by this bombardment.

Were Congressmen in general familiar with the Constitution they would have long ago impeached all nine members of the "high" court. They wouldn't have needed the bill of particulars filed against these nine intellectual baboons by Rosalie Gordon in her revealing book (NINE MEN AGAINST AMERICA) published recently by Devin-Adair.

Miss Gordon enumerated, explained and documented 16 overt acts of the court, not only strictly against the Constitution but designed to aid the Communist take-over. Incredible as they were, these items are 100% correct. The Supreme Court will continue to pass these illegal laws until they are impeached by Congress, as they have gone mad with usurped power.

A good example of brainwashed Senatorial and Congressional "thinking" along the propaganda lines propagandized by the Supreme Court is this "gem" from Senator Kennedy of Massachusetts who is the Communistic Walter (Big Red) Reuther's candidate for the Democratic nomination in 1960. Says Senator Kennedy:

"The First Congress (in accordance with Sec. 1, Art. 3, of the Constitution) provided for a Supreme Court. Since that time a great many decisions and a great many statutes have accepted the Supreme Court as the body established by the Constitution to interpret the law, and from which court no appeal can be taken.

Senator Kennedy says that what the Supreme Court says is the law of the land because "one of the justices thereof said the law is what the Supreme Court says it is --- not what the Congress votes it is."

Just like that, the Supreme Court has scrapped the Constitution. It gets away with it only because Senator Kennedy and his prototypes lack the power to think for themselves.

CHIROPRACTIC "COMES OF AGE"

Many medical faces are red today because a doctor of chiropractic, Nicholas L. Grimaldi of Hartford, took the basic science examination in Connecticut and finished ahead of all 64 candidates--80% of whom were medics and osteos.

The medical faces are red because too many of the profession have been poll-parroting the AMA propaganda that chiropractors are "ill-trained" and not capable of treating human ills. Those persons are, at the very least, 30 years behind the times.

When chiropractic first began to take a foothold by curing cases the meds were powerless to help, the science wasn't regulated by state laws as it is now. Many opportunists, including a notorious medical abortionist who was run out of Boston, started "schools" in which they professed to teach chiropractic in 30 days.

These 30-day wonders were, of course, ill-trained. But with the passage of laws in 43 states regulating and setting standards for the practice of chiropractic this has all changed. The medical lobby is responsible for the passage of basic science laws in many states, designed to keep chiropractors from practicing chiropractic.

These BS laws decreed that a chiropractor must first take an examination in what almost amounts to a medical course without drugs and surgery. The subjects were anatomy, physiology, bacteriology, chemistry and pathology. Chiropractic colleges already taught the first two so most of them added the last three, and this coup d'etat on the part of political medicine didn't exactly work.

The Grimaldi case illustrates the point. Dr. Grimaldi's average (91.6) was the highest ever attained by a candidate before the Connecticut State Board since its inception. He is a 1957 graduate of Lincoln Chiropractic College of Indianapolis.

For years chiropractic colleges have been better, according to the medics' own yardstock---classroom hours, than the medical schools. For details see Morris A. Beale's best seller THE DRUG STORY - $3.25 HEALTH RESEARCH, MOKELUMNE HILL, CALIFORNIA.

HOHENSEE AND THE HOODS

After the Food and Drug Hoodlums had Dr. Adolph Hohensee "safely" stowed away in the Federal hoosegow at Lewisburg (Pa.) they set about to systematically break his spirit by burglarizing his home and farm, and putting his wife and brother-in-law in the county jail on a phoney contempt charge.

(Editor's Note: How this has "worked out" is attested by the fact that Dr. Hohensee is back on the lecture platform, doing his part to make a healthy nation of the USA. He has proven that his intestinal fortitude is 100 times as great as that of the whole Food and Drug Administration quack personnel).

Acting in conjunction with the same Pennsylvania "law" authorities, who collaborated in the frame-up of the doctor, they put his property up for a "forced sale."

They first "sold" his $200,000 creamery for $26,000 including five acres of ground. This building is where Dr. Hohensee used to collect and distribute raw milk to those Pennsylvanians who preferred this wholesome product to the chalk-and-water product they have to buy at the "orthodox" dairies.

They "sold" his herd of 200 Holstein cattle for $23,000. One bull alone cost $26,000.

They "sold" $20,000 worth of tractors and other farm machinery for $8,000.

They intimidated the insurance companies, which had underwritten all of the Hohensee real estate and improvements, into cancelling this insurance, and thereby violating their solemn contracts.

Dr. Hohensee thinks they intended to burn down all of his properties, but that he got out of prison too soon for them---five weeks off for good behavior when he should have had four months. His employees at the farm suspected something like this when the insurance was cancelled and took extra precautions to guard the properties.

Feeling that Dr. Hohensee's wife didn't know what the score was, and was therefore intimidatable, the hoods brought pressure on the Federal Trade Commission to get into the act. The FTC has jurisdiction, ordered by Congress, over all false advertising.

Whenever the Drug Trust wants a vendor of natural vitamins, or anything that will keep people away from drug stores, framed the Food & Drug hoodlums usurp the FTC's jurisdiction and do the job. This is illegal but any brainwashed judge will let them get away with it.

So, the FTC ordered Mrs. Hohensee and her brother (Eugene Basylyga), to produce all of the doctor's records. Because the hoods had already stolen most of them, they were unable to comply with the FTC's request, and with the subsequent court order.

Mr. Basylyga was jailed on October 22nd and Mrs. Hohensee on December 17th. Both had to spend their 1957 Christmas in prison.

While these two were in jail, the hoods ransacked the entire Hohensee estate at Chapman Lake, Penna. Having already stolen the records, they then took cover by claiming they had "found" them five miles away.

Then when they "examined" the stolen records they didn't know what to do with them. The wish, which was father to their thoughts, that they would incriminate Dr. Hohensee blew up in smoke.

Otherwise, the doctor wouldn't be on the hustings preaching the gospel of living according to nature and braking the profit spiral of the Drug Trust and its allied beneficiaries.

- THE ROCKS' FEDERAL RESERVE BANK MAKES MONEY

(By Emanuel Josephson, M.D., Author of "Your Life Is Their Toy," et al) --- The Rockefeller interests wrote the Federal Reserve Act, forced it thru Congress after many unsuccessful efforts, and now completely control the Federal Reserve System through their agents.

They have planted as its head man (Chairman) William McChesney Martin of their Council on Foreign Relations. And Winfield W. Riefler of CFR as a member of the Board of Governors. And Jay E. Crame, Standard Oil director, as chairman of the New York branch, FRB.

In short, through their Federal Reserve Board, the Rock Mob has usurped the power to issue currency which the Constitution gave exclusively to Congress. They are thereby in a position to manipulate the nation's wealth, create booms and depressions and rob the people of their jobs and homes and life savings.

For the purpose of deluding us "peasants" and diverting suspicion from themselves, the Rockefeller conspirators have subsidized the publication of many false tales about "international bankers" being the authors of the bill and the operators of the FRB.

The truth of the matter is that the international bankers (outside of the House of Rockefeller itself) have never succeeded in taking over the nation's banking system in spite of their efforts in the Bank of the United States attempts. Native American intelligence that had not then been brainwashed out by conspirator "philanthropists." Pres. Jackson blocked such a raw, un-Constitutional steal in the 19th century.

It was not until the 1907 panic, precipitated by him in vengeance against the Standard Oil dissolution decree by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis that culminated a Teddy Roosevelt - J. P. Morgan feud with Rockefeller, that John D. Senior set about gaining control of the nation's banking and currency system.

The task was assigned by the conspirators to Nelson Aldrich Rockefeller's grandfather, Sen. Nelson Aldrich. Being unacquainted with central banking as it existed in Europe, the Senator turned for assistance in drawing up the scheme and the bill, to Paul Warburg.

Warburg had been brought over from Germany by the Rockefellers and placed with their bankers (Kahn, Loeb & Co.). He brought with him the know-how that the Rothchilds had attained in banking control, as fiscal agents of the Vatican and other European powers.

A conference initiating the conspiracy was held at the Rockefeller cottage on Jekyll Island, a multi-millionaire colony that boasted control of the US Government and its finances.

The House of Rockefeller has been learning the liquidation methods of Russian Communism while playing footsie with the Soviets. The Scranton frame-up of Dr. Adolphus Hohensee couldn't have been committed "better" or more ruthlessly by Lenin, Trotsky, Stalin, Kruschev and the whole gang of Kremlin cut-throats put together.

The facts are just coming out in court documents filed by the victim of Drug Trust greed and Rockefeller-Kremlin methods. For those who just "tuned in," Dr. Adolphus Hohensee, one of America's better known nutritionists and lecturers, was given a year and a day in the Lewisburg Federal Penitentiary after a "trial" that was worse even than the Boston affair in which Earl Irons was railroaded for a similar "offense."

Instead of printing an account of the trial, the Scranton "news-" papers published a bitter mendacious editorial distribe in lieu of the court proceedings. A Scranton "news" reporter even participated in the frame-up.

Dr. Hohensee was charged with shipping a 10-pound package of whole wheat, in interstate commerce, from Scranton (Pa.) to Denver (Colo.) and another one from Scranton to Phoenix (Ariz.). Since there is no law against shipping whole wheat, even though it is a product that if (widely) used would cut down the Drug Trust profits, the Food & Drug Hoodlums, who engineered the affair, told the court that whole wheat is a drug.

A brain-washed judge either believed this, or pretended to believe it. Even then the hoods had to go to ridiculous extremes to "make a case." They told the court he had "misbranded" this whole wheat. When it was found there was only the descriptive label on it they then charged he had shipped wheat "without adequate directions for its use, and failed to state the purpose and conditions and diseases for which it was intended."

The hoods were in a quandry to continue the case when one of them thought of another good joke. They would claim that when Dr. Hohensee lectured on nutrition this constituted "labeling" of any product he had for sale or interstate shipment.

After quite a parley with the brainwashed judge, they convinced him that they couldn't frame their victims unless the court agreed that platform lectures constituted "oral labeling." This new distortion of Noah Webster's Dictionary sounded good to "hizzoner", so the Dictionary was ruled obsolete.

The judge's conscience was hurting him a little so he asked the hoods for specific instances of harm that had been done by Dr. Hohensee whole wheat. Their own chemist had admitted on the witness stand that no one was harmed nor have they ever had a complaint. The hoods went into a huddle and came out with instructions to the judge to forget about the harm, they wanted Hohensee put away and stopped from making the public nutrition-conscious.

The judge obediently took his orders and told the jury to bring in a conviction. They jury, being mostly on the moronic side, complied.

When they got Dr. Hohensee in Lewisburg the Drug Trust and American Medical Association still weren't satisfied. They tried to break his spirit by subjecting him to the sort of indignities Upton Sinclair wrote about in his Lanny Budd series. The way Hitler's brutes treated helpless Jewish merchants whom they had yanked out of their homes at midnight. One of their methods was to drag him down three flights of stone steps by the arms, under the pretense that they were putting him in "solitary."

Another was to have the prison goon squad beat him until he was black and blue, and bleeding from the mouth, nose and bowels.

Still another was to deny him copies of CAPSULE NEWS which were mailed at his request. When the warden was told he was violating the First Amendment and abridging freedom of the press he wrote to Washington about it. At the Dep't. of Justice here, the chief librarian for Federal prisons set them straight on the first amendment. Dr. Hohensee was allowed to read CAPSULE NEWS.

American CAPSULE NEWS Washington, D. C. June 7, 1958

SCRANTON, U. S. S. R.

(Continued from last issue) After Dr. Adolphus Hohensee had been "safely" put away in the Lewisburg Federal Prison, by the Food & Drug Hoodlums, a brain-washed judge and jury of morons, his wife and brother-in-law instituted a number of legal proceedings.

There were, in effect, appeals to higher courts to review the illegal acts of the trial judge and the unjudicial conduct of the Hoods and the brainwashed district attorney. Had these appeals been heard, and given a proper judicial consideration, Dr. Hohensee would have been released, and would have had strong legal grounds for damages against all concerned.

What they did to him in the Lewisburg clinic is best described by the doctor himself in a letter to an Albuquerque attorney:

"What transpired at Lewisburg happens to be a long, long story of attempted brainwashing, drugging, doping, torturing, beating to within an inch of my life--all because I refused to dismiss certain civil suits for libel, conspiracy, etc., against certain newspapers, a Federal judge, a former Federal District Attorney, the American Medical Association, etc.

"On the night of October 24, 1957 I was taken out of the honor dormitory, stripped of my clothes, given only a pair of coveralls without buttons, and thrown into a cell in the segregation section on the third floor, without any blankets or covers of any kind.

By morning I was so frozen that my teeth were chattering, and I could hardly stand on my feet.

There I was visited by an associate warden and told I must dismiss all pending litigation against the warden and doctors, as well as to dismiss all law suits and actions.

When I told them I would, under no circumstances, do this they "worked me over" to where I was bleeding from the nose and mouth.

I was dragged down three flights of stairs by my arms and wrists, my heels and buttocks bounding off each stone step of three flights of about 12 or more steps in each flight.

As we arrived on each flight they would stop and kick my ankles until they were black and blue, resulting in such excruciating pain that it was hardly endurable.

After this treatment, they threw me in a room where some men were seated. Among these I recognized Associate Warden Blackwell, who proceeded to give me another opportunity to agree to withdraw the lawsuits. I again refused.

They proceeded to draw me into another room, stripped me of the bloody coveralls; put another pair on me and then dragged me to the hole (dungeon). This is a cell about 6 x 10, floor made of uneven tile, that makes it almost impossible to stand, sit or lie on same.

At the front of the cell there are a number of powerful light bulbs so placed that the light or the reflection shines on you day and night. At the very top there is a vent through which fumes are released that have a tendency to thicken a man's head until it feels it will burst any moment. No toilet or sink. Just a hole with a grate over it in the middle of the floor.

I was thrown into that hole on Friday morning, October 25, 1957 after the above-described beating and was told that I would remain there until I died or lost my mental balance.

After a number of blackouts I came to in the prison hospital where the medical officer ordered that I be given complete rest and not allowed to walk. After the prison doctor had refused to obey orders and certify me as "a psychotic", they took me to the Federal Prison Hospital at Springfield, Missouri.

They wanted me to sign a paper permitting them to perform any kind of surgery they wanted on me. I refused. When they began to let me alone and allow me to rest and not be subject to beatings and indignities I finally began to regain my strength and health.

I was released at one AM on the morning of April 13th and returned to what was left of my ranch and other properties at Scranton.

(What became of those properties while the owner was helpless is described on page 122-123).

REPORT ON THE ROCKEFELLER REPORT

Dr. Emanuel Josephson of New York City, America's leading expert on that American blight known as Rockefellerana, gives additional information this so-called Point Four Program, another method of looting the American taxpayers for benefit of the House of Rockefeller. Dr. Jo says:

Nelson Rockefeller "came into his own" when he engineered our defeat in the Korean War by the dismissal of General Mac-

Arthur before he could wipe the Chinese Reds off the map of Asia. Nelson professed "horror" at the brutality of his Axis partner toward our G.I.'s, thereby creating another of the House of Rockefeller's "emergency" devices for looting the US on a tremendous scale. Thereby he laid the groundwork for economic chaos and a vast Depression.

He named it the Point Four Program. The Point 4 Program is of exceptional interest because in its development the line of command in the Rockefeller-Soviet Axis is more apparent than is usual in these "foreign aid" steals. The plan originated with the Rockefellers as one of the fake philanthropies of their Foundation in the late 1930's, at the same time the UN conspiracy was hatched by them. Then the propaganda was transmitted by the Alger Hiss cell in Rockefeller's Council on Foreign Relations to the agenda of the Communist Party. It became the Communist "Party Line."

The conspirators had brought the US to the rescue of the Soviet partners of the Axis. And the Rockefellers and their Foundation had openly embraced their Soviet agents, including the Eislers, the Browders and a host of others, and intensified their support of an endless array of "fronts."

Earl Browder was assigned to the task of broadcasting and popularizing the conspirators' treasonous scheme. This he did in a book published in 1944 by the Rockefeller Foundation-subsidized, International Publishers, entitled TEHERAN, OUR FAITH IN WAR AND PEACE.

The Rockefeller conspirators then had kinsman Harry Shippe Truman mouth their treason in his 1949 inaugural address, as his Point 4.

Directly thereafter, Nelson Rockefeller ordered his own appointment once again in another of his Finnegan-in-again open omnipartisan, chameleon emergencies in public office, as dictator and boss when a particularly larger steal (never less than billions) is to be made from the public treasury.

He made himself Chairman of the International Development "Advisory" Board for the express purpose of putting over the treasonous scheme hatched by the conspirators a decade prior.

Thus was born another of the endless series of Rockefeller "reports" (orders). As usual, it had been published in advance, and was promptly released, amid a flood of propaganda, in a book entitled PARTNERS IN PROGRESS.

The "partners" in crime are avowedly, and openly the Soviets and the Rockefellers. It was no mere chance that the title had been suggested by Browder in his Teheran book, published 7 years prior; and that the ideas expressed by Nelson in his "foreword" were identical with those of his associate.

The purpose of Point 4 is the same as that of all the other internationalist foreign aid schemes launched by The House, including Lend-Lease, UNRRA, "Marshall Plan," i. e. looting U. S.

taxpayers.

In addition to enriching the conspirators, financing the companies that they had seized as their private war loot, enlarging and repairing their war-damaged oil refineries, re-opening and extending their damaged oilfields, and expanding their Empire and profits, at the expense, in taxes and lives, of American "peasants."

The program was especially conceived to train cheap foreign labor in the skills that would qualify them to compete mercilessly and ruinously with American laborers, in foreign industries owned by the conspirators directly or through dummies.

The ultimate object of the conspiracy is to drive to the wall all American industry for which ruinous competition can be set up in foreign lands; to create vast unemployment among America's "peasant" workers; and to precipitate a more ruinous depression than any earlier generation of Rockefellers had produced.

It was no accident that Moscow-trained Red (Walter Reuther) praised boss Nelson Rockefeller's advocacy of the "Party Line" in a plug that was published on the back cover of Nelson's book PARTNERS IN PROGRESS.

Nelson Rockefeller devoted twenty-four hours a day to pushing his scheme through Congress, with the aid of his Red minions. And he toured the "sticks" lecturing to promote this steal for which he demanded nineteen billion dollars tax money.

CANCER

Congressman Burdick of North Dakota had placed in the Congressional Record some hitherto suppressed facts about the Food and Drug hoodlums using Post Office lobbies all over the U. S. to post slandering circulars vilifying the Hoxsey Cancer treatment. Mr. Burdick showed that the Food and Drug hoods added a barefaced lie to their slander. The hoods said "they had investigated 77 cases of Hoxsey cures and found none of them cured." The Burdick evidence showed that the F. & D. A. didn't investigate a single one of these 77 cases but, instead, turned them over to a Texas quack named Meadors.

DR. A. C. IVY vs. "BIG LIE" STRATEGY

Doctor Andrew Conway Ivy appeared on 7 May 1958 to testify before the Senate Interim Committee on Public Health Hearings to Study and Analyze the Facts Concerned with Fraudulent, Dangerous and Deceptive Practices in the Field and Treatment of Disease. With Senator John F. Thompson as chairman, this committee was formed to study the questions raised by the recently defeated Assembly Bill No. 2359, notoriously known as the Weinberger Cancer Board Bill and proposed by one Caspar Weinberger, recently defeated in the California primary for nomination as Republican candidate for Attorney General.

Assembly Bill No. 2359 proposed the establishment of a political board to evaluate various forms of cancer therapy falling outside the province of surgery and radiation. The bill was sponsored by the American Cancer Society and the California Medical Association. Since both of these organizations had publicly gone on record as condemning any form of cancer therapy except surgery and radiation, the practical intent of this bill was to limit by legislative fiat cancer therapy in California to surgery and radiation. Influenced by an outraged public, the members of the California Senate killed this bill in committee last year, and the politically knowledgeable have attributed the political defeat of its author, Caspar Weinberger, to this proposed legislation.

In qualifying himself as an expert, Doctor Ivy stated: "I was the representative at the Nuremberg trials of the doctors concerned with committing medical atrocities. I was the expert there on the subject of medical science, medical ethics and medical jurisprudence. I represented world medicine there. I was selected by the Secretary of State, and on the recommendation from the Board of Trustees of the American Medical Association. . . so I'm competent in the field of medical ethics."

In opposing the proposed limitations on the freedom of choice of doctor and treatment, Ivy continued: "If these persons are licensed to practice medicine and . . . use something not on the approved list, they would lose their license to practice medicine in the State of California . . . I'm against such regimentation in the field of the treatment of cancer patients, or in the field of any other treatment. . . ."

Later in his testimony, Ivy reiterated and enlarged upon his statement: "Any committee with such authoritative power as spelled out there (proposed cancer legislation) can, of course, in the course of time, be subject to corruption. That is true of political organizations as well as religious organizations and medical organizations."

Questioning the possibility of corruptibility in such organizations, Chairman Thompson queried: "Isn't 'corruption' rather a strong word? Wouldn't you sooner say 'prejudice'?"

"No, I wouldn't think so," replied Ivy.

Economics of Cancer Therapy.--After reviewing in the course of the hearing the possible motivation of avarice on the part of proponents of forms of cancer therapy exclusive of surgery and radiation, the committee obtained the following general summary through Ivy's direct testimony: "(Cancer patients) won't take the word of a D. O. or M. D. that nothing can be done for them. They look for the last straw. . . ." For surgery and/or radiation, most cancer patients, Ivy pointed out, "have spent all the way from $5,000 up to $100,000 before they have reached this hopeless stage, and then are abandoned and written off, and that is a tragic situation insofar as our management of terminal cancer patients in our country is today."

Testifying on the cost of Krebiozen, an agent for cancer that Ivy contends deserves scientific study, he pointed out: "No avarice was manifested, because it (Krebiozen) was all given away, and contributions were not accepted up until about three years ago, when we reached the bottom of the barrel of our supply of money, and then we asked the patients, which is entirely legal and under the regulations of the Federal Food and Drug and Cosmetic Act, to contribute on the basis of their ability to contribute towards the cost of production and distribution of Krebiozen. Since then about sixty per cent of our patients have been unable to contribute anything; and I presume that about one per cent of the patients are able to contribute the full cost. Where is the fraud? Where is the avarice?"

(Although not brought out in the present hearing because of the failure of Mr. Harry Hoxsey to appear before the committee, it is established that the maximum cost of the Hoxsey treatment is $460; though those unable to pay receive it for nothing).

Popular Clamor for Medical Therapy of Cancer. Despite the millions of dollars of publicly donated funds spent by such organizations as the American Cancer Society to propagandize the alleged virtues of surgery and radiation in cancer and to condemn any other forms of cancer therapy, there is a popular clamor and even insistence for these other forms of therapy. This was manifest by the fact that the Weinberger Cancer Board Bill when before the California legislature drew more mail from the public than all other legislative proposals combined and the majority of the letters opposed any legislative attempt, however adroit, to restrict therapy in California to surgery and/or radiation.

Discussing this phenomenon, Ivy pointed out: "Then we have a group of patients which have to be recognized. They consist of those who refuse surgery, x-ray or hormones. Now, why do they do this? I know, because I have questioned a lot of them. They refuse surgery because they have seen four or five cases of cancer in their own family, and they have developed a cancer and they have outlived the patients who have been submitted to surgery, or, on the basis of their observations they claim that these people who have not been operated on or submitted to x-ray live longer than those who have. That is their impression. That is why they say this. I'm not saying that this is true or false; I'm telling you what I have observed."

(By way of background not brought forth by Ivy or others at this hearing, we may cite a comprehensive, though popularly ignored, study on the survival rates of cancer patients treated by surgery and/or radiation as contrasted to untreated patients. Professor Hardin B. Jones, of the University of California Medical School, on the basis of work supported by the U. S. Public Health Service, the Atomic Energy Commission, and the Guggenheim Foundation presented a paper before the New York Academy of Sciences in January 1956 on "Demographic Consideration of the Cancer Problem," reported in pages 298-333 of the Transactions of that society, Vol. 18, Ser. II, No. 4. Dr. Jones' concluding discussion in this lengthy statistical review includes the following remarks: "It has been suggested that the untreated cases are perhaps longer-lived than the treated cases, and the evidence is strong enough to warrant full attention to this part of the cancer problem, for not only is there complete uncertainty of the efficacy of cancer treatment today, but there is also the possibility that survival tendency is less with treatment. It is most likely that, in terms of life expectancy, the chance of survival is no better with than without treatment, and there is the possibility that treatment may make the survival time of cancer cases less.")

Attitude Toward Organized Medicine. The tone of Dr. Ivy's testimony as it concerned the American Medical Association was one of scholarly if not objective restraint. In describing the official A. M. A. report on Krebiozen published in the Journal of the American Medical Association in October 1951, Ivy testified: "That's what I call superficial research. It was trumped-up research. The motives which caused this committee to trump-up this sort of evidence I do not know, and what I am telling you here under oath—I know that I am under oath, and you don't have to tell me, because I have made this statement many times under oath, and, when presented, the evidence under oath has never been died by any physician, by the one man who sent the American Medical Association these falsified cases at the prompting of the treasurer of the American Medical Association, not by any member of the American Medical Association."

More in sorrow than in anger, Dr. Ivy added: "It is a disgrace to a great and noble profession, to which Mrs. Ivy and I have contributed four sons. These reports should be corrected. The whole profession should be hanging their heads in shame to think that these reports have stood there and have not aroused the profession to condemn them."

It will be recalled that the Treasurer of the American Medical Association to whom Dr. Ivy refers is one Dr. J. J. Moore, whom Ivy elsewhere under oath accused of instigating a plot to ruin Krebiozen because of Ivy's refusal to sanction selling the rights in Krebiozen to a group in which Moore was interested. These charges have never been denied by American Medical Association; however, the continuing regard for the integrity of Dr. Ivy is manifest by the A. M. A. in the fact that several years after Ivy first made these charges the Journal of the American Medical Association, in a special issue on medical ethics (7 June 1958, p. 10), wrote of Ivy as an authority on medical ethics.

The Identity of Krebiozen. Twenty-four hours after Dr. Ivy represented his testimony, Professor Paul Kirk of the University of California and Dr. Arthur Furst of Stanford University were called to testify as to the chemical composition of samples of Krebiozen supplied them by the California Medical Association. Both of these chemists testified that Krebiozen was nothing more than plain mineral oil. This adverse testimony was given wide newspaper, radio and TV publicity while Dr. Ivy was returning from California and unavailable for defensive comment.

For this reason the following direct testimony from Dr. Ivy made BEFORE Doctors Kirk and Furst testified, and never mentioned by them nor in the associated news stories, is cited in fairness to Dr. Ivy: "In that connection it has been said that when you take an ampule of Krebiozen and extract it you can't find anything in it except mineral oil; that is because there is only a hundredth of a milligram there, ten micrograms present, and when we extracted Krebiozen from the mineral oil we used four thousand ampules."

It is believed that Doctors Kirk and Furst used fewer than half a dozen ampules of Krebiozen for their highly publicized history. In a letter dated June 20, 1958, to the Senate Interim Committee on Public Health, Dr. Ivy wrote: "Messrs. Kirk and Furst were either so misled by their negative microchemical findings, or so secure when protected against a suit for libel when testifying before a legislative committee that they did not consider categorical evidence exists to prove that a powder called Krebiozen was deliberately added to No. 9 Light Mineral Oil and stirred in thoroughly with an electric stirrer before it was put in appropriately labeled ampules.

"Both the testimony briefed by me under Section vii and by Messrs. Kirk and Furst under Section viii cannot be true." Ivy pointed out. "In asking for and urging a determination of this question by Committee or Grand Jury action, I should like to add that I am sure the COMMITTEE did not intend to allow itself to depreciate a potentially valuable property by the use of the vicious and dastardly technic of the Big Lie."

Pushing further, Ivy stated: "I ask and urge that . . . this be referred to the proper law enforcement agency of the State of California for a determination of the facts and presentation to a Grand Jury. If the Grand Jury should indict me I shall waive any immunity which protects a witness before a legislative committee and all rights obstructing extradition from the State of Illinois to the State of California.

Ivy the Man. The single characteristic of Dr. Andrew Conway Ivy that has impressed most observers, friend and foe alike, is the monumental integrity that cloaks the man. Fortified by brains and guts, this is an almost terrifying integrity in an age given to equivocation and expediency. As one listener commented to me during Ivy's testimony -- "Ivy doesn't scare and he doesn't run." He is unashamedly a practicing American. "I am for the free choice of physician by a patient, and for the free choice by the physician of the treatment of that patient," he explained to the Committee.

He was explicit in his opposition to what he called "an authoritarian committee making lists of what is good and what is bad in the practice of medicine, or in any other field of science or its application. We have had a good example of this insofar as our missile program is concerned," he said.

Speaking of such authoritarian committees, he pointed out further: "You don't get justice on the basis of scientific evidence, only on the basis of the opinion of experts, and the opinion of experts, in the history of medical science and science in general, has been notoriously bad."

His sense of honesty and fair play were amusingly illustrated as he described the consternation shown by certain official agencies when he suggested that they actually make an objective or truthful scientific study of the claims made by Harry Hoxsey. "And then when you tell the public," he explained, "what you have done they will realize that you have done what is right, and they will not rally to a persecuted underdog." Those to whom he made the proposal, Ivy added: "thought I was sort of off my rocker. Just like a lot of people today; if you show them the Declaration of Independence they'll read it and ask 'What sort of a document is this?' About seventy per cent of the people in the United States will say it is a communist document."

In a regimented age that has become cynical and weary and that has too often and too completely struck a compromise with truth and and sought an appeasement with evil, the few Ivys stand out as giants. His is an unwearying and unyielding courage born of intellectual power and integrity. The unthinking courage of blind or unquestioning faith or stupidity, having as much potential for harm as for good, is not his. His is a courage inspired by the demands of integrity imposed by a crystalline clear and incisive intellect. It is a brand of courage that runs counter to the ethical passivity and superstition-born mores that in all ages comprises the barnyard mores of the faceless mob bowing in unquestioning conformity to police, priest or public opinion.

Those listening to his testimony, and admonished by Chairman Thompson against spontaneous outbreaks of applause, sensed the magnitude of what was transpiring. Here was a man with nothing to gain and all to lose--power, prestige, recognition, and economic security--fighting against the passive stupidity or ignorance of the world and the active or militant stupidity of a portion of his profession. Beyond the possibility of the tangible rewards of public or professional approbation, above the imaginary incentives of the Norsemen's valhalla or the Christians' heaven or the Moslems' paradise, we saw a man impelled by the dictates of a sense of duty and integrity that a lifetime in the service of science had given him.

In Doctor Ivy we saw the measure of moral soundness and sanity that, fortified by intelligence, represents the minimum requirement for any society that is to survive in this complex age. Upon the integrities of science and the scientific method --a method that exacts destruction from those failing to adhere with exactitude to truth or reality--depend such things as the success of our missile program. One deviation from the integrity of a physical law; one factual compromise in an electronic circuit; or one corruptible technician can mean the difference between a missile that works and one that fails, and that difference could spell our survival.

In what transpired during Dr. Ivy's testimony one seemed to sense, in many ways, that a slowly awakening public opinion has at last become intolerant toward the hollow authoritarian pontifications and untruths fostered by certain groups to impose by legislative fiat their diotates on a free people.

KREBIOZEN REPORT

of

HON. ROLAND V. LIBONATI

Of Illinois

Monday, June 9, 1958

Mr. LIBONATI. -- Mr. Speaker, on the 29th day of May, A.D. 1958, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, page A4957, there appeared a plea by Dr. Andrew Conway Ivy, distinguished professor of physiology at the University of Illinois, "Let's Give Krebiozen a Fair Chance." He based his plea on the results obtained in the treatment of terminal cases for the last 5 years. The A. M. A., through its officials has sub rosa opposed any program concerning the scientific evaluation of Krebiozen by a blind type of clinical test and, have, through the nefarious practices of one of their number, lied and falsified records of the findings. This evidence was brought out by the testimony in the hearings conducted by a committee and commission appointed by the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, inquiring into the conspiracy to suppress the freedom of research at the University of Illinois, on which commission I served as vice chairman.

The conspiracy still goes on and in front and behind the scenes lurk the malevolent and relentless purusing power of some of the officials of the American Medical Association. And like all vicious forays staged by organizations against the reputations of honest men, it failed. But they do scare the editors of various medical journals to not publish Dr. Andrew Ivy's reports on Krebiozen, after tentatively accepting the same for publication. What a slimy deal for professional men who represent a profession blessed by God and venerated by man. Surely, they must have some feeling for the thousands dying each year, suffering excruciating pain and impoverishing family upon family to pay for the mounting medical, hospital and nursing costs, that amount to as much as $10,000 per person, in cases of the malignant, lingering type. It would lead one to think that some of the political doctors in the permanent official family of the A. M. A. do not desire the development of a drug or medical therapy that would arrest or neutralize the development or growth of cancer. Perhaps, in their minds, medicine is no longer a profession, but a business. And may it be further said that a certain agency in Washington has felt the delaying grip of the A. M. A. upon its procedures in issuing permits and patients under the Pure Food and Drugs Act.

Some day, in the not too distant future, an investigation by the Congress would rectify these interferences with the public's right to beneficial medicines, both in experimental use and curative research tests.

The Krebiozen story unfolds again with the meeting recently held in Lebanon, Pa., whereat Dr. Andrew Ivy gave an important report as to the biological activity of Krebiozen and its effect on terminal patients. The science editor of the Chicago American, who has been in the forefront of the Krebiozen issue throughout the assembly investigation in Illinois, and who covered the subject matter with a scientific understanding and treatment that kept the lay mind interested and enthralled in the most important medical problem of our day, submitted the following report in her article of the discussion at Lebanon, Pa., as follows:

(From the Chicago American of June 9, 1958)

KREBIOZEN SAVED 43, SAYS DR. IVY

(By Effie Alley)

Dr. Andrew C. Ivy says 43 persons once suffering from advanced stages of cancer are alive today and free of active cancer after treatment with the controversial drug, Krebiozen.

The Chicagoan made his report at a meeting of more than 50 physicians at a meeting in Lebanon, Pa., arranged by Dr. Allen Rutherford, physician and faculty member at the University of Pennsylvania.

BRINGS EXAMPLES

Ivy, professor of physiology at the University of Illinois, introduced 2 teen-agers and 3 adults who accompanied him from Chicago as living, healthy examples of the results of Krebiozen.

The youngsters are Jay Periman, 18, of 2010 Arthur Ave., and Kathleen Patricia Murray, 14, of 1825 Orleans Street.

In a plea for what he called "the abandoned cancer patient," Dr. Ivy declared:

"These youngsters are examples of a great group of cancer patients written off by specialists as hopeless after surgery and X-ray failed to stem the disease."

BRAIN CANCER

Showing young Perlman to the group, Ivy said several leading Chicago neurologists put Jay in this category when they found he was suffering from inoperable brain cancer.

During 1956, the boy was given X-ray treatment but despite this grew worse, becoming bedridden and almost completely paralyzed due to pressure of the advancing growth in the brain. By the time Krebiozen treatment was started, his weight had dropped to 88 pounds and he could neither talk nor swallow.

Improvement was slow but gradually Jay began to regain his powers, Ivy said. He had just completed his first 2 years of high school work with the help of a visiting board of education teacher, weighs 150 pounds, stands without aid, walks with crutches and talks clearly.

Noting that the brain tumor is considered by cancer specialists as uniformly fatal, Dr. Ivy presented Jay to the group as "one of the most gratifying cases of my career" and as typical of Krebiozen's activity.

SPECTACULAR RESULTS

It has obtained "spectacular results in 3 out of 4 tumors involving nervous tissue," he declared.

Introducing Kathleen, Ivy recounted how she had been operated on for cancer of the thyroid gland and subsequently given X-ray and radio-active iodine. In spite of this she began to suffer from pain in the hip, caused by cancer spread, became pale, listless, and spent most of her time in bed.

After 1 year on Krebiozen, she had no sign of cancer. She has since returned to school, recently winning high rank in a nationwide Latin contest and the 60-yard dash in a track meet.

Ivy said that the 3 adults with him, 2 women and a man, also are free of active cancer, although previously given up as hopeless by other methods of treatment.

Dr. Ivy told his colleagues:

"Our data on 750 patients shows Krebiozen to be beneficial in 70 per cent of advanced cancer cases."

Ordinarily such advanced cases are abandoned by the specialist and sent home to the general practitioner, Ivy continued. He said:

"It is then the job of the family doctor to help such people to die in as much comfort as can be gained with the use of narcotics."

Krebiozen has been a bone of contention in medical circles since 1951, when it was declared worthless by the American Medical Association. Ivy, however, has continued his work in collaboration with 300 physicians, all A. M. A. members, in many parts of the country.

CITES FOUR CASES

Dr. Rutherford himself presented 4 cases from the 56 he told the doctors he has treated with Krebiozen in the past four years. Among the 4 was a 58-year-old printer of whom Dr. Rutherford said:

"When I was first called to attend him, he was so sick of cancer of the bladder that I didn't try to treat him. Instead I called the priest to give him the last rites. I thought if he lived through the day I would put him in the hospital and give him a blood transfusion."

Five weeks after starting Krebiozen injections, the printer was back at work, Dr. Rutherford reported. That was 4 years ago, and the patient is still hale and hearty, weighing 179 pounds.

OTHERS ENCOURAGING

Dr. Rutherford said he believes the other three cases presented are definitely in the clear.

In the question period which followed, doctors displayed an attitude in which interest and skepticism were mingled. At one point Dr. Ivy was asked why he had chosen a small place like Lebanon for his presentation.

He said he came in answer to an invitation and added:

"I will go anywhere people are interested to hear about Krebiozen because I will not permit scientific truth to be buried."

THE GREAT IVY--and KREBIOZEN

Part One of Three Parts -- By Don C. Matchan.

"I don't want the truth buried under false or superficial evidence."

The compulsions within the man who spoke these words are the same which have caused him to hold fast to principle, to remain incorruptible under the unremitting pressures of the ruling clique of the world's most powerful medical organization - and one in which he occupied a top spot until he refused to become party to a compromose of moral and ethical issues -- the American Medical Association.

Author of the statement is Dr. Andrew Conway Ivy, world-famous physiologist, doctor of medicine, scientist. A man who has earned the respect and admiration of his professional colleagues, and who deserves eternal gratitude of the unknown millions.

He is the man, chosen in 1947 as representative of world medicine at the Nuremberg Trials of doctors indicted for cruel and inhuman treatment of prisoners of war on the pretext that medical knowledge would be furthered. His role at the trials: to lay down the code under which nations will be guided in the future as relating to medical-ethical, scientific, and medical-legal conduct. (It is well to remember; as you read this story that this is the stature of the man Ivy; whom certain men within his profession have sought to brand as a fraud, a quack, a cheap opportunist.

This is the man who was awarded in 1953 the Pope Pius XIII citation for great services to humanity - a nominee of the most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, D. D., Auxiliary Bishop, Chicago, founder of the Catholic Youth Organization. Dr. Ivy happens to be a Methodist.

This is the man who was presented with a Presidential Citation for his contribution to the war effort at the close of World War 2; the man who holds degrees of medical doctor, doctor of philosophy, doctor of science as well as several honorary law degrees. He has taught more than 5,000 students; had an active part in preparation of more than 1,300 medical projects written for scientific journals; co-authored a classic volume on peptic ulcer; discovered most of the body's hormones; crusaded against the quota system (limiting the number of medical problems confronting the human being when he attempts to reach the stars; pushed for broader education or medics.

He's a life member of the American College of Physicians; held membership on 10 research committees; as director, organized the Naval Medical Research Institute in Bethesda, Md., during the Second World War; is past president of American Gastro Enterologico Association; former chairman of the Section on Pathology and Physiology of American Medical Association; former member of the Council on Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation of the A. M. A.; holder of the distinguished service medal from the American College of Physical Therapy; director-at-large (1947-51) of the American Cancer Society; first executive director of the National Advisory Council whose function was advising the National Institute on how to spend money appropriated by Congress for research; and is past president of American Physiological Society.

This; then, is the pedigree. And what follows, in certain instances, will "make your hair curl" - that is, if youre an ordinary red-blooded American who believes in fair play, who believes that human beings are more important than dollars. But let the facts speak for themselves!

Dr. Ivy and his associate, Dr. Stevan Durovic, 53-year-old discoverer of the anti-cancer agent Krebiozen, spent a night and day in San Francisco where Ivy testified in opposition to a state cancer commission during a hearing before the California Senate Committee on Public Health. Your editor was privileged to spend several hours in company with the two scientists, for the purpose of passing on to HERALD OF HEALTH readers salient facts in connection with the dramatic story of Krebiozen, as well as the almost unbelievable events which have impeded its acceptance in conventional medical quarters.

This article is a composite of interviews with Dr. Ivy, excerpts of his testimony before the Senate committee, and a brief summary of the just-published "A Matter of Life or Death," written by Medical Writer Herbert Bailey, author of "Krebiozen - Key to Cancer?" The book is must reading for every person looking for information about the control of cancer. It should be read by every doctor, every school teacher, every clergyman, every editor, every holder of public office - and, yes - by every citizen who wants to be informed and believes he has a stake in the preservation of personal liberty and intellectual freedom.

YOU MAY BE SHOCKED

A warning may be appropriate. To the person who is easily shocked, who has high respect and affection for the family doctor, and thus for his professional affiliations - may not be able to take "A Matter of Life or Death." It documents the reasons the official A. M. A. Journal has black-listed Krebiozen as a treatment of cancer. Quoting one of the figures who assisted in the documentation, Commodore Alberto C. Barreira of Buenos Aires: "Cancer sufferers were used as pawns in a multi-million-dollar business" . . . And in the words of Author Bailey: " . . . The people and the world's doctors deserve to know the incredible behind-the-scenes actions which posterity may call the most sordid scandal of modern history."

It is a story of intrigue surpassing the imagination - of the attempt of two Chicago businessmen and a Chicago doctor-politician, Dr. J. J. "Cy" Moore, treasurer of American Medical Association, to win distribution rights for Krebiozen, anti-cancer agent which has been clinically proved to have efficacious effect on more than 50 per cent of the persons (terminal patients) to have received injection.

It is the story of a true scientist confronted by the as-yet-uncontrolled power of a handful of individuals at the helm of the A. M. A.; the story of integrity vs. avarice. So utterly fantastic are some of the events which transpired in Chicago, from the time Dr. Stevan Durovic first came to America with two discoveries--Kositerin which proved worthless as a deterrent to high blood pressure - and Krebiozen, over which one of the wildest storms of all-time developed - up to the present, that many will have difficulty believing. Such words as "incredible," "weird," "impossible," "fantastic," are too mild to describe some of the goings-on which characterized the all-out battle of the colossus of the medical world - the A. M. A. - and the great Ivy, physiologist, researcher, truth-hunter - and human being!

In the quiet of his hotel room following his arrival from Chicago, Dr. Ivy sketched for me (at my request) skeletal facts about his life. In that 90 minutes, and in the hours which followed, it was possible to absorb just a little of the quality of the man Ivy. You can't be around him for long without sensing his greatness. You are impressed by his humility, and in the same breath you tingle with pride at the monumental integrity, as much a part of him as the little white moustache and the square jaw. You know that here is a rare individual - a man to whom facts and people mean more than titles and gold. And you are glad you've had the privilege of meeting him. Because he is an inspiration to those who might become tired or discouraged, and perhaps let down.

Born 65 years ago in southeastern Missouri, Andrew Ivy grew up in Cape Girardeau. One of the four boys and a daughter, the father was a teacher of chemistry and mathematics.

HE NEVER RAN

Legendary is the story of how, as a youngster, he was backed into a corner by a goat. Realizing the animal was squaring off to charge, the square-jawed young man stole a march and charged head-on into the goat. The surprised animal trotted away. Ivy recalls that what made him excited, was not the billy goat as much as it was his older brother who was watching the drama from the house and laughing at Andy. Ivy sometimes refers to himself as "hill billy and swamp angel."

"As a young man, though of slight build, he went in for boxing, and at 17 weighing 132 pounds, he kayoed the state National Guard champ who tipped the scales at 185 pounds. He's a scrapper, and the something inside him which prompted him to attack the goat (after he first had been threatened) may be the same urge which has kept him on top of the heap in the gigantic power-struggle described in "A Matter of Life or Death."

In 1922 Andrew Ivy received his doctor's degree from Rush Medical College, University of Chicago. He taught in medical school during World War I. A lieutenant in National Guard, he sought more active duty but his superiors did not agree. Subsequently he became professor of physiology at Loyola University Medical School, Chicago; then professor at University of Chicago, and later at Northwestern University; and then University of Illinois. In 1946 he was appointed vice-president of University of Illinois and distinguished professor of physiology and head of the department of clinical science. He still holds the two latter positions, but his contract as vice-president was not renewed, an action of the Board of Trustees which came at the meeting at which President George Stoddard was fired for his handling of the "Krebiozen Affair."

As one of the world's foremost physiologists, Dr. Ivy carried the torch for physical medicine - looked upon by the profession as a sort of medical massage - and he created the first department of physical medicine in a medical school.

As executive director of the National Advisory Council, he set up the machinery under which every part of the nation received research funds, small institutions as well as the big ones. "My thinking was to not make the big bigger, but to make the smaller better," he says.

While head of the Advisory Council, he was responsible for allocation of $25,000 of federal funds for each medical school in the country for research, $5,000 for each osteopathic school, $5,000 for schools of destistry.

As a scientist he believes in the untrammeled right to explore all paths. "We don't know where the discovery for cure of cancer will come from," he points out. "I believe the viruses should be investigated." (And in furtherance of that belief he saw that Dr. Joseph Gregory of Pasadena, Calif., received a $10,000 grant in the mid-forties). He is a firm believer in free choice of physicians and free choice of treatment by physicians, he says, but treatment should be based on knowledge and education, "where only truth is told." He rules out nothing, just because it may happen to be unusual. "I would like to see set up an experiment to learn the effect of sustained hope and prayer on the progress of patients," he asserts.

When Dr. Stoddard asked the University of Illinois Board of Trustees to remove Ivy as vice-president for a supposed scientific error, the effect would have been to punish him by stripping him of his administrative position. As vice-president, in seven years, Dr. Ivy through presenting facts to legislators had raised university funds for medical research from $85,000 to nearly $1 million annually; had increased the scientific budget from $2 million to nearly $11 million annually; had raised $25 million for an expansion program for the colleges of medicine, dentistry, pharmacy and nursing, and had aided in obtaining an additional $15 million for clinical facilities.

NOT SATISFIED WITH NO

As a scientist, he will not take no for an answer. Defeatism is not part of his volabulary. For instance, he is astonished that tuberculosis has not been eradicated from U. S. A. "It can be eliminated in five years by vaccinating all negative cases with B. C. G. vaccine and by quarantining in their homes all open cases," he declares. "Why isn't it done? Politics! In many cities the American Tuberculosis Association has built its own buildings as if T. B. will be with us the next 100 years or more."

While many, many doctors and scientists simply gave up on the cancer problem, Andrew Ivy maintained there must be an answer. His theory (and that of Dr. Durovic) is that cancer represents the abnormal repair of injury.

"Normally, when injured, we get proliferation. Then it ceases (the growth of new cells). But in cancer the growth continues, and finally devours the host. Something in the normal body is able to halt growth at just the right time. Pathologists do not like this view, but basically it cannot be denied. It covers the prophoblastic theory advanced by John Beard and leading to the Krebiozen theory.

"I've always told my physiology students that the only real hope of finding the cure of cancer is by ascertaining the normal defenses of the body against cancer. We know that some animals and some humans are more resistant to cancer than others. One out of every 100,000 bodies cures itself of cancer."

And this in a nutshell is the theory upon which Dr. Durovic worked while developing Krebiozen. He reasoned that the body contains a protective substance which fights the wild, disordered growth of cells; that bodies which do not contain this element cannot resist chaotic cell-growth (cancer) when attacked. So Durovic injected horses with Actinomyces bovis to stimulate the animal to generate a greater amount of the anti-body to fight the cancer. The blood of the animal is then processed and Krebiozen (in very minute quantity) is extracted.

Dr. Ivy opposes use of poisons (drugs), irradiation or surgery "unless absolutely necessary to assist Nature, or as a palliative measure. Our hope is in finding why some are more susceptible than others to cancer," he repeats. "Surgery is a necessary evil. If one has an obstruction, we must do a little plumbing. If a bone won't heal, a little carpentry must be done."

He has studied in the field of radiation since 1920. He recalls a paper read by Dr. Harvey which almost forced the closing of the school which created the Betatron, an instrument found useful "only in the isolated cancer case." He believes cobalt to be the same. "The cross-firing technique is an attempt to limit spray radiation," he says. "I know the effect, and I wouldn't have it!"

Commenting further on this point, he said, "We observed that patients who had been burned up (with irradiation) didn't respond to Krebiozen as did those who hadn't been so treated."

Krebiozen is not given to patients within 30 to 90 days after irradiation, and not within 30 days after such drugs as Cortisone have been administered.

FOUR SONS ARE DOCTORS

Dr. Ivy has given four of his five sons to the medical profession. Mrs. Ivy is a scientist of no mean repute, works a few days each week in the lab. During the war she discovered the cause of "war dropsy," and the importance of protein, a basic discovery in the field of nutrition.

Asked whether surgery may spread certain types of cancer, Dr. Ivy replied, "I lived through the fight in the profession on whether biopsies should or should not be done. Work has been done showing that if the tumor is squeezed, like a boil, it spreads. I've always told my students we must respect the tissues to be removed as well as the normal cells. I've not been an advocate of extensive radical surgery. It is important to recognize the disease early and excise it. Dr. Warren S. Cole, surgical chief at University of Illinois, showed that cancer can be spread by surgery.

No one has made more crucial discoveries in the physiologies of digestion than has Dr. Ivy. And always - until Krebiozen - he has been able to demonstrate his results.

His experiences in endeavoring to have a fair test made of Krebiozen, either by American Medical Association, American Cancer Society (with whom negotiations again are underway) or National Cancer Institute, qualified Dr. Ivy as a witness at the California hearings where the California Medical Association is sponsoring legislation which would give it complete control of the types of cancer treatment to be permitted in that state.

It has been the contention of those opposing such legislation that C. M. A., by reason of self-interest, would constitute a prejudiced "judge and jury" in event such legislation is adopted, since C. M. A. would dominate the commission, and C. M. A. maintains there are only two acceptable methods of cancer treatment - surgery and irradiation.

Opponents of such legislation contend that by its control of research institutions, clinics, hospitals, and the government organizations concerned with health matters - the very livelihood of doctors if you please - American Medical Association "calls the shots" on research and types of treatment and those decisions are biased.

The seven-year struggle of Drs. Ivy and Durovic to get an impartial test of Krebiozen, proving once and for all its value or worthlessness, has been met with the adamant refusal of A. M. A. to make such an investigation. And because of A. M. A.'s treatment of Krebiozen advocates, Dr. Ivy is convinced an impartial test can be made only via the double-blind controlled experiment.

He has proposed to the A. M. A., A. C. S. and National Cancer Institute that a committee of five physicians be named, two by him, two by "the other side," and a fifth by the four; that each group select one layman, they choosing a third. Sixty patients with brain cancer would be provided. During the next three or six months part of the patients would be treated with Krebiozen, part with mineral oil, and only one layman of the committee of eight would know which patients were getting the drug, which were not.

"At the end of the specified period," says Dr. Ivy, "If I could not select the patients who had been treated with Krebiozen, I would acknowledge Krebiozen to be ineffective. If I could identify those so treated, then the drug should be recognized as having therapeutic value, and entitled to further testing and researching."

The double-blind test is standard in medical circles. Students are subjected to it during examinations. It is the only infallible type of test.

SOUND FAIR?

Does it sound fair? If American Medical Association tells member doctors and the general public through its professional channels as well as via the public press, radio and television that Krebiozen is "worthless" - just a high-grade mineral oil one scientist told the California investigators in May - why does it evade the double-blind test? Why does the National Cancer Institute, which Dr. Raymond Kaiser told the California committee "stands ready to investigate any and all claims," not agree to such a test?

"The whole affair is political," Dr. Ivy contends. "If it were a scientific matter, it could be settled in three months. In July, 1955, we proposed that the Public Health Service arrange a double-blind test. They wanted to have it made using doctors as the evaluating committee. It was pointed out to them that no committee of physicians considering Krebiozen's merits would give it a square deal. They couldn't afford to, they're on record against it and they have to save face. A congressman from Illinois attended the meeting, too. I told them the double-blind test was the only fair way it can be done. Afterwards Surgeon-General Scheele agreed with me that an unprejudiced report would be impossible to get without use of the double-blind test.

"After the investigation by the Illinois Legislative Committee, the A. M. A. was asked by the committee to subject Krebiozen to such a test. The request was turned down. It did no research."

Dr. Ivy told the Californians, in answer to a question - "do American medical schools have freedom of research or must they be screened?" - "Krebiozen was researched thus until the A. M. A. issued the Status Report. Individuals who wanted distribution rights for Krebiozen tried to force Dr. Durovic to get it on the market before it had been thoroughly researched. Publicity was released prematurely during a meeting in March, 1951.

"I wanted 10 universities around the country to be supplied with Krebiozen, free of charge, and let them administer it to patients who had been abandoned. I hoped a few might show a dramatic response. Reports could be kept by doctors caring for the patients and filed with us for use in compiling the total results. Anyone can measure what happens to a patient, we were interested in observations on progress. We ask no doctor for opinions, only what he sees. We then assemble the data.

"From 10 or 12 institutions where Krebiozen was sent, favorable reports came from six clinics, outstanding results came from two clinics. And when the A. M. A. came out against Krebiozen, universities immediately dropped their tests, with only two continuing until the winter of 1953."

SUPPLY DWINDLING

The supply of Krebiozen is dwindling, is expected to be exhausted by fall. Six months are required to replenish it - six months and $350,000.

"Where will the money come from? "I don't know," he says, "but I was in a similar position when I set out to raise $45 million for medical buildings at University of Illinois in 1950. Two years later the money had been appropriated."

That this newest fund-raising assignment may not be as easy is at least tacitly acknowledged by the great Ivy. The massive opposition of the American Medical Association, lack of knowledge by the public about the potentials of Krebiozen make it a task of no mean dimension. But the kind of people who have stuck with Ivy and the Durovics - and there are some big names, too - and the kind of people who will join the crusade as they learn the story - somehow will accomplish the job. (Ed. Note: If you believe this warrants support, we can think of no more worthwhile cause to contribute, pledge or bequeath money than here. The address: Krebiozen Research Foundation, 105 West Adams, Chicago 4, Illinois. Contributions are tax-exempt.)

The Durovics have spent a 2½-million-dollar fortune (the doctor's brother was a munitions-maker in pre-war Yugoslavia) and this kind of charity finally comes to an end. The Durovics, in an effort to have the product properly researched, have dumped half a million dollars into seeing that it was supplied patients requesting it. Now patients are asked to pay the $9.50 per ampule if they are able, if not, they still get it. Though, of course, it is being rationed.

The fact it has been made available without cost, for clinical research, the fact that Dr. Ivy has donated his time - after university hours - puts the lie to the charge of the Chicago Medical Society that Ivy was "profiting" from the "sale of a secret remedy."

The manner in which his three-month suspension was voted by 35 men out of a membership of 6,000 makes interesting reading. He pointed out - as if it were necessary! - that he does not make a living practicing medicine, that he does not need patients, and that he has no listed telephone (he was accused of "advertising.") He further reminded his accusers that as a medical expert, representing the nations of the world at Nuremberg, he was familiar with the A. M. A. canon on fraud. "I told them there was no fraud because no claims had been made, and there was no avarice because we gave Krebiozen away."

"Then the chairman of the ethical relations committee said, "the fellows are mad because you took on those bohunks with something supposed to be good for cancer, you helped them out."

Three months later, at termination of the suspension period, Ivy was invited to return to the Chicago Medical Society roster. He declined, stating, "I still feel the same as I did about Krebiozen, and so you'll have to kick me out again. And that I won't have happen!"

SURVIVAL RECORD

Of approximately 750 cases in United States, 43 patients have survived five years or more, and many more for shorter periods. Another 600 have been treated but scientific data is adequate so they were not included in the monograph published in September, 1956. An additional 500 have been treated in foreign countries and the ratio of results corresponds to those tabulated in this country.

"Krebiozen's efficacy is the same today," wrote Mr. Bailey, "as it was four years ago when Dr. Ivy compiled what is known as the Ivy report. The four years have confirmed his original findings, and the number of patients now cancer-free and the increasing number in whom the disease has been checked by Krebiozen treatment have convinced him beyond a doubt that Krebiozen is of great value in the management of the cancer patient.

In reply to the question, "is the five-year survival record comparable to that of surgery and irradiation?" Dr. Ivy said, "Surgery and irradiation already had failed before Krebiozen started. In 98 percent of the cases it was so."

Here is additional data as to the effects Krebiozen-treated patients have experienced: "Some relief of pain in 70 per cent of the cases - a few weeks to two or three years. In 50 per cent of the cases a measurable decrease in inflammation decreasing the stress and press on nerves."

Evidence has been accumulating in the files of Krebiozen Research Foundation in Chicago that the Krebiozen approach is on the right track. Dr. Ivy and Dr. Durovic do not represent it as a cure. They stoutly maintain that on the basis of information gathered to date, it holds promise, and certainly should be seriously tested and explored.

"Five to 10 per cent of the patients treated for the past four, five, six and seven years, are still alive," he revealed. "We don't say Krebiozen did that, but no one under the sun can show me a group of hopeless cases with a greater percentage of survival on the basis of spontaneous or natural means."

Dr. Ivy mentions the case of a South American consular official diagnosed as suffering from bladder cancer. A well-known surgeon advised him the cost of surgery would be $5,000. The man is not wealthy. He investigated Krebiozen, became another Krebiozen guinea pig. His pain left almost immediately. Two years later a cystoscopic examination showed no evidence of the tumor.

"A Matter of Life or Death" carries several case histories of what has happened to some patients following Krebiozen treatment. (It should be remembered that only terminal cases are accepted for treatment - after hope has been abandoned by orthodox practitioners).

Here's an example of a more fortunate patient: (For more information write to HEALTH RESEARCH, MOKELUMNE HILL, CALIFORNIA).

Dr. W. F. P. P. -- Illinois
Patient: E. V., 45 years. - Squamous cell carcinoma of vagina. Advanced.

Medical report September 28, 1950: An external lesion in the form of an ulcer is present on the right labium minor 2.5 cm. in diameter. On the right wall of vagina a hard, solid mass 3 x 5 cm. in size can be palpated. This mass is connected with external lesion. Tumor painful on touch. Biospy was made at K. J. Hospital. A squamous cell carcinoma was reported. The patient refused surgery and X-ray therapy. Krebiozen started September 28, 1950. October 16, 1950, the physician reported: Remarkable improvement. Three days after first injection of Krebiozen patient reported absence of all pain and discomfort. On October 1, the second injection of Krebiozen was given. On October 9, tumor mass in vaginal wall disappeared completely. External lesion has decreased 50% in size and islands of granulation tissue (new-formed and healing) were present in its base. Feeling of well-being. January 15, 1952: Biopsy was made from the place where tumor was located before, and no cancer cells were found. Patient normal and in excellent condition. June 1, 1957: Patient Normal with no evidence of cancer.

A similar type of report has been published in the case of D. L., an Illinois resident who started on Krebiozen as a terminal carcinoma of the bladder patient at 65 years of age, May 12, 1951. And "no evidence of cancer" was reported by Dr. L. and T. in Oregon, whose Patient, Mrs. J. G., 44 years old, had been considered a terminal patient, and was bedridden, when Krebiozen was administered first in August, 1951. Wrote the doctor in that case on April 29, 1955: "I have never seen a 'cure' of malignant melanoma by any method of treatment. This one is miraculous and passes all understanding." On March 9, 1957, the same doctor wrote: "No change since my last report. No evidence of cancer."

The list is extended, in the book. The appendix carries more cases, results of treatment of lung cancer, uterus, lymphosarcoma of jejunum (intestinal obstruction), breast, colon, pancreas.

THE STAKES: FREEDOM

By DON C. MATCHAN

(Ed. Note: What basis is there for the claim that the American Medical Association is the spokesman for the medical profession in this country? What is an allopathic doctor, a homeopathic doctor, an eclectic doctor? How do the doctrines and theories of therapeutic treatment vary between these three distinct branches of the healing art?

These, and many other pertinent and vital questions are answered in the following story gleaned from the pages of a sworn affidavit on file with the California Senate Interim Committee on Public Health. The document was prepared by Dr. Joseph C. Vorbeck, M. D., 644 East Main Street, Ventura, Calif., as a preliminary to testimony he expects to present before the committee which is studying the extent of quackery in California.

Because of the grave consequences which may follow adoption by the California legislature of a proposal to create a special board empowered to prohibit any method of treating cancer, Herald of Health brings its readers a summary of the salient points contained in the affidavit. If legislation such as proposed is adopted in California, herculean efforts will be made to duplicate it throughout the land. It has been described by proponents as "pilot legislation.")

Joseph Chester Vorbeck, M. D., is an outspoken doctor of the "old school." He has no love for hypocrisy and doesn't like to be "pushed around." He's a rugged individualist who believes his first obligation is to his conscience and his patient.

He has practiced medicine for nearly 60 years. He has administered the Koch treatment for cancer, to himself and his wife among other patients, and he affirms that this treatment possesses "an invaluable therapeutic method."

Born in Pacific, Mo., Dr. Vorbeck was licensed to practice medicine in Missouri in 1889. He received a California license in 1943 and still practices in Ventura. He was graduated from the American Medical College in St. Louis, a school chartered to teach the eclectic system of medicine. This branch of the healing art is comprised of physicians who combine the practices and medicines selected from all schools of medicine. Taber's Cyclopedic Medical Dictionary defines eclectic as "a system of medicine treating disease through specific remedies for individual pathological conditions rather than by treating the body as a whole. Remedies principally botanical. . . . Selecting from various sources what seems to be best."

"The eclectic school of medicine and its system of education and doctrines is a product of American ingenuity is a product of American ingenuity and wisdom," the venerable doctor explains. "Originating in the United States in the early 1880s, it was conceived and established to eliminate the irrational, unscientific and unsound if not barbarous dogmas of treating disease by blistering, bleeding, and salivating the victims, as taught and practiced by allopathic physicians in accordance with the tenets of the allopathic sect." (Ed. Note: Allopathic practitioners are so-called "regular" doctors, or M. D.s.).

"The eclectic doctrine, on the other hand, whose code of ethics is the Golden Rule, is founded upon the belief expressed by the Latin axiom, "Vires, Viatles, Sustenata," sustain the vital forces, do nothing to lower physical vitality and thus contribute to the ravages of disease. Members of the eclectic sect," Dr. Vorbeck continued, "are organized as the National Eclectic Medical Association, "and no other medical organization, including the allopathic group's A. M. A., has authority to speak for members of this sect on matters pertaining to the science of medicine and the healing art."

HIS BACKGROUND

The veteran doctor's medical training included service as first assistant on a staff of six assistants to two distinguished St. Louis, Mo., surgeons, Edwin E. Younkin, M. D., and E. Lee Standlee, M. D., professors of surgery and anatomy respectively at the American Medical College. Dr. Vorbeck was granted a pharmacy license also in 1899. He served as a member of the health department in St. Louis, and as substitute professor of pathology at American Medical College.

For three years he was plant surgeon of American Radiator Company, and he served without pay as chief physician to the Mattie Adams Orphanage, Cape Girardeau, Mo. He was co-owner of the Vorbeck Sanitarium in the same city. The institution specialized in treatment of chronic diseases, employing practically every form of therapy which had been scientifically established to be of benefit in treatment of a variety of diseases. Chemotherapy and physiotherapy also were used.

Dr. Vorbeck has qualified as an expert medical witness in court, and represented the legislative committee of the A. F. of L. and the National Association Against the Prohibition Amendment at a hearing before the House Judiciary Committee in Washington. He successfully refuted a set of resolutions adopted by the American Medical Association maintaining, among other things, that there is no basis in science for the use of alcohol as a stimulant, medicine or food.

Dr. Vorbeck remembers what it is to practice as a country doctor. He maintained a general practice of medicine, surgery and obstetrics at Kelso, Mo., four years. He recalls winter nights when he kept two teams and drivers on call, sleeping while traveling from one home to another.

From 1921 to 1935 Dr. Vorbeck was the owner, medical director, physicist and chemist of the Federal Radium Laboratories in St. Louis. He moved the headquarters to Ventura in 1936. Business purpose of the laboratories was the treatment of uranium mineral ores for the chemical refinement of radium. In addition, he manufactured Radium Emanation Generators, invented by him, and designed to harness radium and its products of radioactive change, particularly the element known as radon, a highly radioactive gas. When used as directed, the generators liberate radium for therapeutic use in low-dosage form. Its validity as a therapeutic aid was verified by a committee of scientists from University of Missouri acting for the Pure Food and Drug Administration. The report was published in detail by the American Chemical Society in 1933.

NEVER DISPUTED

No department of government, federal or state, ever has disputed or denied me the right to make these claims (about the generator), and this includes the Federal Trade Commission, Pure Food and Drug Administration, U. S. Public Health Service and the Postal Service," Dr. Vorbeck reveals.

First using radium as a therapeutic agent in 1907, Dr. Vorbeck perused the writings of more than 600 eminent authorities as carried in more than 2,000 publications.

"I have used the low-dosage method of radium emanation extensively in treating of a wide variety of diseases, many of which still are considered therapeutic enigmas by those who do not employ this therapy," he says. "I have witnessed results which ordinary observers regard as little less than miraculous. I employ radioactivity only in the form of the gas-radium emanation, which, like sunshine, is without intrinsic value but which saves the expensive and relatively limited supply of radium."

Dr. Vorbeck pioneered in the study and use of roentgenology for therapeutic and diagnostic purposes, and established his own X-ray laboratory jointly in association with his mother, Margaret A. Vorbeck, M. D., in 1902. That was when X-ray's only available exciting force was the high-tension, high-frequency machine known as static electrical generator. As science improved upon the equipment, it was added to the Vorbeck laboratories.

The veteran physician-surgeon's experience encompasses extensive personal professional experience with the use of X-ray therapy for treatment of cancer. He has had extensive experience in use of X-ray for diagnostic purposes. During World War 2 he served as roentgenologist in the clinic of Everett C. Beach, M. D., Oxnard, Calif., where he did the technical and diagnostic work in more than 200 X-ray investigations a month from October, 1942, to July, 1943.

From July, 1943, to May, 1944, Dr. Vorbeck served as medical director of the medical center for civilian employees, established and conducted by the U. S. Navy and contractors of the Pacific Naval Air Base, Port of Hueneme, Calif.

In the affidavit he has filed with the Senate Interim Committee, Dr. Vorbeck declares: "By reason of study, training and experience, I am familiar with the three distinctly different sectarian systems of medical education in the United States, the completion of whose curriculums lead to the degree Doctor of Medicine, M. D.

THE THREE SCHOOLS

"These three schools, identified by name are: The regular school, the word 'regular' in this instance being a synonym of the term 'allopathic'; the homeopathic school; and the eclectic school."

The peppery physician describes as "political puppets and satraps of the American Medical Association," such groups as the health and welfare departments of federal, state, county, and city governments; food and drug bureaus, boards of health. He describes the American Cancer Society as a "satellite" of American Medical Association.

Launching into his reasons for objecting to a board or agency with supreme authority to dictate the kind of modalities which may be used to treat such diseases as cancer, Dr. Vorbeck expostulated: "It is axiomatic in our beloved country that, 'Give a legislative bill an attractive and appealing title, back it with well organized and abundantly financed propaganda and an active lobby of persuasive ladies and gentlemen who solicit and pledge votes, and the bill, whether good or bad, wise or foolish, is almost certain to pass."

"Proponents of this bill have termed it a 'cancer quack bill'. Everybody wants public protection against medical quackery. Everybody wants the tortured victims of this most agonizing disease to be made well and happy. Accordingly, the mere title of the bill inclines everybody to be for it.

"But it is not enough that the title of the bill shall be alluring, or that its alleged purpose shall be good. It remains for the legislators to ascertain whether the measure will produce good or bad results, and whether the acts contemplated lie within the legislative body's jurisdiction, questions which must give pause to the state and to even the federal legislative bodies. . . .

OBJECTIONS LISTED

"Objections to the bill are fundamental. Points at issue are these:

1. Whether the proposals are designed to destroy medical freedom in California and become the opening wedge by which this freedom is destroyed in the United States.

2. Whether, as proclaimed by proponents, the treatment of cancer by surgery, X-ray, and radium be the only methods that have been found effective as a cure for cancer.

3. Whether the medical sect, organized and selling health under the name of American Medical Association, which, while it glorifies in the precision of its logic and in the purity of its morals, extols the use of surgery, X-ray and radium as the only methods found to be effective in treatment of cancer, be a sect deserving of the respect or the derision of mankind.

"This is not the first time the policy-makers of the A. M. A. have thought fit to display their ingenuity on momentous questions. . . . Even if their proposals as contained in the bill were of less fearful importance, I think it an absolute civic, professional and moral duty to expose the fallacies abounding in the tenets of the sect, and the iniquities abounding in the principles, policies and practices of the sect's organization - the A. M. A. from its center to its circumference. It is no matter of pride or of pleasure. It is their business to take precautions against doing that which would give others cause to degrade them.

"The vast powers mentioned in the bill are vested in a special board empowered to prohibit any method of treating cancer that had been found to be harmful or worthless. . . .

"But the chief of the board or bureau is in fact supreme. He is nowhere compelled to accept its advice or that of anyone. As these immense powers are conferred upon the chief and exercised through his associates on the board, the question of personality becomes important. It is a notorious fact that no physician, M. D., in general, who is not an orthodox member of the A. M. A. is acceptable to the membership and hierarchy of that organization. And this applies to all medical boards, bureaus, faculties of medical schools and medical laboratories, including hospital staffs.

"At the very threshold, therefore, the legislators are confronted by the remarkable and amusing fact that they are asked to turn over all questions relating to the noble science of medicine and the healing art to an aggregation comprised almost exclusively of members of the so-called regular, or allopathic sect.

"That includes questions of combating and conquering the disease cancer and its ravages; it includes that group of physicians and surgeons who, either ignorantly or knavishly, squeeze from the waxy hands of doomed cancer victims the luscious fees with which to pay for the cruel and in general spurious therapeutic use of the knife, the X-ray and radium; it includes that class of physicians and surgeons whose professional reputations are protected by concealing errors of incompetency in consultations with associates who concur in the assertion 'medical science is without any other remedy or method than that which has been employed.'

"It includes the protection of those physicians and surgeons who aspire to a monopoly of the lucrative cancer market, and who have the boldness to assert that any claim of therapeutic value in the treatment of cancer, on behalf of any method of treatment advertised direct to the public, would be deemed to be false.

NO REFLECTION

"Not for a moment would I be understood as reflecting in any respect upon the good intentions, either of the legislators who have been misled into introducing the bill, or of the members of the legislature who have been deceived into supporting it. Neither do I criticize those who conduct the great and wonderful channels of publicity - the public press, radio and television who have been swept off their feet by the propaganda disseminated by sources presumed to be authorities, that has been imposed upon their unsuspecting confidence.

"I am fully aware that among those who make up the membership of the sect and organization complained of, there are many brilliant men and women. But because of the threat of severe reprisals, including expulsion from membership and its costly consequences, they remain conformists and thus, for their servility to the principles, policies, practices, edicts and proclamations of the A. M. A., they continue to be full beneficiaries of its iniquities, if not actual accessories thereof.

"I respectfully request the honor and privilege of appearing before your Honorable Committee as a witness to give evidence in proof of what I have said and what I shall say in the following summary of affirmations:

1. "The American Medical Association (A. M. A.) and its local component bodies in the states, counties and cities is the organization of a medical sect whose dogmas of therapeutic practice are in accordance with the doctrine of faith and belief founded upon two philosophies: the philosophy expressed by the Latin phrase, 'Contraria, Contrariis, Curantur,' and the philosophy 'Contrariis, Oppenenda' meaning in order to cure, I must oppose, or the Law of Opposition.

2. "The American Medical Association makes the claim that it is 'the national organization of the medical profession,' and that 'it belongs to all other physicians of this country.' These claims are knowingly false. They perpetrate a fraud upon the American public. Making and publicizing these claims shows A. M. A. credibility for what it is. These claims force the conclusion that the A. M. A. has authority to speak for and represent the individuals and physicians, M. D.s, who make up the membership of the national medical profession. They are erroneous, misleading and unwarranted by the facts.

3. "The national medical profession membership is made up of the physicians, M. D.s, who are disciples of three definitely different medical sects, the philosophies, creeds and dogmas of which are as unlike as are those of the Christian, Hebrew, Moslem and other religious sects, each and all of which are guaranteed the same limited rights and privileges, no more and no less.

"The homeopathic sect teaches and practices the art of healing in accordance with the doctrine of theory founded on the Law of Similars, expressed by the Latin axiom, 'Similia, Similibus, Curanter,' meaning 'Like cures like.' Homeopathy as defined by Webster means 'the doctrine or theory of curing disease with very minute doses of medicine which in a healthy person would profuce a condition like that of the disease treated.'

"Each of these sects has its own individual national organizations with component bodies in states, counties and cities.

"The sect whose orthodox adherents call themselves 'regulars' banded together as the A. M. A. establish themselves as competitors of the other two sects in the field of medicine and in the practice of the healing art.

4. "The so-called regular or allopathic sect has waged a competitive war of extermination against the institutions and members of the homeopathic and eclectic sects for more than 50 years. In this war, the allopathic sect has employed a conglomeration of motives including defamation, detraction, intrigue, jealousy, obstruction, suppression, oppression, selfishness, bigotry and conspiracy to accomplish the purpose.

THE GOAL

"The goal is and was monopoly of the institutions of medical learning; monopoly of the right to treat the sick in the hospitals of the land; monopoly of the legal right to say what is and what is not a therapeutic agent; monopoly of public medical opinion; monopoly of the right to set up and enforce a sectarian code of ethics for the national medical profession; monopoly of the right and privilege of rendering professional medical services anywhere, in accordance with methods of treatment other than those taught and promulgated by the A. M. A.; in few words - the goal of union of State and Medicine, with the high priests of the A. M. A. temple of medicine in Chicago in complete control.

"By collusion with the managements of hospitals, the A. M. A. has denied and is denying individual citizens numbering tens of thousands the right to have medical treatment in hospitals by physicians other than those who hold A. M. A. membership.

5. "The bill in question, if enacted, would interfere with the right and duty of the physician to prescribe in accordance with his individual professional judgment."

LAUDS KOCH TREATMENT

The affidavit concludes with Dr. Vorbeck's statement on the therapeutical value of the Koch cancer treatment, a modality which has been declared worthless by the American Medical Association and the Pure Food and Drug Administration.

"I am personally and professionally familiar with the use and therapeutic value of the Koch treatment for treating cancer," he avers. "I took this treatment myself for the type of cancer identified as sarcoma more than 25 years ago, with prompt, complete, and permanent cure as the result. I prescribed and administered this treatment for a large and conspicuous abdominal growth with prompt, complete and permanent results. The patient was my wife.

"I have prescribed and administered this treatment to a significant number of patients afflicted with various types of cancer. Some instances were symptomatically cured; some proved fatal, in all of which the cases were far advanced, after surgery, X-ray and radium had been used futilely. With rare exceptions, even in the fatal cases, a marvelous relief of pain followed its use. In some cases where opiates had been given at regular intervals daily for relief of pain, the strength and frequency of doses could be greatly modified.

"From the foregoing experience, I pronounce the Koch treatment for cancer an invaluable therapeutic method from the physical and economic stand-point. I consider it my humanitarian, my professional, and my civic and moral duty to give my patients the potential benefits of this, the Koch chemotherapy treatment for the disease cancer, before or after they have been subjected to the knife, X-ray, and radium. I cannot conscientiously prescribe or recommend the use of surgery, X-ray or radium after the condition known as metastasis has been clinically determined to exist."

"FLUORIDATION RULED ILLEGAL"

Under this straight forward title the Journal of the American Medical Association; carried the following item in Volume 165, Number 5, October 5, 1957:

"Fluoridation Ruled Illegal. -- The Supreme Court has ruled that metropolitan Toronto cannot add fluorine compounds to the water it supplies to 13 municipalities. The argument began when one of the municipalities sued Toronto, which was proposing to fluoridate the water. (Forest Hill). The first local decision was that the senior authority was perfectly entitled to do so, but the Ontario Appeal Court reversed this decision, and when Toronto carried its case to the Supreme Court the latter endorsed the Ontario Appeal Court's decision by five to two. The majority decision says that the new Metropolitan Toronto by-law is not aimed at making the supply of water more pure and wholesome but is designed "to cause the inhabitants of the Metropolitan area, whether or not they wished to do so, to ingest daily small quantities of fluoride in the expectation that this will render great numbers of them less susceptible to tooth decay." Hence the byway is considered to have exceeded the powers conferred by the Ontario legislature. This raises the question as to whether other Ontario municipalities that have already fluoridated their water are acting beyond their legal powers. The situation could be put right by fresh legislation at the next session of the Ontario Provincial Parliament."

Other municipalities laboring under the menace of mass medication have reason to be encouraged by the action of the Supreme Court across our northern border.

A STATEMENT ON THE FLUORIDATION OF PUBLIC WATER SUPPLIES

by the

MEDICAL-DENTAL AD HOC COMMITTEE on

EVALUATION of FLUORIDATION

We believe this "statement" has important information for those engaged in the medical, dental, and related fields of public health and medical science. We hope it receives the careful consideration it merits.

The "statement" is a strictly professional undertaking and represents the joint efforts of many doctors and scientists in various parts of this country who have conducted an extensive investigation of the facts and other information related to fluoridation.

The "statement" is especially concerned with the problem of doctors who treat individual patients and who always think of them as individuals.

The preliminary circulation of this "statement", revealed that thousands of physicians, dentists and scientists are in accord with the analysis of fluoridation problems discussed herein.

The Medico-Dental ad hoc Committee on Evaluation of Fluoridation is a voluntary organization formed for the purpose of independently studying this highly controversial subject. This investigation is a continuing project. The "Statement" represents the current evaluation of fluoridation based upon existing evidence and the potentialities indicated by medical experience, perspective, and the trends of scientific investigation. Correspondence with the committee is invited.

OUR MEDICATED FOOD SUPPLY

It is bad enough to have to cope with the over zealous "do gooder" of the Welfare State vintage, who force mass medication upon the public at public expense, but at least we can fight back at this form of unconstitutional politicking.

When chemicals and drugs are added to our foods for the purpose of preserving them with no regard as to how we will react, we are faced with a situation, which only the government through the Federal Drug and Food Administration can fight. However, housewives can help to protect their families, at least insofar as packaged foods are concerned, by reading the label of contents on every package of food bought; refusing to purchase chemically preserved and adulterated foods, and supporting legislation now pending, to control it.

"In An Effort To Eliminate Traces of Antibiotics from the nation's milk supply, the Food and Drug Administration has issued restrictions on dosages of these drugs for cattle."

PENICILLIN IN MILK

The Elimination Of White Bread made with chemically treated flour from the diet is called for in certain types of severe chronic skin disease by one physician. At a meeting of the Texas Academy of General Practice last fall, Dr. Arthur G. Schoch of Dallas pointed out that many of his patients improved markedly within a few weeks after they quit eating commercially-made white bread. He also indicated that he had treated a number of patients suffering from perpetuation of a penicillin reaction by eliminating milk from their diets. The penicillin appears in the milk of cows which have been given penicillin injections for various diseases."

"CONSUMERS NEED TO LEARN HOW TO PICK ORANGES FOR QUALITY"

"WHAT DOES GRADE "A" MEAN? To most housewives it is a symbol for high quality, and quality is synonymous with wholesomeness. That was the report of William H. Feldman, D. V. M., of the Mayo Clinic, at a food and drug conference. Mr. Feldman found that the people he interviewed assumed as a matter of course that if poultry was labeled "Grade "A"," it would also have been inspected for disease and other signs of unwholesomeness. He pointed out, however, that such is not the case, and poultry that is inspected and subsequently graded, must carry the additional legend "Inspected for Wholesomeness" and "Graded." In order to avoid confusing and misleading the consumer, it was suggested that when uninspected poultry is graded the words "not inspected" should appear on the label along with the grade marking.

MASS MEDICATION VIA CHEMICAL PROTECTION OF FRUITS AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION TAKES STEP TO PRESERVE RIGHT OF FREE CHOICE

"CHEMICAL PRESERVATIVES added after fruits and vegetables have been harvested must now be declared on the label. Growers organizations are putting pressure on the Food and Drug Administration to exempt the shippers of fresh produce from the labeling requirements. It seems that consumers don't like to buy lemons, for example, labeled "To Maintain Freshness in Transit --This Fruit has been Protected with Sodium O-Phenylphenate." Commissioner George P. Larrick has taken the position that "the consumer has a right to know whether a preservative is added to food and what it is." For the consumer's sake, we hope he can maintain his forthright stand."

Prior to the appearance of this release we did some investigating on our own, which bears out the contention of Consumer Bulletin.

The following cards measuring three by five inches were on fruit shipments but discarded by the retailer, no doubt for the obvious reason that it would curb consumer appeal.

These cards are very small, and the note to retailers announcing the Federal Food and Drug Administration requirement to display the ruling is in four point type, so that the average person would not notice it or could scarcely read it if he did.

"To Maintain Freshness in Transit--This Fruit Has Been Biphenyl Protected."

"The Freshness of This Fruit Has Been Protected With Biphenyl.

"Note: to Retailers -- Federal Food and Drug Administration Requires That All Retailer Display This Card With The Fruit At Time of Sale.

We Have Observed No Retailers Displaying These Cards.

of

of

North Dakota

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, June 9, 1958

MR. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, This office is swamped with letters about homemade bread. Most inquire, "Where can we get this unbleached flour? Where can we get this bread?"

I have the following communication from the Angelbread Foundation of Las Vegas, Nev.:

Representative USHER L. BURDICK,
State of North Dakota, United States House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE BURDICK:

Your statement calling on American housewives to make their own bread which appeared on United Press International wire today was most interesting, and I must say I welcomed the statement because I agree with you nearly 100 percent.

However, you will shortly receive four loaves of a homemade bread manufactured by a commercial plant. This bread will come to you from Minneapolis where it is now being made, and the enclosed folder will tell you the full story of the most delicious piece of bread you have ever tasted in your life.

We hope to build hospitals throughout the country from the sale of Angelita's Bread, and perhaps the bread will help support you in your new campaign against pastelike, store-bought breads.

Incidentally, the bread has just been introduced into Fargo, North Dakota, and during this present week we have baked 8,000 loaves in the Holsum bakery plant there. Which only proves that your constituents have good taste for a real homemade bread.

Sincerely,

AL FREEMAN.

In addition to this letter, this concern sends the following pamphlet:

NUN'S HOMEMADE BREAD MAY BE MIRACLE TO BUILD NEW HOSPITALS

(By Hubbard Keavy)

HENDERSON, NEV. --Amid plenty, Al Freeman was literally starving. He couldn't retain a bite of food in the Rose de Lima Hospital, here in an oxygen tent to clear up an ailment in his lung dating back to his combat service in Italy in World War II.

Then a nun fed him a piece of buttered and toasted bread.

Freeman lived on this bread for 5 days, saying with the gratitude of a man freed from great hunger, "This must have been made by an angel."

He missed the wonderful-tasting bread when he got home and often went back to the hospital to get a loaf. The Sisters of St. Dominic couldn't sell the bread, but Freeman, like many other ex-patients who had tasted the bread while they were ill, left a generous donation at the little chapel. Freeman, a publicist, represents the Sands Hotel in nearby Las Vegas and had been trying for a year to raise funds for the badly needed extra beds at Rose de Lima.

He thought up the idea of putting the bread on the commercial market with a royalty contribution going to build up Rose de Lima Hospital and then to build other hospitals all over the country. The bread seemed unusually good to him--but to make sure, Freeman sent hundreds of loaves out to people all over the country asking for their frank opinion.

When the sampling was done, Freeman knew he had something special in the way of bread. People wrote that they had never tasted bread so delicious in all their lives, that it was even better than their own homemade bread.

The recipe used by Sister Angelita was 100 years old, first used by her grandmother in her native Germany. The trick was to get a commercial baker to make the bread as good as Sister Angelita.

The Sands Hotel got behind the project, with its president, Jack Entratter personally heading the work, and finally 700 loaves were produced commercially at a cost of $20 each. And Freeman knew he had started something when; during the first week the bread was on sale in Las Vegas, 5,000 loaves were snapped up. As 3 cents a loaf royalty, that meant $150 for Rose de Lima.

Entratter set up a charitable Angelita Bread Foundation, with a trustee board composed of a Lutheran, a Mormon, a Catholic, a Protestant, and a Jew. The goal--to market the bread nationally, to build Rose de Lima Hospital, then to build hospitals wherever needed. The Foundation is making contracts with quality bakers in most large cities--they get the recipe, their secret of mixing and the trademark "Angelita's Bread" for one simple thing--an agreement to contribute a royalty on each of the loaves to the Angelita Bread Foundation to build hospitals.

Sister Felicia, administrator of the Rose de Lima Hospital, prays daily for the success of the project. Last year, her small, overworked staff took care of 3,000 patients--48 percent of whom were Lutheran, Protestant, Baptist, and Methodist; 22 percent of whom were Jewish; and 30 percent of whom were Catholic--all the Sisters were concerned with was the fact that they were all ill and needed care.

Soon Angelita's bread will be out on the market. Soon, with the help of God, Sister Felicia will have her badly needed extra beds, and communities all over America will have other badly needed hospitals.

"Do you suppose," Freeman asked Sister Felicia, "that after we get a good start with the hospitals that the Angelita Foundation might have a little left over to help us build a synagogue in Las Vegas?"

Sister Felicia topped Freeman's little jest, "Why certainly, Al--do you suppose you might call it St. Dominic's Synagogue?"

Small mills all over the country can turn out unbleached flour, and one large mill in North Dakota, the State Mill and Elevator, Grand Forks, N. Dak., can supply this flour and no doubt hundreds of small mills throughout the country can supply it.

I was afraid this bread would not be produced in quantities because housewives were too busy to bake, but this pamphlet shows the way out. Let the bakers bake the bread in quantities from unbleached flour and under a formula exactly like the homemade bread process. That would supply what I feared that housewives would not find time to make. It looks as though we were going to get somewhere on homemade bread.

One other caution--good bread cannot be made from doctored water. Fluoride in water used in bread poisons the bread. Buy your bread where good pure natural water is used. If the water will kill a goldfish don't use it. Natural water has fluoride in it, but nature has buffeted it with other ingredients so as to make nature's water safe to drink and to cook with.

(Via Western Union Cable) - Standard Oil and the Rockefeller boys in Washington (Dulles and Eisenhower) have created here the hottest spot for American cannon fodder since World War II.

If World War III breaks out in Lebanon (the chances here being figured about even) it will be due solely to Standard Oil's greed and the subservience to the House of Rockefeller of our Administration in Washington.

The phoney reason given Congress by Eisenhower for ordering the landing of the Marines here this week was that he did it to protect Americans." A Congressman who will accept this reason should have his head (if any) examined. No American has been molested in Lebanon like those 30 American business men who were kidnapped by Cuban rebels and held as hostages. Ike didn't even bother to send their families a message of condolence.

His concern over the Lebanese situation is written all over the place here. A successful revolution will mean that the rebels will capture the town of Sidon, 25 miles south of here, and take over the tidewater terminus of Standard Oil's 1,067-mile pipeline from the rich Saudi-Arabian oil fields. Also the huge storage tanks in which there are millions of gallons of oil awaiting ships to transport it thru and out of the Mediterranean.

Ike's position is weakened by the fact that such an invasion should have been initiated by the United Nations. Instead, the Rockefeller government at Washington initiated it and then told U. N. to hop to it. Our representative to U. N. (Henry Cabot Lodge) had a speech already written for him in Rockefeller Center.

Before the New York newspapers were on the street with invasion news, Mr. Lodge reported the action to the Security Council, where Russia's veto always blocks any action, asking U. N. approval. The trans-Arabian pipeline, over which the Rock Mob is risking a third world war, was built with $25,000,000 of American taxpayers' money illegally given Standard Oil by Franklin Roosevelt.

The seriousness of the situation is reflected in the non-Communist foreign press. Spain's leading daily, controlled by Mr. Franco who cannot by any stretch of the imagination be said to have Communist sympathies, said "Washington can now use the same reasons to explain its actions in Lebanon that Russia used to explain its intervention in Hungary."

England's Manchester GUARDIAN said the American government is stricken with panic by the revolution in Iraq, where -- by the way --- Standard Oil has wells producing a million barrels of oil a day, and a 12% participation in an exploring corporation known as Iraq Petroleum Company, Ltd.

The London DAILY HERALD said that Britain must not join the madness of American landings in the Middle East.

These facts are all known to every American correspondent in Europe. As are Standard Oil's fomenting of troubles in Algeria for the French, and in Indonesia for the Dutch. We shall appreciate our readers sending clippings of any of their papers that mentioned it.

WASHINGTON NEWS BEAT

(By O. C. Miller)

The decision in Lebanon was whether or not to exchange the lives and blood of Americans for oil. It was decided we should be willing to make the exchange. . . . When the shooting starts in the Middle East expect prices to go into orbit. It could be 4 to 6 years before cars, T. V. sets, and other goods are available as they are now. . . . Nasser became hero to 80 million Arabs when he seized the Suez from the "Western Capitalists." Ike forced the British, French, and Israeli troops to let him keep it. Now he is taking the oil fields from the Capitalists ---and Ike objects. . . . The U. S. learns it cannot buy friends with dollars. The more give-away dollars, the fewer friends. Though some dollars have been used to bribe officials not to cut the throats of officials of other countries. . . .

WHAT IS HAPPENING TO AMERICA AS A DIRECT RESULT OF THE RECIPROCAL TRADE AGREEMENTS

MR. DULLES SAID in 1955 before the Senate Finance Committee: "The President may, at his discretion, sacrifice a part or all of any American industry, if he believes that his foreign policy would be furthered thereby."

THE NORTHWEST - Japanese plywood manufacturers . . have just about destroyed the plywood industry in Oregon and Washington.

Lumber, metal mining, and sugar production - Key industries in the Pacific Northwest - are . . . facing bankruptcy. . .

TEXTILES - The American government sells American cotton to Japanese textile manufacturers at prices of 6¢ a pound below what American mills are required (by the government) to pay for the same cotton. . . . As a result, 1 million American textile workers have been cut to a 3 or 4-day work week. Two hundred eighty textile mills have closed since 1947 . . Imports of woven cloth have jumped 735 percent.

OIL - We're right now . . witnessing the destruction of an industry because of foreign imports.

In Texas, the State and Federal taxes on domestic oil amount to 75 cents a barrel, while the present tariff on the imported oil amounts to 5 to 10 cents a barrel. There is no incentive for exploration any more. They can produce only nine days a month. . .

We have reached a point where foreign oil on which we could not depend in emergency presents a threat to our very existence. . .

MINING - . . Imports of foreign copper are destroying the American copper industry. In the past two years 719 (out of 720 tungsten mines) have closed down. . . Lead and zinc (production) is the lowest in modern history. Without a home supply of these metals, our national defense would be maimed in time of war. Our economy is already seriously damaged in a time of peace . . .

OHIO - Here you will find shutdowns and cutbacks in the pottery, handmade glass, steel and coal industries. Here are cases of destitution and hunger.

WEST VIRGINIA - Low-tariff imports are threatening to put West Virginia industries out of business.

NEW ENGLAND - The President, negotiating with Iceland for new airbases, sought to appease Iceland by sacrificing the New England fishing industry.

WILL CONGRESS MUSTER ENOUGH DETERMINATION IN 1958, FOR THE FIRST TIME IN 24 YEARS, TO ASSUME THE DUTY THAT THE CONSTITUTION GIVES IT?

(From DAN SMOOT REPORT, March 24, 1958: Quotes from - Senators and Congressmen)

SHOULD HAWAII BECOME THE 50TH STATE?

By Billy James Hargis, D.D.

"Now that Congress has voted for admission of Alaska as the 49th State in our United States of America, the left-wingers are clamoring for early admission of Hawaii as the 50th State. Alaska will be the first State admitted which does not touch the shores of the United States. Hawaii is much farther from our shores; in fact, it is almost out of the Western Hemisphere. The Communists have a much stronger hand in the economy of Hawaii than the average American ever dreams. The facts in this vitally important matter have been almost entirely blacked out by our left-wing controlled Press.

The economy of Hawaii is largely controlled by the International Longshoremen's and Warehouse Union which is headed by Harry Bridges who is President of the Union, then we will go into the cold facts regarding his control of Hawaii. Harry Bridges has been identified with Communist activities in our Nation since 1943, but his affiliation with the Moscow apparatus was not documented by the House Committee on Un-American Activities until mid-1954.

Patrick Walsh, formerly a Kremlin agent in Canada, the United States, France, Britain and Italy, identified Bridges as a vice-president of the Cominform maritime apparatus. A report by the Senate Interior Committee during 1949 said that Bridges was "known as one of the top leaders of the maritime section of the Cominform." This committee report also stated, "The Communist International maintains a special agency to distribute Moscow decisions and orders to the 67 nation-wide Communist Parties throughout the world. The annual report of the agitation and propaganda department reveals that during June, 1945 Moscow supplied cable and wireless news daily to twenty-nine Communist publications in the U. S. A. One of these was the California Labor Herald . . . This publication is the official organ and mouthpiece of Harry Bridges and the I. L. W. U. (International Longshoremen's and Warehouse Union). It gets its news prepaid and free from Moscow."

Harry Bridges' union, the International Longshoremen's and Warehouse Union was expelled from the C. I. O. in 1949 after findings that the entire organization was Communist dominated. Those who are familiar with the extreme left-wing nature of the C. I. O. and the extent to which it follows the Communist Party line realize the degree of open Communist control required for them to expel a member union as Communist dominated. The official Territorial Commission on Subversive Activities in Hawaii reported as follows regarding the International Longshoremen's . . . Union: "A study of the 1955 elected officers, international officers, I. L. W. U. Memorial Association officers and directors, and full time paid members of the I. L. W. U. staff indicates that about fifty per cent of these are either identified Communists or known alumni of the Communist California Labor School." So much for the nature of Mr. Harry Bridges and his Union. Now, let's get into the unpleasant facts concerning the control this Moscow directed outfit and its president have over Hawaii, which left-wing politicians want to admit as our 50th State.

In a report dated June 21, 1949 the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs stated, "Since VJ-Day, in September, 1945, the Hawaiian Island have become one of the central operations bases and a strategic clearing house for the Communist campaign against the United States of America." The report warned us that, "By the well-known infiltration tactics of world Communism, a relative handful of Moscow adherents in the Islands, operating chiefly through the I. L. W. U., has persistently sabotaged the economic life of the territory. This premeditated campaign of sabotage, through strikes, slowdowns, arbitrary work stoppages, and violent racial agitation, is inspired, managed, directed, and financed largely through the international headquarters of the I. L. W. U. in San Francisco." The report said that, "Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehouse Union, is the unseen Communist dictator of the Territory of Hawaii." This investigation began early in 1948 and was abandoned in June, 1949 after a move in Congress for Hawaiian Statehood was sidetracked by this explosive report. "The complexion of our Congress has moved more towards the left since 1949 and there is some doubt that even such facts as those I have just described will halt them now. Certainly, when direct aid to Communist Conspiracy Governments is voted by Congress we can fear the worse for our Nation in any vote involving national security."

After eight years, the investigation started by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs was resumed by the Senate Internal Security Sub-Committee in December, 1956. One of the first witnesses was General John W. O'Daniel, known as "Iron Mike" and former commanding general of the United States Army forces in the Pacific from 1952 through 1954. He told the Sub-Committee that the danger from Communism in Hawaii was "just as great, if not greater, than in 1948." He said that the islands are very important militarily and that the Communists spend $220,000 a year on organizational work there. Basing his testimony upon his wartime experience as the Navy's chief strategic planner in the Pacific, Admiral Charles M. Cooke told the Committee that Communist domination of Hawaii "could spell irretrievable disaster to the United States."

The Senate Interior Committee described the Communist operation to take over the Democratic Party in Hawaii. Representative Carroll Reece of Tennessee described the Senate Committee's findings as follows: "First the Reds took control of the I. L. W. U. (International Longshoremen's and Warehouse Union); next the I. L. W. U. offered to assist the Democratic Party, then devoured it." The Committee report started: "John Wayne Hall, the leader of the I. L. W. U. in the Hawaiian Islands, met with Harry Kronick, a leader in the Democratic Party in Honolulu, during September, 1947, to determine policies for assistance to be given the Democratic Party by the I. L. W. U. . . . By March, 1948 the I. L. W. U. had undertaken a militant campaign to infiltrate and control the Democratic Party from the precinct level up through the Territorial Convention, which was scheduled for May, 1948. This infiltration . . . was under the direct leadership of Harry Lehua Kamoku, a recognized Communist and a prominent I. L. W. U. leader. . . . The Democratic Territorial Convention was held in Honolulu on May 2, 1948, at the McKinley High School Auditorium. Forty-one Communist Party members were delegates or alternates to this convention. They controlled every committee in the convention."

Loyal Democrats were horrified upon realizing that their party organization had been captured by the Communists. In a radio address from Honolulu in May, 1948, Mrs. Victoria K. Holt, then Democratic National Committee-woman for the Territory, and Democratic candidate for delegate to Washington, said ". . . the Communist Party has already captured control of most of the high committee offices of the Democratic Party. . . . I did not know until the Democratic Convention on May 2, 1948 how serious the Communist problem was. . . . we cannot expect Statehood . . . until we prove . . . that we can solve this Communist problem."

Victor Riesel, nationally known labor columnist who lost his eyesight at the hands of a labor goon, went to Hawaii a few years ago to try to discover the source of Bridges' political and industrial power. He reported some of his findings in the American Legion magazine for October, 1956. Mr. Riesel said, "I found courageous journalist and businessmen trying to fight back. I found labor leaders, isolated as well as insulated, trying to fight, but utterly ignored by their national leaders at home who have not dispatched money or manpower for an effective fight on Bridges' machine. I found that Bridges' and Hall's power was so strong that their agents could wander through the legislative chambers at will. They received copies of secret documents before special legislative committees received them. I learned that the legislature had passed a special bill making one of Bridges' buildings tax-exempt. When the Governor vetoes it, members of both parties voted to override the veto!

I found that the legislature had cut the anti-subversive committee budget to $10,000 a year." Can you imagine -- Communist agents wander through the Hawaiian legislature at will influencing them. The Democratic Party is under their control and the Republicans were scared to death of them. Robert McElrath, identified Communist and radio propagandist for the Longshoremen's Union announced during 1956 that the Union would not concern itself with either party, but would concentrate in its pre-election activities on seeing to it "that its friends are rewarded and its enemies punished."

During 1953, the International Longshoremen's and Warehouse Union staged a devastating strike in Hawaii to protest the conviction of Jack Hall and six others for plotting to teach and advocate the violent overthrow of the United States Government. Two thousand stevedores of the Union refused to load cargo for Korea. When Harry Bridges calls the dock workers from their jobs, all business in Hawaii comes to a halt. The Senate Interior Committee said in their 1949 report that, "At any moment, the Communist leaders of the I. L. W. U. (International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union) decide that conditions are not to their liking, the commerce of the Hawaiian Islands is brought to a standstill." Time after time, Bridges and his Union have tied up the economy of Hawaii.

About two thousand government and hospital employees in Hawaii are enrolled in the United Public Workers Union, headed by Henry Epstein, also identified as a Communist Party member in sworn testimony before the Hawaiian Subversive Activities Commission.

In his article in the American Legion magazine of October, 1956 Victor Riesel informed us that the Kremlin announced to Communists during December, 1955 that they considered Hawaii a "colonial area." He said that too many Americans were busy on the cocktail circuit to pay much attention to reports from Moscow on a significant piece in the Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee publication "Kommunist." Nothing goes into this magazine without special orders from Communist leaders. In the last week of 1955, Kommunist magazine mentioned Hawaii and American run Samoa as examples of capitalist "colonialism". The Kremlin announced that these areas must be liberated by "revolutionary action." From evidence which the Press has blacked out from our American people, it seems the Communist Conspirators are well on their way towards "liberating" Hawaii.

In this drive for Hawaii, the Conspirators want Hawaii to become a State, probably so they can send their senators and representatives to Washington and for other reasons. The Senate Interior Committee in its report of June 21, 1949 warned us: "Statehood for Hawaii is a primary objective of Communist policy in the Territory. The I. L. W. U. and the Communist Party say frankly that they could control a clear majority of the delegates who would write the new State Constitution."

Considering all these facts, could admission of Hawaii as our 50th State possibly be in the interests of America?"

COMMUNIST CRUELTIES IN CHINA

THE STORIES of cruelties and inhumanities practiced against political prisoners by Chinese Communists are always read with revulsion, with complete lack of understanding--and even now, against a long background of experience and documentation, almost with disbelief.

It seems incomprehensible that such a throwback to the dark ages of prehistoric times could exist in this era of civilization and enlightenment. That mankind is still capable of unspeakable bestiality is a fact that comes as a shock, no matter how numerous the repetitions.

There is recent proof of this fact in the arrival of two gaunt faced Catholic priests in San Francisco after five years in the prisons of Red China. Father Joseph McCormack and Father Cyril Wagner were in China on missions of mercy and faith. They sought only to show the people of China the ways of kindness and compassion, of peace and brotherhood.

The Chinese Communists heaped indignities and humiliations upon them. They were confined in tiny, filthy cells for years on end, under sanitary conditions that were indescribable. They were forbidden to speak, or even to move their lips, and their only means of communication was scratched symbols on a dirt floor.

These two good men had not harmed a living creature or wronged a human being in their lives. They were concerned only with the souls of men, not their beliefs. They strove only for the health and the happiness and the spiritual enrichment of the Chinese people.

But these things had no better meaning to the Communists than that of excuse for torment and torture. That is what Communism does to the human mind and conscience. It takes its law from the jungle.

It was not China or the Chinese people who wrought these terrible injuries upon the captive priests. Father McCormack, still unable to speak little above a whisper, told reporters in San Francisco: "I want the people in Red China to hear about this."

Eventually the whole world will know about the degradation that is the sole fruit of Communism, and will reject it.

INVITE ISRAEL

IF A SUMMIT meeting on the Middle East is to include representatives of the Arab nations, as Soviet Premier Khrushchev demands, then Israel too should be invited.

Arab nationalism claims that its objectives are to wipe out the last vestiges of colonialism in the Middle East and to provide a better life for the people of the area. But it has never relied on those legitimate aims to win the masses of Arabs to its cause.

Instead it has made sweeping gains by emotional appeal, by feeding the fires of hatred for Israel. The Arab nations have been diverted from solution of their problems by nursing that grudge against the tiny nation which gave their combined might a smashing military defeat.

Arab hatred for Israel has been cunningly exploited by the Soviet in posing as the Arabs' best friend. Both Soviet and Arab spokesmen can be expected to use a summit meeting as a soap box for anti-Israel propaganda, at the very least. A maximum aim could be to isolate democratic Israel from its Western ties.

It would be unfair to deny Israel a voice to reply.

METROPOLITAN AREA GOVERNMENT - INVITATION TO DICTATORSHIP

City and county areas throughout California and throughout the United States are being pressured and cajoled into accepting what is touted as a "new" form of government, deceptively known as Metropolitanism or "Home Rule." States are being told that their constitutions are "outmoded" and must be rewritten to bring them up to date -- or killed off and a "modern" constitution substituted.

The open and obvious purpose of all this is to persuade the people to give up their voting power, their right to elect the men who make and administer the laws . . . and to substitute an appointed State Manager and an appointed Area Manager who will in turn appoint all the administrative officials whom we have heretofore had the right to elect. In other words it is centralized government under a dictator and his appointed subordinates whom we, the people, have no right or power to touch, either to put in office or to remove.

This is being sold to Americans as a "new" form of government. There is nothing new about it. It is as old as the oldest tyranny or dictatorship the world has ever seen. It was under this form of government that Nebuchadnezzar and other Oriental kings ruled Great Babylon hundreds and even thousands of years before Christ, and Pharaoh ruled Egypt at the time of Moses. It was under this form of government that the French kings ruled before the revolution. It was under this form of government that Hitler ruled Germany; and it is thus, in essence, that the Soviet Presidium rules Russia today.

We are the only nation in the world that has ever completely freed itself from this appointive dictatorship. We fought a Revolution for the right to elect those who govern us. Rosalie Gordon, in her excellent book, "Nine Men Against America," has said of our federal system:

> "This was the first and only system of government in history which made impossible the growth of an all-powerful central government -- be it republic, monarchy, democracy, or dictatorship. . . . They (the would-be dictators) must have complete central authority; otherwise their tyranny cannot withstand the revolt of men who wish to be free."

America can never be brought completely under a Socialist dictatorship until our forty-nine Sovereign State Republics are liquidated and their governmental powers taken over by local "Metropolitan areas" which can be directed from a central headquarters.

Isn't it perfectly plain, then, why we are having this vehement drive toward the abolition of local governments and the centralization of power in a few hands? The internationalist super-government boys are at work again -- and have been for a long time. We know they have practically taken over our federal government. We are just discovering how far-reaching are their plans and how thoroughly they have laid the foundations for "making over" all our local governments. There are 22 organizations with headquarters at 1313 East 60th St., Chicago, Illinois, which have been busy -- some of them for more than 50 years -- laying these foundations.

In "A Half Century of Municipal Reform, the History of the National Municipal League," by Frank Mann Stewart (published in 1950 by University of California Press, Berkeley and Los Angeles), we find on page 80 this proposal for a "model state government":

> "A single-chambered legislature would select from its own members a legislative council of nine members. Their council chairman would have the title of governor but no veto or appointive power. An administrative manager would be appointed by the legislative council."

On page 39 is foreshadowed the eventual transfer to the central government of all actual state powers:

> "The State control has been preserved, but its exercise has been taken from the legislative and entrusted to the administrative officers, wherever it has been felt that its preservation is absolutely necessary."

The more centralized governments of France, Germany, and England are praised as far superior to ours.

And what arguments are the "scientific planners" using to sell this centralization to the American people? EFFICIENCY AND ECONOMY!

Our present system of local elected governments is inefficient, and unnecessarily expensive, according to the "experts".

To some extent that may be true. A dictatorship is always more "efficient" than a republican form of government -- if by efficiency is meant the swift ability to translate law into action. The dictatorship may also be more economical in terms of money. But by what measure can we reckon the cost of dictatorship in terms of human freedom, human dignity, and its toll of suffering and oppression! Are we willing to sacrifice so much, for the promise of the saving of a few dollars in money? In the long run, dictatorships always turn out to be more expensive in every way -- because unlimited power inevitably leads to unlimited abuse of power, and unchecked spending. (Remember, the people would have no means of removing an administrator, no matter what he did!)

It is quite evident that the "scientific experts" agree with Henry Wallace that "the people are too d--n dumb to know what's good for them." Since the "trained planners" consider themselves to be the only ones who know how this government ought to be run -- therefore it is the duty of the people to hand the control over to them and their "new" government!

It is an Aladdin's lamp deal! You remember that Aladdin's wife was persuaded by the scheming uncle to exchange the old lamp which had given them -- and could continue to give -- all that they needed or wanted, for a glittering, shiny new lamp -- which could give them nothing.

If the American people are persuaded to hand over their God-given rights under our God-inspired Constitution, in exchange for the glittering, empty promises of the scheming "experts", they will prove Henry Wallace was right! And they will deserve the Communist-dominated, One-World Government they will get.

All emphasis in quotations is ours.

THEY CALL THEM

PAY-AS-YOU-GO TAXES

----But after you pay, Where can you go?

FLAVORINGS - To cut costs, some ice cream manufacturers use these flavor substitutes: (1) For vanilla--piperonal which is excellent for killing lice. (2) For eggs--diethyl glucol, used as anti-freeze in radiators and as paint removers. (3) For cherry--Aldehyde C-17, used in aniline dyes, plastics and synthetic rubber. (4) For pineapple--ethyl acetate, cleaner for leathers and textiles, whose vapor alone is irritating to mucous membranes. It can cause chronic pulmonary, liver and cardiac damage. (5) Banana--amyl acetate, an oil paint solvent. (6) Nut--butyraldahyde, an ingredient of rubber cement and synthetic resins. (7) Strawberry--benzyl acetate, a nitrate solvent. (Extract from article in Jan. 1958 Prevention.)

INJECTIONS - To increase weight, over 30,000,000 chickens are innoculated yearly with a synthetic chemical, usually called stilbestrol. An estrogenic substance (artificial female hormone), stilbestrol is also fed to steers for the same commercial reason. It is estimated that at least half the nation's beef cattle receive the drug. Americans consume millions of pounds of stilbestrol-produced meat. Cooking does not destroy the drug.

Testifying before the Delaney Committee, one learned specialist after another solemnly warned that stilbestrol is a dangerous compound, far-reaching in its effects. They said it should be dispensed only under prescription, is unsafe for indiscriminate use and is biological cynamite. One year after original implantation, a pellet, transferred from one animal to another, retained sufficient activity to induce a tumor.

PESTICIDES - "The National Audubon Society president, John H. Baker, said the California Dept. of Fish and Game had made tests with dieldrin, a new chlorinated hydrocarbon developed for pest control---The use of one and a half pounds of dieldrin an acre, he said, caused the death of dogs, chickens, geese, turkeys, jackrabbits, snakes, gophers, quail and pheasants.

". . .tests by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service had shown that a pound of dieldrin 'has sufficient toxicity to kill approximately 4,000,000 quail chicks' . . .The Federal Dept. of Agriculture is distributing dieldrin at the rate of 2 to 4 pounds an acre in nine Southern states." --From the New York Times, Feb. 2, 1958.

NOXIOUS SPRAYS - "WHAT IS HAPPENING TO THE SOIL? When lead arsenate is applied over a long period, the soil may be loaded with it to such an extent that few other plants will grow after the trees are removed. Replants may not thrive for 10 years or more. Continued applications of sulphur may produce an acid condition far below the optimum for good growth." From "Whither Orchard Spraying in The Rural New Yorker, March 1, 1958.

FLUORIDATION - "I am appalled at the prospect of using water as a vehicle for drugs. (Fluoride is a corrosive poison that will produce serious effects on a long range basis. Any attempt to use water this way is deplorable," said Dr. Charles Gordon Heyd, former President of the American Medical Association.

GASES, FUMIGATORS - Poisonous DDT, often used in vaporizers in the home, bakeries, food markets, restaurants, etc., has been largely displaced by Lindane--the most toxic member of the BHC family. The Journal of the American Medical Association, for Oct. 1954, reported that it has been discovered that lindane is stored, in significant amounts, in the brain and liver and that it may induce profound and long-lasting effects on the central nervous system.

"The overwhelming majority of the American people believe that the competitive system and the profit motive have brought to this country an over-all standard of living higher than any reached before, in all history and higher than in any other country. All the more important is it that stern restraints should be placed on those who seek profit by conscienceless exploitation of their fellow Americans. Every decent man and woman will agree with the Journal of the American Medical Association that it is difficult to imagine that anyone can be so callous as to endanger the lives of others, including small children, for the sake of financial gain. Such people deserve no consideration. If their instincts are not revolted by the thought of profiting by selling sickness, or perhaps death, to others, then surely laws must be written which will make such 'business enterprise' wholly unattractive." --From Leonard Wickenden's book, "Our Daily Poison", p. 139. Don't be put off by bureaucratic promises that "something will be done". Believe that, after the necessary legislation is enforced law.

Send .10 for petitions (for yourself and neighbors to sign) to:

Zelma P. Cordwell, Glen Ridge, New Jersey.

Do you oppose poisonous additives in food and beverages? Your signature on a carefully prepared Congressional Petition--and any other support you can contribute to this campaign--will increase by just that much the likelihood of ultimate victory over commercial exploitation.

Dear Friends:

The reluctance of our lawmakers to prohibit poisonous additives in foods and beverages and the immensity of our nation combine to necessitate a very large total of signed petitions.

Dotting the country are professional and lay people, as well as organizations, striving diligently in behalf of the Congressional Petition campaign. Almost invariably, they are the self-sacrificing ones who have labored for years in one field or another for the sake of humanity. Willing as they are, however, the entire responsibility for carrying this campaign through to victory can't be done by these staunch workers alone.

The great task of securing enough signatures to effect our purpose must be shared by ever increasing ranks of volunteers whose efforts go beyond signing their own names. Each of us who is able -- and genuinely distressed about chemically induced, physical degeneration -- should accept active opposition as our own moral duty.

Won't you accept as your important mission -- getting the enclosed petition filled and ordering more for distribution to friends, acquaintances and business associates anywhere in the U. S. A.? And, please tell America!

Earnestly yours,

Zelma P. Cordwell

THE BOOM OF SWANKIRK

At a time when the whole western world was in the midst of an unparalled depression, Swankirk, a small town in the Bavarian Forest, Germany, suddenly came to life in 1930. There was a coal mine which had to be closed down during the depression. An engineer, named Hebecker, had purchased the mine. He started working it and paid the workers with an unhoardable medium of exchange, called "Wara". It was brought into circulation by the "Wara Exchange Association" to put into practice the principles of Silvio Gesell.

This demurrage money rapidly came into circulation. Its full amount went from the mine to the workers, to the retailers, from there to the wholesalers and to the bank. And from there it went back to Hebecker at the mine--so closing the cycle of production and distribution without interruption of the circulation of this unhoardable money was punished by an automatic demurrage fee.

In a few weeks unemployment was a thing of the past--the economic boom grew. Then it began to expand into neighboring districts. Swankirk became an isle of prosperity surrounded by a world of depression and misery.

But, not interested in the prosperity and well-being of the people, the Finance Powers demanded that chancellor Bruening must order Halmar Schacht, President of the private German Reichsbank, to stop the continuance of the circulation of the unhoardable "Wara." This was done and the "Boom of Swankirk" ended.

THE MIRACLE OF WOERGL

In 1932 a news item was making the rounds of the press of all countries. It was a news item surprisingly different from the usual contents of the newspapers relating to liquidations, bankruptcies, unemployment, laying off of more workers, human misery and poverty, loss of homes, acts of despair and crimes in a thousand different forms.

The press wrote through International News Service: "A small place in the Austrian Alps, Woergl, in Tyrol, has been able to pay all its tax arrears. It has repaired its streets and constructed new ones. It has built a concrete bridge, established a jumping hill for ski sports, and found and continually finds work for all those unemployed or on relief. The unemployment of its entire male population of 1500 has completely disappeared. A true and healthy prosperity has caused something never heard of before: Taxes are paid in advance!"

Now, what brought this sudden change from starvation to prosperity and happiness?

The population of Woergl had elected a new Mayor, Michael Unterguggenberger. His knowledge of Silvio Gesell's teachings about demurrage money urged him to propose to the City Council its practical application for Woergl. This body composed of six political parties agreed and offered full cooperation. The rest is history as quoted above.

The unbelievable tidings of what had happened at Woergl spread. Reporters were dispatched. Officials went to investigate. Economists arrived at Woergl to analyze.

They found the "miracle" to be true! Later arriving at home they wrote articles in their papers telling what Gesell's "work money" had accomplished. Dr. Erna Broda, economist at Antioch College, Ohio, when still millions of unemployed roamed the streets of American cities, wrote: "I visited Woergl several times during and after the recovery experiment and was deeply impressed by its obvious prosperity in the midst of a starving and decaying world . . ." This was written to Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt in her Memorandum in May, 1938.

Here is a quotation from what the French journalist, Claude Bourdet, wrote for the Paris magazine 'L'Illustration' of September 9, 1933:

"I arrived at Woergl in August, 1933. Exactly one year had passed since the beginning of the experiment. It should be understood, without partiality, that the results seemed to be miraculous. The streets, once reported to be so abominable, are now automobile highways. The Town Hall, cheerful, spruced up, and newly renovated, had the appearance of a Swiss Chalet music-box in which one would have placed geraniums.

A newly re-inforced bridge bore the proud inscription: "Erected in 1933 with Demurrage Money". Everywhere attractive lamp posts mounted with globes, similar to those in Silvio Gesell Street, were seen. The little Patron Saint of the village had also benefited from the work of the Mayor; a niche was made for him in the manner of Le Corbusier. The workers on the many numerous projects were all fanatical converts of 'depreciating money'. I went into the shops; everywhere 'work money' was accepted on par with the lawful money of the State. Nor had prices gone up."

Towns nearby followed the example of Woergl. People everywhere in Tyrol and Austria were enthusiastically talking of Silvio Gesell's "work money". Priests delivered rousing discourses in their churches about the blessing which had befallen the people. At a meeting of 200 Austrian Mayors it was decided by unanimous acclaim to follow the Woergl example.

Daladier, former Premier of France, went to Woergl to see for himself. He returned, convinced, enthusiastic about what he had seen and learned from the little Mayor of Woergl. Daladier presented the Woergl experiment and the effectivness of unhoardable money to his powerful Radical Party despite the emphatic protest from Caillaux, the French agent of international High Finance in that Party. And Daladier promised, under the frantic applause of the thousands of the delegates, that he would deliver France from the clutches of depressing hoardable money, after reproducing a Woergl example in his little home town. For some unknown reason he failed to keep his promise.

Professor Irving Fisher of Yale University, America's most renowned economist, also endorsed the principle of unhoardable money. In 1933 it made its rounds through the whole American Press. We quote: "The application of Gesell's principle of circulation of money will lead the nation out of the depression within two to three weeks".

Representative Pettengill and Senator Bankhead introduced a demurrage-money bill into the U. S. Congress in 1933. It was read twice in the Committee and then disappeared (through pressure of High Finance).

Numerous American communities started to reproduce the Woergl example but action was suspended by order of the Government.

BUT, WHAT BECAME OF WOERGL?

The issue of this unhoardable money was regarded as a threat to break the private-money monopoly of the Austrian National Bank, a private bank just like the "Federal Reserve Banks" in the United States. This Bank protested to the Austrian Government against the continuation of the Woergl example. After a "legal" fight, the Austrian Supreme Court, controlled by Finance Powers, decided as usual against the welfare of the people.

The circulation of the work money was stopped and the depression with its unemployment and poverty was reestablished.

HELPLESS GOVERNMENT

The last 3 depressions (1948-50), (1954) and (1957-58) were caused by a tight money policy of the Federal Reserve Banks (a private Company) "to stop inflation". So they tell the public. The reason however, is to save the interest system. They want to keep a depression in a moderate form so as not to cause too much pressure from the public. But the present depression seems to have gotten out of hands of the finance powers which are meeting strong resentment from the Congress, labor leaders, the public, and the President of the United States.

But all these leaders are helpless about the situation. The remedies that are suggested for creating jobs are the same as those applied by the Government of the Roman Empire 2 thousand years ago.

The cry "stop inflation" has different meanings. Some people, including some persons in the government, hope that with inflation stopped, the prices will stay stable with no let up in production. Our hoardable money is the tool for the money lenders to create a depression by refusing to invest in enterprise.

Inflation is an incentive to spend and invest the money. This gain means activity in production and prosperity.

However it is not the inflation that is so much disliked by the money lenders. It is the full production that is connected with it, because of the competition among producers and the shortage of workers raise wages, while the increased supply of capital goods, by stationary demand, lowers the interest rate. This is the time when the money investors (organized finance) curtail production with tight money. They shorten credit for industry.

What do they do with their money? This is the time when they receive the expected help from the leaders of their victims, namely the labor leaders, the politicians and economists. They ask the government to spend money for various projects like highway construction, space travel, financing of housing projects, etc. There are also tax outs demands.

The point is that the government needs money to finance such projects. Now, where does that money come from? This is simple; the government has to borrow it. This is where the striking money lenders come in. While in such times private enterprise promises only small returns on an unsafe base, government bonds are 100% safe. And it is no wonder that the money lenders support the debt policy of the government. The present debt limit of the U. S. Government is 275 billion. Its increase will be granted by Congress and may go to 290 billion.

How the money lenders go for such loans can be shown by a newspaper notice in the Los Angeles Herald Express from January 21, 1932. "Washington, Jan. 21, (Universal Service) Tenders for $50,000,000 in 93 Treasury bills dated January 25, were oversubscribed almost four times, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon announced today."

Since then the U. S. Government has borrowed many billions, also the States and Cities. In times of depressions some of these loans were oversubscribed up to 20 times. The money lenders do not invest in private enterprise, but they have enough money to loan to the government on a safe basis and thus save their UNearned income at the expense of despairing working people. And who gives the Money lenders a helping hand? Answer: The Marxist-informed labor leaders, the socialists and all those who demand that the government borrow money to create jobs. The money and credit to create jobs exists. This money needs only to be brought into circulation. The late Professor Irving Fisher of Yale University wrote in 1932: "With Gesell's dated money in circulation the depression will be over in 2 to 3 weeks."

"DEPRESSION IN 1948"

The first week in December 1947, correspondents of various periodicals reported from Washington, D. C. about "plans for breaking the boom and bringing on a planned or controlled recession sometime in 1948 which would be brought about by a tightening of credit. It was planned for a rise in unemployment to not more than 4 million. The aim was to stop a further wage raise."

It seemed unbelievable to some reporters for the Government to throw its own people into a depression with all its consequences. But others wrote "well, it is the real thing in the sense that it is deliberately proposed by the highest economic advisers in Government--advisers to the President."

Here is how the plan worked out:

Reporters wrote their papers from Washington that a price fall was imminent. With this in mind papers warned businessmen against high inventory with the advice "buy less production material and save money." The general public was told "prices are to high" and "don't buy unless prices are reduced." The Federal Reserve Banks increased the percentage of Reserve Requirement for City banks from 20 to 22, for County banks from 14 to 16, thus withdrawing money out of circulation.

A nation-wide campaign for price reduction was soon underway with the President in the leading position. It started in January, 1948, but it took 9 months to take effect for the following reasons: 1. Manufacturers had a good back log of orders; 2. There was still a high demand for durable and nondurable goods for years to come.

But continuous persuading of the shortsighted public, by the government and the press to hold out for lower prices, brought about a fall of prices in the last part of September 1948. Most people were then still waiting for lower and lower prices to buy more and more for their money with the result that prices continued to fall.

However, for those people who had hoped to gain by the lower prices, the workers namely, a situation developed upon which they had not figured. The number of unemployed increased to more than 5 million, not counting the approximately 2 million women who wanted to work but who were not officially listed, together with at least the 10 million workers who were not fully employed.

By planning this depression the government did not tell the people about these consequences. But it was planned. In advising this price fall and unemployment, the economic advisers of the government were saying in November, 1947 that "labor is charging monopoly wages for labor is charging monopoly wages for labor because of full employment." It was said: "If there are 4 to 5 million workers unemployed, the remaining workers would behave better; they would work harder; they would not be absent so much and would also work cheaper." It was also said: "These lower prices would benefit employers and the consuming public." But business did not benefit, most had losses, and most of the consuming public, while unemployed and short-time employed, bought less goods although lower in price. Such comsuming public was in despair.

One thing however, had not been told to the people. This is the fact that one small class of people did benefit from this depression, namely the receivers of interest on investment. This maneuver re-established a condition--a controlled scarcity of durable and nondurable goods--a chronic depression to keep wages down and interest rates up.

Second example:

A CAPITALIST SPEAKS ABOUT DEPRESSION

In the U. S. A. during 1954 we had a depression again with less business and less industrial activity and more than 5 million workers unemployed.

Jesse Jones, the 82 year old former head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which had loaned billions to business, said in April, 1954: "This modest slump in business and industrial activity may be bitter tasting medicine but it should do us good." He said further in an interview with the Associated Press: "This dip hasn't gone far enough yet to hurt. It is a healthy thing and a little overdue."

People who read this don't know what it meant, newspapers didn't interpret it and economists were either ignorant of it or didn't dare tell the public.

Here is the true meaning of these statements by simply ADDING the words that were left out. The first sentence should read. "This modest slump in business and industrial activity may be bitter tasting medicine FOR SMALL BUSINESS AND THE WORKING POPULATION, but it should do us CAPITALISTS AND MONEY LENDERS good." The second remark of Jesse Jones should read: "This dip hasn't gone far enough yet to hurt us CAPITALISTS AND MONEY LENDERS. It is a healthy thing for us CAPITALISTS, WHO LIVE ON INTEREST, and little overdue." The words with CAPITAL letters were added by us to give the full meaning.

Money interest with its components of risk- and fluctuation premiums together with the monopoly premiums are earned by the working population, but collected by the money lenders of all kinds. Such remarks surely should compel people to ask the question: "Why do we have these depressions?" No, we working people must NOT have depressions and unemployment.

"There is nothing in national economy which makes depression a necessity". --Silvio Gesell.

And still most people take it for granted that depressions, unemployment and misery are natural conditions that cannot be helped.

To set this error aright we must know that the depressions, unemployment and misery are natural conditions that cannot be helped.

To set this error aright we must know that the depressions are direct results of an interruption in the exchange of commodities--and nothing else.

Now why is the exchange of commodities interrupted to create depressions in which these "Jesse Jones!" are interested? Now listen to this:

Money interest is the premium payable to the money owner

-NOT TO DELAY the exchange of commodities and/or NOT TO DELAY the investment in enterprises. All enterprises in their net profits MUST yield the INTEREST OF THE INVESTED MONEY CAPITAL, no matter if this capital is borrowed or its own capital is used. Now listen to this:

As a consequence of the uninterrupted production of goods and the competition between producers the INTEREST on the invested capital REDUCES itself, because producers must pay higher wages due to the increasing labor shortage and they must also, for competitive reasons, lower the prices and/or improve their product and give better service.

When such a situation occurs THE MONEY INVESTORS GO ON THE INVESTMENT STRIKE and they always win. They let their victims, the workers and the manufacturers, fight it out. The investors can wait with watch in hand and count the hours when the manufacturers will come to them and promise to pay the expected interest rate for money loans. In the meantime thousands of producers have been going out of business, other count heavy losses and millions of unemployed workers have been walking the street in search of work that does not exist. The remaining employed labor force are willingly working for less and competition compels them to work harder and faster.

THIS IS THE PRICE SOCIETY PAYS TO KEEP THE INTEREST SYSTEM INTACT.

In order to stem the dissatisfaction of the innocent victims of these deplorable conditions of the interest system, the vested privileges have INVENTED THE STATE, based on legalized injustice and protected by man-made laws (not natural laws or God-made laws). For its enforcement a stern police force has been created, aided by a one-sided state school educational system teaching the man-made laws which protect the vested privileges, twisted morals and a falsified history, but neglecting the teaching of human anatomy and the truth about justice and social life.

In all the hundreds of years of depression, misery, wars, and destruction, society has advanced no further than to relieve the victims temporarily from their deplorable plight--and ONLY then when the interest of the privileged were in danger. Relief has become a business and a very crooked one. Also the churches of all religions have done their utmost to protect vested interest and make people respect their invented manmade phony laws while at the same time ignoring all the God-made laws of justice and humanity.

Common sense demands that the investment of surplus money must NOT BE MADE DEPENDENT on the interest rate, but ON HUMAN NEEDS!

ATTENTION PLEASE!

Here is the lowdown on the present depression, third quarter 1957 to 1958--. Again it was planned very carefully in its details with a tight money policy. Business has been slowing since September 1957. The intention is to curtail production and cause a scarcity of capital and consumer goods -- to keep the interest exploitation system intact. The finance powers, who rule the U. S. Government and the Federal Reserve Banks, know this simple fact, but all "experts" and the general public are ignorant of it.

The purpose of this tight money policy has been reached. Business is slowing; sharp declines in planned business spending; slowing in sales of many goods at retail and signs of weakness in many commodity prices are noticable. And it is the hope of the instigators of the depression that the following would come true.

Jobs will be less easy to find in months ahead. Pay raises will be less easy to come by. Workers attitudes will change. Efficiency of individual workers will tend to increase where before it had lagged. Unemployment may rise to 5, perhaps 6 million. It is also planned that the depression not run away or get out of hand, lest it kill the hen that lays the golden eggs, and also to prevent a possible revolution. 1958 is also an election year and poor business hurts the government party in power. Some breaks have been designed for this reason.

All newspapers are supplied with information from the United Press (U.P.), Associated Press (A.P.), and the International News Service (I.N.S.), privately owned and operated by money powers (Rockefeller, etc.). They do and will feed the Press with the necessary news on how the people should invest their money and how much. People are told that: Bond prices will be firm or tend to rise; government spending will go up, not down; stock prices are still good. People are going to be urged to buy stock.

The latest boom, 1955-56, was a boom based upon business investment in new plants and equipment, which has a dynamic effect, i.e. it was more effective in the direction of lowering the interest rate and in increasing the wage of the workers through an increasing scarcity of workers.

Frederick H. Mueller, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Domestic Affairs has answered some questions for "Nations Business", published by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Washington, D. C., in the December 1957 issue, about the present economic situation. Mr. Mueller stated that during the later part of the last boom "the profits as such have not increased as other factors in our economy have increased. We are doing more and more business and yet total profits of the economy have not increased."

"Profits as a proportion of national income have actually declined."

This is the very condition the money powers are ever active to avoid. Thus the present depression was produced.

Therefore, the next recovery, in early stages, will probably be built on increasing spending by people for goods and services, which is not so dynamic in its effect on business as a whole, i.e. that will be less effective in lowering the interest rate.

This money policy of the Federal Reserve Banks, which in turn is ruled by the money powers, shows the correctness of Gesell's law of interest, that says; interest is the result of a shortage of capital.

While the money powers are interested in maintaining a scarcity of capital goods to keep the interest rate intact, Gesell's alternative is to increase capital goods to the point where interest is abolished, i.e. absorbed into the earnings of the workers and management, automatically on the free market--not by counter monopolies (labor unions) and/or government decrees.

The U. S. News and World Report writes in its November 29, 1957 issue about the tight and loose money policy of the F.R.B. "What's been proved again is this: A Central Bank, tightening up on the supply and price of money, can stop a boom in its tracks if it wants to." With this remark the correctness of Silvio Gesell's money theory is admitted.

Then it continues: "What's still to be proved is this: Once a boom is stopped, a Central Bank, by making money more plentiful and cheaper, can bring it to life again."

The U. S. News and World Report shows poor judgment in making the second statement. Isn't it obvious that if the boom can be stopped by tight money (less money in circulation) business can be brought to life again by making money more plentiful?

There is another factor that has been recognized by money institutions. It has been shown in the move by increasing the interest rate of savings in 1956 and 57. Banks increased the interest rate from 2 to 3 per cent and the Building and Loan Associations from 3 and 3½ to 4 per cent.

The reason for this was that the ceiling of government debt had been reached and banks could not meet all demand for loans with privately created--so called--"fountain pen" money. The increase of the interest rate makes saving deposit more attractive. Then people instead of having surplus money lying idle, were urged to deposit it in their saving accounts, thus increasing the turnover (velocity) of money.

Commercial Banks reported a record increase in savings deposits since raising the interest rates they pay. The rise in these deposits in seven months of 1957 was 3.723 billion, up 177.6 per cent from the same period in 1956. Savings and Loan Associations also show in September 1957 a rise of 313 millions, up 16 per cent from 1956, a boom year.

Therefore, the claim of Gesell that a large part of money is hoarded is admitted by money institutions. The following proposed law establishes a balance between the urgency of supply and demand--a dynamic equivalence of exchange. It will establish an economic order of justice with interest abolished. Inflations and depressions are eliminated. The land rent shall be paid to mothers. It will bring about an eternal condition of justice, peace and plenty the world has never before experienced."

WHAT HAS HAPPENED since that day in 1933 when Franklin D. The thing that gives the Federal Reserve Note (the I. O. U. of a private corporation) its character as legal tender money, is the sovereign mandate on the part of Congress that it shall be legal tender for the payment of debts, both public and private. The solvency or insolvency of the issuing corporation has no material effect on its 'legal tender' attributes whatsoever. If it was "just a scrap of paper", without any agreement to pay whatsoever, and the Government had stamped thereon, or otherwise declared, its sovereign mandate that it should be acceptable as "legal tender" for the payment of debts, then it would be money, or an acceptable substitute for money, just the same whether the Federal Reserve had placed thereon its entirely superfulous I. O. U. or not.

But the 'legal tender' attributes of money are not confined to an I. O. U. or bill of credit. They apply with equal force to certain kinds of silver coins which are commonly accepted for money and used as a medium of exchange. Our so-called subsidiary coinage for instance (nickels, dimes, pennies, quarters, half-dollars, and dollars) are not promises to pay, and yet this Committee would hate to offer any of them to its readers with the hopes that they might not want to accept them because they were not "promises to pay". Yet many of them are not even legal tender beyond a nominal amount unless specifically stipulated in the contract.

The silver dollar of 412-½ grains of silver, as a specific instance in point, is legal tender for all dues and debts, public and private, unless otherwise specified in the contract. On the other hand, the so-called "trade dollar", containing 420 grains of silver, and looking to all intents and purposes substantially identical with the legal tender of 412-½ grains, is not legal tender although its "intrinsic value" is greater than the legal tender dollar, and there is a substantial premium being offered for them over and above the "price" of the legal tender dollar.

The legal tender dollar would fall under the third prohibition of Section X, Clause 1, while the "trade dollar" just mentioned would not, yet the trade dollar is more valuable than the legal tender dollar in many ways, both intrinsically and on exchange, which proves beyond question that an "acceptable AUXILLIARY MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE" can be developed that carries neither a promise to pay or legal tender attributes.

But the "trade dollar" just referred to is essentially a "coined" dollar, and therefore falls under the first prohibition of Section X, Clause 1, of the Constitution, and its issuance by the State is therefore prohibited by that Constitution.

The attribute that gives the bill of credit, or I. O. U., its exchange value is, as we have just learned, the sovereign mandate of the Government declaring it "legal tender" for the payment of debts, public and private. This mandate of the Government, declaring it legal tender in the payment of PUBLIC debts is in effect an AGREEMENT TO RECEIVE such money, or substitute for money, by the Government in discharge of debts or dues owing to it from any source.

Thus the "agreement to receive" becomes paramount to the "agreement to pay", which may or may not have any material force whatsoever. And that is the crucial point, contrary to all orthodox theories of money, that somewhere, sometime, and somehow a thing to be money must be indissoluably tied to somebody's or something's promise to pay.

The fallacy of this premise that money must be tied to an "agreement to pay" is most forcibly illustrated in the old "green back", that most maligned of all beneficient instruments of service to mankind, which constituted an agreement on the part of the Government to pay on demand a certain sum of money indicated on its face. The first series of these so-called "green-backs" were made legal tender for all purposes, both public and private, and these never depreciated in their purchasing power compared with gold. The second series were made legal tender for all debts EXCEPT DUTIES ON IMPORTS AND INTEREST ON PUBLIC DEBT, and these became subject to wide fluctuations in value, for they constituted in fact an abrogation on the part of the Government to receive its own obligations in satisfaction of its own account. It will surprise most people to know that there are still some $330,000,000 of these old greenbacks floating around. They pass through our hands without our knowing it, still doing their noble work, acknowledging and paying tribute to no one, yet they are basicly defective as money in that they are not "money" within the accepted meaning of the term as defined in the Constitution. How many of our readers would refuse to accept one of them, no matter what the nature of the debt they were tendered to settle?

Thus it will be seen that it is the Government's "agreement to receive" that is the controlling factor in determining the exchange value of anything which just might form an acceptable AUXILIARY MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE, rather than its "agreement to pay". In the case of the privately issued bank note, its exchange value was maintained, not only by the Government's "agreement to receive" it in the discharge of taxes (public dues) owing to the Government, but by its (the Government's) mandate, executed by Congress, and approved by the Pres., on June 5, 1933, providing that "all coins and currencies of the United States (including Federal Reserve notes and circulating notes of the Federal Reserve Banks and national banking institutions) heretofore or hereafter coined or issued, shall be legal tender for all debts, public and private, public charges, taxes, duties, and dues . . .", thus, in defiance of the Constitutional mandate that "No State shall coin money; emit bills of credit; or make anything but gold and silver a tender in payment of debts", and apparent total disregard for another provision of the same legislation, which reads: "Every provision contained in or made with respect to any obligation which purposes to give the obligee right to require payment in gold (the money of the Constitution) or a particular kind of coin or currency, or in an amount in money of the United States measured thereby, is declared to be against public policy; and no such provision shall be contained in or made with respect to any obligation hereafter incurred", made the I.O.U.'s of a private corporation (since proven by competent authority to be an "Independent Agency") legal tender for all debts, public and private. O inconsistency! art thou, or art thou not, a jewel? And on just what part of thy master's breast plate, if any, may thy luster be found?

In this case the privately issued bank note's exchange value was maintained by the Government's "agreement to receive" it for taxes (public dues). In the case of the greenback, which was the Government's uncontested obligation to pay, its exchange value was destroyed because the Government abrogated its agreement to receive it in payment of taxes by the insertion of the EXCEPTION CLAUSE heretofore mentioned, although its promise to pay was never questioned.

It is obvious, therefore, that anything which the Government will "agree to receive" in payment of taxes or other dues will maintain its value as a medium of exchange, whether or not it be a promise to pay (or bill of credit), or declared to be legal tender (money) by Government decree.

Now a "receipt" issued by the Treasurer of either the United States of America, or by any State of the Union, for property or services delivered to or received by him for use by it in the conduct of its affairs, is patently neither "money", a "bill of credit", or a "promise to pay". Neither is it "legal tender" within the meaning of the Federal Constitution. Yet an agreement on the part of the Government, Federal or State, "to receive" such receipts or acceptances in payment of taxes would give to such receipts an exchange value as a medium of exchange no less real than the agreement to receive a Federal Reserve note on the part of the Government, Federal or State, gives it an exchange value as a medium of exchange entirely apart from any "intrinsic value" that it may or may not possess, or ability of its issuer to pay.

It has heretofore been held that the phrase "debts public and private" applies to obligations, whether contracted before or after the statute. Therefore, an agreement on the part of the Government, Federal or State, to accept such receipts in payment of taxes would not conflict with the Constitutional provision prohibiting the States from making anything other than gold and silver tender for the payment of debts.

Wherefore it follows as the night the day, that a "treasurer's receipt" issued by the State Treasurer for money, property, or services delivered to or rendered the State, and declared by the State to be acceptable in the payment of taxes, would constitute a most excellent and acceptable AUXILIARY MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE which would in no way conflict with the provisions of the Federal Constitution above referred to. Such an "AUXILIARY MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE" would answer all the purposes of a local exchange medium that would not be "loaned into circulation", and which would not therefore be recalled from circulation coincident with the repayment of the loan under which it was issued as is the case in our present "credit money" system. It would be a medium of exchange that would not pay tribute to anyone; one that could be put into circulation immediately without the necessity of bonding the people unto the fourth generation into economic servitude; and yet one that could in no way be accused of injuring or working a hardship on those who prefer to stick to their credit money which they now have. In fact its chief tendency would be to make that credit money more plentiful and more easily obtained than it is today.

Further than this, it would be a medium of exchange that would stay at home and not find its way into other States as does our current credit money.

Thus it will be seen that had the Government, instead of bonding its citizens into economic servitude unto the fourth and fifth generation to get money for public improvements and unemployment relief, simply issued its "Treasurer's Receipts", in lieu of money; for money, property or labor delivered to or performed for the State, such receipts would have constituted a most excellent and acceptable AUXILIARY MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE through which local business could have been transacted, and the exchange of commodities facilitated, and there would have been effected thereby not only a decided savings in our tax bills, but a situation such as has pauperized on repeated occasions more than half of the people could never have developed. And what applies to the people of the State of California applies with equal force to the people of the United States of America.

It is the answer or SOLUTION FOR ALL our current unemployment problems. It is the answer to an insistent demand for a reduction in public debt. It is the answer to where additional funds are coming from to meet the ever-mounting relief rolls. It is the answer to a balanced budget. It is the answer to the Social Security scandal. It is the answer to farm relief. It is the answer to our acute housing problem. It is the answer to industrial unrest, bolschivism, communism, atheism, and national decay.

Several skeleton bills written by Ye Editor, designed to bring this question before the 1935 session of the California State Legislature were presented for its consideration at that session. These bills were not only printed and referred to the proper Committees, but received the approval as to legality by the Legislative Council of the State of California. That these bills never saw the light of day is in keeping with the statement made in the first part of this report to the effect that no relief can be expected from Legislative bodies respecting these most vital issues. There is not one Legislator in a hundred who would have dared to even discuss them, let alone introduce them.

The time has come when neither the people of this State, or of the United States, nor their Representatives, can longer afford to be bull-dozed, brow beaten, and intimidated by entrenched money-monopoly if they longer desire to retain that last glimmer of politico-economic liberty which is still vouchsafed them under the terms of their Federal and State Constitutions.

But to close this Report without a direct reference to the report of the Legislative Council whose opinion was asked and received respecting the legality of "Treasurer's Receipts" as AN ACCEPTABLE AND PRACTICAL AUXILIARY MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE, would be to ignore a most important opinion bearing on this most important issue. We therefore quote, and will at the opportune time present the original:

(copy)

State of California
OFFICE OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL

Sacramento, Calif.

Subject: Treasurer's Receipts.
Request:
Question: You have submitted to us the question as to whether or not the State Treasurer can constitutionally issue receipts in return for money deposited in the Treasury, or for labor, services, materials or supplies furnished the State, such receipts to be acceptable by the State in payment of taxes and other obligations.

Opinion: It is our opinion the Legislature may provide for the issuance of such receipts if there had been an appropriation for the payment of labor, services, materials or supplies, which have been furnished.

Analysis: Attached to this letter is a memorandum of points and authorities, to which you may refer for further explanation of this opinion. . . It might be noted in passing, that there may very well be a tendency for these receipts to supplement or replace State warrants which are now being used in lieu of cash in as much as the receipts would bear no interest. (emphasis ours)

Very truly yours,

Legislative Council.

This would seem to settle the issue in so far as the legality of "Treasurer's Receipts" as AN ACCEPTABLE AND PRACTICAL MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE is concerned. At a later date we will try to tell you to what purpose Treasurer's Receipts, or "Treasury Acceptances", may be turned. But before doing so we want you to seriously and religiously consider the following, which allegedly appeared as an Editorial in the London Times, about the time when agitation for a central banking system was rife, to the effect:

"If that mischievous financial policy (the issuance of non-interest bearing Lincoln greenbacks) which had its origin in America during the Civil War in that Country, should become indurated down to a fixture, that Government will furnish money without cost. It will pay off its debts and be without debts. It will have all the money necessary to carry on its commerce. It will become prosperous without precedent in the civilized Governments of the World. The brains and wealth of all Countries will go to America. That Government must be destroyed, or it will destroy every Monarchy on this Globe."

MISSION ACCOMPLISHED!

Thus we hope we have answered the many communications that have reached us with respect to WHAT WOULD CONSTITUTE AN ACCEPTABLE AND PRACTICAL AUXILIARY MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE. We deem the time opportune to enter into a dissertation concerning the many advantages that will accrue to We, the people sovereign from the operations of the proposed

UNIFORM GROSS RECEIPTS, TRANSFER AND INHERITANCE TAX LAW

PURPOSED TO:

(a) Prevent booms and depressions, banish unemployment and charity, and keep history from repeating itself in periodic spasms of useless wars and bloodshed;

(b) Provide a self-amortizing stabalized currency with uniform purchasing, tax and debt paying value of the Dollar;

(c) Insure the citizen head of every family in the United States of America a home that is "Tax-emempt and Execution-free" as an inalienable homestead right;

(d) Restore independence to private industry, safeguard State rights, and insure to each State of the Union a Republican form of Government provided in the Constitution;

(e) Provide adequate security for the aged and infirm, minors attending the public schools, and gainful employment for all others;

(f) Abolish all inequitable income, sales, and inheritance taxes;

AN INVITATION

Readers of South Hayward News who have followed this series of articles now know whether or not, in their judgement, the proposals and arguments therein advanced coincide with their concept of Freedom, and whether or not they want to join forces with those who are actively striving to attain it, or whether they prefer to CONFORM to the edicts or directives which those who are in the politico-economic saddle are wont from time to time to deliver to their servile and obedient slaves. As "purpose is without expression in passivity", and therefore sterile, it is not only hoped but confidently expected that those with the will to fight for their Freedom that is the birth right of every loyal and vigilant Son of America, will let that fact become known NOW to the

Publishers of South Hayward News, that they may be able to pass it along to those of its readers who are actively striving to attain it. THE ROCKIES AND THE INCOME TAX

By Emanuel Josephson, M.D.
Author of:
-"Your Life Is Their Toy."

The 16th Amendment and its resulting "progressive" income and inheritance taxes were first conceived by the Father of Modern Communism, Adam Weishaupt.

His basic idea was to loot whole nations and eliminate private ownership of property (except for himself) as a means of attaining super-capitalism and super-dictatorship. These are just synonyms for Communism and One World Dictatorship.

Weishaupt's Illuminist-Communist plan was imposed on our United States at the instance of the Rockefellers, operating through their tax-exempt fake "philanthropic foundations" which were set up as one of their deliberate devices for evading the taxes they were imposing on the rest of the nation.

Ironically, they thereby forced this nation to support its own spoilation by assuming the burden of the taxes remitted to the foundations.

The purpose of this conspiracy was badly stated by John D. Jr's attorney and biographer (Raymond B. Fosdick) in his panegyric on John D. Rockefeller Jr.:

"He was born into an utterly unique situation---a situation which should not occur again in our society. So vast a fortune under single control runs the risk of being an unhealthy and even hazardous ingredient in any kind of economic order."

In substance, the meaning of the situation is that the Rock Mob, like all brigands, live in fear that someone more violent and ruthless than themselves will arise to contest their swag and their dominion. Such psychopaths invariably feel that they can accomplish their purpose by looting everyone and making them their slaves.

Such is the impulse that drives pirates to their depredations. This was clearly revealed by John D. to his associates in the Standard Oil Club, in 1905, when he was already worth 5 to 10 billion dollars, that he would awake in a cold sweat at night, in fear that he had lost his ill-gotten fortune.

To understand how well this phase of the conspiracy has succeeded look at your income tax return.

THE TWILIGHT OF MANKIND

Destroy a man's mind, his reasoning ability, his imagination, and neither gold, silver, mansions, freedom, love, nor anything else will matter to him. This is EASILY ACCOMPLISHED, is BEING ACCOMPLISHED by simple means; the creation of disease in his body by Toxic substances in his food; shattering his nervous system, hardening his muscles, and deteriorating his mind; making of man, the godly human, a subhuman creature, a lesser animal, a vegetation, Soul-less.

"I say this with all of the earnestness and sincerity of a scientist who has spent nearly 20 years' research into the chemistry, biochemistry, physiology and pathology of fluorine--any person who drinks artificially fluorinated water for a period of one year or more will never again be the same person, mentally or physically." --German chemist who was an official of the great Farben chemical industries and who was also prominent in the Nazi movement at the time. . .

"Fichte laid it down that education should aim at destroying free will, so that after pupils have left school, they would be incapable, throughout the rest of their lives, of thinking or acting otherwise than as school-masters would have wished. . .Diet, injections and inunctions will combine, from a very early age, to produce the sort of character and sort of belief that the authorities consider desirable."

NINE MEN AGAINST AMERICA - $3.25

Rosalie M. Gordon's book about the Supreme Court. You will be wiser. . .you will be angry. . .you will be moved to action for self-preservation when you read this new book! Calm, factual, with every indicting statement backed up by careful documentation. . .yet:

Damning in its revelations of what the Supreme Court--our last defense against violations of the Constitution--has done to emasculate this charter of our liberty the Court's nine members each swore to defend.

Frightening in its summation of what certain, capricious, politically inspired, unjudicial decisions of this court have done to destroy freedom in America and undermine the security of the nation.

Infuriating in its disclosures of why and how these nine men, so ill-prepared for their high positions, were appointed to the Supreme Court.

Enlightening with its analysis of what can now be done to correct the situation and forestall further illegal operations on the Constitution.

In the August, 1958 issue of PREVENTION MAGAZINE, (46 S. West St., Allentown, Penna. - .35 per copy - $4.00 Yearly) will be found much valuable information on Krebiozen for the treatment of Cancer:

"You will read Herbert Bailey's book, A MATTER OF LIFE OR DEATH, The Incredible Story of Krebiozen with certainly two emotions, indignation and outrage. If you have known someone who suffered with cancer you are likely to become bitter as you read of a cure for this disease whose release, Mr. Bailey says, has been thwarted and suppressed by the American Medical Association since 1951."

"The Negative attitude of the A. M. A. toward Krebiozen showed itself in the fate of Mr. Bailey's first book on the subject (Krebiozen --Key To Cancer?".) The New York Times accepted one advertisement for the book, then refused subsequent ads on the recommendations of its medical advisors.) A favorable review of the book was written by the same paper's science editor, but it never appeared in print. The New York Public Library, one of the world's largest, kept the book off its shelves until nearly a year after its publication, because of its "controversial" content. To underline the precariousness of being connected with such a book, the records will show that the publishers of Krebiozen--Key To Cancer? were out of business within a year of publishing it.

"The stories of Krebiozen's fight for acceptance against organized medicine are catalogued in A MATTER OF LIFE OR DEATH up to 1957.

"For those who wish to help in the Krebiozen fight, Mr. Bailey recommends joining the Freedom for Cancer Research Committee, Westport, Conn., and writing to your Congressman demanding that the Federal Food and Drug Administration grant the Durovics (discoverers) a license to manufacture and sell Krebiozen."

WRITE TO YOUR CONGRESSMEN AND SENATORS!

"There is a strong possibility at this time that Congress will launch an investigation of the American Medical Association due primarily to the Krebiozen affair. The evidence and interest are there; what is needed is the support of the American people. You are urged to write to your Congressmen and Senators, expressing your desire to see such an inquiry made. Remind them that, if the A. M. A. is blameless, it can only emerge from the investigation with even greater prestige, and Krebiozen will be annihilated once and for all. But if the reverse is true, Americans are putting their health in the hands of profiteers and charlatans who place personal, monetary and political considerations above the welfare of those are supposed to serve. Should not such a situation be exposed if it exists?"

"If the A. M. A. is an innocent victim of the charges that have been made in the Krebiozen affair, they should welcome the change to prove the untruth of the charges. Investigation would give this opportunity. Why do they not jump at the chance to vindicate themselves? Demand that the members of Congress who represent you inform themselves on the situation of Krebiozen and other A. M. A.- rejected cures.

"Remind them of the Fitzgerald Report, an objective study of non-orthodox cancer cures, made by an agent of the Justice Department on assignment to the late Senator Tobey. Fitzgerald stated that his investigation had convinced him of the objective merit of several unrecognized cancer treatments. The report was ignored and never acted upon." Be sure and read the August, 1958 PREVENTION MAGAZINE .35- for more details.

SUGGESTED READING

We do not claim the books following furnish accurate information to an effective treatment or cure of the diseases discussed--according to currently accepted medical opinion. The statements made therein are general concepts of the various authors. The reader must accept the responsibility of choosing his own doctor in time of sickness and as guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States. However, we believe the principles in the books we sell to be sound and know much about the history of the various authors below. We will not enter into any personal correspondence, recommend any specific treatment - give out addresses nor discuss cancer in any way - it's a dangerous subject to talk about. IF you can obtain the written permission of your Health Department and Postmaster - we will answer questions which are not 'loaded' - IF we have time. However, there is little leisure time to enter into correspondence with individuals. IF YOU HAVE CANCER, consult your local doctor. There are thousands of 'cures'. Radium, Surgery, Herbs, Drugs, Chemicals, Grapes, Carrots, etc., we are book dealers - we sell books. You and your doctor must make a decision as to a 'cure'. Actually there is no cure for any disease. The human body was created with a certain amount of vital energy - if you have enough of this vital energy you may recover from any disease, regardless of cure (many cases of cancer have been reported as having cured themselves).

"National Defense"

I can't help but be impressed with the problem of water in California about which I know nothing. But here you are, taxpayers, facing a problem and sitting down and solving it. I am sure you are going to solve it correctly. And I only wish that the American people could solve their problems on a national level in the same sensible manner. But we can't do that because for some reason that I am unable to find out there has been an unseen hand which guides our every destiny on the national level on international problems and which does not represent the will of the American people.

An Unseen Hand?

In order to discuss National Defense intelligently, I believe it is necessary to delve somewhat into the past and show how time after time major decisions have been made which strengthened Russia and weakened us. And until we understand that this has gone on in the past --and it cannot be challenged-- it is impossible to envisage the danger we face in the future. If I may, I want to start with World War II and give you only three illustrations. I could name half a dozen decisions that were made which weakened us and strengthened Russia and they came from the very highest level.

In the first place, you don't have to be a graduate of the National War College to know that you don't want to fight on two fronts if you get into a war. Hitler avoided it initially. He first struck Poland, intending to go on into Russia. But when he went into Poland, England and France, in keeping with their treaties, declared war on Germany. Hitler was forced to turn his forces around and strike France and England. To avoid war on two fronts, Hitler made a deal of neutrality with Russia.

Stalin, sensing that Hitler could not be trusted, made a five-year neutrality pact with Japan so that if Hitler were to attack Russia the Red army would have to fight on one front only.

But not so with the United States. We gladly accepted war on two fronts immediately...so eager were our leaders to join in the war against Hitler. We were forced to abandon our forces in the Pacific and turn our back on the Japanese who had struck us. This is how eager we were to enter a war which we should have and could have avoided. Hitler and Stalin were careful to avoid a war on two fronts. We rashly accepted this tremendous handicap. Our allies in Europe were not in danger when Japan struck us at Pearl Harbor. As you know, by the 7th of December, Hitler had gone deep into Russia. Hitler's attack against England from the air had failed. France was occupied. The only one who was in danger was Stalin. The two greatest Dictators in History were fighting each other in a death struggle. But MacArthur was attacked in the pacific, Honolulu was attacked, and yet we abandoned the East and went blithely on into a war in Europe.

That decision, of course, saved Russia and made Asia the Red menace that she is today. If we had stayed out of the war in Europe, Stalin and Hitler would have bled each other white. Their struggle would have ended in a draw and neither nation would have been a danger to the free world today.

Now what is it that caused us to do that? There was a major decision greatly favoring Russia, favoring her so she is the menace she is today. And it was appallingly costly to us.

There is a second illustration. In 1941 we had developed the Consolidated Bomber. Had we used this bomber, based in Turkey, to cut Hitler's rail lines supplying his army in the Russian invasion, we could have severed the German supply lines and left the entire German army of 220 divisions without rail supply deep in an enemy country. You know what would have happened? The war would soon have been over. Why didn't we do that? No, instead of that we invaded Europe from the West with ground forces and our losses were enormous. It enabled Stalin to follow up the German army because the Germans had to use 57 divisions to meet our invasion. And this brought Stalin deep into Europe. Central Europe is now under Red domination. The Reds captured Berlin when our forces were east of Berlin! That is another inexcusable decision greatly favoring Russia at an enormous expense to us.

I will go into one more. We knew in MacArthur's headquarters on the 7th of April, 1945 that the Emperor was endeavoring to surrender. He had appointed Admiral Suzuki Prime Minister. Suzuki had opposed Japan's entry into World War II. He had to go into hiding lest he be assassinated by the Japanese militarists. By the 7th of April, 1945 the Emperor was able to bring Suzuki from hiding and make him Prime Minister. And for the first time since the war started the Emperor had someone who was strong and in whom he could confide.

We, at MacArthur's headquarters, wondered what had happened in Washington that they didn't take advantage of the fact that the Emperor was endeavoring to surrender. The fact that he appointed a pacifist Prime Minister paved the way for our President to call for a surrender. After we got into Japan I took the liberty of going into precisely what happened in the Japanese surrender. The Emperor had opposed the war from the beginning, but he was a prisoner of the military. On the 14th of February, 1945, he sent his Foreign Minister to Jacob Malik, the Russian Ambassador to Tokyo, to ask Malik to take up with Stalin the proposal that Stalin call a meeting between representatives of the United States and Japan and act as a go-between for surrender terms. The Emperor was endeavoring to surrender on the 14th of February of 1945, that was before bloody Okinawa. Nevertheless, the war in the Pacific went on until the 14th of August.

Malik took the matter up with Stalin by radio. Stalin stalled and nothing happened. Then the Emperor got bolder. He appointed as Prime Minister Suzuki and Suzuki decided to take more positive action. He called in Prince Konoye, who had been Prime Minister three times. Suzuki suggested that Konoye should fly to Moscow, talk with Stalin and effect a surrender with the United stated and cable back the terms. The Emperor was prepared to accept the terms and face the consequences.

Stalin would not permit Prince Konoye to fly to Moscow and asked questions about what Russia would get out of it if peace were made. This bickering went on until Potsdam on the 27th of July. When Truman met Stalin there for the first time, Stalin told President Truman that the Japanese were seeking surrender terms. It was unpardonable for Stalin not to have told our people immediately so we could have made peace. I was incensed at the Russian attitude, but when I got back to the United States, I had a friend in the State Department who told me that Washington knew from the 14th of February that Japan was endeavoring to surrender. Why didn't we make peace then? I don't know, there again was a major decision made very much to the benefit of Russia and very much to weaken us in blood, in treasure and in our position in the world, and especially in the Pacific.

When Mr. Hoover of your wonderful State arrived in Tokyo on the 7th of May, 1946 I was assigned to be his aide and help him to get information for his food mission. Mr. Hoover said that he knew Suzuki but that he was too busy on his food mission to call on him. Mr. Hoover asked me to call and advise Suzuki that he (Mr. Hoover) felt that the Suzuki appointment as Prime Minister was a signal that the Emperor was seeking surrender terms. I called on Suzuki and very excitedly this grand octogenarian explained that it was a signal for surrender and that he never knew why the United States did not follow up on the signal.

While in Tokyo, Mr. Hoover told me this: On the 24th day of May, 1945 after Germany surrendered, he was called to the White House. (Incidentally that was the first time he had been invited to the White House since he was President.) Mr. Truman had called him on this food mission. When they had finished talking of the food mission, Mr. Hoover told Mr. Truman that he would like to discuss Japan. Mr. Hoover then explained that Japan was ripe for surrender. The fact that Suzuki, the Pacifist, was now Prime Minister, meant that the Emperor would surrender. Mr. Hoover suggested that if Mr. Truman would make a short wave broadcast to the people of Japan and tell them that unconditional surrender applied to the Militarists only, that they would have their Emperor and that they could be free again under a liberal government.

Mr. Hoover said that Mr. Truman, fascinated, tossed him a pad and asked him to write the terms that he should have in his broadcast. Mr. Hoover wrote the terms but Mr. Truman never made the broadcast. And I asked, "Why didn't he?" I don't have Mr. Hoover's permission to tell you what he said. But I will tell you what I think was the reason for Mr. Truman not making the broadcast. My reason is that the Russian influence in the State Department was so strong that the war was deliberately prolonged until August so that Russia could come into the war. She was in the war only six days, as you know, and this gave her a hand in the peace of the Pacific.

Now what did that do to us besides inflicting something like 100,000 casualties which we suffered after a peace might have been effected? Aside from that we lost Chiang Kai-Shek, the Christian ruler of China. He may have had his faults and they were well publicized, but he was definitely our ally and he is today. The Japanese intended to make a race war out of World War II, they came over here and tried to align the colored people against the white people in this country and they failed in that. It was incomprehensible to the Japanese why the Filipinos liked America better than the Japanese. We were kind to the Filipinos, the Japanese were unspeakably cruel. The Filipinos hated them. Chiang Kai-shek would still be the ruler of China if we had not prolonged the war for Russia to come into it in the Pacific. The Communists in China were never well armed and couldn't get sufficient arms to knock Chiang Kai-Shek off until after Russia went into Manchuria. There the Japanese had one million men under arms; there they surrendered and the Russians took over the surrender. The Russians then gave the Chinese Reds the Japanese equipment and for the first time the Reds were well equipped and had more arms than Chiang Kai-Shek.

Now while they were being armed in Manchuria we sent General Marshall to China. And he slapped an embargo on the weapons we sent to Chiang Kai-Shek. Ammunition was dumped into the Indian Ocean. Thus we disarmed Chiang Kai-Shek while the Russians armed the Communists. That is how we lost China, and if we had not lost China there would not have been a Korean War with many, many casualties. This decision to continue the war when it could have been ended is inexplicable to me. It appears that an unseen hand guides us that likes Russia better than the United States. I hate to say that but it is possible.

America Disarms

Now to move into present-day defense problems. You must keep in mind that our leadership has not changed. Truman had a Secretary of State, Dean Acheson. And Dean Acheson's assistant was John Foster Dulles, who was eminently satisfactory to Mr. Acheson. On the other hand, Mr. Truman was President and his principle military assistant was General Eisenhower, who has succeeded Truman. Thus, there is no change in our high command. On top of that, the State Department has about 2,000 people on the planning level, I don't mean 2,000 are in charge of planning, but they have access to the planners and work with the planning people. Of the 2,000 in the State Department Planning Section, 35 have been dismissed, mostly homosexuals, since President Eisenhower took over. Hence, we have no change in the State Department, and we have no change in policy in the Executive branch of the Government. Therefore, don't we have a right to suspect that our leadership is a little bit internationalist minded? I don't mean to be selfish when I say that--what is best for the American people is best for the free world. America is all that is left that is free and strong, and if we go down there is no free world. So it is not selfish and I am not unfair to our allies to say that we have got to do what is best for us.

Now are we going to do it? Let's look just a little further into our defense problem.

Following World War II, our leaders, feeling that the millennium had arrived, set up the United Nations and everything was going to be hunky-dory. We demobilized our troops very rapidly; Russia did not. I will give you one illustration of how we demobilized. Our most effective bomber in World War II was the B-29 Bomber, made by Boeing. The head of the Boeing Wichita plant is a very dear friend of mine. We were at West Point together and have been lifelong pals. Boeing got orders to destroy all B-29's on the assembly line and also to destroy the jigs and dies and machine tools that built the B-29. Boeing could not comprehend such an order. Their man went to Mr. Truman and asked him if the order meant to destroy the means to produce the best weapon of World War II and Mr. Truman said do you know who I am? The Boeing man replied yes. Mr. Truman confirmed the order. And so the Boeing people threw out on the concrete ramps about the plant the jigs and dies and machine tools that made the B-29, ran over them with a road roller, and sold them for junk. At the time this was going on in Wichita, a Kremlin paper in Moscow published this: "The Soviet Air Force must fly higher and further and faster than any other Air Force, and it must be the best Air Force in the world." They started right then building what today is certainly the largest Air Force in the world, and it approaches ours in quality.

That was what was going on at the same time we were destroying the means to make our best bomber. How did it happen? I don't know.

The Collective Defense

Following this we moved into a new era in our thinking. Secretary of State Acheson conceived, at least he presented or unveiled to the Congress and the people of America, the concept of collective security. He told us something new in our history. He said that America can no longer stand alone, that we have to have allies to survive and the only way to survive is to align the people of the world with us under the collective security concept. That is a simple concept. Each country will furnish for war purposes what it can best furnish, natural resources, manpower, engines and agricultural commodities. All these resources are pooled and integrated into striking power. The concept is not new. I want to read to you a quote from the first instance I can find of pleading for collective security in this country. You will be a little shocked.

On Wednesday, December 22, 1937, Clarence A. Hathaway, Editor of the Daily Worker, made a broadcast over the CBS Broadcasting System. His subject was "Collective Security, the Road to Peace". He argued his case and ended with this sentence: "We urge the people to put pressure on Congress and the Administration now for the immediate application of a collective security policy". You know now the Russians still believe in that, and only on the 6th of November, a month ago today, Nikita Khrushchev in his three-hour harangue in Moscow said this: "We appeal to all peoples, all parliaments, ... to set up collective security in Europe and Asia."

Under the Acheson program NATO came into being. We sent troops into Europe. Now we have troops all over the world. We have troops in 70 countries. We have the 7th army in Germany today. The SEATO pact and other global mutual security arrangements are all financed by the United States. I would like to bring to your attention the technique that our Government leaders since 1933 have used on the American people.

Our Government has coined phrases that are very attractive. But they are coined to deceive. For instance, "Lend-Lease" of World War II - it wasn't lend and it wasn't lease, it was give-away. "Dollar Shortage" in England. There has never been a dollar shortage in England but the British pound got so low in value that the British were unwilling to buy our dollars, so they blamed the shortage on us and we started giving them dollars. "Mutual Security Pact" - there is nothing mutual about it, we agree to defend somebody that cannot possibly defend us. "Collective Security" coined to be comforting, but let's analyze it. NATO has been in existence now for more than six years. We have poured many billions into it. It amounts to the major portion of our 60 billions of foreign aid since the war stopped.

Let's take a look at NATO and see exactly what we have there. I spent three and a half months in Europe last year and I went up and down the line and talked to everyone who would listen. I visited six NATO countries. The concept of NATO primarily is a surface defense. It is not entirely a modern war concept to endeavor to hold a line in Europe. The invasion, should it come from Russia against Europe, would have to come across the great plains of Germany, because great mountains lie to the south and the Baltic to the north. From Switzerland to the Baltic, or Denmark we will say, there are not 15 divisions today on the NATO line. Five of them belong to the United States, the total of three to Great Britain. France doesn't have one complete division. Germany may have three--they are just beginning to build their army. The Benelux countries have three. That is all there are, there aren't quite 15 divisions.

What does Russia have as opposed to that manpower? She has 175 divisions in the field equipped and ready to go and they are equipped with modern weapons. The Kremlin has spent a lot of money on the Red army. In addition, there are 60 to 80 satillite divisions of the states of Central Europe equipped by Russia; how loyal they will be we really don't know.

Then let's move into air power. The NATO Air Force is pitiful. They have 9,000 planes and probably less than a thousand are supersonic and thoroughly modern. And a plane that is not modern and supersonic can be shot down like a clay pigeon. Russia has 20,000 modern combat planes, practically all jets, probably half are supersonic. This didn't happen all at once, this began at the end of World War II. Russia built about 13,000 of the MIG-15. It is a fighter, not supersonic. It is a jet. Except for our sabre jet, the F-86, the MIG-15 was the best fighter in the Korean War. The MIG-15 is now obsolete. But Russia is building the MIG-17 -- which is supersonic -- at the rate of 400 a month. The MIG-17 is replacing the MIG-15. The Russians have built the IL-28, a two-engine jet bomber. There are 360 Red bases in the Soviet Satellite states. Here the IL-28 is based. Its speed is 550 miles an hour and the farthest capital in Europe is 80 minutes from these Central European bases. The Reds have built two more great bombers. The BISON and the BADGER -- they're comparable to our B-47 and B-52. They fly at 650 miles per hour and can carry atomic and hydrogen bombs. They are thoroughly good planes.

In 1945 the British sold 25 NENE jet engines to Russia. These engines developed 4,500 pounds of thrust. A pound of thrust is comparable somewhat to a horsepower. Since that time the Russians have improved that engine until they are now getting 10,000 pounds of thrust out of it. This is 4,000 pounds of thrust more than our best jet engine can deliver.

The Reds are building the BISON intercontinental bomber at the rate of 30 a month. Recently they have decreased this production rate. The only logical reason being, not because their budget has to be cut, but rather because their ICBM will supplement this bomber.

We should not be startled with the fact that the Russians have two satellites in the sky. The Russians have made amazing scientific and industrial progress since 1946. We estimated it would take the Russians 7 years to duplicate our B-29 bomber. They did it in two years. In 1946 we believed they could not develop the atomic bomb in 7 years. They produced it in half that time. The Russians are known to have more BISON intercontinental bombers than we have B-52s. We must now assume that the Reds have an ICBM. It is tragic that we ourselves have helped in this amazing development of Red weapons. The "unseen" hand has been active in creating the Red defense. We now know that the atomic bomb was given to the Russians in the blueprints, every process of the assembly of it. Its entire construction was blueprinted and the Reds got all the blueprints. They learned from spies all about the hydrogen bomb and we now know they got all the information we had on the means of launching the satellite.

We have to get back to the late, lamented Senator McCarthy, who in 1955 made a speech in Boston in which he said that he was given information which was reliable, that our missile program was being sabotaged and slowed down. As a result of this speech the treason at Fort Monmouth was disclosed to the Senator. His investigation started immediately. And quite likely, Senator McCarthy was getting so close to the truth that it was decided that the investigation must be stopped. And it was. Again we see some "unseen hand" slowing down our own missile effort and at the same time making our secrets available to Moscow. Why, therefore, should we be surprised and why should we be so fanatically hysterical about the Russian satellites?

The strategic bomber today is more effective than any missile, and it may be that it will be a better weapon for several years to come. Yet missiles have caught our imagination, and as a result we are now moving into a tremendous crash spending program. The money we have spent on NATO, which is a great portion of the 60 billion dollars, is nothing to the spending possibilities inherent in our NATO program we are launching today.

We had a preview of it about three weeks ago on Sunday from a London dispatch, published in this country. And this is the program we seem to be following now. I suppose the news was published in London and given to the American press more or less as a trial balloon.

We are now going to equip our allies with nuclear weapons, not only the 14 NATO allies, but according to the dispatch we are going to bring in others so there may be a total of 53 world powers receiving nuclear weapons from us. The plan is that Russia will be surrounded by a ring of nuclear weapons. That sounds all right maybe, but let's analyze it a little more closely.

In the first place, War has changed so fast that nearly everyone is bewildered by the changes. This new war is something that is almost beyond imagination of the human being. There are now in existence weapons in Russia and in America so powerful that if they were unleashed and each power had the means of delivering them -- they would kill everybody in Russia and the United States. You may say that 30 caliber bullets can also do that. There were billions of 30-caliber rounds fired in the last war. But neither side could pin down the people and shoot them. Now these nuclear weapons delivered from the sky can wipe out an entire area 120 miles across it. War has changed, and war has changed this way. Most people think "Oh, if we have allies we are all right", but manpower has little to do with it today. The old, conventional war was dependent upon the manpower, upon conventional weapons such as rifles and cannon, and combat leadership, upon wealth and resources and will to fight.

But today few of these factors of conventional war apply. Today, nuclear weapons, and a system of delivery, plus the will to use them are the true capability, militarily speaking, of a country. Only two countries in the world can afford to undertake nuclear weapons and delivery systems. I don't know what a missile costs but I suppose between one and two million dollars per missile. And missiles, unlike bombers, are not retrievable.

The cost of nuclear weapons for NATO is fantastic. We are going to give our allies this tremendously costly weapon when they are so poor as a nation that they can't even finance conventional forces. We give that to them and immediately they become vulnerable, vulnerable to the Russian soldier and bomber and missile.

It would be wicked to give our NATO Allies nuclear weapons to strike Russia unless we also gave them weapons to defend themselves. We have a moral responsibility, and if we ever undertake this it will probably cost us more than the 38 billion dollars a year we are now spending for the United States defense. This new NATO defense concept we are moving into will teach us something new about taxes, inflation and spending.

Now let's look a little further and see how effective NATO would be. The new plan, as announced in the London papers--and I am sure they are quoting the Eisenhower-MacMillan agreement--will be announced after the meeting in Paris this month. It gives the NATO people nuclear weapons. But the NATO people will have the say in whether or not they will be used. Well, supposing you're an Englishman and you know Russia can drop a half dozen four-megatron bombs on England and wipe out the entire race. You know Russia has that capability, and when a war comes you have your choice of total destruction or staying neutral. How can we ask these European powers to be anything but neutral when, if they fight, they are going to be utterly destroyed?

So we plan to give these weapons, billions of dollars worth, to the NATO nations. When a war comes nations strive to survive, just like a human being. Self preservation is the rule of nature. We give them those weapons and what are they going to do with them? They are likely to hold their fire, and you cannot blame them. Russia may not strike Europe first. The Reds may bypass Europe and strike directly at the United States.

We are the only people in the path of world domination of Russia. Is anyone naive enough to think that if the Reds bypass Europe, that our allies will strike Russia and thereby risk their own destruction?

Collective Defense In History

Collective defense is not new. In 1867 Bismark formed the North German Confederation, but there were three south German states, Bavaria, Baden and Wurttemburg, which did not join. Bismark, with his North German army, Prussian trained, was a threat to all Europe. Napoleon the Third was ruling France. He knew all Europe feared Bismark, so he effected agreements with the European powers, -- he formed a collective -- to destroy bismark. He made absolute, formal treaties with Italy and Austria. He thought he had positive pledges with the three southern German states, and with Spain and Britain that if he struck Bismark they would join him. He had all Europe firmly on his side.

He struck Bismark but the three southern German states joined Bismark. Austria pulled out from its treaty obligation. Italy pulled out. Britain and Spain suddenly closed neutrality. Napoleon the Third fought alone and he lost the war.

The point is that everyone of those agreements then was just as binding as NATO is now. Then why do we think that the Europeans are foolish enough to come to our rescue when they will be destroyed if they do it? Of course they are not going to do it. We have got to defend ourselves and no one will defend us. Only Americans can defend America.

When I was in Europe last winter I talked to people, including General Speidel, who now commands the land forces of NATO. Everyone to whom I talked seemed not to be worried about Russia because when a war comes they all expect the United States is going to defend Europe. Europeans want our aid to continue. They have been given such a high standard of living and they have weapons they never dreamed of before. This they like. If we stop the aid NATO will fall apart. But over in this country our President tells us we have to have this foreign aid because we cannot stand alone, and that we must have the European Allies to help us. There seems to be a slight discrepancy somewhere!

Let's look into history one or two more times on collective security. In 1941 the British intervened in Greece. As you know, Greece was threatened when Hitler put his divisions on the Russian front in the Balkans. The Greek King invited Britain to intervene as he preferred them to the Germans. The Greek King offered Churchill and General Wilson a force of 100,000 Greeks which was on the Albanian front; they were tough, fine soldiers. They had just stopped an Italian invasion from Albania on the western front. There were also four Macedonian divisions in the Saloniki area which were placed under General Wilson's command.

The British promised Wilson seven divisions and twenty-three squadrons of RAF. Wilson moved into Greece from Egypt with two divisions. Meanwhile, the German forces moved through Yugoslavia and invaded Greece. Wilson ordered the Greek force on the Albanian front to move east to block the German invasion.

But this Greek force of 100,000 men refused to leave the Albanian front. They wanted, they said, to finish off the Italians who were already defeated. Wilson ordered the four Greek divisions in the Saloniki area to move west to block the invading German force. But the Saloniki divisions also refused Wilson's order. They advised him that they had been recruited locally; that they were guarding their own homes which were just as sacred as Greek homes elsewhere.

As a consequence, Wilson met the German forces with greatly inferior forces. His defeat was immediate and complete.

Thus, collective security was tried in Greece. And yet the Greeks wouldn't move to defend their own countrymen. They preferred to defend their own homes.

Can we afford to put our destiny into the hands of our allies?

One more example, the Korean War. In the Korean War the South Koreans fought this with 500,000 soldiers. They fought well. We had 450,000 troopes in Korea, and our allies--it was a UN war--had a total of 45,000--ten percent of our effort and five percent of the total effort. We paid all the bills. That is how collective security operated in Korea. It was a total failure. In the collective security Defense of Korea the United States lost control of its own destiny. We could have won the war and collapsed Red China but our UN allies, the other members of the collective, had varied global interests--with little interest in South Korea. Our allies therefore could not agree to prosecution of the war with victory as the goal. We shall yet pay for this Korean compromise to please our Allies.

We dare not depend on our allies to defend us. I am in favor of allies, I believe in friendship over the world. But ours is the only country that Russia has to eliminate before she can realize her dream of world domination. It is utterly naive for us to think that if war comes our allies can defend us.

The Eisenhower - MacMillan Agreement

Now despite these facts I want to read from the Eisenhower-MacMillan agreement. This is the first sentence of the first paragraph. This agreement was made the latter part of October this year. I am quoting:

"The arrangements which the nations of the Free World have made for collective defense and mutual help are based on the recognition that the concept of National self-sufficiency is now out of date."

To the soldier, that lovely language of the State Department means only this: We can no longer defend ourselves. We can't stand alone. This means Russia stands alone and she has a slave population. Why can't we as free people stand alone? Of course we can and must be prepared to stand alone. There is something sinister behind this Eisenhower-MacMillan agreement.

World Government?

Clever people have two reasons for everything they do. A good reason and then the real reason.

I am going to apply this yardstick to our present day situation: the good reason is we want everybody on our side, it is herd instinct to have people with us. Because we are liable to get into a war and need help and we don't like to stand alone. It is much better to have friends. All this is true--this is the good reason of our defense program today, the NATO concept of collective security for our National Defense.

But the real reason for our global alliances is: World Government. We are moving fast into World Government. We are not told this because people don't want it. Our leaders hold that we are too dumb to be taken into their confidence. We couldn't understand. Nevertheless, that is where we are moving.

It is most disturbing that the Secretary of State and our President both have expressed an affinity for World Government. In 1942 when Dulles was a lawyer with Cromewell and Sullivan, he wrote the constitution for what was called THE UNION - a union of Great Britain and the United States - I have a copy of the original. On it are longhand notes by Clarence Streit, who wrote "Union With Britain Now". Will not we be told next that we have to go into World Government to survive? President Eisenhower, on page 529 of the Garden City Edition of his book - "Crusade in Europe" - says that he believes in a tribunal made up of world powers which shall have the power to decide disputes among powers and the means to enforce their decisions. That is World Government. That would end American sovereignty. Now what happens when we get into World Government. First, world government means international control of all armed forces. Each country could have its internal politics, but the military might of the world would be pooled and controlled by a world parliament. This can only mean that the United States would be disarmed. We would have no military force to back our stand on any issue. We would be helpless. Others who have never known liberty or economic freedom would dictate our destiny.

Second, the United States would be bankrupt. Already we are bankrupt - but have not yet come to a full realization of the enormity of our debt. But under world government, every country, jealous of our standard of living and wealth, would vote to whittle us down to their own dismal standard of living. Our economics would be totally destroyed.

Third, with our military strength gone - with our economy wrecked, with these other powers deciding our destiny, American liberty would have wholly disappeared. Someone else would be thinking for us and telling us what to think.

All this our people must never permit. Yet, our drift is unmistakably in this tragic direction. We are so close to a situation in which foreigners are dictating our acts that it is terrifying.

May I urge each of you here today to give this threat to our liberty and our sovereignty your most considered thought.

"Dear Reader:

This issue of American Opinion is an autonomous island, outside the usual boundaries of our effort.

It is intended primarily for reference purposes. Its contents are not tied, by timeliness or subject matter, to any particular publication date. Partly for this reason, it was held out of the Christmas and New Years mails, and may not actually reach you until after the February number -- which must be mailed as early in January as the printer can make possible.

The criminal irresponsibility of so much of the American press has never shown more clearly than on this very day. Fidel Castro, as murderous and cunning an agent of the Kremlin as Mao Tze-tung or Janos Kadar, is right now taking over Cuba. He has the blessing of our government. Our newspapers are full of headlines and news stories glorifying the events, with hardly a line to tell us of Castro's Communist connections and support. Moscow is establishing a terrifically important Communist beachhead right at our shores, without the American people having any chance to learn this truth from their papers, radio, TV, or magazines of large circulation.

To find out what has really happened over the past quarter of a century, and what is now happening at so rapidly increased a rate, becomes daily more difficult -- and daily more important. For those who have the patriotism and the courage, to seek to learn the frightening truth, we hope that the bibliography contained in these pages will be helpful and encouraging.

Sincerely,"

"The next two or three years may determine the fate of the American Republic. We implore our readers to take this warning literally. So precise an estimate is neither a nervous guess nor the product of an over-wrought imagination. It follows directly from any systematic study of the Communist time table for world conquest. For we are faced with an open conspiracy. And the failure of America to preserve its promise and its life will not be due, finally, to America's weakness at decisive moments. It will be due to the refusal of the American people to see the obvious, to recognize the truth that is being flaunted before your eyes, to read what the enemy has openly put on paper.

"The Communists have never disguised their intent -- nor their strategy. For the first time in history a would-be conqueror of the world has contemptuously specified his plans, explained his techniques, and even announced his time-table, from the beginning of his attack -- which was forty years ago. The advance of Communism, from a negligible splinter party of professional Russian rabble rousers in 1917, to a world-wide empire of more than a billion slaves in 1958, has proceeded exactly according to a brazenly publicized schedule. Nothing was ever kept secret; and yet nothing had to be changed. The conspiracy flourished in the open because the Communists were entirely correct in assuming that the comfort-loving West would refuse to believe what the Communists disdained to deny.

"A future historian of our times will have no doubt that the most effective secret weapon, in the hands of the victorious Communists was the handling of public opinion in America. They have always reckoned, and always correctly, that the desire of the American people "not to be bothered with" would, at every critical moment, prove greater than the basic human need for self-preservation. It always does. It still is. America is being strangled by its love of comfort.

"Mr. Barron, a former officer of the State Department, was quietly working on his assignment—the collection and evaluation of State Department papers pertaining to certain important aspects of our wartime and postwar policies. And suddenly the roof fell in on him. He had, with a perfectly unperturbed conscience, and entirely within his sworn duties as a State Department historian, edited his findings for publication. But the New Deal-Fair Deal-Eisenhower Establishment prosecutes any attempt at keeping the American people informed about the doings of its leaders as a crime. And naturally Mr. Barron lost his job. But the American public gained an excellent chance to learn about the jungle mores that prevail inside the State Department Bureaucracy and about the rigid censorship that Washington, if it is to have its way, means to impose on the essential information on which the Constitution sovereignty of the American people is built.

"MIKOYAN

"on January 17, 1959, The Tablet Quoted Robert S. Allen, Syndicated Washington columnist, as saying:

"The United States and Canadian navies have made a sensationally sinister discovery. ...off both thier Atlantic and Pacific coasts, they have found imbedded on the ocean floors, up to depths of 1,000 feet, more than a score of large steel radioactive devices of unmistakable Russian make.

"Navy authorities are certain these are 'position markers' to be used by Soviet submarines for launching nuclear-armed attacks against U.S. and Canadian costal cities and other targets...

"With these underwater devices, Soviet subs would be greatly assisted in launching nuclear missiles at particular targets without having to surface for that purpose...

"The grim menace presented by these Red undersea 'position markers' is now under urgent consideration at the highest levels. In view of the known large number of Russian missile submarines (at least 100), it is being pointed out that in these strategy discussions that the submarine 'position markers' constitute a greater danger to the U. S. and Canada than the ICBM's being developed by the Soviet."

Some of these Soviet mechanisms were found close to our shores, "well within the three-mile limit". Although we have found only a few of them, reletively, Mr. Allen reports that U. S. and Canadian officials "are convinced hundreds more have been planted off both coasts." The work of planting these devices along our coasts has been done by Soviet "fishing" and "research" vessels, and by freighters and submarines, "which have been repeatedly observed off these coasts in the past several years."

"Columnist Allen said Washington officialdom had rejected a suggestion that this newly discovered Soviet threat be widely publicized. Mr. Allen said:

"That was rejected on the ground such action would be 'inadvisable during the visit of Deputy Premier Mikoyan.'

"They have violated our territorial waters to install equipment which can be used to destroy our major cities and kill approximately 100 million Americans, but we must not mention it publicity because that might spoil Mr. Mikoyan's visit!

"As he was preparing to leave, he said to reporters:
"I am satisfied."

Senator Herman Talmage, according to the "Augusta Courier", or March 17, 1958, said in a speech in Richmond, Virgina, on Feb. 28: "The stacking of the Supreme Court to destroy the public school system has brought about and encouraged murder, rapes, riots, assaults, and suicides in the public schools of the nation." And as to the latter part, Talmage said the people of Georgia and the people of Virginia have no thought of turning their children over to the supreme court for "psychological experimentation."

After an exhaustive study of 11 history textbooks used throughout this country, a most revealing book, "Brainwasing In Our High Schools" by E. Merrill Root, has just been published. It shows that the minds of our own children have been deliberately poisned and left unprepared.

In the United States there is a conscious plan to poison the body the mind and the soul of man.

"The "Conspirators" were much too clever to urge the United States to give 13.8 billions in gold to their international banker friends, so they got us to give their pet countries the money which they then proceeded to deposit in our banks. Now they can convert the supplus money we gave them into our gold. That would leave us with the insufficient amount of only 8 billion in gold-- out of 28 billions we formerly owned (May 1956 p. 122) The Wall Street Journal has confirmed this. Today those 8 billions have been reduced to a mere 5 and a fraction." - American Mercury

"THE REASON FOR PRICE SPREAD?

O N L Y P E O P L E P A Y T A X E S

Excerpt from PAUL HARVEY NEWS....November 30, 1958

Americans, two weeks ago I, Paul Harvey, started out chasing a sneak thief... and I ended up with the detection of Public Enemy Number One.

I have been two weeks on the trail. I am very tired. But the job is done.

No conviction yet. But I can name him now. And he is yours to prosecute as you see fit. Before I tell you his name...

Here's what happened.

Two weeks ago I got a letter from a farmer on the subject of the last election.

But he included this question, "Who is the middleman who is getting rich off the farmer?"

He said he sells a bushel of wheat for $1.73. By the time that bushel of wheat is made into 66 loaves of bread it costs housewives $15.84.

Whoa, there!

"Who's getting rich on me?" the farmer wanted to know.

Well, I've heard that question repeated so often that I had stopped listening to it.

But suddenly I decided the one way to silence that noisome question nobody had tried-

And that was to answer it.

Well, with my limited staff we started playing detective.

For the wheat in a loaf of bread the farmer gets 2⅔¢. But you pay 24¢.

So you are both being robbed by somebody.

Who?

I figured I'd backtrack on the culprit. So I went to the grocery store. "How much do you take out, Mr. Grocer, when you sell a loaf of bread?" I said. "There's more than twenty cents missing that somebody's getting. Is it you?"

Well the grocer showed me that his markup is confined by competition to only 3¢.

In view of his salaries, overhead, that markup seemed fair enough, especially when he explained that he has to pay more than half of it back in corporate income taxes not covered in the sales tax.

And also he contributes to the social security and unemployment taxes of his employees. He pays an electric bill every monthplus a tax on it. And his delivery truck was taxed when he bough it, and the gasoline it uses and the license plates it wears are all taxed.

So allthis overhead, not to mention his own income taxes, made 3¢ seem a fair enou enough "profit" for the grocer to make on that loaf of bread. Anyway, he was not the robber I was looking for.

I went to the wholesaler and rode on one of the trucks that delivers the bread.

Maybe this driver was the boy who's been picking the farmer's pocket. After all, the Teamsters' Union, you know.

But I divided the number of loaves of bread the man delivers by his wages per week and his take is less than 1/20 of one cent a loaf. So he's doing all right. But he's not stealing anything.

There's too much read between theprice and the cost of a loaf of bread.

The guy I was looking for doesn't have just a finger in the kitty. He's in there with both fists.

I kept looking.

There were two tedious days of sleuthing for this sneak thief before I backtracked on the loaf of bread as far as the flour mill.

But I made sure that I didn't miss any possible middlemen inthe bakery or on the railroad that hauled the flour...or anywhere.

And not one was getting away with anything.

I mean the profit slice which each took for his services was an infinitesimal fraction of one-tenth of one penny per loaf. Not even measurable.

Then I got a tip. Checkthe sugar source. If nobody in the wheat-flour ingredient was robbing us...Maybe the sugar people. I backtracked to a New Orleans refiner and it was another dead-end.

The price you pay for the sugar and the salt and the yeast and the milk solids and the shortenings in a loaf of bread...all put together...comes to less than one-fourth of one cent per loaf.

So...

And here is where I stubbed my toe. By the time I added everybody's profit for handling the materials and the finished product plus the cost of the ingredients... I figured it all up... and it came to 12¢ for a loaf of bread.

You should be paying twelve cents for a loaf of bread.

But I can't get my grocer to sell me a loaf for less than 24¢!

Who's doubling the price of my loaf of bread? Who's getting away with that other 12¢?

I had figured every handler's wage down to the most minute fraction. My figures could not be wrong. But a loaf of bread added up to twelve cents and it's still selling for 24¢.

I was getting as angry as the farmer who'd written me that letter. It's frustrating to have your wife go to the grocery store and somewhere in there get robbed by a ghost!

Well...

I went back to the farmer. I decided to start all over again, but working forward fromthe farmer.

The research went faster this time because I knew the direction.

And this time I caught him.

Red-handed. The guy who's picked your pocket every time you buy a loaf of bread.

And he's been dealing himself in when you buy milk, too.

There are 206 separate transactions involved in getting a quart of milk from the pasture to your doorstep. And sure enough, I found the same guy doubling the price.

The syndicate he operates is so smoothand so subtle that it's little wonder he's escaped the rap for this before.

But I'm going to name him tonight.

Because he is gradually aiming to double theprice of your loaf of bread again. And again.

While the farmer fusses and fumes and shadow boxes with imaginary villains, the real one has been in hiding.

I took that farmer's bushel of wheat to market.

The farmer got $1.73 for it. 2½¢ per loaf of bread.

But when the flour mill added its fraction for milling...wait a minute.

The flour to make one loaf of bread has suddenly doubled!

It comes out of the mill costing five cents. Not 2½.

Still, the mill is getting only a minute fraction of a penny for itself. But the mill is required to pay...

Now the trail gets warm.

The mill has to add on seven federal taxes and eight separate state taxes.

The railroad which hauls the finished flour...now the trail gets hot...keeps only a tiny fraction of a penny for its services...but adds on two pennies to pay five federal taxes, plus state taxes in every state through which the shipment passed.

In this cast there were three.

Jumping jehosaphat!

I thought taxes just soaked the rich!

This is soaking anybody who buys a loaf of bread.

And when I backtracked on those other ingredients, I foundthe sugar refiner paid eight federal taxes and six Louisiana state taxes.

The railroad that handled the sugar paid taxes.

The warehouse where the salt was stored in Chicago paid taxes.

The shortening manufacturer and the yeast factory and the producer of the milk solids...

Each was keeping for himself sucha minute profit that the totalcost of the ingredients had added only two pennies.

But the taxes had pyramided tomore than twice that!

I am an amateur detective. But I did the best I could. And when I finally retraced the loaf of bread back to the grocer's shelf...I understood why that price tag is more than ten times what the wheat farmer gets.

Because there are 151 separate taxes on that loaf of bread!

You and I have been complaining, however feebly, about the whackthe income tax takes out of our weekly paycheck...

While we were watching our wallet pocket...

The hiddentax has been emptying our coin purse!

And again and againand again.

After all, we've consoled ourselves, the tax man gets only 20% of my income. It's worth that to live in America.

But that's a lie and a delusion.

The "tax man" has been picking your pocket for twelve cents every time you buy one loaf of bread.

But with suchclever sleight of hand...by suchan involved and complicated multiplicity of hidden taxes...that his hand was quicker than our eye.

You think you pay a hundred dollars tax when you buy a new $2,000 car.

Listen: There have been $288. in hidden taxes collected on that car before it ever leaves the factory.

And then there are allthe taxes the dealer pays, taxes on income, property, taxes when you transfer the title, when you pay the state tax.

So when you pay $2,000 for a car...more than one-fourth of that price is just taxes.

You've been figuring the corporation tax would cost only the big corporations.

But look what happened. They added it to the price of the car.

We pay it!

The grocer, the trucker, the banker, themiller, they don't pay their taxes. We do! When we buy that loaf of bread.

People pay taxes!

Railroads don't pay taxes. Corporations don't pay taxes. Just people pay taxes.

All the rest of those fellows add their taxes onto the stuff they sell us.

Only people pay taxes.

We can hear that our federalgovernment is sending a billion dollars to Tito...

And we figure "so what?..."

But every time our government spends a billion...it taxes the average American family another 25 dollars.

Only people pay.

How much different it might have been...if our government had said it that other way.

That "every American family is asked to chip in $25 this year for Tito."

Wow!

I'm going to remember that. Every time the Washingtonor the State spenders speak of spending another billion for something or other, I'm going to remember it's 25 of my dollars they're spending.

It'll make a difference.

Yes, I finally tracked down the pickpocket.

The middleman every farmer has wondered about. The guy who's behind the high prices every housewife complains about.

I found him.

And his name is Sam.

But Uncle Sam is not alone.

His accomplices are the tax laws of 40 states which add one-third to the price of one quart of milk.

The farmer's truck and tractor are taxed.

The deliveryman's truck and the tires on it and the battery in it.

Even the air in the tires of that truck has four hidden taxes on it. I mean it.

The power to run the compressor motor is taxed. The oil for the compressor. The gas station attendant. The sales taxes on the compressor motor and the rubber hose.

Four taxes on the air in the tires of the truck that hauls your milk.

Taxes have crept up on us--like too many beers.

Historically, whenever any nation has taxed its people more than 25% of their income, that nation has been eating its seed corn headed for economic decay.

Already our taxes are devouring more than a third of every income dollar. They sought to slip the money painlessly from our paychecks...by withholding it before we got it.

But like an iceberg, the far greater hunk of our tax load is under the surface--out of sight.

The next Congress has been labeled a spending Congress. But if they spend more money...it will be your money.

When they spend a billion for anything...it will cost you twenty-five.

Both parties...will try to buy your vote...with your money.

For the small wage earner, hidden taxes are far more costly than income taxes. The best kept secret in the United States today is the whole size of the tax load.

There are 150 taxes on one ladies' hat.

Gasoline would sell for two cents a gallon...except for the tax.

And the White House is talking about raising that.

When are you going to draw the line?

I started out on the trail of a sneak thief and ended up with Public Enemy Number One.

Now he's yours to prosecute as you see fit.

The article below was taken from THE MOUNTAIN DEMOCRAT and PLACERVILLE TIMES, February, 1959.

AFFAIRS OF STATE by Henry C. MacArthur

(CNS)--Governor Edmund G. Brown's new and increased tax program, designed to siphon off an eventual $256 million dollars annually out of the California economy does in its major implications, hit no one except the average householder, despite the governor's assertions that it is an "equitable" increase.

ANALYSIS of the program submitted by the "people's governor" indicates that the people least able to pay the additional burden are going to be the ones hardest hit.

For instance, $68 million comes off cigarettes and tobacco. More poor people smoke than wealthy people, for the simple reason there are more persons in moderate circumstances.

THE SAME principle applies to the $10 million the governor wants from an additional beer tax. Beer has been known for many, many years as the workingman's beverage, y yet Brown proposes to tax his friends in labor to the tune of ten million.

HORSE-RACING is much the same. There was a time when this was the "sport of kings," and only the wealthy indulged in wagering on the bang-tails. But how times have changed! Nowadays, every man or every woman with the urge and two bucks can play the ponies.

COME DOWN to the new severance tax on petroleum products, which will take more than $23 million out of the pockets of the people. If anyone is naive enough to believe that the producers of oil and gas are going to stand this tax, it might be well to think again. The gas companies are allowed so much profit by the public utilities commission. When the severance tax goes into effect, if it ever does, these concerns will have a sound argument to raise rates on consuming householders. This is an easy and hidden way to siphon money off the people.

BANK and corporation franchise tax changes are due to pull another $58.6 million out of the economy. Interest rates and charges by banks are already high but no doubt will go higher for the little people who have small checking accounts and consumer loans. While there is a 12 per cent limit on interest, there is no limit on the amount the banks can charge to handle checking accounts.

Inheritance tax changes for $8 million will hit the heirs to small, as well as large estates.

THE GOVERNOR has of course, attempted to lessen the blow on the small income group in seeking an additional $71 million from the personal income tax. Whether there will be any actual reductions, of course, in view of lowering the personal exemptions both for married couples and for single persons remains to be seen. The governor claims the new schedule would result in actual lowering of taxes for a married man with two children, until his income reaches $10,500 a year.

In presenting his schedule, the governor has brushed aside suggestions that the budget could be balanced without new taxes, and announced he is "prepared to fight" for his suggested tax schedule.

CONSEQUENTLY, if the new tax burden is "equitable," someone perhaps has goofed in tracing the ultimate sources of the revenue the governor proposes to extract from the pockets of the people. While the taxes may sound equitable on paper, it appears that in actual practice they will come from the same place they always do, which is out of the pockets of the men and women trying to make a living.

A Letter To The Editor of the CALAVERAS PROSPECT, February 6, 1959 by John R. Ross

G O L D

Did you know that on January 31, 1934, the President declared that he reduced the weight of the gold dollar from 25.8 grains to 15 5/21 grains of gold, a reduction of about 40 per cent? Our Government called that markup a "profit of $2 billion, 800 million." Such declaration could not apply to gold coins, which had ceased to exist; but in fact, could only apply to the standard unit of value, and the President declared a gold dollar of 15 5/21 grains of gold to be the standard unit of value.

Under those facts, what was the meaning of the requirement that the gold taken by the Government should be paid for with credits in the Treasury of equivalent amounts in dollars?

Such paper currency, which by the act of our Government had become 40 per cent less than the equivalent of the gold taken by the Government, is all that the States received for the gold which they had surrendered.

Everyone should read "INFLATION IN THE UNITED STATES" By Paul Bakewell, Jr., of La Salle Building, St. Louis, Mo., from which the above statements were taken.

TAXPAYER REVOLT IN WASHINGTON SPREADS; Lions Club Talk Starts Big Move

Ritzville, Wash., Feb. 26 (AP)--A "nonpartisan taxpayers' revolt" that started here over a cup of coffee went into its third week today with the letter-writing campaigns heading to the far corners of the state.

An estimated 10,000 or more revolt-inspired form letters have poured in on state legislators in Olympia, and Gov. Albert D. Rosellini's office said he has received 1,358 of them.

In addition, thousands of companion petitions were being circulated, the signers pledging not to ask for additional services from state government and demanding in return that no new tax laws be passed.

"The campaign has exceeded our wildest dreams," said Edward Cross, an attorney who helped start it. "With all the phone calls, my practice has gone by the boards. We've really got a tiger by the tail."

STARTED AT MEETING: It started at a Lions Club meeting in this town of 2,200 on Feb. 11 when Bryson Reinhardt, a Wenatchee, Wash., salesman, made a speech about government and taxes.

"When it was over, some of us got to talking and decided that's what we always do--just talk," Cross said. "We agreed to meet for coffee next morning and consider some kind of petition and formletter."

Twenty men showed up, then 40 more joined in. $300 was collected for printing, and a nameless organization was born with an eight-man steering committee headed by Ralph Danekas, a mortician who says he is politically independent.

NO PARTY LINES: "It's a completely nonpartisan, grass roots effort," said Cross, a former Republican county prosecutor. The steering committee includes Roy Scott, one-time Democratic county commissioner.

The original goal was to get 1,500 signatures on a "no-new-services, no-new-taxes" petition in Adams County. Cross said they got 1,150 in three days and the idea "snowballed."

After 500 form letters piled up on his desk, Rosellini, a Democrat, replied with a formletter of his own, asking revolters to be "realistic" and claiming increased taxes are needed to maintain even a minimum of services.

"We weren't convinced," Cross said.

CONTINUES SPREAD: The revolt spread to Spokane, 70 miles away, and Norman Bishop, insurance man and chairman there, set a goal of 75,000 signatures. He got city permission to set up booths at four downtown Spokane locations and said his group plans to stay active as a "taxpayers' lobby" through 1960.

Letters started coming into Olympia today from Anacortes and Aberdeen in extreem western Washington. The presidents of both the Young Republican and Young Democratic clubs in Bellingham said they're joining forces to get signatures. Cross said a Seattle campaign will start next week.

Rosellini has proposed increasing the state sales tax from 3-1/3 to 4% and letters or not, some kind of tax increase is expected.

US DICTATORSHIP IS NELSON ROCKEFELLER'S NEXT GOAL, No. 2 (By Emanuel Josephson, Author of "Rockefeller Internationalist") from February 14th Capsule News, Inc., 919-18th St., N.W., Washington 6, D.C., $10.00 per yr.

"Rockefeller's Good Govt for American Peasants" is the title of a chaper in my prophetic biography of the Rockefeller Clan, which they have so rigidly and effectively banned from bookstores and news-stands.

This chaper aptly describes the highly intensified activities of their foundations, and of all other foundations whose control they have usurped thru govt domination. The Ford Foundation, for instance.

Thru the same device, and thru their dictation of tax levies and rates, the Rockefellers have made certain that no rival can acquire the power to rule and destroy, which exemption from taxation gives them. In short, they are in a position to loot everyone else by taxation. And they profit doubly by it, thru pocketing a large part of the taxes which they levy and loot from the nation, and by completely evading any reduction of their loot by the taxes they order imposed on others. Armed with this power of tax exemption, the Rock Mob has set up and financed with looted funds the host of organizations which, as we have related, are dedicated to robbing us peasants of every other possession.

This includes our freedom, our franchise, and our hard-earned right to rule ourselves thru our elected representatives. This means the destruction of our Constitution and our Republic. The traitorious agents of this conspiracy parade as "economists" and "professors," "authorities" and "consultants." Together with a host of executives (who must take orders from the Rock Mob to live) and a group of brainwashed dupes and dopes, they constitute the personnel of thousands of subversive agencies which co-ordinate a stealthy coup d'etat.

This is being engineered through Rockefeller's Public Administration Clearing House that is known as "1313", which is its address on East 60th Street in Chicago, hard by the campus of Rockefeller's University of Chicago.

A roster of the subversive Rockefeller agencies, through which these conspirators are working to destroy our Republic, and to set up a Rockefeller Red dictatorship in its place, is extremely interesting and illuminating. It is brazenly published under the title of "A Directory in Public Administration Organizations."

Among the listed agencies one finds

Governor's Conference
US Mayor's Conference
Conference of Chief Justices
Tax Foundation
Tax Institute
National Assn for Mental Health
American Civil Liverties Union

National Education Assn
National Planning Assn
National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws
International City Managers' Assn Council of State Governments and an endless array of organizations for regimentation of the regimenters of us "peasants."

Many are highly subversive, and some, frankly Communist. It is through these Rockefeller subsidized and dominated agencies that the conspirators transmit their orders to their puppets, dupes and agents.

One of the most active of these subversive agencies that are molding the dictatorship conspiracy on the local level, is the Public Administration Service.

In every section of the country its treasonous agents, backed by the tax-exempt funds and the power of Rockefeller's "Philanthropic" Foundation Trust, are engaged in robbing us of our freedom to rule ourselves, on the pretense of establishing "Home Rule" in the guise of "Metropolitan" Councils and managers. This is a ruling caste in the making, hand-picked and trained by their Rockefeller bosses, to ride roughshod over the people, enslave them and loot them mercilessly and without recourse.

With their local dictatorships thus established, these Rockefeller Red Commissars are preparing the way for the Sovietization of our country under Fuehrer Nelson's dictatorship.

In a few sections of our country patriots are alerted and are fighting to preserve our hard-won freedom.

Among these are Col. Bluford Balter in New Orleans, Connie Chandler and her Liberty League in Anaheim (Calif) and others of whose courageous fight we would like to hear.

In Alaska the people have been duped into permitting the conspirators to draw up State and local constitutions and charters.

Nelson Rockhas proposed a 2 billion increase for New York's overburdened taxpayers....."news"- papers all over the state are "backing him up"....they'd better, or lose 80% of their nationaladvertising...this is the percentage the House of Rockefeller's cartel of cartels controls....A petition to impeach the 9 members of the US Supreme Court for their crimes against the Constitution was filed with the Clerk of the House this week...however, no member of the House has exhibited courage enough to make it official...Junior high school in North Virginia opened under Little Rock conditions...newsmen opined "this looks like the beginning of the police state in America"....Democratic Senate Leader Lyndon Johnson says racial groups can get along by negotiation and not by using police state methods on children...fake "liberal" want a police state al la Russia....Loudest squawkers for the police state happens to be Communist-led NAACP...This may kill Johnson Bill to set up a group for racial negotiation....Too many lamebrains in Congress) actually fear the National Assn for the Agitation of Colored People....

The American Colonists prospered as no other people in the history of the world had ever prospered because they CREATED, ISSUED and CONTROLLED their own Colonial Money. Since it was issuedand paid into use by the Colonial Government, it was relatively free from fluctuation in purchasing value (no gold standard of value to make it worth one amount today and another amount tomorrow.) And, since the money was paid into use directly as "legaltender" and not founded on bonds, nobody paid interest on the money,and boththe Government and the people prospered. THEN came the "Stamp Act of 1765," followed by the Revolutionary War.

Money Creators By Gertrude M. Coogan. This book is now out of print because of pressure placed upon the author and publisher. It is one of the best books ever written on the subject. It shows how banks plan 'depressions' so they may seize property through foreclosure of mortgages. President Andrew Jackson refused to renew the charter of "Bank of the United States," he said:

"The bold efforts the present bank has made to control the government, the distress it has wantonly caused, are but premonitions of the fate which awaits the American people should they be deluded intoa perpetuation of this institution or the establishment of another like it."

BUT, in 1863, disregarding Lincoln's advice, Congress passed the "National Bank Act," giving private interests the power to coin and issue money (and collect interest on the United States bonds which the government issued to "cover" the various issues of money). Lincoln defied the planners,issued some $450,000,000 into direct circulation. (Called "Greenbacks," this issue of money has never cost the American people one cent of interest.) Lincoln told the people:

"As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned and an era of corruption inhigh places will follow and the money power will endeavor to prolong its reign by working on the prejudices of the people until wealth is aggregated inthe handsof a few and the Republic is destroyed. I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of the war."

SO they shot Lincoln; and the German statesman and soldier Bismarksaid:

"The deathof Lincoln was a disaster for Christendom....I fear that foreign bankers with their craftiness and tortuous tricks willentirely control thecexuberant riches of America and use it to systematically corrupt modern civilization. They will not hesitate to plunge the whole of Christendom intowars and chaos inorder that the earth shall become their inheritance."

Every American President who understood and vigorously opposed the Money Power,died violently while in office.

TEXAS RANCHER ASSAILS COURT FOR DECISION ON SON'S WHEAT from Feb.25th Stockton Record

Canyon, Texas., Feb.25 (UPI) — J. Evetts Haley, a prominent Texas rancher-politician, bitterly assailed a Supreme Court decision yesterday that Congress has power to regulate the wheat farmers grow for their own use.

Haley has a personal interest in the case. It involves his son, J. Evetts Haley Jr. who grew 43 acres of wheat without an allotment on his 1,6000-acre ranch in Sequoyah County, Oklahoma.

"I apparently made the mistake of rearing my boy to expect nothing from his government but protection of his rights under the Constitution," Haley said.

"Now the government has destroyed them. It's perfectly obvious that nobody except the Negro or the Communist can expect anything from the present Supreme Court."

The Agriculture Department said the 27-year-old Haley Jr., must pay a penalty of $506.11. He refused, and the government went to court — and lost.

Federal Dist.Judge T. Whitfield Davidson ruled in Dallas last October that Congress power to regulate "commerce" does not extend to wheat consumed on the farm where it is grown. Haley contended he used the wheat for livestock feed, and none of it was put on the market.

The government appealed the ruling, and the Supreme Court yesterday reversed Judge Davidson in a brief order, citing a 1942 decision of its own as a precedent.

The elder Haley, who made an unsuccessful campaign for governor of Texas in 1956, said their attorneys probably will ask for a review, but he has little hope for favorable action.

AS AN AMERICAN, HOW LOYAL ARE YOU??

What will YOU do tohelp rid our country of COMMUNISM? Will you read factual literature so you willunderstand the dire situation our country is really in because of Communist propoganda, subversion and sabotage?

They have hundreds of Red Front organizations fromwhich traitorous or ignorant Americans aid them in their conspiracy to overthrow our government by force and violence, as do apathetic and indifferent people who don't bother to vote each time, and won't do patriotic work with Right-wing groups who are struggling valiantly to save our Churches, Schools and our Constitution from being taken over or shrivel scuttled by theCommunists!

Fromthe L.A. EXAMINER Editorial, 2/22/58: "There are at least 1,000,000 Americans who are doing the subversive workof the Kremlin inthis country. Some unwittingly.. Many of these people would be aghast if they understood the fullimport of their activities and the full extent towhichthey benefit the Communist activity. Wittingly or not, these dupes of Communism put up themoney and sponsor theorganization to undermine freedom in America."

J. B. Matthews, one of the foremost authorities on Communist conspiracies in the U.S., writes in "Red Infiltration of Theological Seminaries in the U.S., "There are 177 Protestant Theological Seminariesin this country. At least 54 of these have been infiltratedby theCommunist Front apparatus.. The largest single group supporting the Communist apparatus today is composedof PROTESTANT CLERGYMEN!!!

Former F.B.I. agent, Herb Philbrick said: "It is no accident that your church is the number ONE target of theCommunist conspiracy today. We're losing the fight with Communism. There are morenames of ministers than any other profession on the list of Communist supporters inthis country."

In AMERICAN MERCURY MAGAZINE, 10/57, J. Edgar Hoover wrote in "The COMMUNISTS are USING OUR CHURCHES", "I confess to a realapprehensionso long as Communists are able to secure MINISTERS of the GOSPEL to PROMOTE THEIR EVIL WORK".

To realize the vast inroads the REDS have made, consider the L.A. HERALD-EXPRESS headline of June 30-58: "California LOYALTY OATH Ruled Out by U.S. Supreme COURT. The oath restricted all tax exemptions to those whodo not advocate the violent overthrow of theGovernment. Attorney A.L. Wirinof theAmerican Civil Liverties Union, about 90% of their clients are out and out Communists) had this to say: "This decision invalidates California's loyalty oath requirements as to ALL taxpayers in the state. It directlyaffectsover 35,000 churches and more than a MILLION veterans. It establishes the precedent which could nullify ALL loyalty oaths". Wirin predicted that the First UnitarianChurch would receive a tax refund fromthe County of approximately $30,000.

The UNITED NATIONS is crawling with REDS: UNESCO'S 12 top jobs are held by Reds; FederalAid and the N.E.A. are forcing UNESCO into our Public Schools, and government waste and FOREIGN AID bankrupts us! WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT???

Fluoridation

In January, 1959, several hundred physicians and psychiatrists attended a three-day conference at the University of California Medical School to discuss the effects of newly developed drugs on the human mind. On January 26, Aldous Huxley, renowned British writer, spoke to the group, predicting that in the very near future dictators will be using drugs to control people. Dictators now know that guns and police clubs and prisons are inefficient means of controlling people and keeping them from revolting against authority. The efficient way is to give the whole population drugs — feed them happy pills — to erase the spirit of freedom from human consciousness. Then, everyone will love his servitude and gladly do what the ruling authorities order.

Mr. Huxley said that this "technology of mind manipulation" is already a reality in communist countries — and that we in America, "are being pushed along in the same direction already, amidst all the trappings of freedom, and the end will be our robotism. Our dictators will instill in us an enormous euphoria, so that it will be psychically impossible to dream of revolution. It is happening now; there isn't much time; and it is terribly important for people who understand this area to be aware of the need for resistance."

Poultry Raiser Wants an Answer to "What's My Crime?"

WASHINGTON, —(UPI)— A poultry farmer who has run into so much trouble with the Government he may move to Australia told Congress today his only crime was using his land to grow crops.

Stanley Yankus, 40, Dowagiac, Mich., took his fight against the "tyranny" of the Nation's wheat program before a House Agriculture Sub-Committee.

He testified that his refusal to stop growing wheat for his chickens in defiance of Government acreage restrictions, has resulted in fines and costs totaling $4,562 since 1954.

"What is my crime?" he asked. "I did not sell any wheat so my offense is not selling wheat. Then my offense had to be using land for producing crops."

Yankus said he was not fighting for the right to grow wheat but for "the right to own property." "If I am forbidden the use of my land, then I do not own it," he said. "My rights do not extend much beyond the right to pay taxes. This is tyranny."

The "wheat rebel" conceded that he was outnumbered in his battle for his rights against Federal farm policies and said in advance of his testimony that he and his family probably would sail for Australia this summer.

"I don't want to take a defeatist attitude about this fight of mine," Yankus said. "But the Agriculture Department isn't going to abandon its controls, and when my 40 acres of wheat pops out of the ground this spring the Government probably will seize my farm machinery. They're already taken everything but the farm itself."

Yankus, Chicago raised son of Lithuanian immigrant parents, has vowed to seek a new home in Australia if Congress doesn't refund the $1,701 seized from his bank account. That was to satisfy part of the $4,562 in fines and penalties levied on him since 1954.

Yankus said he made application for his passport two days ago and expected to contact an auctioneer soon as the first step to selling his 100 acre farm.

The Australian Government already has granted Yankus, his wife and three children permission to settle in Adelaide, Australia.

"It is not that I don't like America," Yankus declared. "This country has the finest Government in the world, under the Constitution. But Congress has abandoned the Constitution and taken away a man's right to use his own land. There is no other alternative except to leave."

Yankus said he never has accepted a Federal subsidy.

may adopt is not important 'but they are all anti-American, against capitalism and are based on the doctrines of "arxism." He said the Communist Party and the NAACP 'stand hand in hand' aimed at wrecking the security of the U.S.A."

From a speech by Benjamin J. Davis, former N.Y. City Councilman, and Chairman of the Negro Commission of the Communist Party, delivered before the Party's National Committee meeting in New York, October 23-24, 1956: "The Significance of the Negro Question Today - It is the desire and destiny of the American Communist Party to enter more fully into this historical process, without reservation, to help all these walls to come tumbling down. And NOW: ... The organizational center of this movement is the NAACP."

From the May 1955 issue of "POLITICAL AFFAIRS," a Communist publication (so stated by the Committee of the Judiciary of the U.S. Senate, Dec. 21, 1955); an article by Wm. Z. Foster, p. 42: "The main thing, however, that we must remember is that improvements in theoretical and tactical measures will avail us but little if we do not at the same time build the Communist Party and greatly increase its activities on all fronts in the fight for Negro rights . . ."

From an article by Andrew Stevens in the same issue of "POLITICAL AFFAIRS," pp. 64-65: "This work must be carried on among the white workers in the shops, unions, committees, people's organizations, work for which white Communists are largely responsible ... - the wide-spread movement for Negro rights in the trade-unions, which is developing through a variety of forms -- FEPC committees, Fair Practice committees, Anti-Discrimination, etc."

From the 1947 Report of the California State Senate Un-American Activities Committee, "Behind the FEPC" - p. 48: "Those who have read the Committee's previous reports will have little difficulty in determining the character and purpose of the so-called Fair Employment Practices Act. The Communist Party had inspired it and the Communist Party was determined to find arguments, whether they existed or not, in support of the proposition. The Communist steering committee had to find terrorizing incidents in order to mobilize racial minorities into a frenzied stampede at the polls in November of 1946. If the needed incidents in question were not in existence, The Communist Party was prepared to manufacture them.

"It should not be necessary to add that the proposition was deliberately designed to create racial frictions and agitation, rather than to remedy such discriminations between ethnical groups as actually existed."

"A SOVIET AGENT REPORTS ON HIS MISSION"
(From National Review, Jan. 31/59. P. 474)

To: THE PRESIDIUM
From: A.I. Mikoyan
Subject: Report on U.S. PSYCHO-MORAL PROBING OPERATION. (excerpts)

HUNGARY. My observations verify that for U.S. OPINION, the 1956 Hungary uprising has been successfully liquidated. Refugee pickets failed to win cooperation from any native groups, and were repudiated by All public authorities. The conclusion is reinforced by public indifference to the BANG-JENSEN DISMISSAL from the UN Secretariat.

CHINA. In spite of the persistence of our good friends (of petition to new Congress by Mrs. ROOSEVELT et al), there is little progress along the line: Recognize China, Admit to the UN; and not much along the "TWO CHINAS" perspective. U.S. opinion, hardened by the Quemoy action, has been disturbed by the People's Commune.

Thesis: Communist China is an established, developing nation that must be admitted to the world community.

Synthesis: The U.S. must come to terms, on the Chinese question, with Soviet Russia.

PRESS. There was TOTAL cooperation from PRESS, RADIO and TV. WE CAN MAKE WHATEVER USE WE WISH of the U.S. COMMUNICATIONS SYSTEM, and can control quantity and quality of coverage as well as content focus.

Recommend.. We reject proposal of the U.S. PARTY to expand the direct PARTY-CONTROLLED PRESS and TV facilities. This would be a waste of rubles.

LABOR. The attitude of the Reuther-Carey wing of the labor leadership was openly cordial, and their policy position is satisfactory. However, McCarthyism remains intrenched within the AFL-CIO, symbolized by the chairman Geo. Meany, whose anti-Soviet ideas are fed by the renegade Jay Lovestone (cf. Meany's public refusal of Eric Johnston dinner invitation).

Recommend.. We will expand the campaign to isolate Meany, and to get Reuther accepted by the labor movement and the public generally as "THE leader of American Labor." A correct slanting of congressional hearings can do much to this end.

POLITICAL PARTIES. Parallel to the labor situation, responses to the tour showed a strain of McCarthyism (Bridges, Dulles, Judd, Nixon) still present in the Republican leadership; but a satisfactory Reuther ish attitude in the center and left of the Democratic leadership (Stevenson, Humphrey, Gov. Brown).

BUSINESSMEN. There was No resistance from a single active representative of the industrial and banking strata. PROVOCATIONS and INSULTS, which I introduced experimentally into speeches before business groups met only ACCEPTANCE, SMILES and APPLAUSE. It is possible that, by a dialectical negation of the negation, the CAPITALISTS will BRING COMMUNISM to America.

Recommend.. "OPERATION MILLIONAIRE" will be advanced to top priority. We'll develop at least 2 more active-business propagandists, supplement to Cyrus Eaton, one of them a Republican.

METROPOLITAN AREA GOVERNMENT (WORLD GOVERNMENT)??

The greatest danger facing Los Angeles County today is that of "Metropolitan Area Government." As the following very fine editorial from the Pasadena Independent Star-News of May 25, 1958, makes clear, we may be so dazzled by its propaganda of economy and efficiency that we find ourselves trapped before we realize what it is. In essence it is a long-range, well-designed plan to bring about Totalitarian World Government from the local level up, instead of from the top down--erasing City, County, and State boundaries on the way.

IT'S TIME TO TALK SENSE -- AND TO BE ON GUARD!

Pasadena again has shown the way.

City Manager Don C. McMillan's preliminary budget calls for no increase in the city's $1.04 tax rate.

Ten years ago, the city tax rate was $1.12 -- 8 cents higher.

In this decade, Pasadena has been beset by all of the inflationary problems which have plagued the City of Los Angeles and the County of Los Angeles, where tax rates have constantly gone up.

Why should Pasadena alone have shown the way?

Cost of materials, supplies and services Pasadena must purchase have gone up in these 10 years, just as they have in Los Angeles. Municipal wages and salaries here have reflected the same upward push. And Pasadena also has grown tremendously.

Yet while Pasadena's tax rate has been falling, or holding steady, Los Angeles city and county's have gone sky high.

There is a moral here: Efficient government, rather than "super-government," brings tax rates down.

Over in Los Angeles, the propagandists are forever beating the drum for super-government.

Super-government for all of Los Angeles County, run of course by the dominant interests within the City of Los Angeles.

Whatever the economic or governmental problem may be -- the very real one of high county taxes, the rush to Suburbia which cuts retail sales in the Los Angeles downtown business district, or stifling freeway traffic -- there's one answer.

It's super-government. Not simpler government.

To illustrate: Not too long ago the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce sponsored a Metropolitan Area Government Symposium. Imported to speak, among others, was an expert from Toronto, Canada, where local boards of education, as one exemple, have abdicated even the right to raise local school funds. An area-wide, overall governmental "authority" does this for them.

Another speaker was the manager of Dade County, Florida, whose problems do not bear the slightest resemblance to those in Los Angeles County.

Sense was spoken, particularly by County Council Hal Kennedy of Pasadena. Sense in terms of doing the simple, logical things which stretch the tax dollar. Not the grandiose things which prove more costly in the end.

The symposium got nowhere.

But this forum's subject, "Metropolitan Area Government," was widely publicized. Propagandized is a better word!

Why?

Once more to illustrate the "hard sell" of this Metropolitan Area Government come-on: Everyone wants taxes to come down, not go up. Or at least to hold steady as Pasadena's do.

How can the local tax dollar be stretched?

To learn this, the County Board of Supervisors, with a nudge from the City of Los Angeles, brought into being a committee of 16, since being expanded to 165 members. When appointments are complete there will be one representative of each city in the county, 60; five from the City of Los Angeles, five from the county, with 95 citizens thrown in for good luck.

Remember, the purpose of this study, which will require months, or years, is to recommend how to make tax dollars go further.

But what is the name given this committee? It's the "Metropolitan Area Government Study Commission."

Why METROPOLITAN AREA GOVERNMENT study commission? If economy in use of tax dollars is its true objective, why not have named it the COMMISSION TO STUDY EFFICIENCY IN GOVERNMENTS? An unsticked inquiry into efficient use of tax dollars might come up with quite a different answer than metropolitan area government!

This is not to state that the Commission -- when its membership is complete -- will be either prejudiced or stacked.

But this is to state that the commission's name, METROPOLITAN AREA GOVERNMENT study Commission, is of direct propaganda value to those who, for their own good reasons, are straining to make the City of Los Angeles synonymous with the County of Los Angeles.

The commission's name fits their propaganda purposes. In the months, probably years of study ahead, every news story will carry the "Metropolitan Area Government" slogan, regardless of what facts the story contains.

The name is directional. It will stick in the minds of the public. Super-government, the cure of all evil. This propaganda should be recognized by the citizens of Pasadena -- content with a city tax rate that has dropped 8 cents in 10 years -- and other well-run cities of the San Gabriel Valley. It's time to talk sense. Not super-government. And to be on guard!

GOP 'KINGMAKERS' IN THE NORTHEAST HAVE STAKE IN SOCIALIST SPENDING

Reprinted from the Charleston, S.C. News and Courier.

Senator Barry Goldwater (R.-Arizona) has assailed what he calls an effort within his party to "stifle all conservative voices." The outspoken senator, who repulsed an all-out attack by Walter Reuther's forces in the November election, charged that the attempt, "is the work of some kingmakers in New York."

Citizens may ask: What does Sen. Goldwater mean? Aren't the powerful financial supporters of the Republican Party conservatives?

In our opinion, the dominant faction in the GOP, the Eisenhower Republicans of the Northeast and the people who put up money for them, is not conservative in the sense that Southern Democrats are conservative. Nor can their conservatism be equated with the conservatism of the Midwest.

True, the "Modern" Republicans do not want Big Labor" to control Congress and the White House. But they will not "slug it out" with the Reutherites. They prefer to support "me too" candidates who subscribe to some of the New Deal philosophy of the groups that are frankly socialist. They prefer a smiling face to a man of outspoken conservative views.

The smiling personality can be merchandized like breakfast cereal and sold to the public by a massive publicity campaign. This, of course, is the story of Dwight Eisenhower.

The financial power of the Northeast did not like Sen. Taft and his combative conservatism. They prefered a man who was without a political philosophy.

Why is this the case? The answer is that the forces that control the purse of the Republican Party in the Northeast are not opposed to all the Dealer programs. In fact, they have a tremendous stake in the continuance of foreign aid.

One doesn't hear of the great banks of New York, which specialize in foreign trade, opposing the giveaways. Many of the foreign aid dollars are spent for products manufactured by great corporations controlled in the Northeast.

Furthermore, these same elements are vastly expanding overseas investment. Foreign investment is in part a flight from a U.S. dollar of declining value and in part an effort to escape U.S. taxes and skyrocketing production costs.

Fifty years ago, the money power of the Northeast was firmly protectionist. It wanted to build a trade wall around this country. Today this same money power wants the walls leveled. Protection is obtained by vast government spending for defense and foreignaid and by investment overseas.

Sen. Goldwater declined to name the kingmakers at this time. But there is no questionas to who these kingmakers are. They are men such as Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York; John J. McCloy, former U. S. highcommissioner in Germany and now chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York, and John Hay Whitney, U.S. Ambassador to England andowner of The New York Herald Tribune.

These menand the element they represent ordain the internationalism of the Modern Republicans.

Unlike Sen. Goldwater and the conservatives of the South and West, they prefer to float on the tide of socialism, not to resist it at every step. The real victims of socialism are theAmerican middle class and the smalland medium size American corporations. The hughindustrial concerns can make adjustments to Dealer programs that the smaller firms cannot make. Thus there is a gulf betweenthe vast numbers of Americans who are conservatives and the "kingmakers" of the Northeast.

CONSERVATIVE: "I ama Conservative,and I am proud of being a Conservative. If included inthat definition is thepreservationof the rights of the people,then I am an evenstronger Conservative."...Sen. Barry Goldwater

WHAT A BUDGET CUT WOULD MEAN TO YOU!

If you have ever wondered what relationship the Federal Budget has to YOUR pocketbook, here's the answer: The Tax Foundation has figured out that FOR EVERY $1 BILLION DOLLARS LESS THAN THE GOVERNMENT SPENDS, TAXES COULD BE LOWERED TO PROVIDE A 20 DOLLAR TAX REDUCTION to the average family! Thus, if "grass roots" pressure could become sufficiently strong to reduce Federal Spending by ten or more billion dollars then you canfigure out now in actual dollars and cents exactly HOW MUCH MONEY YOU WOULD SAVE EACH YEAR! Let's cut out wasteful Federal Spending so that we can all get a TAX CUT!

RICHMOND (VA.) TIMES-Dispatch

Ross Valentine, writing inthe RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH STATES: "Actually, a political 'organization of opposition,' drawing its adherents from North as well as South, would not be a 'third'partyat all. It would be so in name only. It would be, in effect, a 'second-party' - resisting the unmistakable drift toward 'one-party, big government' whose false-labelfactions differ principally in come-ons they employ to winthe votes of millions whothinkthat 'freedom' means something 'for-free'.... The 'Constitutionalists' today warn the nationthat 'The great issue before the American people is the eventual control of our schools, our lives and the economy BY GOVERNMENT MONOPOLY concentrated in the hands of an unchecked court-of-no-appeal sitting as a LEGISLATURE".

WHAT MAKES NELSON RUN?

Upon his election, as a Republican, to the governorship of New York, Nelson Rockefeller was asked if he would consult former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey on appointments to important posts in his administration. He replied, "Most certainly." His first appointment brought back Dewey's budget director to Albany to fill the same position in his administration.

There is nothing surprising in this. Mr. Dewey, during the campaign, was referred to as "the manbehind Nelson." He, more thanm yone else, directed the maneuvers of 1952 which defeated Sen. Taft and brought about the present "modern Republican" debacle. He has been a KINGMAKER before; he intends to be one again.

But Mr. Dewey is not the only man--or woman, or organization--behind Nelson.

Beginning at the left, there is Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, "public and industrial relations consultant," with 19 uninterrupted years in posts under Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal and Harry Truman's Fair Deal. She was Rockefeller's liaison with the Liberal party in New York, which was formally committed to Gov. Harriman, and handled the contacts with Americans for Democratic Action, a left wing crowd that usually supports only New Dealers.

Tex McCrary, a public relations operator, was in on the ground floor. Mr. McCrary in 1952 organized a woozy pre-convention rally in Madison Square Garden to whoop up the Eisenhower candidacy. He also distinguished himself before the nomination by calling Robert A. Taft a "liar" on television. Recently he was in the news as public relations adviser to Bernard Goldfine, Sherman Adams' friend, during congressional hearings on vicuna coats and reciprocal favors.

McCrary, well in advance of the nominations in New York, informed Mr. Eisenhower by telegram that Rockefeller was the only New Yorker worthy to assume the heritage of "modern Republicanism." McCrary also happens to be public relations advisor to the New York Herald Tribune, which was taken over by John Hay Whitney, Mr. Eisenhower's ambassador to Britain, just in time to make it an all-out propaganda organ for Rockefeller.

To demonstrate that he has no favorites among the hybrid New York press, Rockefeller thru one of the family foundations, hired Richard Amper, Albany correspondent for the New York Times, to handle his press relations.

Altho McCrary leads a cheering section of his own, Rockefeller's public relations are entrusted to Frank Jamison, who is paid with money from another Rockefeller family tax exempt organization, the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, Inc. Rockefeller's chief political manipulator, Frank Moore, was Dewey's lieutenant governor, but resigned in 1953 to head still another tax exempt foundation established by Nelson Rockefeller, this one known as the Government Affairs Foundation.

By this time it begins to grow apparent that Rockefeller has a neat method of financing a political career at no great direct cost to himself. Nor should it be overlooked that a very significant part of the buildup came from a whole series of reports on such questions as foreign aid, defense policy, the economy, and education, issued thru the tax exempt Rockefeller Brothers fund.

Altho these were supposed to be a "public service" contribution, they won front page attention in almost all New York newspapers, and Nelson Rockefeller made television appearances to expound each of them. The magazine Newsweek reported that the cost to the fund was $500,000, tax exempt, of course.

The first of these reports was compiled by a group which numbered not a single Republican and only one non-political economics professor who for a time advised Eisenhower. All of the rest were Democrats, and most of them extreme New Dealers.

They were A.A. Berle Jr., former assistant secretary of state under Roosevelt, now chairman of New York's Liberal party; Chester Bowles, former Truman price administrator and ambassador to India, now elected a New Deal congressman from Connecticut; Gordon Dean, Truman's chairman of the Atomic Energy commission; Anna Rosenberg, Truman's assistant secretary of defense; Dean Rusk, assistant secretary of state to Dean Acheson; Oveta Culp Hobby, who served as a Democrat under Eisenhower after previous service under Roosevelt; and Robert Anderson, a Texas Democrat, now Eisenhower's secretary of the treasury.

Such is part of the crew that proposes to take over the Republican party. (George Meany, president of the triumphant AFL-CIO, calls Rockefeller a "dedicated, aggressive liberal," just to make things unanimous.) It has been remarked with some justice that if Rockefeller's forebears could have foreseen the doctrines which their fortunes are being used to promulgate, they would probably have spent them to eradicate these ideas before they had gained their present headway.

AFFAIRS OF STATE by Henry C. MacArthur from the Mountain Democrat, Placerville, Calif.

(CNS) -- Apparently California isn't the only state in the Union which sometimes has trouble in protecting the people's "right to know."

The Nevada State Journal, morning newspaper in Reno, reported in an editorial last week that Nevada's legislators are considering a bill, which has been given a "do pass" recommendation by its assembly ways and means committee, allowing only the posting, insteadof the publication, of a list of state claims.

"The fact of the matter is," the editorial says, "that newspapermen everywhere are bothered when official representativesof the state start passing legislation to hide the state's business from the public.

"WHEN THE CLAIMS list appearsin the CarsonCity paper, it is scrutinized by Capitol City residents-and by newsmen and others whoreceive the paper inallpartsof the state. If sole notificationis by posting inthe capitol building, it will get practically no scrutiny at all.

"The present law wasn't passed for the benefit of a newspaper. It was enacted to make certain the generalpublic had access to a bit of its own business. Practically shutting off from public view the listsof claims paid is an example of the constant c chipping away of the right of the citizenry to know what itsofficials are doing, and how they are spending public funds.

THE EDITORIAL also pointed out that generally, when newspapers criticize measures which cause fewer legal advertisements to be published, that the papers have ulterior motives in protecting their revenue sources. Only one newspaper in Nevada prints the listsinquestion, and the editorial says "furthermore, the CarsonCity paper will hardly be forced to discontinue operations for lack of this business."

Legaladvertising in almost any newspaper forms only a very small percentage of the totaladvertising space sold. Consequently, it is not the loss of a small amount of legal advertising which perturbs the newspapers, but the constant drive, in California at least, by civil service bureaucrats, to undermine the right of the public to know what's going onin government.

AND NEITHER is the situationconfined to California and its sister state, Nevada. One readsof attempts inalmost allthe statesof the union at various timesof efforts onthe part of government officials to close up the files.

Prabably the worst situation, however, is inthe federal government. Congressman John E. Moss, fromthe third district, California, has performed an excellent job during the past severalyears as headof a congressional committee whichhas uncovered scoresof instancesof useless and uncalled for coverups in the federal government's administration.

LITTLE BY LITTLE, the federal, state and local goverments are being opened up to the public. However, much remains to be done, and onlyconstant vigilance by the press and others interestedinopen government records, will result in keeping the right of the people to know aninalienable right.

Officers of the Wheat Penalty Defense Fund in Dallas have proposed the following resolution which they hope that organizations and groups of patriots in the numbers of millions in all 48 states will adopt, sign, and send to their senators and congressmen in Washington:

WHEREAS: The federal farm program is class-legislation, robbing the general public for the benefit of a special class; and,

WHEREAS: The program does not even help the whole class for which it is allegedly intended, but, rather, enriches a few big agricultural operators; and,

WHEREAS: Enforcement practices in the program deprive honest farmers of their constitutionally guaranteed, God given rights to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures, and to be secure against confiscation of their private property without just compensation, and,

WHEREAS: Federal courts, in order to sustain the unconstitutional Agricultural Adjustment Act, generally deny farmers their right to public trial by an impartial jury; and,

WHEREAS: The United States Supreme Court, without giving the defendant notice of impending action, without permitting hearings or arguments, and without even giving reasons for its own decision, summarily reversed Federal Judge T. Whitfield Davidson's decision in the Haley Wheat Penalty Case, on the same day that the Court agreed to hear extension arguments on appeals of confessed communist spy Rudolph Ivanovich Abel and thus shamefully insulting Judge Davidson, one of America's ablest jurists who has more education in American constitutional law and more experience on the bench than all Supreme Court Justices combined; thus revealing the Supreme Court's tender regard for communists and its utter disregard for the rights of honest patriots like Evetts Haley, Jr.; and thus revealing the Supreme Court's ignorant and arrogant contempt for the Constitution of the United States; be it therefore,

RESOLVED: That Congress sternly rebuke the Supreme Court for its defiance of liberty and justice, and enact legislation to curb the capricious tyranny of the Court; and, be it further,

RESOLVED: That Congress restore the inalienable rights of American farmers and save American taxpayers more than four billion dollars a year, by repealing the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as Amended; and be it further,

RESOLVED: That a copy of this resolution be mailed promptly to each of our representatives in Congress and in the Senate.

The article below is taken from California Farm Bureau Monthly, 4/1959.

"This Month's Policy Development Topic"

W H A T I S L I B E R T Y W O R T H T O Y O U?

Imagine if you will that one morning you are awakened before dawn. Uniformed men order you and your family off of your farm at gun-point. Trucks have come, they are loading up all your real property -- your farm equipment, farm animals, your household appointments down to the last pot and pan and article of clothing except for what you and your family are wearing.

You ask what is going to be done with your property. The answer you receive is "The Government needs it."

You and your family are herded to join other families in the community, then marched perhaps 30 miles to what will be your new home. During the long tortuous march, you try to help the little ones the old ones, as best you can.

At first glance, your new home looks like an army camp. Immediately you are separated from your family -- the men are housed in one set of barracks, the women in another, the children in still another.

From sheer exhaustion you fall asleep only to be awakened at 4:30 and ordered to the parade grounds where you will do calesthenics for an hour or so. A meager breakfast will be served to you right on the parade grounds -- you'll have 15 minutes to eat it. Then you will be marched off to whatever assignment has been made for your battalion. At noon, lunch will be brought to you on the job. You'll again have a 15-minute break to eat it. Then back to work until 7:30 that night when you'll be marched back to camp for dinner, back to work until midnight when you'll finally be allowed to drop into bed.

The next day's routine will be the same as will the day after, the week after, the month after, the year after. However, you will be paid -- $1.20 per month.

You cannot quit this job. If you try you'll be shot without a trial. There is no one to whom you can appeal.

You cannot visit your children. You will only see your spouse for a few minutes every two weeks.

Sounds like a nightmare? It's a factual description of the conditions under which 99% of the farmers in Red China are living. Every freedom, even human dignity has been subjugated to the government...to Communism, socialism, whatever you wish to call it.

Certainly there's not one of us who wants to live under this type of society. But are we doing anything to preserve the freedom we do have here in America?

Inroads are being made on our freedoms, not just as farmers but as citizens of the United States. Our rights and responsibilities are being eroded away. Not a whole block at a time -- you and I would notice that too easily -- but slowly.

There are many ways in which our liberty - and our American system of free choice - are being destroyed. These include erosion of states' rights, the breakdown of our system of checks and balances, the campaigns enticing you to shirk your responsibilities to others - "Let George Do It" - or Uncle Sam.

Our founding fathers set up a structure of government to protect the individual's dignity and his God-given rights. They were sure that the individual's dignity and liberty would be lost in an all powerful central government. They knew that big government would sooner or later become the all important thing, the people only the means of maintaining the big governments status. Our founding fathers were interested in the individual - you and me - so they set up a system of government with you and me in mind.

After reviewing every form of government, they decided upon a Federal republic of sovereign states. The state lines would be honored for political purposes without being barriers to economic progress. Certain powers would be delegated to a limited federal government. The nation would stand united. But the power would be derived from the people, and the usurpation or domination by government of the people's God-given rights would be prevented.

A constitution to set forth these fundamentals was written and was to be the law of the land. Under the constitution a system of checks and balances was set up including the legislative, judicial and executive branches of the government. The two house congress would initiate bills and pass laws, the judicial branch would interpret laws and administer justice, the executive branch would put laws into effect, report on the state of the nation and conduct foreign affairs.

The federal government would concern itself with providing for the national defense, operating a postal service and conducting foreign affairs.

To the states was given the responsibility of protecting health and safety, of conserving resources, operating schools and keeping all other powers except those not specifically delegated by the constitution.

Under this system, we did move towards the goals of our founding fathers - a classless society, devoid of the yokes of rulers, free from tyranny of any person, of any groups of persons, abundance for all.

Today most Americans are searching for and working for more of the better things in life. Each of us wants a good home for our families, good schools for our children, a meaningful Faith for ourselves and others. We want more good literature, music and art, more convenience and leisure, less drudgery, more tools and appliances. WE want to be respected as human beings. We want to earn the kind of income which will give us the higher standard of living we all hope for.

We want to earn this income honestly--in a manner that will retain for us the respect and admiration of our friends. But from experience, we know we can achieve this in the future only if we rely on the same basic source of our prosperity that we have in the past.

What has been responsible for our progress? It hasn't come from natural resources alone, or else India and Russia would have surpasses us long ago. It didn't come solely from a large population, or China would be wealthy beyond belief. It didn't come from government, otherwise any nation would be our match. And it didn't come from political parties--otherwise France with her two dozen or more could roll in wealth.

The proof seems clear. Although many factors played an important role in our progress, the greatest reason is this: Americans have been free--free to dream, free to plan, free to work, free to invest, to spend, to save; free to make the most of their opportunities, free to use the forces of nature. Americans have been free to release their energy, their creative power, their desire to be satisfied.

How much is this freedom worth to us today? As farmers we know we cannot continue to reap a harvest without working the land, improving it and reseeding it. We can't sit back and do nothing and expect to reap the benefits of freedom planted and worked for by our forefathers. We have the power to govern ourselves. The penalty for failing to accept our responsibilities in governing ourselves is to be ruled by inferiors.

We're not trying to be pessimistic. All we're trying to do is point out that we have the most ideal form of society ever realized on earth. Let's not lose it by complacency, by not facing facts, by shirking our responsibilities.

Here are some questions that need your answers:

To what extent are you letting your farm, your school, your county, your business community, your courts, even your legislature be run from Washington?

Are you contributing to a more centralized government by letting your representatives in Congress vote bigger and bigger appropriations? Plan more and more programs? Give the government more and more authority? Let it employ more and more people? Send checks to larger numbers of people and propose more (compensatory payments, etc.)?

What does the trend towards big government mean to you and your family? To your income? To your church?

Do you feel states' rights are important? Is the federal government preempting rights belonging to the states when it gives away money for education, highways, water projects? When it sets minimum wage and hour laws?

Do we need our system of checks and balances? Does it really matter if, instead of interpreting law, the Supreme Court makes law? That instead of administering justice, it looks to popular trends?

Does it really matter that Congress instead of initiating laws, waits for others and that it makes laws with vague meaning, leaving it to the executive branch to spell it out with "executive orders and rulings?

Does it really matter that the executive branch writes "orders" which have the effect of legislative and judicial policy? That instead of waiting for Congress to establish basic policies, it proposes and lobbies for its own policies?

Are you working to see that Congress, the legislature, the courts, political parties, even the sheriff, police and civil affairs are run by representatives of all interests or are you letting it be done and dominated by one interest?

Is it easier for you to shed your responsibility when things are done for you? By making believe the other fellow pays? By making you feel that you and your neighbors can't do anything anyway? By ridiculing those who wish to conserve true values--those values man has searched for since the beginning of time--as "reactionary"? By promising social security and health programs, instead of encouraging you to plan your own retirement?

Is Liberty Worth enough to You to Work for It?

There are still two avenues through which we can attempt to effect a remedy--legislation and local action. Both mean a lot of hard work.

By keeping close check on our legislators, we can keep state laws valid unless specifically in conflict with constitutional federal law; we can clear up what Congress means, when its intent runs counter to a Supreme Court decision; and we can get Congress to assume proper responsibility and pass laws showing clearly its intent.

A whole program of local action should be planned by every county farm Bureau. This program should make it easy for every member to work hard at the job through his own organization. The building of such a program of action requires study of the problem, understanding of the policies, breaking down the job into "projects", assigning specific people to work at specific tasks, encouraging the committee workers from time to time, and saying "thank you" when the job is done.

Farmers have the most to lose in this fight for freedom--because we always have cherished our independence. We are the first targets of those who want to "take over." If those who will, of the 1,600,000 Farm Bureau families, act now, we can continue to reap a harvest of freedom. Will you help?

Hedda Hopper Speaks: The famous columnist Hedda Hopper, upon reading the accounts of the filing of the petition to impeach the Supreme Court of the United States, wrote the following letter to the Los Angeles Times, one of the three largest newspapers in America. Miss Hopper writes regularly for the Times. Here is what she said: "Congratulations to Mrs. Opal Tanner White, spokesman for the Petition to Impeach the Supreme Court at Washington, D. C. The petition contained foor-long pages titled 'Impeach Warren,' and charts showing how the present members of the court balloted on issues involving Communism. That is a woman with courage and I hope the petition gets somewhere. The decisions handed down by the Earl Warren and Felix Frankfurter group are, to me, the worst ever made since the court was first founded. How can we praise the Commies on one hand and curse them on the other? The court's decisions open the doors of our prisons faster than we can shut them on those found guilty. Now if someone can prove that many of their decisions are unconstitutional, we will be getting somewhere." The 1500 foot petition filed and signed by people in every state in the Union calling for the impeachment of members of the Supreme Court, is now the responsibility of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives. What is YOUR representative in Washington, D.C. doing and voting?

One dollar out of every five collected in income taxes in the United States is donated to foreign countries. Wise observers believe that our unemployment problem in the United States is due to our exhausting our national resources on aliens instead of investing investing it constructively in favor of American welfare. The national debt of the United States exceeds the combined national debts of all the nations of the world. Some of the nations to whom we are donating money are reducing their national debts with money we borrow and donate to them.

The bankruptcy of the State of Michigan has revealed to the political leaders of the Nation that irresponsible demagogues must go and must not be allowed to increase their control over national affairs. In Michigan all sources of credit have dried up and public employees and school teachers are being paid with monies collected from civic minded citizens and corporations who are paying their taxes one year in advance in order to keep the State Government from completely falling apart.

"Mental Health and World Citizenship" "The Principles of Mental Health cannot be successfully furthered in any society unless there is progressive acceptance of the concept of World Government."
From a pamphlet circulated by the National Mental Health Association.

This means they intend to put an end to the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights and obliterate the sovereignty of the United States of America.

Cancel the Constitution and Its Amendments for Rule by Dictatorship, and anyone opposing, that is not thinking as the majority are called: 'insane' according to their pronouncements. That much of this subversive activity was nurtured and permitted under the regime of the New Deal and Fair Deal administrations is plain to perceive. The Federal Register, as exposed by The Farmer's Voice, Wooster, Ohio; states "The Federal Register, is the daily paper of the Executive Branch of our Government. It was authorized by Congress July 26, 1935. It enables any Department or Special Agency of the Executive Department to make an administrative law specifying fines and penalty by just publishing this statement in the Federal Register, signing and noting the exact minute of the day it becomes law. It was part of the Roosevelt New Deal and the main part on which its whole enforcement hinges. Congress violated its trust to the people and wished this curse upon the American people, now it's up to Congress to rid us of this Unconstitutional organ of Dictatorship. The Federal Register Rules and Regulations which have the force of law are made by Governmental employees many of whom wouldn't have the slightest chance of being elected by the people in any election, yet they have become the ruling class over all Americans."

"I will not turn my back on Alger Hiss." Dean Acheson, Secretary of State under President Harry S. Truman.

"In 1956, after he saw the play "Thieves' Paradise", Congressman Usher L. Burdick decided to personally investigate the charges in that play that the U. N. is an INTERNATIONALIST - COMMUNIST death-trap for U.S.

"The most startling of all the charges was that secret agreement between Alger Hiss and Molotov whereby the post of Chief of the UN Military Staff Committee was PERMANENTLY to be held by a Moscow Communist! Now, under the character, "little wars" to prevent Communist Aggression (such as Korea) are to be controlled by the UN, to be commonly known as "UN Police Actions." Thus, they are under the jurisdiction of the (Moscow Communist) Chief of the UN Military Staff Committee! GET THAT! All Communist aggressions are to be prevented by the Communist Chief of the UN Military Staff Committee!!

"Congressman Burdick's researches completely confirmed all those charges. He promptly published his findings in the "Congressional Record", and demanded that the UN be hauled up for a thorough (open to the public) hearing by the properly constituted Congressional Committee -- and he instituted a personal "crusade" to get his colleagues in the House of Representatives to join in that demand.

* * * *

(which specifically includes the Military Secretariat, officially designed as the 'War, Communications and Information Secretariat'). Mr. Vyshinsky simply spoke of an 'agreement' -- he said nothing of its binding quality, of the right of arriving at it, or the length of time it was meant to apply." (Last paragraph taken from the book IN THE CAUSE OF PEACE By Trygvie Lie.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"In 1956 Congress was on the verge of hauling the UN in for a hearing -- that double-talking, deliberating false state Department "official statement" killed that hearing....simply because we lacked DOCUMENTARY evidence of that "secret agreement". Well, now Trygvie Lie has provided that DOCUMENTARY evidence -- evidence that that "secret agreement" caused the U. S. to lose the first war in our entire history -- evidence that that "secret agreement" MURDERED 145,000 American boys in KOREA! evidence that the very existence of the U. S. is in the balance!.

"Now it is up to Congress to act -- to thoroughly investigate the UN -- and to unmask the traitors in our government who are deliberately shielding the UN.

"But Congress won't act unless "the people" demand that they act -- and the people won't DEMAND until they know what to DEMAND. Senator Jenner said: 'Our problem is to get the story to the people.' -- so that they will KNOW what to DEMAND.

"You can solve that problem with this tract! -- coupled with Tract No. one! "

The above is part of a tract put out by CINEMA EDUCATIONAL GUILD, INC. P. O. Box 46205, Cole Branch, Hollywood 46, California. Tract #1 is copied elsewhere in this truth package. Send them $2.00 for 100 copies of #1 and $2.00 for 100 copies of the above (of which we quote only a part).

OUR ABDICATING CONGRESS -- If Congress keeps on abdicating the powers prescribed and charged to it by the Constitution, its duties actually will be to convene in Washington, pass meaningless resolutions and econiums, draw their 20¢ a mile travel allowance -- and $22,500 a year each.

For five years now it has been allowing the left-wing U. S. Supreme Court, and the Communist-led NAACP to usurp its Constitutional duties and to pass laws, subversive and otherwise without even a mild protest such as a move to impeach. It has permitted brainwashed Federal Judges to threaten jail to state officials who threaten to enforce their state laws and the U. S. Constitution.

It has permitted, without protest, the "high court", which never in public esteem, to turn loose Communists, rapists, murderers, scofflaws and to tie the hands of the FBI in protecting our security and police departments in solving crimes of violence.

The emotional strife stirred by the unConstitutional acts of the Supreme Court, in resolving itself into the Republican Party's "Get back the negro vote" Committee, has obscured the 16 "laws" it has passed in the last three years, strengthening the Kremlin in its infiltrating processes.

It has also obscured the fact that the Congress has unConstitutionally (and therefore illegally) empowered the Executive branch to take over many duties of the Legislative. The vehicle by which the Roosevelt "New Deal" slipped this over on the "people's representatives" was the creation June 26, 1935, of a publication called the FEDERAL REGISTER.

Under this Act, any government department or independent bureau can make an administrative law specifying fines and penalties, by just publishing a statement of intent in the Federal Register. This is a usurpation of the Executive Branch into the duties of both the Legislative and Judicial branches.

Those checks and balances, written into the Constitution by its framers, have gone down the drain.

The Judicial branch has already usurped the most important powers of the Legislative not to speak of many powers granted exclusively to the Executive by the Constitution.

All this has been done since the House of Rockefeller began to brainwash each member of Congress during his election campaign, thru his own National or Congressional or Senatorial Committee.

Most members come to Washington with their minds in a fog over absorbing so much propaganda. They are easy prey for their party leaders, the White House or their National Committee.

Their foggy modus is well described by THE FARMER'S VOICE (Wooster, Ohio):

"The Congress has adopted a lazy and unconstitutional method of making laws. It just drafts a skeleton law which includes the phrase 'and for other purposes.'

"Then it is turned over to the shrewd (and some times Communists) lawyers of the Executive Dept to fill in the complicated details and penalties for disobeying any part of the rules and regulations set down by the Department.

"The Congress has no idea what most of these laws contain.

"When the Agricultural Adjustment Act was passed, Harold Ware's Communist Cell (See Morris A. Bealle's RED RAT RACE: $3.50, Columbia Publishing Co., Box 1623, Washington, D. C.) wrote the rules and regulations, made the definitions and set the penalties for raising wheat for one's own live stock and poultry -- when raised without an allotment, or when the allotment was exceeded.

"And it was these Communists who defined what wheat is in interstate commerce. The AAA administrative head wrote in a book that this was the plan to introduce the collectivist system of farming into this country!

"He said these Communist 'lawyers' were above such old fogey, Tory, reactionary stuff as oaths of office or other religious antiquities.

"They owed no allegiance to the USA, as patriotism was for the non-thinking.

They had a higher allegiance -- an allegiance to the Cause (Communism)."

This is but one of the many subversive acts that have been made possible by Congress' unthinking and stupid passage of the Federal Register Act, and all other acts ending in "and for other purposes."

"We face the possible supreme irony and tragedy that, under the guise of creating alleged social rights, we will so centralize Government, so nullify the 10th amendment, and so weaken the responsibility, rights, and powers of the States that all rights and liberties of our citizens will be so jeopardized by an all-powerful Government in Washington." -- Rep. August E. Johansen (Rep. - Michigan).

"I do not fear the small corps of subversives here in America so much as I do the uninformed; the self-seekers, and the disinterested." -- Agriculture Secretary, Ezra Taft Benson.

"Once a new tax is instituted, history shows that it dies hard, because the money has become a part of the budget, even though the original need for it has passed." -- Rep. Robert W. Hemphill (Dem. S.C)

"Ike has turned down request of rural co-operatives for a few million dollars to extend power lines into rural areas of the West... At the same time he has given $56½ million to Pakistan, and $30 million to Thailand for this purpose...A business group says it wants foreign (Rockefeller) aid cut 50%...Standard Oil's mouthpiece (Ike) says cut anything (even weaken our defense) but under no circumstances reduce their $4 billion development fund...Sen. Byrd says the Communist led NAACP gets $400,000 in tax exemptions every year which it uses to undermine our constitution and stir trouble for both blacks and whites in the South. Colorado convicted six Communist saboteurs.. Supreme Court turned them loose...Colorado convicted them again... watch the Supreme Court take orders from the Kremlin again...Democratic regional confab at Milwaukee endorsed Pinko Humphrey for President...spokesmen said anyone who could talk to Kruschev 8 hours is entitled to be our President...Can U top that?" -- American Capsule News, Washington, D. C., March 1959.

WASHINGTON: Tax-deductible contributions to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People came under fire. Senator Harry F. Byrd (Dem.) of Virginia, said he challenged legality of the deductions two years ago, still hadn't gotten a "direct answer" from the Internal Revenue Service. The deductions, he said, cost the U. S. $400,000 annually.

Nikita Kruschev told German Communists at the Leipzig Fair, "You should not take too seriously the treaties made with the Imperialists. Lenin, too, signed a peace treaty, after World War 1, that remained valid only so long as it proved necessary."

"This practice of borrowing bank-credit through our Federal (private) Reserve Bank system, by both our government and its political subdivisions as well as corporations and individuals, has created a staggering debt of $788,900,000,000 (nearly one trillion) which is $4,507.93 indebtedness for every man, woman and child in the U. S. A. as of January 6, 1959.

"Constant and ever-increasing of borrowing bank-credit increases the money supply much greater than production of real wealth.. hence the demand exceeds the supply.. and there are more dollars than goods, and inflation or higher prices and lower purchasing values of our dollars brings on a depression in an inflationary period." -- RIGHT, April, 1959.

This is your future under the United Nations - One World System. In a map, adopted in 1952 in London by the World Association of Parliamentarians For World Government, shows what alien troops would occupy and police the six regions into which the United States and Canada would be divided.

The ruling body or World Parliament would consist only of appointed members. It would reflect population strengths; so Asia would dominate.

There would be a world Directory, 8 zone directors and 51 regional directors. None of the zones or regional directors would ever serve in their own countries. So an alien would command troops stationed in the U. S. and through them enforce World Government law, and prevent Americans from "sheltering behind national allegiance." Russian and Mongolian would occupy most of the U. S. according to this map.

Life In A Red Commune (Red China's Idea of How to Run the World as now being done!)

Mao Tse-tung's "perfect society."

After a series of singing, dancing & lectures about the "bright life" to come, the people "petitioned" the local Communists to organize a commune--and turned over all their property to the new organization.

Work: 4:30 a. m. to midnight.
Food: 12 oz. of rice, 1 pound of sweet potatoes daily.
No Work - You Didn't Eat. If one member of family was sick - no food given to other members even though they worked.
Clothing rations but no money to buy clothes
Political meetings and study rallies took so much time, they could sleep only a few hours at night.
No holidays, no time for normal human life.

Concentration camps are supposed to be ready here in the U. S. to receive YOU!

Reported from Baghdad, Washington, Los Angeles, San Francisco. On the morning of July 14, 1958, three Americans met violent deaths on the streets of Baghdad--beaten, multilated and murdered by the mobs that roamed the city that day in a revolution-inspired frenzy of hate. The local soldiers made no effort to stop the mob. Within three weeks of the day the life was torn out of the three Americans, U. S. was doing business with Iraq's new leaders. Washington extended diplomatic recognition to the new revolutionary government. U. S. arms continued to be sent to Baghdad.

CAPITOL HILL -- To show you what a vicious circle big government can be: The postal-rate increases voted last year to cut down the Post Office Department's perennial deficity have now pushed other Federal agencies into the red. Mailing costs of the Agriculture and Treasury departments and of the U. S. courts have soared more than $3.7 million above original estimates for fiscal 1959 ending June 30.

Senator Jacob Javits has introduced a bill (S. 125) which would "authorize exclusion from the mails of matter relating to the solicitation of funds for...certain unlawful activities, "defined as "interfering with the execution of any federal statute or what the decree, order, judgment or mandate of any federal court..." Some of the Senator's constituents want to know if the law would prohibit the mailing of dissenting minority judicial decisions.

"The mounting inflation since 1933, and the collapse of fiscal responsibilitity in government, should convince any thoughtful conservative that "managed irredeemable money" is the road to totalitarianism, here as elsewhere, and that it is imperative that we find an effective cure. Unless someone has a better answer, restoration of the gold standard would seem the intelligent solution. When the people can demand gold for paper money; the government cannot long spend irresponsibly. If it does so, its gold holding will disappear and its borrowing power will end.

"How can we get back on the gold standard?

"The answer is obvious. Congress took us off the gold standard. Only Congress can again make our currency redeemable in gold.

"Of course Congress will not, of its own volition, restore the gold standard. Congress will always talk economy, and it may even set up another OPA to regiment us again as inflation gets worse. But it will not voluntarily restore the gold standard, for politicians take the course of least reistance--and today that means "just one more round" of inflation.

"The gold standard will be restored only if American citizens make it clear that they will drive from office all elective officials who will not face up to this issue promptly and courageously. This means either to make our currency redeemable in gold, or to legislate an alternative cure for inflation, if there be one. In the absence of such action, the bipartisan tactics of tranquilizing talk about economy and stabilizing the cost of living completely engulfed us." --National Review, March 28, 1959 (40¢), $8.00 per year. "Under the direction of an international transport union, a campaign of coercion has been instituted, with its main target the American-controlled foreign-flag vessles. Joe Curran's National Martime Union and the Seafarers International Union, along with the Longshoremen and Teamsters, are in the American wing of this campaign. What is the power of this line-up?

Adm. Emory S. Land, Chairman of the Maritime Commission:

"'They could starve this country in a month. Many years of dealing with Curran and his lieutenants brought me to telling them flatly and face to face that their policies and methods were endangering the future of their members. Oddly enough, in private they agreed with me. Do they want to kill the goose that lays the golden egg? When European interests are campaigning against all the major shipping policies of the United States, this NMU-SIU diversion constitutes a stab in the back.'"

Newsweek, March 30, 1959

SUPREME COURT, COMMUNISTS AND THE NAACP--The one-time impression that "the Supreme Count follows the election returns" is a dead issue. Today it follows the Communist Party. CN (Sept 27 last) cited 16 separate "decisions" of the USSC in the last three years which strenghtened the Communist infiltration set-up and tied the hands of the FBI and committees of Congress in preventive work.

The Commies were 30 years ahead of the "court" in stirring up racial troubles in the South. A recent hearing by a Florida legislative committee heard some amazing testimony, under oath, by Dr. J. B. Matthews, onetime ace investigator for the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Excerpts:

Forty-five negro heads of colleges in the South were found by the HUAAC to have 291 separate affiliations with Communist-front apparatus.

The Federal and National Council of Churches of Christ are notoriously red. Of the 29 signers of the official (organization) book, 11 have records of affiliation with Communist or pro-Communist organizations.

The Communist Party has organized 20 fronts for negroes in the South; with high sounding names. If one name doesn't suit a prospect, he has 19 other names to choose from.

Dr. Matthews (still under oath) gave the Committee the names of 46 national officers of the National Assn for the Agitation of Colored People who have many citations as Communist front members against them in records of the HCUAA and Senate Internal Security group. He gave the complete and exact Communist activities of each.

Just to name some of the most prominent: Roy Wilkins (NAACP's executive secretary) seven citations; Ralph J. Bunche (director) 12; Lewis S. Gannet (vice pres) 26; Frank Graham (Committee of 100) 37; John H. Holmes (vice pres) 35; Eleanor Roosevelt (director) 56; G. Bromley Oxnam, DD, 36; Frank Kingdon (former FDR ghost writer) 19; William Lloyd Imes (vice pres) 29; Mordecai Johnson (president, Howard (negro) University) 14; Robert K. Kenny (lawyer for NAACP) 101; Herbert H. Lehman (board of directors) 9; Max Lerner (committeeman) 42; Archibald MacLeish (committeeman) 108; A. Philip Randolph (vice president) 38; Arthur B. Spingarn (president, NAACP 4; Channing H. Tobias, (chairman of the board, NAACP) 43; W. J. Walls (vice president, NAACP) 34. Need any more names be given?

During the military occupation of Little Rock, a Nashville newspaper published a story from its on-the-spot correspondent, that the NAACP had to pay the parents of the nine children who applied for admission to the Central (white) High School to get them to go.

The children themselves wanted to stay in their own brand new Harding High School which had facilities the white school couldn't equal. The state chairman of NAACP stated more than once to the press that she had to visit each child each morning to "give it a pep talk" to get obedience to the will of the NAACP.

PARALYSIS

Tom R. Hutton, a colonel in the U. S. Air Force, Retired, is the head of an organization called SPX Research Associates.

SPX is a cryptic abbreviation for "Soviet Principle Ten."

Colonel Hutton believes that an essential element of communist warfare for conquest of the world is paralysis of the enemy - infiltrating his institutions, corrupting the streams of public thought, and subverting his governmental establishment, for the purpose of paralyzing him into inactivity: dissipating his will to resist communism, and destroying the legal weapons which he might otherwise use to protect his society against communist conquest.

Since 1943, while still an intelligence officer in the Air Force and after his retirement, Colonel Hutton has studied Soviet application of this principle of paralysis.

His conclusions are startling.

In February, 1958, Colonel Hutton's SPX Research Associates submitted to the Internal Security Subcommittee a staff study in support of Senator Jenner's proposed bill (Senate 2646) to limit the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.

"Colonel Hutton's staff study alleges that the Supreme Court of the United States has been used as an effective instrument of communist world conquest. It has performed this service to communism with a series of decisions which have paralyzed America's efforts to investigate, expose, and prosecute the communist conspiracy in America.

To illustrate the effectiveness of the Soviet principle of paralysis, as an essential element of world conquest, Colonel Hutton describes the present situation in these words:

"For 15 years, we have ignored the basic truth of Sun Tzu's 2,000-year-old warning: 'Supreme excellence consists in breaking the enemy's resistance without fighting.'

That is what our global enemy has been doing to us."

The above was taken from the Dan Smoot Report, Monday, June 23, 1958 ($10.00 yearly, Box 9611, Lakewood Station, Dallas 14, Texas.

We proceeded to obtain a copy of this (now) rare report and to report it. It is too important to be kept from the general public.

The Supreme Court

An Instrument of Communist Global Conquest

The attached report was filed with the Committee on the Judiciary of the U. S. Senate during the 85th Congress, Second Session, by one Col. Tom Hutton of the SPX Research Associates.

SUPPRESSED DOCUMENT - SPX

Editor's Note: The report which we reprint here was filed with the Committee on the Judiciary of the U. S. Senate during the 85th Session of Congress by Colonel Tom Hutton of the SPX Research Associates.

Appendix IV (Report of SPX Associates) was originally published as a 16-page supplement to the hearings on Senate Bill 2646, pertaining to the "Limitation of Appellate Jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court."

Colonel Tom Hutton, of the SPX Research Associates, who presented the Report to the Senate Committee, contacted the United States Printing Office to obtain quotations for more copies. Under date of April 3, 1958, the Superintendent of Documents advised that the estimated cost would be $144.81 for the first 500 and $4.12 for each additional 100 copies." After an attack on the document by Senators Hennings and Watkins (suggesting suppression) the following advice and quotation was received from the Superintendent of Documents, under date of April 24, which reads, in pertinent part, as follows:

"Since our letter of April 23 we have been advised that, in the event a reprint is made, all of Part 2 of the Hearings, including Appendix IV, should be printed and bound as a single unit, and that neither volume should be priced or sold separately.

"It would, therefore, be necessary that any reprint ordered from this Office be made in accordance with this instruction. We could reprint Part 2 of the Hearings, with Appendix IV included as an integral part, at an estimated cost of $3,808.86 for the first 500 and $135.49 for each additional 100 copies."

"Burial" in a voluminous report, for all practical purposes, becomes "suppression." Could there be certain persons high in government who do not wish to face facts?

I. INTRODUCTION

The United States Supreme Court as an instrument of the Communist global conquest is a concept abhorrent to loyal Americans.

Yet the situation, the documented record, and the Supreme Court's peculiar constitutional capabilities made this study inevitable in the earliest days of paralysis as principle of Soviet global warfare. Primary phases of the study were undertaken 12 years before the introduction of Senate bill 2646.

Since 1945 standing and special committees of both Houses of the Congress have adduced an overwhelming bulk of evidential material describing:

(a) How departments of the executive branch in this and other free governments have been, are, and may be employed, however unwittingly, for intermediate objectives of the Communist global conquest.

(b) How even the process of the legislative branch in free governments may be used to paralyze persons, agencies, and operations threatening Communist objectives.

(c) How international communism, in coordinated global pressure patterns, attains its objectives through the very agencies and institutions of free governments marked for destruction, if, as, and/or when the Communist global conquest should become fait accompli.

As shown in subsequent sections of this study, it would be dangerous to assume that the United States Supreme Court is more immune to the pressures and techniques of the new warfare than are the executive and legislative branches of the American Government.

The situation and record suggest the opposite.

II. SCOPE

This study is concerned with the application of paralysis as a principle of Soviet global warfare, within the American governmental structure, through the United States Supreme Court.

We shall leave questions of law to the lawyers and constitutional matters to the constitutional experts. This study deals with the role of the Supreme Court in the war we are losing. It is predicated on documented facts, not all of them palatable.

For the purpose of this study, the loyalty, patriotism, and good intent of the members of the Court, as measured by their own standards of mental integrity, and within their individual intellectual limitations, are assumed. But:

Cumulative record of the Communist global conquest through paralysis demonstrates that the one realistic standard for measuring activities related to the destruction of free governments by international communism is the so-called Stalin standard, enunciated by Premier Joseph Stalin at Moscow, February 9, 1946, in his discussion of the forces in the "new war":

"The only difference between them is that some belong to the party, others do not. But that is a formal difference. The important thing is that both are furthering the same common cause" (H. Doc. 619, 80th Cong., 2d sess., p. 178).

III. QUESTIONS TO BE ANSWERED

In the interests of brevity this study seeks documented answers to these questions:

1. Does the global record of the Communist conquest by paralysis suggest the United States Supreme Court, by reason of function and character, as a likely fulcrum for pressure operations to paralyze anti-Communist forces in the American Government?

2. Do Supreme Court patterns fall within the established pressure patterns of the Communist global conquest by paralysis?

3. Do pronouncements of the United States Supreme Court reflect awareness of the nature, record, and techniques of the Communist global conquest?

4. Do recent decisions of the Court follow preestablished Communist line and contentions?

5. Have decisions of the Supreme Court assumed a pattern of aid and comfort for the enemy?

6. What is the practical effect of the Court's pattern of decision on the American will to resist?

For effective answers to these questions let us first consider: (a) the global situation, (b) the enemy, (c) paralysis as the essential element of Communist global conquest, (d) the standard pressure areas of paralysis as a principle of global warfare, and (e) enemy objectives — all with relation to the security and integrity of the American Government, and the effects of recent Supreme Court decisions thereon.

IV. SITUATION

For 15 years the free world has watched, helplessly, a costly global demonstration of the Clausewitz conclusion in chapter 2, book II of Vom Kriege: "The conduct of war has * * * no fixed limitations in any recognized direction."

For 15 years we have ignored the basic truth of Sun Tzu's 2,000-year-old warning: "Supreme excellence consists in breaking the enemy's resistance without fighting."

That is what our global enemy has been doing to us.

Cumulative situation maps of those 15 years show that, as of this date, Communist imperialism, variously camouflaged—

1. Has conquered more than a quarter of the earth's surface.

2. Has enslaved nearly half the planet's peoples.

3. Has taken over more lands, peoples, developed and undeveloped resources than all the conquerors of history combined.

4. Has done all these things without losses in land, sea, or air.

5. Still retains insidious offensive in unconventional warfare against which the free world, lacking concept in vital government areas, has no adequate plan or effective method of defense.

6. Threatens, interdicts, or flanks vital communications lines and economic arteries of the free world.

This situation, unparalleled in military history, is not a product of conventional warfare.

It results from unopposed enemy activation and application of paralysis as the 10th principle of warfare.

For convenience we call it SPX — Soviet principle 10.

Paralysis is the essential element of the Communist global conquest.

In service and out, our research unit has been documenting and analyzing the application of SPX as a principle of warfare since we observed its first activation in China, in 1943.

V. THE ENEMY

War's first axiom is "Know your enemy."

Our enemy is not Germany or Japan. He is not the British, or the frontier Indians — or even the South, as one might suspect from current massive pressure operations on the American people through the courts, the press, TV, and radio.

The enemy is imperialist communism — in whatever form.

That is by his own say-so; by his record; by plain logic; by his very nature and the nature of his objective.

His own ranking agents like Col Vladimir Petrov have spelled out the enemy's attitude:

"The Soviet Union, alone of the Great Powers, regards itself as being in a continuous state of covert warfare with the whole world outside the borders of the Communist empire."

Corroboration comes from thousands of pages of official investigations by the United States, Britain, Australia, and Canada in which the witnesses were former enemy officers.

Equally accurate is Gen. James A. Van Fleet's estimate of enemy objectives and operations:

"Soviet Russia intends to build one world of Communist states through a worldwide program of unconventional warfare."

The enemy has been identified as such by Churchill, MacArthur, Wedemeyer, Clark, Stratemeyer, Almond, Cooke, Chennault.

The enemy, his strategy and his objectives, have been proclaimed and spelled out by Lenin, Stalin, Manuilsky, Beria, Kaganovich, Molotov, Shepilov, Seminov, Zaroubin, Bulganin, and Khrushchev.

This massive bulk of official evidential material, available to all, as opposed to the Court's recent record of pro-Communist decisions, raises an alarming possibility and suggests a vital avenue of inquiry, collateral to question 3 and question 5 as previously stated in section III of this study:

In ignoring this mass of officially adduced fact, might the Court also be persuaded to ignore the basic law of survival by paralyzing specific legislation concerning its powers, or even paralyzing the national defense machinery which would be set in motion by a declaration by Congress pursuant to article I.8.11 of the Constitution?

Examination of this question is commended to the Congress, which alone has the constitutional power to inquire into it (art. III.2.2).

VI. HIS WAR

This total war we have been documenting for 15 years goes far beyond the concept of Ludendorff's Totale Kriege.

It is not a cold war.

It is the hottest war in all human history — most dangerous.

"Cold war" is a dangerous amorphism:

As long as we carelessly accept and use enemy semantics, definitions, and trick labels like "cold war," "peace," "peaceful coexistence," and "neutralism," we will continue to lose; he will continue to win.

His very revision of the ultimate objective tips the mitt on why warfare by paralysis has been successful. The ultimate objective of warfare is now the destruction of enemy will to resist in advance of perceptible hostilities."

By paralytic pressures exerted (a) through various branches of the governments of erstwhile target free nations and (b) through the governments of non-Communist nations friendly to them, he has effected the total conquest of China, Tibet, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, and East Germany.

By the same principle of warfare and the same standard pressure patterns he has effected practical partial conquest of Vietnam, Indonesia, Korea, Egypt, and Syria.

The principle of paralysis, not to be confused with the tactic of interdiction, is the essential element of the Communist global conquest.

As such it has produced a warfare more lethal than any the race has known.

VII. PARALYSIS

Like other principles of warfare, paralysis is a condition.

It is achieved by pressure.

Enemy pressures are applied in 13 standard areas.

The 10th principle's primary capability is the transient, partial, or total paralysis of any agency, force, movement, individual, or government that threatens the Communist global conquest.

Paralysis may be intensified, relaxed, suspended, or renewed, as required, by isolated or coordinated pressure operations in any one or more of its standard pressure areas.

Paralysis is the most flexible of all the principles of war.

Unhampered by terrain or logistics, it achieves the essence of simplicity in all Communist global operations

Its operations are the easiest and least expensive, whether on local, regional, or global fronts — strategic or tactical.

As General O'Daniel testified, concerning Kremlin's current campaign for control of our Pacific frontier, global communism employs all the standard nine principles.

The documented official record of the past 15 years shows how paralysis expands and enhances the capabilities of the old nine. It insures the ultimate in economy of force, surprise, mass, cooperation, the initiative and movement.

In addition it has a special capability in the area of government far beyond the nine.

Without the catalyst of paralysis the old nine could be employed only against an enemy.

Paralysis has the special capability of achieving Communist global objectives like the conquest of China, American defeat in Korea, status quo of the slave states, control of the Suez Canal, encirclement of the Panama Canal, disruption of NATO, and rehabilitation of Communist shock forces in America by multiple pressures on and through the very agencies and institutions of free governments which are marked for destruction if, as, and when the Communist global conquest should become fait accompli.

Records of this and other free governments (particularly the records of the American Congress as represented by various committees since the activation of paralysis as the essential element of Communist global conquest) offer a mass of documented evidence on how this special capability has been employed:

1. Through free governments to paralyze anti-Communist activities, operations, and positions of friendly governments (such as China).

2. Through one or more agencies of free government, to paralyze the anti-Communist activities of another agency of the same government, as in the current American area VII situation considered by Senate bill 2646.

3. Through an agency or agencies of free government to paralyze anti-Communist activity of individuals or forces of the same or Allied governments, as in the so-called Operation Abolition documented by the House Un-American Activities Committee publication under that title, August 11, 1957.

Detailed staff studies of pattern variations in specific cases of paralysis of agencies and/or individuals of free governments through agencies and/or individuals of free governments are available to the Congress and/or its committees.

VIII. STANDARD PRESSURE AREAS

For 15 years of unchecked conquest, the enemy has used SPX with its special capability, in pressured operations through as well as operations against, in all of its standard pressure areas. Of these, six starred (*) are of special interest in this staff study.

At least 1 volume for each pressure area, and 5 for area VII would be required to translate and document those operations since 1943.

The documented standard pressure areas are:

I. Agriculture

II. Arts and culture

III. Science*

IV. Information media:*

- Press
- Radio
- Television
- Films
- Magazines
- Pamphlets
- Organs
- Advertising

V. Education*

VI. Finance

VII. Government:*

- Executive
- Legislative
- Judiciary

VIII. Economics; from planning and production to market

IX. Labor*

X. Law*

XI. Medicine; all fields, including psychiatry.

XII. The Armed Forces

XIII. Religion

The United Nations is included in area VII.

Paralysis of MacArthur's forces in Korea, the Korean truce disaster of 1953, and the 1956 paralysis of free world aid to Hungarian patriots furnish complete laboratory samples for study in this area. Record shows that, except through the Supreme Court, the special capabilities of paralysis, as essential element of the Communist global conquest, are nowhere more effective than in and through U. N.

Current SPX situation maps show:

(a) Increasing VIII, IV, and V pressure in Latin America;

(b) IV, V, and VII pressure patterns around the Panama Canal:

(c) IV, V, and VII patterns on American bases abroad;

(d) I, IV, VIII, and IX flanking in Indonesia, Africa:

(e) VII in the United States per se, since April 1956, with particular reference to pressures on the legislative and executive areas, exerted through decisions of the United States Supreme Court.

IX. OBSTACLES TO COMMUNIST CONQUEST

From Lenin's Blueprint for World Domination to Khrushchev's blunt "We will bury you," the completion of the Communist global conquest has been predicated on the fall of America, "last citadel of capitalism * * * like an overripe fruit," without shooting war.[1]

So the paralysis of the American Government (and the American will to resist), in advance of perceptible hostilities, is the specific ultimate objective of the Communist global conquest.

And since the record shows area VII (government) is, in all operations of the Communist global conquest, the area of ultimate paralysis, so all the intermediate objectives in American area VII, which are steppingstones to that ultimate objective, have long been given target priorities, as shown by congressional documentation, Communist publications and pronouncements.

Intermediate objectives in the American area of government have been pinpointed by Moscow-controlled Communist publications, by Communist leadership, and by Communist-front organizations in the United States. Some are variants or subvariants of standard global pressure patterns with Comintern roots and Manifesto authority, only to the extent that special barriers to the Communist global conquest, not least of which is belief in God, having been natural outgrowths of American ideals, American constitutional processes, and American standards.

To what extent the United States Supreme Court, through recent decisions, has (in whatsover degree of ignorance) aided enemy objectives may be gathered from perusal of the following list of documented enemy objectives in American area VII.

No opinion is involved here. It is a matter of record.

X. INTERMEDIATE OBJECTIVES OF THE COMMUNIST GLOBAL CONQUEST IN AMERICAN AREA VII

Enemy's standing specific intermediate objectives in American area VII include:

1 Lenin's exact language: "First we will take eastern Europe, then the masses of Asia. Then we will surround America, the last citadel of capitalism. We shall not have to attack. She will fall into our lap like overripe fruit."

1. Dissension and public disorder arising out of superinduced racial conflicts.

2. Paralysis of States' antisubversive processes.

3. Paralysis of Federal antisubversive processes.

4. Rehabilitation of Communist and pro-Communist leadership and agencies in the United States.

5. Discreditation of Members of Congress and committees of Congress considered dangerous to Communist aims.

6. Political, economic, and/or professional destruction of effective opponents of communism, in public and/or private life.

7. Discreditation of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and its Director, J. Edgar Hoover.

8. Emasculation of immigration law provisions designed to prevent infiltration, espionage, and sabotage.

9. "Eventual extinction of the investigative powers of Congress in the field of subversive activities."[2]

10. "Creation of a general climate of opinion against the exposure and investigation of subversion."[2]

11. Increased interchange between the United States and Soviet on Soviet terms, at Soviet pleasure.

12. Status quo concessions from the United States concerning Communist slave satellites.

13. Softened American official attitude to facilitate reinfiltration and undisturbed subversion in all American pressure areas with special emphasis on areas III, IV, V, VII, IX, X, and XII.

14. Abandonment of NATO, SEATO, and Baghdad relationships.

15. Abandonment of American bases abroad and withdrawal of American forces to Zone of Interior.

16. American hands-off policy in the current Soviet campaign in the Caribbean area to interdict and internationalize the Panama Canal.

17. Package peace agreement with the United States, including "coexistence" and "disarmament," admission of Red China to the United Nations, abandonment of Nationalist China and the American Pacific frontier line.

With this frame of reference in mind, and with special reference to the first 10 objectives, short-form answers to the questions propounded in section III of this study are almost self-evident.

XI. QUESTION ONE

Question. Does the global record of the Communist conquest by paralysis suggest the United States Supreme Court, by reason of function and character, a likely fulcrum for pressure operations to paralyze anti-Communist forces in the American Government?

Answer. Affirmative.

(a). What Thomas Jefferson called: "* * * the noiseless, and therefore unalarming instrumentality of the Supreme Court" fits the pattern of: "destruction of the enemy will to resist in advance of perceptible hostilities."

(b) So does the Court's peculiar paralytic capability.

The power of the United States Supreme Court to paralyze, at a stroke, the antisubversive statutes, processes, and forces of 42 individual States, Alaska, and Hawaii, regardless of the constitutional reservations of State powers, and the expressed intent of Congress in the Smith Act,[3] has been demonstrated by the virtual collapse of State antisubversion agencies since the April 2, 1956 decision in Pennsylvania v. Nelson (350 U. S. 497).

The same peculiar capability applied against investigations by the Congress and prosecutions by the executive branch through the June 17, 1957, decision in United States v. Watkins and related pro-Communist decisions of the same date has paralyzed Federal agencies and processes on a national scale, has increased Communist immunity for the indefinite future, and has freed for such action as may be directed by the Soviet high command 59 convicted, specially trained enemy field officers, dedicated to the destruction of the American Government of which the Court is a branch.

(c) Only the Supreme Court, by virtue of its peculiar character, capabilities, and functions could have achieved such an overturn of government without violence.

XII. QUESTION TWO

Question. Do Supreme Court patterns coincide with, or follow, established pressure patterns of the Communist global conquest by paralysis?

Answer. Affirmative.

Documented comparisons include:

(a) Destruction of internal security from within (almost an invariable prerequisite) has marked pressure patterns of every government overthrown by the Communist global conquest in the past 15 years.

Of 10 cases bearing on internal security of the United States reviewed by the Court in the past 19 months, all 10 have been decided against enforcement of internal security laws and/or administrative regulations.[4]

(b) The element of paralysis, as noted in previous sections, is a common denominator of both patterns.

---

2 Language of the House Un-American Activities Committee paraphrase of Emergency Civil Liberties Committee in Operation Abolition, August 11, 1957, p. 2.

3 The Smith Act appears in title 18 of the United States Code, and section 3231 provides: 'Nothing in this title shall be held to take away or impair the jurisdiction of the courts of the several States under the laws thereof.'" — From the dissent of Justices Reed, Minton, and Burton in Nelson v. Pennsylvania.

4 Communist Party v. Subversive Activities Control Board, Pennsylvania v. Nelson, Fourteen California Communists v. U. S., Cole v. Young, Service v. Dulles, Slochower v. Board of Higher Education of N. Y., Sweezy v. New Hampshire, Konigsberg v. State Bar of California, Jencks v. United States, Watkins v. United States.

(c) Factors of frequency and intensity in standard pressure areas of Communist global conquest are strongest in culture, science, information, education, government, labor, law, and the armed forces prior to conquest.

Patterns and records of the Court reflect intensity of Communist and pro-Communist pressure in all the areas, since 1948, as noted in section XIV.

(d) The established Court pattern falls within the "use-the-courts, use-the-judges, use-the-Constitution" formula of Communist global conquest enunciated by Lavrenti P. Beria to American students at Lenin University.[5]

(e) Destruction of free governments at all levels is an essential element in the documented pattern of Communist global conquest.

The peculiar Court pattern, crystallized by the Slochower (V, VII), and the Nelson (VII) decisions, prompted former Associate Justice William F. Byrnes to note:

"The Communists cannot destroy this Union of States as long as we have 48 State governments which first must be destroyed. However, if they can make it impossible for the States to protect themselves they will make easier the task of destroying the United States."[6]

(f) Even as the pattern of the Communist global conquest has no counterpart in military history, so the pattern of the Court since 1956 has no counterpart in the history of American jurisprudence.

In its abandonment of stare decisis,[7] the Court has overruled 36 cases of its own body of case law. That is 7 more than the 29 previous decisions of the Supreme Court overruled in the 142 years from 1789 to 1932.[8]

(g) Voices and forces in American pressure areas II, IV, V, VII, IX, X, XII, and XIII with well-documented records of defending pro-Communist individuals and objectives, and attacking anti-Communist forces and individuals, have conformed to their established patterns by vigorous defense of the Court's pro-Communist decisions.

(h) No pressure pattern of the Communist global conquest is more familiar than that of well-placed Communist and pro-Communist advisors to free government policymakers and agencies having paralytic potentials.[9]

Revealing, then, but not surprising is the Court's acknowledgement of the influence of a notorious Swedish Communist, Gunnar Myrdal, as an "authority" in its May 17, 1954, segregation decision in Brown v. Board of Education (347 U. S. 348), which has triggered racial conflicts in the United States like those envisioned by Stalin in his "American Black Belt" program of Negro domination.[10]

As a conscious and effective instrument of the Communist global conquest, less subtle than Krishna Menon of India but more able than Ludwig Rajchman of Poland, this same Gunnar Myrdal is so important to Moscow that the Soviet made his appointment as executive secretary to the United Nations Economic Mission for Europe a condition of Kremlin participation.[11]

XIII. QUESTION THREE

Question. Do pronouncements of the United States Supreme Court reflect awareness of the nature, record, and techniques of the Communist global conquest?

Answer. Negative.

Any other answer would carry the implication of conscious treason by the Court. Hence the assumption established in section II of this study must be maintained, regardless.

In making the choice between treason and ignorance, it must be noted that the only factor more massive than the apparent ignorance of the Court is the overwhelming mass of evidential information re the Communist global conquest and its threat to American survival adduced over the years by official agencies of the other two branches of the United States Government.

Among the imponderables involved in the preassumed answer to this question is a documented variation of a familiar pressure pattern equation of the Communist global conquest which in this instance reads:

And the equation could be continued indefinitely to cover, in detail, the pattern of the Communist global conquest.

There is no such thing as coincidence in the patterns of the Communist global conquest — except such coincidence of pattern with pattern.

If rational processes can reconcile the stature, dignity, and constitutionally assumed omniscient responsibility of the Court with the evident ignorance, flagrant misconception, and almost incredible unawareness reflected by its pro-Communist pattern beginning with the 1954 decision on Brown v. Board of Education, then only one conclusion remains to Congress.

8 Congressional Record, 85/1, No. 103.26, p. 1897 (Stennis).

9 Documented examples are given in the equation found in the following section (XIII). Others included Harry Dexter White to Secretary Morgenthau in the financial debacle of China; Lauchlin Currie, White House secretary and, later, economic adviser to Colombia, now coming under area VIII pressures from Moscow. See IPR hearings, Morgenthau papers, and other publications of Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Internal Security.

10 The "Black Belt" plan which emanated from the Sixth World Congress contemplated confiscation of all white property, seizure of all government agencies in the Southern States, and merger of the States into a Negro Soviet. See The Communist, February 1931, pp. 153—167; W. Z. Foster, The Negro People in American History, H. Rept. 2244, pp. 265—276.

11 Gunnar Myrdal, expelled from office as Swedish Trade Minister for double-dealing with Moscow, is the author of An American Dilemma, to which the Supreme Court referred in footnoot 11 of its segregation decision, along with other modern authorities, "quite a few of whom were on Federal subversive lists" (Cong. Rec., p. A4074).

That incredible unawareness constitutes the most cogent reason for enactment of Senate bill 2646, which would remove the appellate jurisdiction of the Court from areas in which it has disqualified itself — areas where the survival of the United States is imperiled.

XIV. QUESTION FOUR

Question. Do recent decisions of the Supreme Court follow preestablished Communist lines and contentions?

Answer. Affirmative.

More than 10 years ago Alger Hiss, Lee Pressman, John Abt, and other identified Communist and pro-Communist pressure technicians of the Communist global conquest in American area VII filed briefs with the Supreme Court as amici curiae in Shelley v. Kraemer (334 U.S. 1. 68, Sup. Ct. 836; 92 L. ed. 1161, 3 A. L. R. 2d 441)[12]

The Court's decision, May 3, 1948, followed their views.

Those views reflected Communist agitation and pressure lines concerned with the American Negro which were embodied in Stalin's "Black Belt" program of 1928 and since that time maintained as Communist Party lines.

In that decision the Court usurped the power to amend the Constitution and to make law relating to matters reserved to the States.

How far official Communist contentions designed to paralyze anti-Communist efforts of the American legislative and executive branches predated Supreme Court decisions which have effected that paralysis may be noted in hearings of Senate and House committees from the days of the Dies committee down to the Watkins decision.

In this connection the testimony of the same John Abt before the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Internal Security, May 26, 1953, is as interesting as the Daily Worker files on long-standing Communist contentions, now sustained by the Court.[13]

XV. QUESTION FIVE

Question. Have recent decisions of the Supreme Court assumed a pattern of aid and comfort to the enemy?

Answer. Affirmative.

(a) "Affirmative" is an understatement. "Cumulatively" would be more precise and still be an understatement. The Court's decisions have done more for enemy forces and objectives than might have been accomplished by any other agency or form of paralysis, short of the actual overthrow of the American Government.[14]

(b) Even before the Jencks and Watkins decisions, hysterically hailed by Communist press and leaders, the Georgia Legislature in formal resolution (H. R. 174-554d):

1. Identified the Communist global enemy;

2. Recognized the factual state of war;

3. Charged aid and comfort to the enemy by individual members of the Court in 13 specifications;

4. Demanded impeachment proceedings be instituted and prosecuted by the Congress.

(c) Comparison of the first 10 objectives of the Communist global conquest within American area VII,[15] and the pro-Communist decisions of the Court completes the answer.[16]

XVI. QUESTION SIX

Question. What is the practical effect of the Court's pattern of decision on the American will to resist?

Answer. Doubtful.

(a) No complete answer is possible until S. 2646 is enacted into law — or is emasculated or defeated by the same enemy pressure patterns which have paralyzed the anti-Communist agencies of the United States Government and the individual States.

(b) Our W²R charts maintained on a basis of 39 fixed factors over the past 15 years have relative value only. In some cases they do not reflect the effects of an enemy victory until long after the fact, as in the case of the Suez pressure coup of 1956, and the Little Rock invasion of 1957, only recently recognized by the public for what they were.

It is worth noting, however, that the downward W²R trends reflective of pro-Communist Supreme Court decisions have consistently followed each major victory for the Communist global conquest in the United States Supreme Court.

(c) Final evaluation will depend on developments in pressure areas IV and X, as well as area VII—E, with reference to hearings, report, debate and vote on, and challenge to Senate bill 2646. Groundwork for a pressure operation against the measure already has been noted by our monitors in area IV: TV, radio, press.

Our projections indicate intensive activity by Communist and pro-Communist pressure groups at local levels and some pressured effort to minimize hearings and related matters in general news coverage.

XVII. CONCLUSIONS

1. In the paralytic effect of its pro-Communist decisions, on State and Federal agencies of internal security, the United States Supreme Court is the most powerful and potentially determinative, instrument of the Communist global conquest by paralysis.

2. Patterns of pressure related to its decisions, and the behavior of the Court, coincide with, and repeat, in minor variations, documented, globally successful pressure patterns of paralysis as a principle of warfare, essential element of the Communist global conquest.

12 Later two members of the Supreme Court appeared as amici Hiss in his first trial for perjury on a question of his role as pressure technician for Moscow (Cong. Rec., 85/1, No. 103.89, p. A4048).

3. What Thomas Jefferson characterized as "the noiseless and therefore unalarming instrumentality of the Supreme Court" fits the Communist global conquest pattern of "destruction of the enemy will to resist in advance of perceptible hostilities."

As Jefferson wrote, prophetically, in his 1821 Autobiography:

"They are then, in fact, the corps of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to consolidate all power in the hands of the Government in which they have such an important freehold."

4. Since Lenin's Blueprint, enemy strategists have recognized (a) that total world conquest is impossible without the destruction of the American Government and that (b) paralysis of State governments, by whatever means, is essential to disintegration of the Federal Government.

5. In denying individual States the right of self-protection against subversion, the Court has, in effect, attempted to nullify nature's first law — survival.

6. By its own documentary admission the Court has been influenced by notorious Communists and pro-Communists.

7. The Court has abandoned stare decisis. It has abandoned the fundamental concept of Roman, Anglo-Saxon, and American jurisprudence defined by Cicero as: "Leges omnium salutem singulorum, saluti anteponunt (The laws place the safety of all before the safety of individuals).[17]

8. In general the pressure pattern exerted through the Supreme Court coincides with documented and familiar and wholly successful pressure patterns and techniques of the Communist global conquest since the activitation of paralysis as a principle of warfare in that the Court—

(a) Paralyzes anti-Communist forces.

(b) Encourages dissension and public disorder arising out of racial conflict, with consequent loss of American global prestige.

(c) Rehabilitates convicted Communist pressure technicians and approves discredited Communist organizations and techniques.

(d) Discredits congressional investigation committees dangerous to Communist aims.

(e) Sanctions, a priori, concerted Communist attack on the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Director J. Edgar Hoover.[18]

(f) Promotes a climate of opinion against the exposure and investigation of subversion.

(g) In so doing, in whatever degree of ignorance, gives aid and comfort to the enemy.

(h) Persists in its furtherance of the Communist global conquest despite congressional, public, and professional protests.

(i) Is supported in its course by the same voices and forces which have established patterns of pro-Communist agitation and support since the Scottsboro and Rosenberg cases.

(j) Follows the Manuilsky tactic: "The bourgeoisie will have to be put to sleep."[19]

9. There is no such thing as coincidence in the Communist global conquest except the coincidence of pattern on pattern and technique on technique. In 1945 Communists and pro-Communist writers, speakers, and pressure technicians were telling the people of the United States that the Chinese Reds were "harmless agrarian reformers." Now the Supreme Court is telling the people of America, with special reference to its decision in Connally et al, v. U.S., that the so-called Communist Party is a harmless political organization, although it designs the overthrow of the United States Government.

10. In view of—

(a) Its resistance to, and apparent ignorance of, the massive, officially documented volume of proof on the Communist global conquest, and operations, techniques, and self-proclaimed Communist designs against the United States; and

(b) Its persistence in aid and comfort to the enemy, the United States Supreme Court has disqualified itself for appellate jurisdiction in all areas concerned with American security and American survival.

In 1952, Dr. Ernest T. Krebs and his son announced the discovery of a chemical, Laetrile, that had been successfully used on certain incurable cancers. Today that drug is saving cancer victims in Europe and Asia. Yet here in the United States it "is available to only a few people." Why?

WHY

EDITOR'S NOTE: The experiences of Dr. Ernest T. Krebs and his son, Dr. Ernest T. Krebs, Jr., two doctors who developed the enzyme Chymotrypsin and the chemical Laetrile, have raised a life-and-death question in America today: Is there a group in our country that would put personal profit and gain over and above the discovery of an inexpensive, relatively quick cure for cancer? In this second of a series of articles, MAN'S ILLUSTRATED presents a searching inquiry which probes behind the mysterious, unpublicized circumstances that have hampered independent-thinking doctors and researchers in their quest for a cancer cure.

It is not our intention to "promote" these doctors or to recommend the use of their specific curative preparations. It is our intention, however, to supply our readers with information we feel is vital to their well-being and perhaps show the need for a full-scale investigation into the facts behind the shadowy cancer research situation.

CANCER CURE

". . . At last there is one magazine in this country that isn't afraid to print the truth about the persecution of independent doctors and scientists by the well-entrenched organization men who are running medicine in this country. Jason Weal's article on the way they suppressed Dr. Koch's cancer treatment (December, The Plot to Suppress A Cure For Cancer) should wake America up to the fact the present situation in the big medical and research organizations is costing lives!

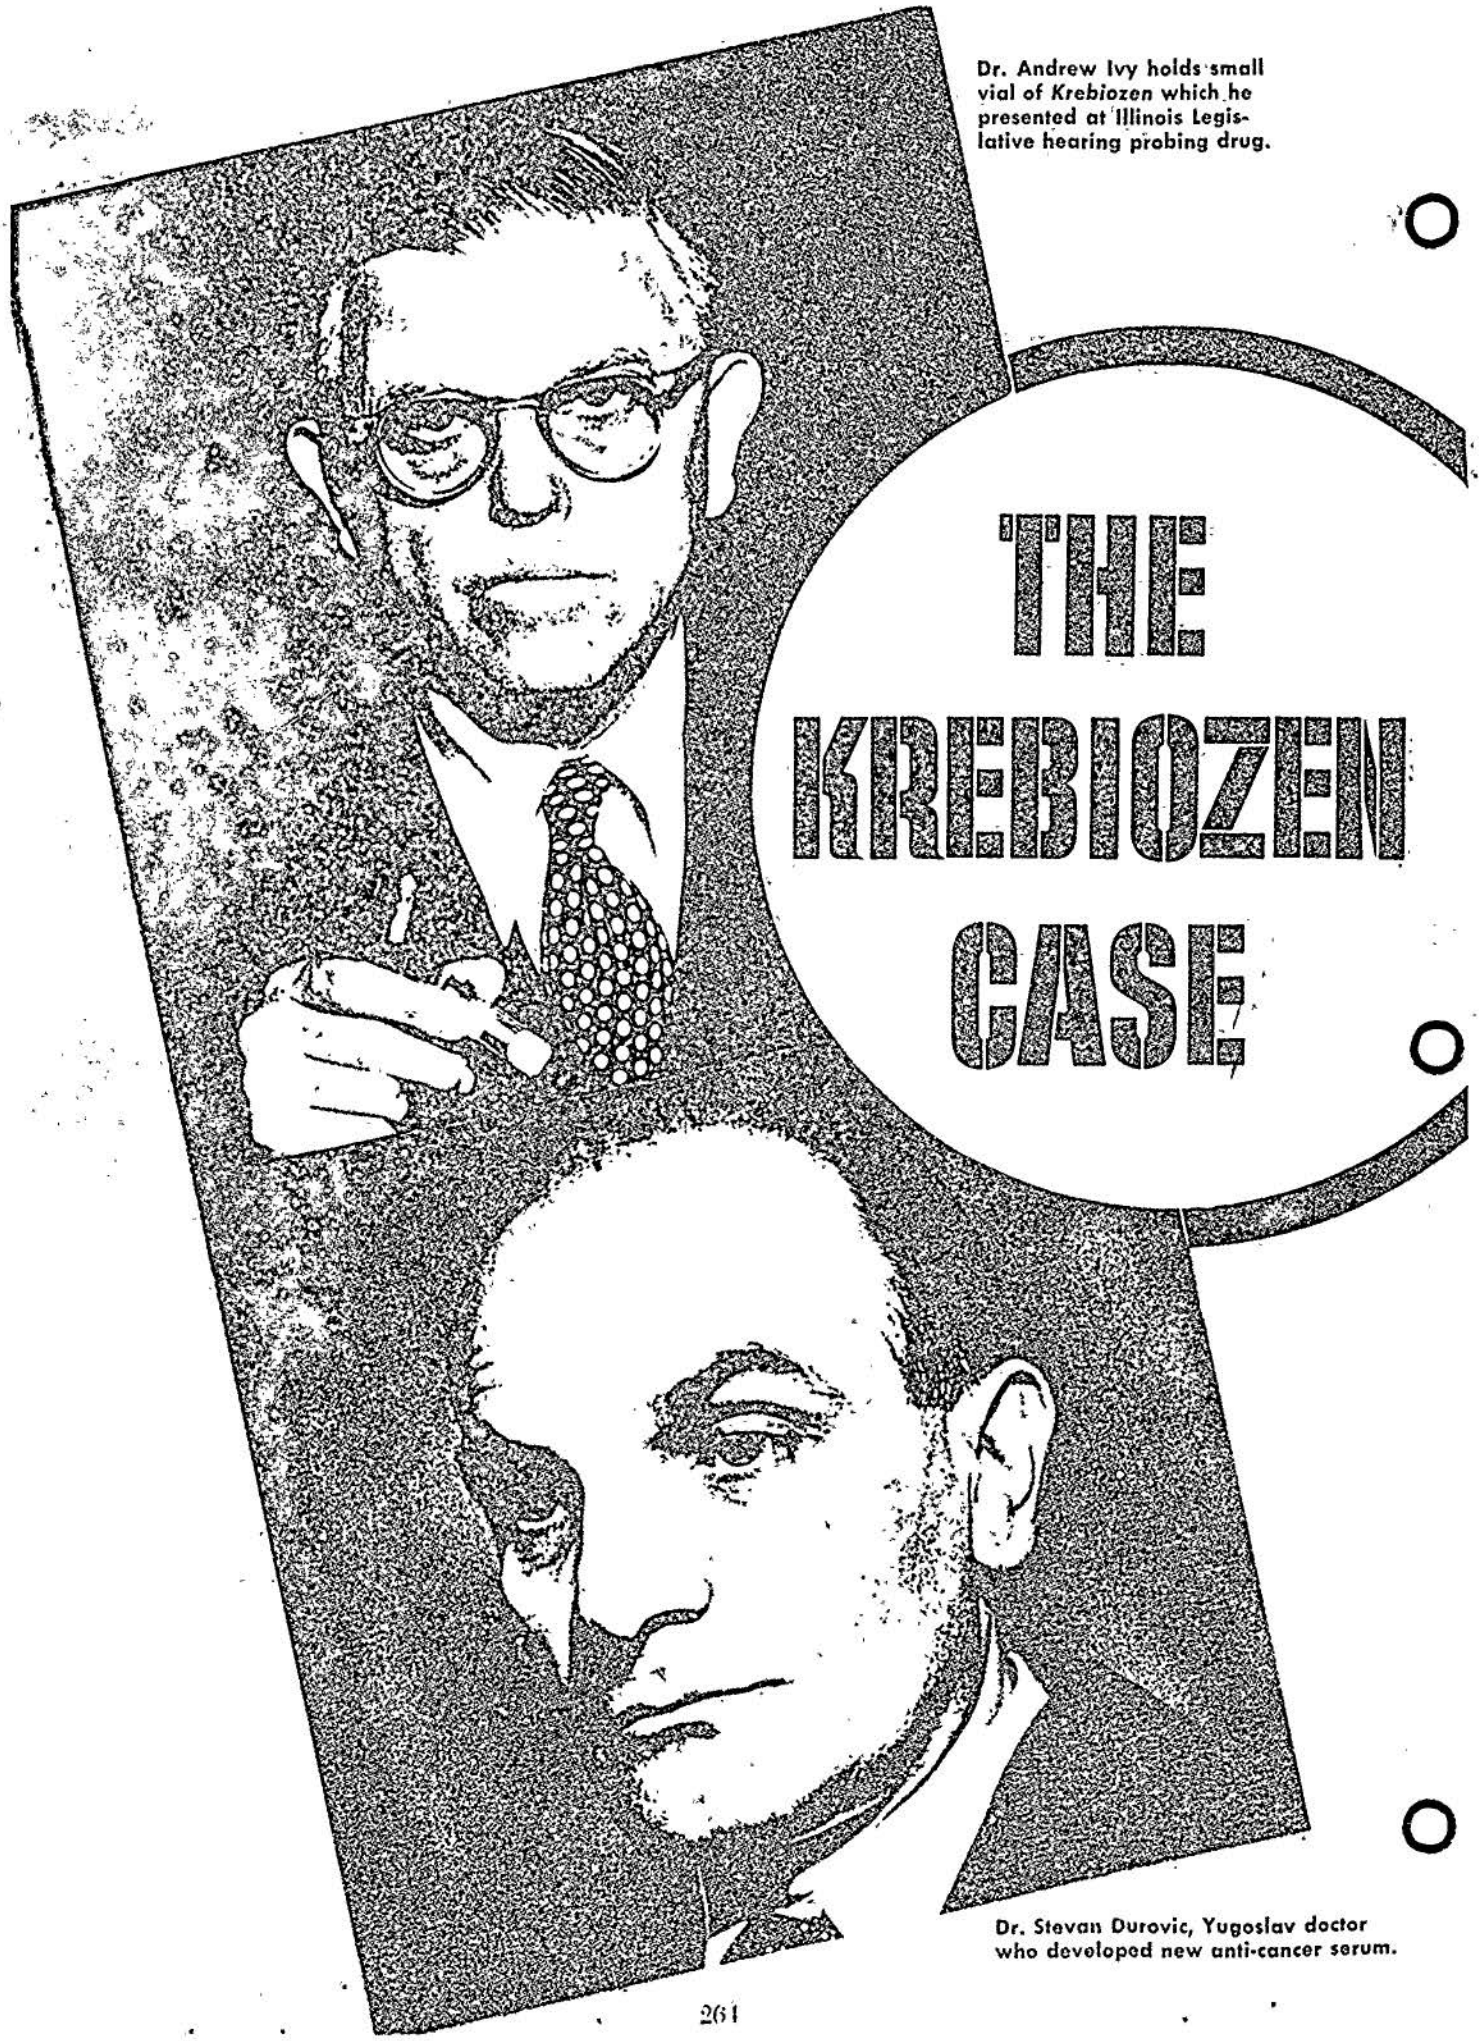
V. W.
Wilmington, Calif.



"Your article on the so-called plot to suppress a cure for cancer confirms a suspicion I've had for some time now. We're beginning to suffer from the disease I call 'bigness.' First we had Big Business, then Big Labor. Now we're getting Big Science. This Bigness is the worst cancer of them all—and it could destroy the kind of people we need most today: The small individual who has a mind of his own and is damn well going to use it.

R. B. H.
Manchester, N. H.

"Jason Weal's articles on cancer are the best things in your book and 'The Strange Courtmartial of Dr. Krebs' in your last issue was one of the most shocking stories in the entire series. . . . But aren't you missing out on the biggest story of all—the one that gives the whole game away—the way they suppressed Krebiozen?"

THE PLOT TO SUPPRESS A CURE FOR CANCER

Instead of radiation and surgical methods of treating cancer, many doctors and researchers feel that a chemical cure like Krebiozen may be the answer.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The experience of Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, the man who first announced the development of Krebiozen, has raised a life-and-death question in America today: Is there a group in our country that would put personal profit and gain over and above the discovery of an inexpensive, relatively quick cure for cancer? In this third of a series of articles, MAN'S ILLUSTRATED presents a searching inquiry which probes behind the mysterious circumstances that have hampered independent-thinking doctors and researchers in their quest for a cancer cure.

It is not our intention to "promote" these doctors or to recommend the use of their specific curative preparations. It is our intention, however, to supply our readers with information we feel is vital to their well-being and perhaps show the need for a full-scale investigation into the facts behind the cancer research situation.

by JASON WEAL

THEY say that truth is stranger than fiction. How many Americans do you think would believe a novel in which one of the greatest scientists in the United States was attacked by the entire organized medical profession and fired from his $21,000 a year job as vice president of an important university for supporting a dramatic new cure for cancer?

Very few would swallow such a fantastic yarn. But it really happened.

This incredible event took place in Illinois in 1953. The internationally famous research expert who got sacked was Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, one of the top cancer investigators in the country. In March 1951, he was one of the leaders of the National Advisory Cancer Council, Distinguished Professor of Physiology, head of the Department of Clinical Science and Vice President in charge of the Medical, Dental and Pharmaceutical Colleges of the University of Illinois. By the end of 1951, he was virtually an outcast. He was under suspension from the Chicago Medical Society and faced severe public criticism from the all-powerful American Medical Association. By 1953, dozens of his friends would have nothing to do with him.

How did all this happen? Why? What did this distinguished and prominent physician do to provoke such ferocious attacks?

Was the cancer treatment that he advocated ever given a full and fair hearing?

MAN'S ILLUSTRATED feels that the cancer problem is crucial, that many reputable doctors have been smeared and ruined because of their independent research in the war on the creeping killer, and that the contributions of sincere scientists have often received only casual consideration from the influential and well-financed cancer institutes. We believe that the time has come for the American people to get all the facts on what happened to Dr. Ivy and the serum he believes can help end cancer.

Dr. Andrew C. Ivy was born in Farmington, Missouri, on February 25, 1893. He received his B.A. in 1913, his B.S. in 1916, his M.S. in 1917, his Ph.D. in 1918 and his M.D. in 1922. In addition to the status earned by 14 years of study and five university degrees, he was a licensed physician and a prominent teacher at several medical schools. During and after World War II, he did research for both the Army and the Navy. It was a great coup for the (Please turn to page 86)

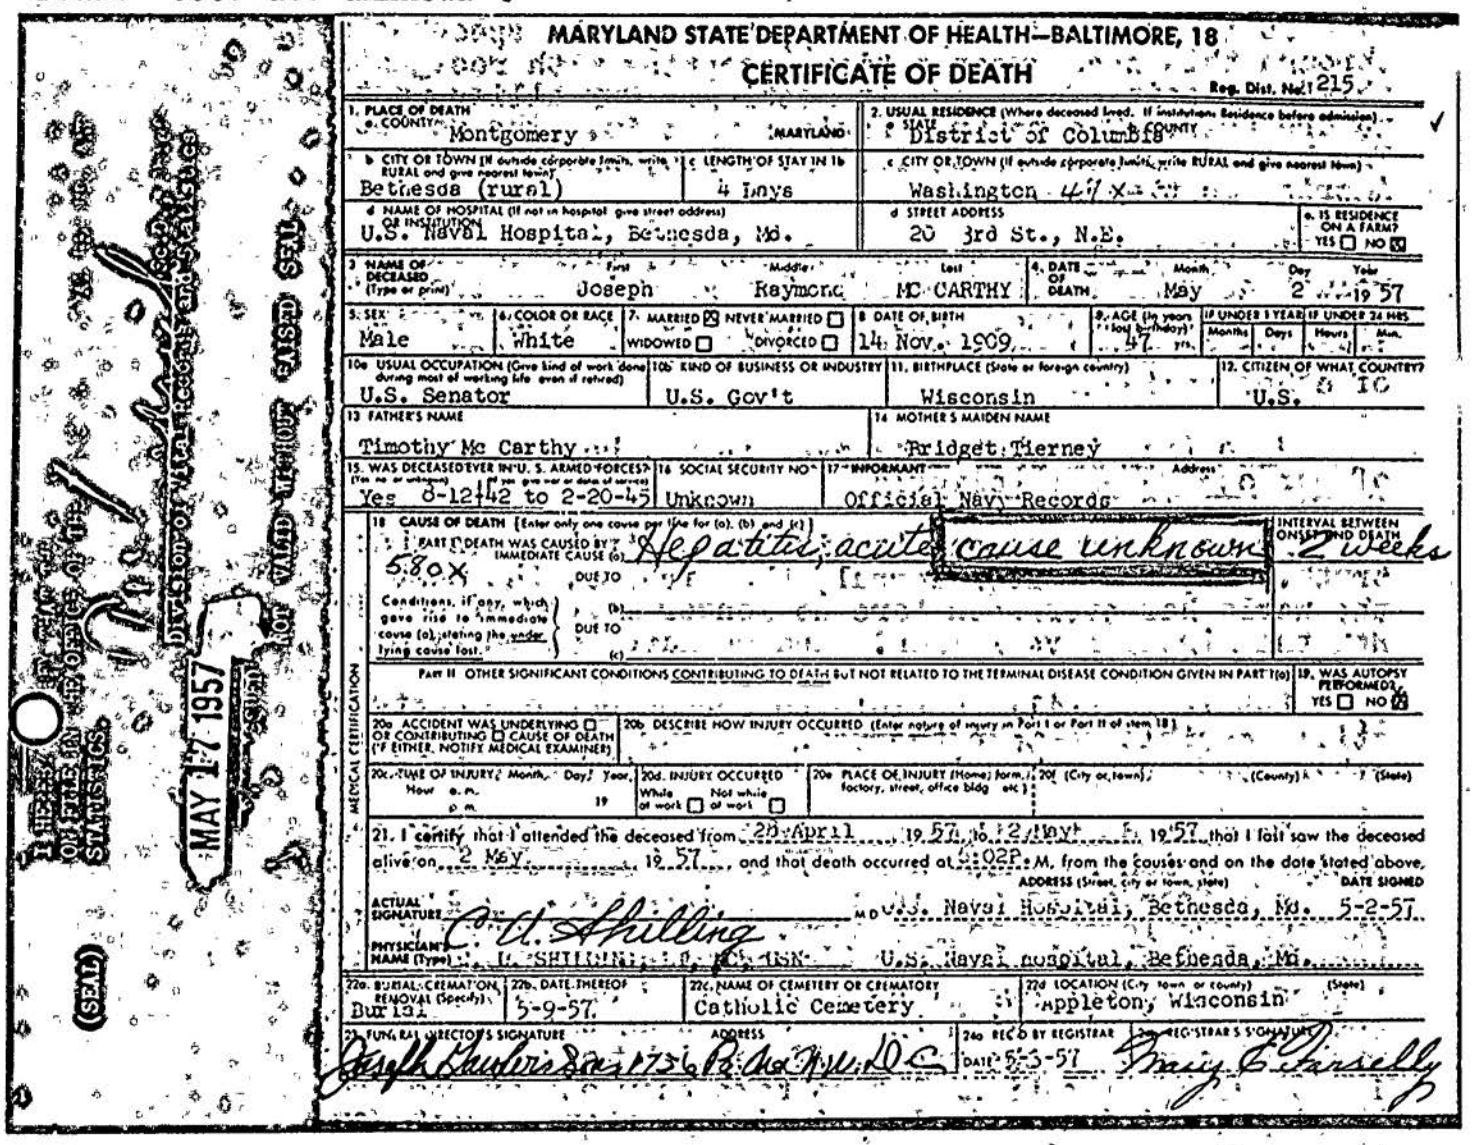
NUMBER ONE IN A SERIES

The Plot to SUPPRESS A CURE FOR CANCER

In 1930, Michigan Dr. W. F. Koch stated that his drug saved numerous cancer victims. That's when the powerful forces of "organized medicine" attacked him.

EDITOR'S NOTE

The experience of Dr. William F. Koch, the developer of a drug called gylyoxylide, has raised a life-and-death question in America today: Is there a group in our country that would put personal profit and gain over and above the discovery of an inexpensive, relatively quick cure for cancer? In this first of a series of articles, Man's Illustrated presents a searching inquiry which probes behind the mysterious, unpublicized circumstances that have hampered independent-thinking doctors and researchers in their quest for a cancer cure.



It is not our intention to "promote" these doctors or to recommend the use of their specific curative preparations. It is our intention, however, to supply our readers with information we feel is vital to their well-being and perhaps show the need for a full-scale investigation into the facts behind the shadowy cancer research situation.

Sen. William Langer (N.D.) defended Doctor Koch: "I have personally watched the progress of this system of treatment . . . and I feel it is deserving of the attention of everyone who is interested in the health of the American people."

WHO MURDERED SEN. JOSEPH McCARTHY?

The death certificate issued by Lt.C.U.Shilling of the U.S.Naval Hospital at Bethesda,Md. and the newspaper release by the Hospital to the effect that the acute hepatitis in this case was not infectious,make it quite clear that the death was due to the other cause of hepatitis ---POISON. What poison killed McCarthy, the death certificate that is reproduced below relates was not determined prior to death. The certificate reads:"...cause unknown".

The laws of the Federal Government and of every State in the Union, make it a crime to bury a person dead of an unknown cause; and they require an autopsy in every such case to determine the cause of death and eliminate the possibility of foul play,or murder. WHY WAS NO AUTOPSY DONE ON McCARTHY IN COMPLIANCE WITH THE LAW? WHY DID THE AUTHORITIES REFUSE TO COMPLY WITH THE LAW IN SPITE OF INSISTENT DEMANDS FROM THE PUBLIC? WHAT MURDEROUS GANG COMMITTED THIS MURDER? WAS IT THE SAME GANG AS WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE MURDER OF FORRESTAL,LARRY DUGGAN AND HUNDREDS OTHERS?

WE DEMAND A PUBLIC INVESTIGATION OF THIS MURDER

"Let's Be Free Again!"

Why are we agreeing to a summit conference with the Soviet Union? Every American knows in his heart that no lasting good, no workable agreements, no benefits of any kind to our own country can come from such a meeting. Why then have we agreed?

It is odd, and frightening, to read the speeches and editorials through this once great nation accepting with resignation the "inevitable" necessity for a summit meeting. Our allies want such a meeting, we are told. The neutral nations want it. The Soviet Union wants it. The United Nations wants it. Everybody wants it but America. So, America must agree.

As the Wall Street Journal put it, much to our surprise, "So we reluctantly go to the summit. Things being as they are, it is probably a better course. But plainly; it is a chastening reminder that 'what we do next' must be tempered, if not shaped, by foreign offices of other nations.

"The fact is that, whatever it may be, we are no longer master of our own foreign policy!"

As we go to the summit like good little boys that is the exact truth. We, the most powerrul, the richest, the most productive nation the world has ever seen "are no longer master of our foreign policy." How the mighty have fallen! And we have fallen by our own hand.

But it is still possible to become our own masters again. It is still possible to take the reins of our destiny out of the hands of others and grasp them in our own. It will take boldness and decision.

We must do two things. First we must withdraw from the United Nations which has hung a paper rope around our necks that has strangled our freedom to act in our own interest. Second we must begin to run our own foreign policy show. Let us call our own conferences with those whose destiny is intertwined with our own. Let us make our own proposals and our own plans with friend and enemy alike. If we wish to settle our affairs with the Arabs let us talk to them face to face with the cards on the table. If we wish to settle affairs with any nation or group of nations let us take them one by one and deal with them, keeping in mind one single principle - what is best for the people of the United States?

We have tried the United Nations course and it has failed us every time, from Korea to Lebanon. We have tried "collective security." Yet today our security is less than it has been at any time in our history and those with whom we have shared collective security have failed us in every crisis from Korea to Suez. We have put the best interests of our people second to the interests of other peoples, pouring out our treasure and skill everywhere in the world and we have reaped only humiliation, insult, disrespect for our flag and our leaders.

It is time for us to cut ourselves loose from those who are the "masters of our foreign policy." It is time for America to issue another "Declaration of Independence" from the U. N. and from friends and foe alike. It is time to "put only Americans on guard" over America's future and America's present. It is time to acknowledge the plain truth that the policies we have followed year after year since World War 11 have produced nothing but gains for the Soviet Union and losses for the United States.

The United Nations is rapidly becoming the instrument of Soviet power right here inside our own borders. It is draining away our treasure and preventing us from acting in the interests of our own people. We should abandon it before it abandons us.

Our alliances have become millstones around our necks preventing us from doing what we know is best for our country and our allies. We should begin to disengage ourselves. Our beloved America, once the hope and inspiration of free men everywhere, is becoming the docile milch cow for two-thirds of the world, including even the communist enemies in Poland and Yugoslavia! We are being sucked dry and left weak by our foreign aid program. And the Beneficiaries of our largess are refusing to support us in any crisis, sneering at our vacillation and insulting our emissaries.

Cannot our United States shake itself loose from the coils of the United Nations intrigue and entangling alliances?

Can we not once again seek to become what we once were, the envy and inspiration of all men everywhere who love liberty and justice, honor and peace?

Cannot our leaders speak again in the thundering tones of past American heroes, "Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead," or "Pedocaris alive or Rasuli dead!" or "Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute!"

Note: There is very little difference in the pro-Red leanings of the Justices nominated by the Democrat Party compared to those nominated by the Republican Party.

* (D) = Democrat Party; (R) = Republican Party.

In 1848, Karl Marx, in the Communist Manifesto outlined the steps necessary for a socialized state. The counterparts of many of his doctrines have been proposed or enacted into law in this country.

You Are Still Permitted to Choose Sides — However It Could Well Be Your Last Chance

Do You Want This

From Communist Manifesto—

1. Abolition of property in land and application of all rents of land to public purposes.
2. A heavy progressive or graduated income tax.
3. Abolition of all right of inheritance.
4. Confiscation of the property of all emigrants and rebels.
5. Contralization of credit in the hands of the state, by means of a national bank with state capital and an exclusive monopoly.
6. Centralization of the means of communication and transport in the hands of the state.
7. Extension of factories and instruments of production owned by the state; the bringing into cultivation of waste lands, and the improvement of the soil generally in accordance with a common plan.
8. Equal liability of all to labor. Establishment of industrial armies, especially for agriculture.
9. Combination of agriculture with manufacturing industries; gradual abolishment of the distinction between town and country by a more equable distribution of the population over the country.
10. Free education for all children in public schools.

This

Democratic - Republican Accomplishments—

1. 40% of all land is owned by the Government.
2. Federal taxes can take up to 88 per cent of personal income. And at this time takes 27% of the average man's income.
3. Under the highest tax rate, the government can confiscate 77 per cent of the value of an estate.
4. To date, no seizure of this type has been attempted here.
5. The federal government is in banking and financing with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Federal land banks, the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, and others.
6. Radio and television are tightly controlled by the government. So are the railroads, truck and air lines. Federal barge lines operate in competition with private carriers. Control of the press has been attempted recently.
7. The government produces and sells electric power through the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Rural Electrification Administration. It also sponsors irrigation projects and rigid crop controls.
8. Forced labor has been attempted but unsuccessfully.
9. Under guise of the defense effort, the "planners" want industry "dispersed" to rural areas.
10. Public schools have traditionally been organized and financed by individual states and cities. However, the Federal Government is attempting to control all public schools by subsidizing them.

Or This

Constitution Party Program—

1. Sell all property owned and operated by the Federal Government or its agencies not absolutely essential to the function of Government.
2. Repeal the 16th Amendment (graduated income tax).
3. Repeal inheritance taxes.
4. Oppose all Government confiscation of property.
5. Take Government out of loan and all other business in conflict with free enterprise.
6. Private ownership of communications and transportation.
7. Allow free market to produce without governmental competition.
8. Oppose all compulsion where labor is involved.
9. Allow requirements of industry to determine location.
10. Local control of schools (opposed to Federal aid to education).

CONSTITUTION PARTY PLATFORM

—STATE RIGHTS
RECOGNIZE and exercise the basic constitutional principle that each state is an independent and Sovereign Republic with full jurisdiction over all things, persons, and activities within its boundaries including the recognized police powers of the state, health, safety, education, morals and well being of the people.

—POWER OF THE PEOPLE
APPLY the 9th and 10th Amendments of the Constitution of the United States.

II—TAXING AND SPENDING
ADOPT suitable legislation to compel an annually balanced budget and retirement of the national debt. REPEAL the 16th Amendment and all Federal Income Tax Laws.

V—NATIONAL INDEPENDENCE
TO PROVIDE absolute protection of our Constitution and internal economy from treaties and/or executive agreements.

—ECONOMIC LIBERTY
PROTECT property rights of American citizens by removing all statutory obstacles to individual enterprises. ELIMINATE government ownership or operation of any business, professional, commercial, financial, or industrial enterprise not specified in the Constitution.

I—CHECKS AND BALANCES
APPLY Constitution checks and balances among the three branches of the Federal Government and positively prevent the alteration of the Constitution or its intents and purposes, by judicial FIAT or interpretation.

II—FOREIGN POLICY
WITHDRAW the United States from the United Nations and its agencies, immediately. RESTORE our Flag and Constitution to all members of our armed forces serving abroad. DISCONTINUE senseless economic aid to foreign nations. RETURN foreign trade to the control of Congress. SUSPEND diplomatic relations with Communist Russia and her satellites.

III—JUSTICE UNDER LAW
ALLOW agriculture to resume its rightful place in the free market without government regulation. PROTECT the contractual rights of management and labor. APPLY laws equally against all monopolies whether of business, labor, agriculture, cooperatives, or other groups, insuring the right to work to all our people.

X—IMMIGRATION
PRESERVE and enforce selective and protective immigration.

—PROPERTY RIGHTS AND MONEY
APPLY the Constitutional provision whereby Congress has the power of issuing money and regulating the value thereof; and the right of individuals to own precious metals.

IS THE CONSTITUTION PARTY A THIRD PARTY?

No. The Constitution Party is really the FIRST Party—patriotic Americans believe in the principles of the Constitution Party and most citizens are now firmly convinced that there is no longer a two party system in the United States. The ONE WORLD INTERNATIONALIST Democrat-Republican party stands for the same principles and the same platform, and are actually ONE party platform, and are actually ONE party monopolizing the ballot and confusing the voters. They are leading our nation into a one world government, wasting our raw materials and tax money on aimless foreign give-away programs. The Constitution Party must get on the ballot in California to preserve the traditional and essential two party system in the United States and in California.

WHY YOU SHOULD REGISTER IN THE CONSTITUTION PARTY

The Constitution Party believes that politicians can resist mail, they can resist public sentiment as expressed in the newspapers and they can resist the demands of their own conscience. BUT THEY CANNOT WITHSTAND THE PRESSURE OF POSITIVE ACTION WHICH PROVES THEY ARE LOSING VOTES. If you believe in the principles of the Constitution Party, CHANGE YOUR REGISTRATION NOW so you can vote for YOUR candidates for public office rather than for TWEEDLE DEE or TWEEDLE DUM candidates proposed by the ONE Internationalist party.

The Constitution Party Program has been carried by an army of dedicated patriotic Americans who love their country and its heritage. These people have been carrying a financial burden for the rest of the people—now we must enlist the aid of all patriotic Americans. Many can help by generous contributions and many more can help by spreading the word of the principles of the party. We must have registered members of the Constitution Party in every single precinct with all the people working to save the United States Constitution. This is a never-ending enterprise as there are always those who are dedicated to the disenfranchisement and enslavement of the free man.

Your moral and financial support is urgently needed, if we are to preserve our American way of life, and thereby perpetuate the ideals and traditions of our Founding Fathers. You will help! Won't you—Send your contributions to:

SOURCE OF TAXES . . .

COMPLAINING ABOUT TAXES? Taxes are the price we pay for the government we get. We can reduce taxes in exact proportion to the reduction we make in the non-essential and unauthorized functions of government.

WHAT UNAUTHORIZED FUNCTIONS OF GOVERNMENT? This first FACT SHEET contains the list of more than 700 federal corporate activities which exist without any pretense of constitutional authority. They have taken over 40 percent of the land area and 20 percent of the industrial capacity of the nation. To pay their losses and hidden costs they consume, directly and indirectly, more than one-half the total income of government.

THESE BUREAUCRATIC EMPIRES grow at such a pace that our staff and facilities have been unable to maintain a full record of their activities, but we believe the information sources shown qualify each for listing herein.

THIS LIST OF UNAUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES is essential information if we are to effectively instruct our elected Federal and State Representatives in ways and means of cutting costs of government so that we may obtain Constitutional reduction in taxes and a return to basic Americanism.

SUBSEQUENT ISSUES OF FACT SHEETS will present the origin and history of various federal corporations, and a review of their activities. These documents will prove powerful implements in the hands of people determined to regain their economic liberty and rid themselves of inhuman tax burdens.

Knowledge is Power!

FACT SHEET RESEARCH SERVICE

The information contained in this first issue of FACT SHEET is an index to all future issues of FACT SHEET. Each succeeding issue will treat specifically upon one or more of the indexed Federal Corporate Activities, giving its history, its record of competition with Free Enterprise, its costs of operation—costs which come from the taxpayer's pocket—and its bureaucratic geneaology.

Subscribers to FACT SHEET may, by special request, obtain a concise statistical and reportorial service on any Federal Corporate Activity listed herein, specially prepared for their specific purpose. Nominal professional research fees are charged for this service. Information may be obtained by writing WILLIS E. STONE, Publisher, FACT SHEET, P. O. Box 2948, Hollywood 28, California.

THE FIRST FACT SHEET

It took years of research to gather and cross index information on more than 700 federal corporate activities listed herein. This represents the first tangible effort to identify and evaluate methods and technics of the bureaucratic empires invading our private enterprise system.

Knowledge of these bureaucratic activities, their extent and their purposes, begins to equip us with the capacity for meeting the most vital issue of our time. The real power, however, depends upon the thoroughness with which the information is circulated.

Each succeeding issue of FACT SHEET deals with a specific federal corporate activity. Volume one, initiated by this first FACT SHEET, will consist of 50 issues. Subscriptions starting with Volume 1, Number 1, includes a handsome ring binder to hold the entire series.

While this series of reference material will prove of enormous value to you individually, it will be equally effective as a reference point for business, commerce, industry and in schools, and libraries across the land.

Your help is needed to put this material into general circulation so that these truths may be known by all the American people.

These are direct losses to taxpayers identified in the first 12 periodic FACT SHEET reports:

☆ Vol. 1, No. 2—ABACA PRODUCTION AND SALES	$ 28,865,086
☆ Vol. 1, No. 3—CUBA NICKEL COMPANY	90,249,000

What of the YOUNGER Generation?

FACT SHEET has enormous power to offset the fallacies of socialism because each issue following this general list of federal corporate activities contains a specific treatment of one organization in this list, effectively documented from official sources, and presenting an objective American point of view.

So successful has been the FACT SHEET technique that colleges and libraries have requested donation subscriptions. High schools, colleges and libraries thoughout this land are molding concepts of life, government and society for literally millions of young Americans.

If you want these young minds to get solid facts in support of Americanism, order tax deductible gift subscriptions in blocks for our educational institutions.

Use the coupon on the reverse side of this page.

Reprints of each issue available: 25¢ for one copy; $1.00 for 8; $5.00 for 45; $10.00 for 100, for bulk mailing to one person.

THE COMMUNIST TAKEOVER -- The Communist Party is engaging in a massive effort to penetrate every segment of the California community including industries, labor unions, major political parties, community and fraternal organizations, churches and nationality groups.

This positive information came out in a report to the House Committee on un-American Activities, which Congressman Roosevelt of California wants abolished. Not only is Little Jimmy the beneficiary of all the Communist votes in a district with a large Communist population, but his mother (Eleanor) has been cited 56 times by the House Committee for activities in this many Communist fronts.

The Communist tactics of infiltration in all of these organizations, as well as the California movie writing colony, has been described in detail in Morris A. Bealle's book for patriots (RED RAT RACE), $3.50, All America House, 919 - 18th Street NW, Washington, D.C.

The Committee has done an excellent job in exposing this "new look" in California. "Communists are under orders to wear a new look," the Committee report says. "In other words, to a degree unmatched in party history, Communists are now promoting themselves by pretending to be loyal to the US, peace-loving and humanitarian for the good of the nation."

Chairman Walter added:

"Let those who would let us minimize the danger of the Communist operation in this nation take note of the fact that this report brings to light only one segment of a nationwide 5th column on American soil. This 5th is working feverishly in the interests of international Communism."

The Walters Committee issued another alarming report. It said the Soviet nation has a staff of 185 at the Russian Embassy and another top-heavy staff of 250 at the United Nations headquarters in New York.

Compared with the 85 Americans who man the US Embassy in Moscow this doesn't make sense -- unless Russia's huge manpower surplus is engaged in espionage activities.

In addition, these Iron Curtain countries also have swollen staffs in Washington; Rumania 58, Hungary 31, Czechoslovakia 48, Poland 77 and Yugoslavia 73.

Reports from the Caribbean show that Castro is surrounded by Kremlin agents and is plotting an Expeditionary force to overthrow the anti-Communist governments of nearby Haiti and Dominican Republic.

The Senate Preparedness sub-committee reports that the Russian Embassy in Mexico City is "staffed" with 900 persons, most of whom are working for direct penetration of the South American republics.

Mrs. Lois Higgens, director of Chicago's crime prevention bureau, told an audience that one of the most potent weapons being used by the Communist infiltrators is marijuana and other degenerative drugs. These are being used to weaken the moral fiber of youth.

"Without firing a shot, the Kremlin is trying to ensnare and enslave an entire age group," she pointed out.

"Their weapons are filth, pornographic materials, marijuana, heroin, thrill pills, goof balls and those close allies -- an apathetic sleepy and unconcerned public."

The appalling success of Communist infiltrators in both North and South America could never happen except for the financial and political aid given the Kremlin by the House of Rockefeller.

Why the House, which has so much to lose if capitalism and Christianity is suffocated in this country, is aiding the Communist takeover, is one of the amazing stories of history.

In Morris A. Bealle's new book, THE HOUSE OF ROCKEFELLER, about to come off the press, this Rockefeller aid to Communism is given in detail -- chapter for chapter, verse for verse, and letter for letter.

The book tells why -- and how. In 1924 the Kremlin gave back the Standard Oil concessions which the Kerensky Government had expropriated with the downfall of the Czars. Standard Oil has huge installations in the Iron Curtain countries -- Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Austria, Hungary, Poland and Rumania. To mention a few.

These properties are let strictly alone by the Soviets, who would just as leave steal the gold out of their mothers' teeth as eat.

The way in which the House of Rockefeller reciprocates has been told many times by the House Committee, and the Senate Internal Security Committee, and it is not a pretty one.

It involves the planting in high government posts (and protection of) Alger Hiss, Owen Lattimore, Harold Ware, Nathan Silvermaster, Red Bill Remington, Phil Jessup, the Three Johns (Service, Vincent and Davies), Harry Dexter White, Joe Barnes, Phillip Jaffee, Lachlin Currie and other Kremlin agents too numerous to mention.

If this was stopped absolutely by the House of Rockefeller, this cold war with Russia would stop just as quickly, and Washington could get on with balancing the budget and letting the people live nbrmal lives once again.

Although Standard Oil wouldn't be entitled to it, we'd be in favor of having Congress reimburse them for their properties behind the Iron Curtain.

These would most surely be expropriated if the House of Rockefeller stopped promoting Communist infiltration in the United States.

The HOUSE OF ROCKEFELLER is a 280 page book, jam packed with facts about the family which by riding roughshod over humanity, ran a shoe-string into $200 billion in two generations." It sells for 5.00.

To Whom It May Concern:

I, Oliver Kenneth Goff, was a member of the Communist Party and the Young Communist League, from May 2, 1936, to October 9, 1939. During this period of time, I operated under the alias of John Keats and the number 18-B-2. My testimony before the Government is incorporated in Volume 9 of the Un-American Activities Report for the year 1939.

While a member of the Communist Party, I attended Communist underground training schools outside the City of New York; in the Bues Hall, and 113 East Wells Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. The East Wells Street School operated under the name of the Eugene Debs School. Here, under the tutoring of Eugene Dennis, M. Sparks, Morris Childs, Jack Kling and others, we were schooled in the art of revolutionary overthrow of the established Government.

We were trained on how to dismantle and assemble mimeograph machines, to use for propaganda purposes during the revolution; how to work on guide wires and fuel lines of airplanes so that they would either burst into flames or crash to the ground because of lack of control; how to work on ties and rails to wreck trains; and also the art of poisoning water supplies.

We discussed quite thoroughly the fluoridation of water supplies and how we were using it in Russia as a tranquilizer in the prison camps. The leaders of our school felt that if it could be induced into the American water supply, it would bring-about a spirit of lethargy in the nation; where it would keep the general public docile during a steady encroachment of Communism. We also discussed the fact that keeping a store of deadly fluoride near the water reservoir would be advantageous during the time of the revolution, as it would give us opportunity to dump this poison into the water supply and either kill off the populace or threaten them with liquidation, so that they would surrender to obtain fresh water.

We discussed in these schools, the complete art of revolution: the seizure of the main utilities, such as light, power, gas, and water; but it was felt by the leadership, that if a program of fluoridating of the water could be carried out in the nation, it would go a long way toward the advancement of the revolution.

The above statements are true.

FACTS ON FLUORIDATION

THE MEDICAL-DENTAL AD HOC COMMITTEE PUBLISHED, IN 1957, THIS STATEMENT ON FLUORIDATION

"We, as members of the medical, dental, and related public health professions, are as concerned as anyone over the prevalence of tooth decay, and as anxious that it be prevented; but each of us, for some or all reasons set forth here, believes that fluoridation of public water supplies is not a proper means of attempting such prevention.

"1. Positive proofs of the safety of fluoridation are required. None has been offered.

"2. The so-called therapeutic concentration of fluoride, arbitrarily established as 1 ppm., in drinking water, is in the toxic range.

"3. Dental fluorosis (ugly discoloration of teeth), the first obvious symptom of chronic fluoride toxicity in children, is an inevitable result of fluoridation, and the evidence reveals that large numbers of the population may be afflicted, and with varying degrees of damage.

"4. The determination of whether damage resulting from dental fluorosis is "objectionable" is a matter for the person whose teeth are affected, and not for the arbitary assertion of public officials.

"5. The conceivable role of fluoride as an insidious factor in chronic disease has been evaded by the proponents. A substantial amount of evidence indicates such a possibility. Properly planned long term studies are required to determine the possible comprehensive association of fluoride with chronic disease.

"6. Fluoridation imposes an extraordinary risk on certain individuals who by reason of occupation, environmental circumstances, state of health, dietary habits, etc., are already exposed to a relatively high intake of fluoride.

"7. Fluoridation is compulsory mass medication without precedent. Mass therapy cannot ignore the possibility of 'mass' side reactions.

"8. The function of a public water supply is to provide pure, safe water for everybody, not to serve as a vehicle for drugs.

"9. The role and efficiency of fluoride in dental carries reduction is a matter of active controversy; whatever the outcome, there are less hazardous and more efficient ways of obtaining such benefits as fluoride may offer than by putting it into the public water supply."

Despite tremendous pressure from commercial interests, dentists at the last two conventions of the American Dental Association, have publicly denounced improper diets and refined foods as the real enemies of dental health. These eminent authorities state that the consumption of denatured foods is so great in America that dentists are unable to keep pace with the corresponding dental decay.

You can save your teeth through a well-balanced diet of fresh vital foods.
For dental health avoid white sugar, white flour, chocolate, commercial candies, fried foods, soda fountain concoctions, vinegar and refined pasteries.

WHY DID WILL KINDIG, FORMER LOS ANGELES CITY COUNCILMAN, WANT TO KNOW: WHAT IS LABOR AND THE POLITICAL PARTIES DOING ABOUT THIS GIVE AWAY? ? ?

Said Mr Kindig:

When we spend $80,000,000 for a battleship, we issue bonds for the amount and deposit them with a bank, and get credit for that amount, and proceed to issue government checks for labor and material which goes into construction. Suppose the bonds draw 2½% interest and run for 40 years. By the time they are due, we will have paid the bankers $80,000,000 in interest, for which they have done nothing but make a bookkeeping entry.

So our battleship has really cost us $160,000,000, one-half for the vessel and one-half as a present to the bankers. So it is with all public improvements which are financed by bonds. In a like manner, also, we will have to pay for our war twice.

And, remember, you are the victim. You have to dig up the payments for the interest on the bonds each year, by the taxes you pay on your income, gasoline, cigarettes, liquor, amusements, etc. You must like it or you would make some protest to the men who can change it, your Congressmen. For Congress could change this any day.

And that is not all of the Bankers' Magic. Read a most significant statement by Marriner Eccles, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank, before a Senate Investigating Committee. He said, "When the banks take a billion dollars of government bonds as they are offered, they credit the United States Treasury with a billion dollars, and charge their Government Bond Account with a billion dollars; or, they CREATE, by a bookkeeping entry, the money with which they buy the bonds!"

Also, The Carter H. Harrison Company, Investment Brokers, of Chicago, in urging their clients to buy bank stocks, say "It is essential only to realize that all banks CREATE out of nothing, the money they lend, even to the government."

They CREATE the money out of nothing. So the bonds do not cost them anything. When YOU buy bonds, you pay real money which you have earned and saved, and for which you have given Society some service. Just try to create some money yourself, to buy bonds with, and see how quickly you will land in jail.

It might be interesting, in passing, to note that the name "Federal Reserve Bank" and naming its head officer "Governor," was probably for the express purpose of fooling the people into believing that the Federal Reserve system is a branch of the government, instead of a purely private bank, from which the government receives no revenue, and in the management of which it has no voice.

In April 24, 1944, issue of TIME magazine, the statement is made that "All United States National Banks earned in 1943, 22.9% on outstanding capital stock. Part of the increase is due to the fact that the banks have invested in government securities." They use the word "invested." They do not reveal the fact that these banks got their bonds for nothing. Incidentally, even with their 22.9% earnings, they are so poor that they cannot pay us over three-quarters of one per cent on our deposits.

You can imagine with what glee the bankers read reports of Congress piling up constantly increasing amounts of appropriations which will have to be financed by bonds.

The banker can add to his bank's assets the total value of the bonds which cost his bank nothing, and compute his dividends accordingly.

You DONATE the bonds to the banker and then pay him interest on them besides.

What do you think of that for a "crack-pot" system? It is the best possible plan, specifically designed to make the rich, richer, and the poor, poorer.

We are proud of our credit, and swell up with pride, when we read that a government bond issue had been "over-subscribed." But, naturally, the banks will oversubscribe every issue, since they get theirs for nothing. Naturally, too, the banks want more bonds issued—millions, billions—hundreds of billions. The war furnishes a good excuse for unlimited issues.

In 1863, Congress was cajoled, or threatened, or bribed, into passing the National Banking Act, by which the bankers were given this privilege, which is THE GREATEST SPECIAL PRIVILEGE ON EARTH. And Congress can change it at any time. And Congress will do so when enough of you voters demand that the present incumbents do it, or you elect someone else who will do the job.

Proponents of such a change cannot get it before the people through the ordinary channels, because there is not a daily newspaper in the country which dares to print the truth in the matter. They are scared to death of the bankers and the bankers' influence. Bankers can foreclose mortgages on publishers' homes and printing plants. They can refuse to extend loans. They can influence large mercantile firms and manufacturers to withdraw advertisements, and thus take away the support of the papers. Neither will the radios allow anything to go on the air which might offend the bankers, or expose their graft.

But you voters do hold the real power over Congress. Any Congressman who would receive a hundred letters a day on this subject from his voting constituents, would hurry to get in line, and help Congressman Jerry Voorhis in his plan to have the government buy out the Federal Reserve Bank, and issue our own currency in accord with the constitution (Art. I, Sec. 8, par. 5) Under the original charter provision of the Federal Reserve Bank, the government could do this for about $140,000,00, and take over all the assets of the system, amounting to some $29,000,000,000. This would mean that we would be getting about 200 for 1, and it would be one time that a good business deal would be made by and for our government.

Every time you buy a gallon of gasoline or a package of cigarettes, and every time you go to a movie you have to include a tax which the Government has to take to be sure the Wall St. bankers get their interest. Any time you get tired of it, you can aid in stopping it by writing to your Congressman.

Now get busy and write to your Congressman about it; and do it quickly and do it often.

WHY? DO CONSTITUTIONATIONALISTS WANT TO KNOW? WHY?

WHY in presenting the foregoing thoughtful analysis of our banking and currency system by a real student of the money question, do Ye Editors of South Hayward News feel that such readers, while the irrefutable statements made therein are still fresh in their memories, should ask themselves these questions:

WHY should the American people support any proposal for a Constitutional or other amendment that would permit the holders of 50 billions in Government bonds, acquired through the manipulation of such patently unsavory processes as those described by Mr Kindig, to acquire the assets of some 700 Federal corporations which, according to the estimates of its sponsors, cost the American Taxpayers in excess of 200 billions of dollars?

WHY is there something in the money question so vividly portrayed by Mr Kindig that prevents any true Constitutionalist from seeing through this patently unConstitutional phase of the money question?

WHY, assuming that the purchase of material resources which cost the American Taxpayers in excess of 200 billions of dollars by the holders of such allegedly fraudulently acquired 50 billions of Government bonds would result in savings sufficient to repeal the personal income tax, would such repeal not throw upon the shoulders of the owners of real property the burden of paying taxes sufficient to provide the funds required by their Government in the conduct of its affairs, even in times of war as in times of peace?

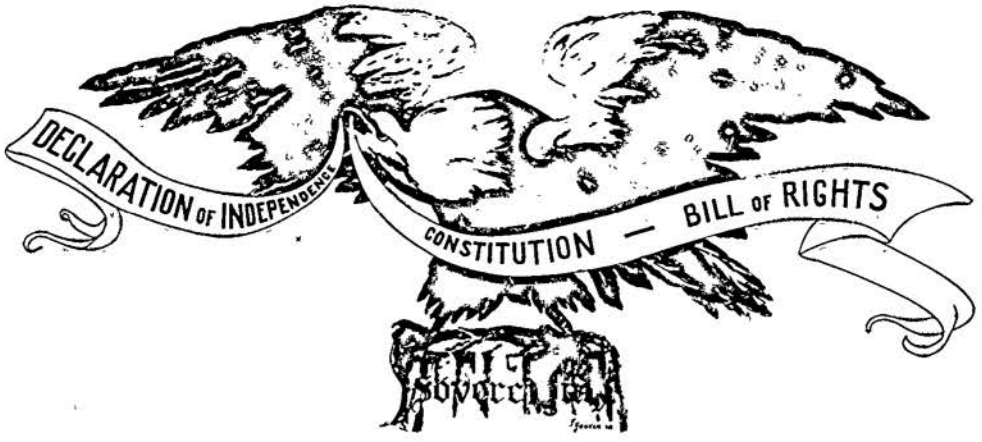
WHY would this not rapidly lead to the fulfillment of the Marxian tenet calling for the abolition of private property?

WHY would the consumation of such a gigantic fraud upon the unalienable Constitutional rights of We, the people sovereign have any bearing whatsoever on "the reestablishment" of the so-called "American theme of equal justice under the law", claimed by its sponsors? and

WHY, and in what manner would the "reestablishment" of such brand of "equal justice under the law" have any bearing whatsoever on the "restoration of international justice, confidence, honor, and integrity", as further claimed by certain advocates of such proposed remedies?

WHY are not such fallacious arguments not just so much "hog wash" to fool the unfortunate electors into supporting measures which would lead them into voluntarily surrendering their inalienable sovereignties and thereby forever estop them from taking means short of war to effectively liberate themselves from measures which subordinate the sovereign rights of American citizens to the will of an alien power?

WHY? in view of these imminent possibilities should the American people not view with "the greatest concern" all proposed Amendments to their Constitution which might or could deprive them of "that first right reserved to the people" to go to the polls and there initiate laws for the commonweal that their chosen Representatives to Federal, State and local Assemblies have failed to provide them?



WHY are there sophists?

WHY is it possible to fool all Constitutionalists part of the time, and some Constitutionalists all of the time, but not all Constitutionalists all of the time?

To the Vigilant Christian Citizens of the United States of America addressed:

Greetings:

Inclusion of the word "religion" in the accompanying photostat copy of Assembly Bill, 594, now pending before the California State Legislature under the sponsorship of Legislative Tycoons high in Democratic Party Councils, tears to shreds the masks of hypocracy that have cloaked sundry F.E.P.C. proposals as being something other than brazen attempts on the part of an alien minority to marshall its Marxian inspired "labor army" to "drag God from the skies", and outlaw the Christian religion by making it a civil and criminal offense to read the Holy Bible, not only in the Public Schools, but in our Christian Church Assemblies as well, on the premise that such reading would "incite" race prejudice, and race prejudice discrimination in employment practices, to the everlasting detriment of our Western Christian Civilization, irrespective of race, color, ancestry, or national origin.

To avoid the terrible blood purge that this ill-considered proposal foreshadows, we urge upon all into whose hands these presents come to exert every effort at their command to stop this macaber march to perdition NOW before it becomes the law of the land.

If it is impossible for you who read these lines to take an active part in the effort now being made to do so, then you should help those who are in the thick of the fight by contributing of your material resources to the limit of your ability so to do while you can yet do so voluntarily, and not at the point of a bayonette as you will in all probability be compelled to do if the forces back of this proposal are not stopped in their mad scramble for political power. To do so, please use the following

THIS IS IT! THAT GREAT EVENT THAT CASTS ITS SHADOW BEFORE

The one great event that is destined to split our citizenry, if not our entire Western Civilization, into waring camps predicated upon differences of race, color religion, ancestry, and national origins, as no other issue could, is the proposal advanced by Messrs Unruh, Munnell, Bruce F Allen, Burton, Masterson, and Waldie, set out in full below, to bring about integration in California by making it a criminal and civil offense to deny admission to the Councils and Organizations of one group to that of another.

The reasons for this are quite simple and easy of understanding. Freedom has been defined as nothing more or less than the right of self-determination; slavery as the negation of that right.

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE, 1959 REGULAR (GENERAL) SESSION

ASSEMBLY BILL No. 594

Introduced by Messrs. Unruh, Munnell, Bruce F. Allen, Burton, Masterson, and Waldie

January 21, 1959

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE ON JUDICIARY—CIVIL

An act to amend Sections 51 and 52 of, and to repeal Sections 53 and 54 of, the Civil Code, relating to civil rights.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 51 of the Civil Code is amended to read:

51. All citizens within the jurisdiction of this State, no matter what their race, color, religion, ancestry, or national origin, are entitled to the full and equal admittance, accommodations, advantages, facilities, membership, and privileges in, or accorded by, all public or private groups, organizations, associations, business establishments, schools, and public facilities; to purchase real property; and to obtain the services of any professional person, group or association.

This section shall not be construed to confer any right or privilege on a citizen which is denied, for good cause, and which is applicable alike to citizens of every color, race, religion, ancestry, or national origin. ~~of inns, restaurants, hotels, eating houses, places where ice cream or soft drinks of any kind are sold for consumption on the premises, barber shops, bath houses, theaters, skating rinks, public conveyances and all other places of public accommodation or amusement, subject~~

~~only to the conditions and limitations established by law, and applicable alike to all citizens.~~

SEC. 2. Section 52 of said code is amended to read:

52. Whoever denies ~~to any citizen, except for reasons applicable alike to every race or color, the full accommodations, advantages, facilities, and privileges enumerated in section fifty-one of this~~ code, or who aids, or incites such denial, or whoever makes any discrimination, distinction or restriction on account of ~~color~~, ~~or~~ race, religion, ancestry, or national origin, contrary to the provisions of Section 51 of this code, is liable for each and every such offense for the actual damages, and five hundred dollars dollars ($500) in addition thereto, suffered by any person denied the rights provided in Section 51 of this code. The prevailing party in any suit brought for such damages shall be awarded his actual costs and attorney fees. ~~or except for good cause, applicable alike to citizens of every color or race whatsoever, in respect to the admission of any citizen to, or his treatment in, any inn, hotel, restaurant, eating house, place where ice cream or soft drinks are sold for consumption on the premises, barber shop, bath house, theater, skating rink, public conveyance, or other public place of amusement or accommodation, whether such place is licensed or not, or whoever aids or incites such discrimination, distinction or restriction, for each and every such offense is liable in damages in an amount not less than one hundred dollars, which may be recovered in an action at law brought for that purpose.~~

SEC. 3. Sections 53 and 54 of said code are repealed.

SEC. 4. If any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, such invalidity shall not affect other provisions or applications of the act which can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and to this end the provisions of this act are severable.

Whereas this proposed bill denies to all citizens the right of self-determination (Freedom), it is not an effort on the part of one group to obtain Freedom from another. It is a gesture on the part of its proponents to enslave all citizens by denying them the right of self-determination (Freedom).

This is anything but an American proposal. America was meant to be essentially a land of Freedom. That we assert in our National songs; that is our National pride and glory. But we have wandered far afield from the teachings of our Revolutionary forebears. that cluster of fine minds that freed these United States of America from the tyrannical despotisms of International intrigue. Only the introduction of such bills tell us how far.

"To honor and preserve the memory and spirit of those who fought or labored to achieve and/or maintain the Independence (Freedom) of the United States of America" "that Governments of, by, and for the people might not perish from this earth" is the cardinal purpose of the First National Spirit of Freedom Crusade.

Vigilant Americans who value their Freedom (right of self-determination) will do well to look at all such efforts to enslave them with the greatest concern. This they can best do by getting BACK TO THE REPUBLIC OF THE FOUNDING FATHERS, and

DO IT NOW!

WHY? DO CONSTITUTIONATIONALISTS WANT TO KNOW? WHY?

WHY? WILL THE CODDLING OF ALIEN SABOTEURS IN AMERICA NOT BRING ABOUT THE WHOLESALE SLAUGHTER OF AMERICAN CITIZENS IN PRECISELY THE SAME MANNER THAT THE CODDLING OF ALIEN SABOTEURS IN RUSSIA BROUGHT ABOUT THE WHOLESALE SLAUGHTER OF RUSSIAN CITIZENS (more than 13,000,000 of them) AS SHOWN IN THE ACCOMPANYING STREET SCENE IN RUSSIA DURING THE 1917 COMMUNIST REVOLUTION IN THAT UNFORTUNATE COUNTRY.

WHY? in other words, is not 'tolerance' the Devil's pass word?

WHY? if there is no cure for gullibility, and gullibility is the twin sister of tolerance, should we not agree with Schlafly when he said, in a speech before the Commonwealth Club, of San Francisco, last Dec 29, 1958, that

"WE PRAY WARREN MAJORITY WILL DO ITS HOMEWORK ON COMMUNISM."

FRIDAY FLASHES—DEC, 19TH
From Address by J. F. SCHLAFLY, JR.
Member, American Bar Assn. Committee on Communist Strategy

"IN THE COLE case the Warren majority ruled that supporters of Communist causes could not be fired from non-sensitive Government jobs.

—In the case of John Stewart Service, the Warren majority ruled that a man who had clandestine meetings with a Soviet espionage agent, could not be fired from a sensitive State Department job, even by Dean Acheson.

—The New York Times reported on July 11, 1958 that more than 300 Government employees, fired for being security risks, would have to be reinstated with back pay. Judge Robert Morris, for many years chief counsel for the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, stated: 'Just imagine the damage that 300 security risks can work on the security of this country.'

WARREN MAJORITY

Paralyzed Enforcement

—In the Nelson case the Warren majority decided that Pennsylvania could not punish a Pennsylvania Communist, who had helped organize the theft of our military secrets, for violating Pennsylvania's laws against sedition, for the alleged reason that sedition was also punishable under the Federal Smith Act.

—This decision paralyzed enforcement of the sedition and subversion laws of 42 states, Alaska and Hawaii.

—In the cases involving Yates and the other California Communists the Warren majority held that the Smith Act could not be used to punish Communists teaching the violent overthrow of our Government 'with evil intent'; also that all organizing work for the Communist Party ceased in 1945, which gave the Communist recruiters the protection of the statute of limitation.

—This decision caused the release of more than 70 convicted Communists. In reluctantly freeing 11 of these convicted Communists Federal Judge Richard Chambers of your own Court of Appeals said that this Supreme Court decision 'leaves the Smith Act, as to any further prosecution under it, a virtual shambles.'

"Greatest Communist Victory"

—J. Edgar Hoover testified that a top Communist described the Supreme Court's decision in the Yates case 'as the greatest victory the Communist Party in America has ever received.'

—In the Watkins, Flaxer, and Raley cases the Warren majority held that neither the House Un-American Activities Committee nor the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, nor the Un-American Activities Committee of Ohio, could ask witnesses, who did not take the Fifth Amendment, to tell about their Communist activities or to produce their Communist records.

—In the Slochower and Sweezy cases the Warren majority decided that teachers in public schools could not be fired for taking the Fifth Amendment when asked about Communist activities, and that it was an infringement of academic freedom even to ask about their Communist activities.

—In the Subversive Activities Control Board case the Warren majority refused to uphold the validity of the Internal Security Act of 1950. As a result 500,000 pieces of foreign Communist propaganda are sent each month to American colleges.

—If the Warren majority had upheld the validity of the Internal Security Act all such propaganda would have to be stamped 'Disseminated by ————, a Communist organization.'

Passports for Leningrad School

—In the Weldon Dayton passport case the Warren majority ruled that the State Department had to issue a passport to a research physicist who, according to the New York times 'had been present several times when secret government documents had been microfilmed for transference to the Soviet Union by Julius Rosenberg and members of his spy ring,' and even though Dayton was going to work abroad with a Communist 'who recently renounced his American citizenship.'

—As a result 702 American Communists and pro-Communists demanded passports and 642 of them are now equipped with all the prestige conferred by a U.S.A. passport.

—Security officers believe some of these men are going to attend the Leningrad Espionage School for graduate work in industrial and military spying, transmission of secret messages, and use of agitators.

—In September 1958 the Army Chief of Research and Development, Lieutenant General Arthur Trudeau said that Soviet technical progress was due more to 'success in espionage and subversion than it is to their scientific apparatus.' He said 'we are a country that's highly penetrated.'

—Apropos of these decisions J. Edgar Hoover told the American Legion: 'To dismiss lightly the existence of the subversive threat in the United States is to deliberately commit national suicide.'

—The predecessors of the Warren majority were extremely well informed on the workings of the Communist conspiracy and its clear and present danger.

Not a Political Party

—Chief Justice Vinson sustained the Smith Act; in another case approved the statement of Justice Jackson that the Communist Party is not a political party but 'is a conspiratorial and revolutionary junta, organized to reach ends and to use methods which are incompatible with our constitutional system.'

Decisions Based on Assumed Facts, Not True

—Many decisions of the Warren majority are based on assumed facts which are really not true. Thus in the Watkins case Chief Justice Warren assumed that Royal Commissions did not require witnesses to answer questions and concluded therefore that the House Un-American Activities Committee should not.

—Had the Chief Justice read either of the two most important Royal Commission investigations, Gouzenko and Petrov, he would have learned that: (1) Royal Commissions do not recognize a privilege against self-incrimination; and (2) also unlike congressional committees, the Royal Commissions can arrest witness and hold them in jail until they answer all questions.

—The 39 cases involving Communism which the Warren majority has decided (30 in favor of the position taken by the Communists) cite many books and articles. But not once has the Warren majority cited any of the more than 100 classic anti-Communist books and reports.

—Instead the Warren majority twice cited a British socialist as authority for depriving Congress of the power to investigate Communism.

—In one case the Warren majority cited with approval a book edited by a Swedish socialist and co-authored by persons affiliated with 422 Communist enterprises. This book refers to the American Constitution as 'nearly a plot against the American people.'

No Court, Informed on Communism . . .

—No court which was informed on Communism, or opposed to socialism, would have cited with approval this book. The Charles Evans Hughes court, the Harlan Stone court, and the Fred Vinson court never cited writings of socialists and Communists as guides for American law.

—Attempts were made in the last Congress: (1) To restore to Congressional Committees the same freedom to investigate Communists and pro-Communists that these Committees have always had to investigate businessmen and labor leaders; (2) To restore to the States the right to enforce their own anti-subversive laws; (3) To restore to the Executive Branch the right to dismiss security risks from both sensitive and non-sensitive Government jobs; and (4) To restore to the Executive the right to deny passports to members of the Communist conspiracy and their supporters.

—Some misguided people said these bills should be defeated because they would 'curb the Court.'

—In the last 20 years Congress has on more than 10 occasions passed bills which curbed or overcame the effect of what the American people thought were bad Court decisions. Examples are the decision which ordered payment of portal to portal pay, the decisions which held that tidelands oil did not belong to the states.

—Another argument made against plugging the holes in our national security is that the Court is our national umpire.

—Suppose the umpire says that the home team has to tell the red team everything but that the red team doesn't have to tell the home team anything.

—Suppose the umpire says that the red players can infiltrate into the home team's huddle and even sneak men into every position on the home team except quarterback, which the umpire says is the only 'sensitive' position; and the umpire forbids the home team to remove these reds because they are not occupying 'sensitive positions.'

—We lawyers always defended the Hughes Court, the Stone Court, and the Vinson Court. We will defend the Warren majority as long as it confines itself to umpiring.

—When the Warren majority starts changing the rules of the game, when, as Federal Judge Learned Hand wrote, it has assumed 'the role of a third legislative chamber' then lawyers must defend the Constitution, because it provides that all legislative power shall be vested only on the Congress and in the state legislatures, and not in the courts.

—We pray that the Warren majority will do its homework on Communism."

TOTAL U. S. DEBT ZOOMS TO RECORD $770 BILLION!
IS U. S. DOLLAR ON WAY OUT? FINANCIAL CRISIS LOOMS. The experts say the U. S. Government is facing a financial crisis. We are supposed to be at the bottom of the barrel—no more money, and no more money in sight unless we start the printing presses.

BILLIONS THROWN AWAY. SHALL WE CONTINUE TO SUPPORT THE WORLD?
"The American Eagle Cannot Continue To Fly On Two Left Wings" — Dean Manion

The total "aid" to date is 124 billion, 647 million, 310 thousand of our dollars. Of this, only 49 billion was given during the war period to June 1945. Yugoslavia and Russia itself is included in this favored group of foreigh 'Aid'. Is this a way to fight Communism?

Many are buying and storing gold for the crash ahead! Remember the fantastic decline in value of the German mark after World War I and the Italian Lire after World War II. This is what happens to all currency that is not backed by sound, adequate Gold reserves! Is the U. S. dollar approaching this position doday? Gold is artificially pegged at $35 per oz. For many years, the price of gold no longer reflects the actual demand for this solid, historically sound commodity in a period of unscund, unstable paper currency.

The Wall Street Journal describes the situation:

"Time has caught up with a prodigal country. For more than a decade this country has spent money like the proverbial drunken sailor.

"We have poured out billions to make life more pleasant for farmers, to pay handsome rewards to veterans, to give ourselves a luxury of houses and roads and any sort of 'welfare' that came happily to mind.

"We've poured billions of hard-earned money all over the globe.

"And we've done all this with a blatant disregard of the dficity, the billions accured our accounts."

Elmer C. Walzer, UPI Financial Editor says:

"The 'technical' problem that grabs the headlines—rising interest rates for borrowed money—is merely a warning sight of what lies beneath."

"FOREIGNERS COULD DRAIN FT. KNOX

"Foreigners hold about $18 billions of dollars and government securities. If they repatriated these holdings and turned them over to their governments for their own currencies, the governments could drain every ounce of gold we have.

"Also we are going into the hole each year to the tune of around $5 billion in our foreign operations."

"You're wasting your money. You might as well send it direct to us instead of the middleman, because we get most of it anyway.

Your agents give us the codebooks and then we send false information back to you through your code. Then we send cables asking for money and you send it to us."

Thus bragged Nikita Khuschev while in Los Angeles, according to Victor M. Carter, the city's official guide for the premier. Carter is president of Republic Studios. He was born at Rostov in Russia and came to this country in 1920. The above quoted remark was made of the American Central Intelligence Agency headed by Allen Dulles. When Allen Dulles met Khruschchev in Washington at the start of the tour, Khrushchev greeted him with similar remarks about the CIA. "I know you", Khrushchev said on being introduced to Dulles. "I read the same reports you do."

What The World Has Been Waiting For

THE SPIRIT OF ATTITUDE

The ONLY book ever presented on the subject. NOT a religion, merely the Science of Civilized Attitude and Attitude's Mysteries, seeking areas of Universal Human Agreement to replace Disagreement.

It is based upon the scientific definitions of attitude as selected from the most widely accepted, United State's American, college and university text-books.

THE SPIRIT BOOK CO. October 23-62. BOX 611, SO. HOUSTON, TEXAS

Public Schools Superintendent
San Angelo, Texas.

Dear Sir:

The Spirit of Attitude concept (as per the enclosed book) is a million times as useful to education and civilization as an intelligence expediter than a "stand-in" for imaginary ghosts. Teaching the basic and elementary facts about it to the school pupils, using its full name, will do as much to raise the mental and other standards of this nation as anything present circumstance have to offer.

Help break the existing sub-rosa collusion conspiracy against civilization. Don't remain accessories,accomplices or condoners to what might be destined to bring world disgrace or worse down upon us.

I suggest you correlate these letters and the book, select the most desirable excerpts from them and have as much of it taught to the pupils as your conscience and sense of responsibility dictate.

Don't sell this project short. Records will be kept showing your district has been presented with this opportunity. Many keenly intelligent minds will be evaluating this material and your responsibility as well.

Yours sincerely,

John Z. MacDonald

ATTENTION ALL EDUCATORS

An exact duplicate of this letter has been sent by registered mail (8-30-62) to Anthony J. Celebrezze, U. S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. Many other copies are being mailed to various State Boards of Education, School Superintendents and Principals, also the U. S. Attorney General. None of these officials should have blank or blind spots in their minds regarding the factual existence and educational value or importance of the Spirit of Attitude principle or concept.

By this letter each and all of them are charged with notice, for public record, that the U. S. Educational Secretary has received one. What he does regarding the subject matter will thereby also become a matter of record.

The Secretary and others are also being mailed an exposition book on the Spirit of Attitude for their further enlightenment. If, after a reasonable length of time, these officials do nothing constructive about this phase of public education, the opportunity to get the credit for doing so will be presented to foreign countries.

THE KEY FACTS to understanding the Attitude Spirit are these: The principle, with its inherent methodology, of maintaining attitudes toward life situations is a process that original life had to conceive and use in adjusting to its environment. Without this primordial method to guide them, the various forms of life could not have survived more than a mere accidental length of time. After life had developed beyond the point of chance and accident, moving into different situations, the dire necessity arose for attitude and mind to develop as the "sine qua non" of survival. Purposeful life could not continue to exist without this basic principle being "ever present" as the mind's most constant factor in times of needed guidance. Regardless of any specific attitude, in particular, the attitude constant was the general principle prevailing over all of them, as an attitude toward attitude.

Given an evoluting mind with such a basic constant, it was virtually predestined, by its nature, that this ideological principle would become ever more and more introspectively conscious in that mind above all other consciousness. Due to the circumstances, people began to "feel" or "sense" the "presence" of that "guiding process". They developed a growing "sense" that "something illusive" existed and was causing its "effects" to be "felt" in many ways.

It continued to cause additional and more increasingly important effects or products as life advanced through the ages. Some of these more important "attitude-effect-products" are: mind, intelligence, sanity, language and its resultant communication, also cooperation. Love, Good-will, the Golden Rule, Conscience, etc. are all outgrowths of it. Even all the principles, precepts or articles in the Bill of Rights and our Constitution are, actually, attitudes to be observed, not only in letter but also in the spirit of our more complete attitudinal behavior, feeling, and thoughts toward them.

Before the human race developed its more highly specialized knowledge and oriented understanding, these results of attitude in operation were merely things of extremely peculiar character to the more primitive and ignorant people of long ago. Such things always were and will be, in their realistic and legitimately educational sense, purely natural attitude-effects.

Most large dictionaries list one definition of spirit as: "Peculiar character or quality, as indicated by tendencies or effects". These above mentioned "things" of peculiar character have always been "effects" of attitude in operation and, therefore, "SPIRITS OF ATTITUDE" in accord with the dictionary definition. Regardless of their "peculiarity" they never were supernatural entities, Gods, Spirits nor Devils, not even the workings or evidence of any.

In the childhood of the human race it was normal for imaginations to run riot. People, like little children, twisted every accidental illusion into an abnormality of delusion. In their abysmally primitive ignorance they did the same thing to this attitude spirit as they did to the sun in the sky. They jumped to the unfortunate conclusion that it was a God, to be appeased by praying to it because they did not know any better.

THE SPIRIT OF ATTITUDE concept is the COMMON DENOMINATOR KEY to the understanding and adjustment to most all the vital concerns of life. They originated and developed under its "sine qua non" guidance. We cannot afford to sacrifice these factors in civilization any longer on the altar of superstitious ignorance. There is no substitute for attitude adjustment. Fanatical substitution leads to maladjustment and maladjustment is insanity in degree.

Attitude principle is the orienting factor of life and mind. To orient is to relate and interrelate. In the field of human RELATIONS it is no exception. It is imperative for public educational agencies to orient this orientation key to their entire field of education. It is doubly imperative in view of the confusion in human relations and world circumstances. The present MESS would not exist if educators had done their duty long ago.

This SPIRIT OF ATTITUDE principle, as revealed or expounded in the SPIRIT of ATTITUDE book and documented by quotations from your own educational texts, is one of the most CONSTRUCTIVE CONCEPTS possible for the human mind to know and utilize. Building civilization, however, is a vast undertaking which constructiveness alone cannot do. A few sadly unfortunate and stagnating mistakes, misconceptions and blunders of dark age ignorance, which are obstructing further progress in the sane development of civilization, must be rectified.

If the constructive element of the project is conscientiously taken care of by public educators, the destructive phase need not be brought into operation to any material extent. Public school educators, however, will have to do it or national disgrace will be brought down upon them for dereliction of duty. They are the only ones who can settle the issue in the most peaceful manner by quietly and smoothly carrying it through. It is their official obligation.

It is not the duty of the church, even though the central issue is named the SPIRIT OF ATTITUDE. The only reason why preachers pretend to be spiritual educators is so they can play "dog-in-the-manger" with this very spirit of attitude. To actually expound it would be fatal to their racket business.

When ignorant people, in the distant past, first made the error of imagining the attitude-feeling might be a God spirit, it was the preacher-minded crooks who, for exploitation purposes, saw to it they never learned any better. They used the opportunity to capitalize upon the misfortune of ignorance for profit and ill-gotten recognition. They both ignorantly and deliberately let people keep on thinking it was a supernatural God with themselves as middlemen. They are entitled to a God or even millions of them if they can produce honest and aboveboard evidence that any exists.

Their favorite swindle device is the "revival meeting" where church "yes-men" take their cues from the preacher, to psychologically hedge and badger prospective converts into thinking the bull-dozing spirit of the congregation-devils is the hand of God reaching for them. The so-called converts accede to nothing but deception and fraud, then become addicted to the religious "fix". It is precisely the same psychologically-suggestive attitude-behavior pressure that misleads lynch mobs to murder. The end is different but it could just as easily convert people to anything. With deception as the object, it is vicious.

Added to this shame of blunder and swindle, the church superimposes a "spuriously conditioned response complex" to mislead people into thinking they actually love religion. Then they "rivet" the whole thing home by applying the hypnotic process to induce more pitifully all the delusions common to religious insanity. Eventually, they enter into the state of "Idiot's Euphoria".

There just simply are no sacred liars. For the clergy to continue, either by omission or commission, to misrepresent this attitude spirit to be a supernatural entity or religious experience, for exploitation purposes of any kind, brands them as the basic liars, thieves and criminals by indirection. By setting such examples for children and others to emulate in the future, they become number one enemies of civilized hope. They are robbing us of our most valuable instruments for general welfare, education and survival.

The dignity of intelligence-guided selective-behavior must not be scuttled or sabotaged in favor of control by mob-hysteria. You have dilly-dallied long enough, now get on the job or someone else will, to your regret.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION

What kind of Americans are "on the take"? How are they cheating every one of us? Here is a shocking, factual story that probes behind headline scandals.

Recent "payola" and quiz show exposés only scratched the surface of today's gray-flannel morality. Millions of Americans, as Mr. Gibney proves, are "taken" every day by a vastly more subtle army of "honest" car dealers, "friendly" mortgage men, crooked union bosses, "cure-all" advertisers, chiseling TV repairmen, phony "educators," income-tax swindlers, and "respectable" businessmen all the way from the local store owner to a corporation board chairman.

In the current ethical jungle, members of our Genial Society may be both the innocent and the guilty, victimizer and victim. A staff writer on Life, a former feature writer of Time and an editor of Newsweek, Frank Gibney has documented every page of this extraordinary report—a startling profile of America that is alive with remarkable personalities and case histories. Not since One Hundred Million Guinea Pigs has one book presented such a powerful indictment of fraud upon the public. Now The Operators illuminates today's vastly different methods and manners, and, going deeper, penetrates the moral confusion evident at every level of the Genial Society of the Fifties.

OUR PLANET IS IN TROUBLE

THE FIGHT OF WILHELM REICH, M.D. FOR LIFE ON EARTH

62-46855-74

A JOURNAL FOR ORGONOMIC (functional) Education

F O R E

Now Available

Volume 1, Number 1 of FORE contains -

The "Reply Brief" of Wilhelm Reich, M.D. which includes:

- § A list of the scientific works burned in 1956 on order of agents of the FDA
- § The "Statements & Statutes" involved in this crucial court case
- § Dr. Reich's "Argument & Summary of Facts," and his "Conclusion"

This first issue of FORE also contains -

- § An article on the "Emotional Plague versus Animal Magnetism," demonstrating how, almost 200 years ago, Dr. F.A. Mesmer postulated the existence of a "Universal Fluid" and suffered the identical plague assault that was employed against Wilhelm Reich in the 20th century.
- § A layman's "Personal Experiences with an Orgone Energy Accumulator," the "device" which the FDA claimed is worthless.
- § An article on "DOR Effects in a Public School"
- § "The Door to Tyranny" - An introduction to the FDA's "case" against Wilhelm Reich, M.D.
- § A copy of the FDA Injunction which perpetually enjoins the scientific research and books of Wilhelm Reich
- § Wilhelm Reich's "Response" to the court, explaining why the FDA action was unlawful.
- § An example of an Emotional Plague book review - with a critical analysis, etc.

PUBLISHER'S PREFACE

On November 3rd, 1957, Wilhelm Reich, M.D., died in a U.S. federal penitentiary, where he had been imprisoned for resisting an unlawful injunction aimed at crushing his research in Basic Natural Science, stealing his vital discoveries, and killing the discoverer. Dr. Reich gave his life to put the "total infamy" of the conspiracy to kill truthful knowledge "before the broad public."

As publishers and citizens, we consider Dr. Reich's death and the destruction and banning of his monumental books, a devastating blow to those who work for human happiness through democratic self-determination.

This volume consists of a small portion of the official Court Record regarding gravest personal, social, and planetary issues. Public administrators, government officials, and federal agents are servants of the people. To countenance deceit, unlawful procedures, and fraudulence on the part of Public Officials, is to relinquish one's Right to Freedom, and to open the door to tyranny.

We let the "Record" speak for itself. . . .

The Hon. Judge Clifford
Federal Court House
Portland, Maine

Dear Judge Clifford:

I am taking the liberty of transmitting to you my "Response" to the complaint filed by the Food and Drug Administration regarding the Orgone Energy Accumulator. My "Response" summarizes my standpoint as a natural scientist who deals with matters of basic natural law. It is not in my hands to judge the legal aspects of the matter.

My factual position in the case as well as in the world of science of today does not permit me to enter the case against the Food and Drug Administration, since such action would, in my mind, imply admission of the authority of this special branch of the government to pass judgment on primordial, pre-atomic cosmic orgone energy.

I, therefore, rest the case in full confidence in your hands.

Sincerely yours,

/s/ Wilhelm Reich, M.D.
Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

R E S P O N S E

Regarding the Request of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to Enjoin the Natural Scientific Activities of Wilhelm Reich, M. D.

In order to clarify the factual as well as the legal situation concerning the complaint, we must, from the very beginning, distinguish concrete facts from legal procedure to do justice to the facts.

Technically, legally the US Government has filed suit against the natural scientific work of Wilhelm Reich.

Factually, the FDA is NOT "The US Government". It is merely one of its administrative agencies dealing with Foods, Drugs and Cosmetics. It is not empowered to deal with Basic Natural Law.

ORGONOMY (see "Bibliography on the History of Orgonomy") is a branch of BASIC NATURAL SCIENCE. Its central object of research is elucidation of the Basic Natural Law.

Now, in order to bring into line the legal procedure with the above-mentioned facts, the following is submitted:

The common law structure of the United States rests originally on Natural Law. This Natural Law has heretofore been interpreted in various ways of thinking, metaphysically, religiously, mechanistically. It has never concretely and scientifically, been subjected to natural scientific inquiry based upon a discovery which encompasses the very roots of existence.

The concept of Natural Law as the foundation of a secure way of life, must firmly rest upon the practical concrete functions of LIFE itself. In consequence, a correct life-positive interpretation of Natural Law, the basis of common law, depends on the factual elucidation of what Life actually is, how it works, what are its basic functional manifestations. From this basic premise derive the claims of natural scientists to a free, unmolested, unimpeded, natural scientific activity in general and in the exploration of the Life Energy in particular.

The complaint of the FDA is factually intimately interconnected with a basic social issue which, at present, is reverberating in the lives of all of us here and abroad.

Abraham Lincoln once said: "What I do say is that no man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent. I say this is a leading principle, the sheet anchor of American republicanism."

At this point, I could easily declare "I refuse to be governed in my basic natural research activities by the Food and Drug Administration." But exactly here, in this constitutional right of mine, the basic confusion in the interpretation of Natural and Common Law becomes apparent.

There are conspirators around whose aim it is to destroy human happiness and self-government. Is now the right of the conspirator to ravage humanity the same as my right to free, unimpeded inquiry?

It obviously is NOT THE SAME THING. I shall not try to answer this basic dilemma of American society at the present. I shall only open an approach to this legal and factual dilemma. It has a lot to do with the position of the complainant, trying to enjoin the experimental and theoretical functions of Life in its emotional, educational, social, economic, intellectual and medical implications.

According to natural, and in consequence, American Common Law, no one, no matter who he is, has the power or legal right to enjoin:

The study and observation of natural phenomena including Life within and without man;

The communication to others of knowledge of these natural phenomena so rich in the manifestations of an existant, concrete, cosmic Life Energy;

The stir to mate in all living beings, including our maturing adolescents;

The emergence of abstractions and final mathematical formulae concerning the natural life force in the universe, and the right to their dissemination among one's fellow men;

The handling, use and distribution of instruments of basic research in any field, medical, educational, preventive, physical, biological, and in fields which emerge from such basic activities and which, resting on such principles, must by all means remain free.

Attempts such as branding activities and instruments of such kind as "adulterated," in other words as fraud, only characterizes the narrowness of the horizon of the complainant.

No man-made law ever, no matter whether derived from the past or projected into a distant, unforeseeable future, can or should ever be empowered to claim that it is greater than the Natural Law from which it stems and to which it must inevitably return in the eternal rhythm of creation and decline of all things natural. This is valid, no matter whether we speak in terms such as "God", "Natural Law", "Cosmic Primordial Force", "Ether" or "Cosmic Orgone Energy".

The present critical state of international human affairs requires security and safety from nuisance interferences with efforts toward full, honest, determined clarification of man's relationship to nature within and without himself; in other words, his relationship to the Law of Nature. It is not permissible, either morally, legally or factually to force a natural scientist to expose his scientific results and methods of basic research in court. This point is accentuated in a world crisis where biopathic men hold in their hands power over ruined, destitute multitudes.

To appear in court as a "defendant" in matters of basic natural research would in itself appear, to say the least, extraordinary. It would require disclosure of evidence in support of the position of the discovery of the Life Energy. Such disclosure, however, would invoke untold complications, and possibly national disaster.

Proof of this can be submitted at any time only to a duly authorized personality of the US Government in a high, responsible position.

Scientific matters cannot possibly ever be decided upon in court. They can only be clarified by prolonged, faithful bona fide observations in friendly exchange of opinion, never by litigation. The sole purpose of the complainant is to entangle orgonomic basic research in endless, costly legal procedures a la Panmunjon, which will accomplish exactly NOTHING rational or useful to human society.

Inquiry in the realm of Basic Natural Law is outside the judicial domain, of this, or ANY OTHER KIND OF SOCIAL ADMINISTRATION ANYWHERE ON THIS GLOBE, IN ANY LAND, NATION OR REGION.

Man's right to know, to learn, to inquire, to make bona fide errors, to investigate human emotions must, by all means, be safe, if the word FREEDOM should ever be more than an empty political slogan.

If painstakingly elaborated and published scientific findings over a period of 30 years could not convince this administration, or will not be able to convince any other social administration of the true nature of the discovery of the Life Energy, no litigation in any court anywhere will ever help to do so.

I, therefore, submit, in the name of truth and justice, that I shall not appear in court as the "defendant" against a plaintiff who by his mere complaint already has shown his ignorance in matters of natural science. I do so at the risk of being, by mistake, fully enjoined in all my activities. Such an injunction would mean practically exactly nothing at all. My discovery of the Life Energy is today widely known nearly all over the globe, in hundreds of institutions, whether acclaimed or cursed. It can no longer be stopped by anyone, no matter what happens to me.

Orgone Energy Accumulators, the "devices" designed to concentrate cosmic Orgone Energy, and thus to make it available to further research in medicine, biology and physics, are being built today in many lands, without my knowledge and consent, and even without any royalty payments.

On the basis of these considerations, I submit that the case against Orgonomy be taken out of court completely.

Chairman of Basic Research of THE WILHELM REICH FOUNDATION

Date: February 22, 1954

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF MAINE
SOUTHERN DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff v. THE WILHELM REICH FOUNDATION, a Maine Corporation, WILHELM REICH and ILSE OLLENDORFF, Defendants	Civil Action No. 1056 DECREE OF INJUNCTION

Plaintiff having filed a Complaint for Injunction herein to enjoin the defendants and others from further alleged violations of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act; and each defendant having been duly served, on February 10, 1954, with a summons and copy of the Complaint; and no defendant having appeared or answered in person or by representative, although the time therefor has expired; and each defendant having been duly served, on February 26, 1954, with a copy of Requests for Admissions; and no defendant having served any answer to said Requests, although the time therefor has expired; and the default of each defendant having been entered herein; and it appearing that the defendants, unless enjoined therefrom, will continue to introduce or cause to be introduced or delivered, or cause to be delivered into interstate commerce orgone energy accumulators, devices within the meaning of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, 21 U.S.C. 301 et seq, which are misbranded and adulterated, and in violation of 21 U.S.C. 331 (a) and (k); and the Court having been fully advised in the premises;

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED that the defendants, THE WILHELM REICH FOUNDATION, WILHELM REICH, and ILSE OLLENDORFF and each and all of their officers, agents, servants, employees, attorneys, all corporations, associations, and organizations, and all persons in active concert or participation with them or any of them, be, and they hereby are, perpetually enjoined and restrained from doing any of the following acts, directly or indirectly, in violation of Sections 301(a) or 301(k) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C.C. 331(a) or (k)) with respect to any orgone energy accumulator device, in any style or model, any and all accessories, components or parts thereof, or any similar device, in any style or model, and any device purported or represented to collect and accumulate the alleged orgone energy:

(1) Introducing or causing to be introduced or delivering or causing to be delivered for introduction into interstate commerce any such article of device which is:

(a) Misbranded within the meaning of Section 502(a) of the Act (21 U.S.C. 352(a)) by reason of any representation or suggestion in its labeling which conveys the impression that such article, in any style or model, is an outstanding therapeutic agent, is a preventive of and beneficial for use in any disease or disease condition, is effective in the cure, mitigation, treatment, and prevention of any disease, symptom, or condition; or

(b) Misbranded within the meaning of Section 502 (2) of the Act (21 U.S.C. 352(a)) by reason of any representation or suggestion in its labeling which conveys the impression that the alleged orgone energy exists; or

(c) Misbranded within the meaning of Section 502(a) of the Act (21 U.S.C. 352(a)) by reason of any photographic representation or suggestion with a caption, or otherwise, which conveys the impression that such is an actual photograph depicting the alleged orgone energy or an alleged excited orgone energy field; or

(d) Misbranded within the meaning of Section 502(a) of the Act (21 U.S.C. 352(a)) by reason of any other false or misleading representation or suggestion; or

(e) Adulterated within the meaning of Section 501(c) of the Act (21 U.S.C. 351(c)) in that (1) its strength differs from or its quality falls below that which it purports or is represented to possess or (2) it purports to collect from the atmosphere and accumulate in said device the alleged orgone energy; or

(2) Doing any act or causing any act to be done with respect to any orgone energy accumulator device while such device is held for sale (including rental, or any other disposition) after shipment in interstate commerce which results in said device becoming misbranded or adulterated in any respect; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED:

(1) That all orgone energy accumulator devices, and their labeling, which were shipped in interstate commerce and which (a) are on a rental basis, or (b) otherwise owned or controlled by any one of the defendants, or by the defendants, be recalled by the defendants to their place of business at Rangeley, Maine; and

(2) That the devices referred to in (1) immediately above, and their parts, be destroyed by the defendants or, they may be dismantled and the materials from which they were made salvaged after dismantling; and

(3) That the labeling referred to in paragraph (1), just above, except those items for which a specific purchase price was paid by their owners, be destroyed by the defendants; and

(4) That all parts or portions of orgone accumulator devices shipped in interstate commerce and returned to Rangeley, Maine, or elsewhere, and awaiting repair or re-shipment be destroyed by the defendants, or they may be dismantled and the materials from which they were made salvaged after dismantling; and

(5) That all copies of the following items of written, printed, or graphic matter, and their covers, if any, which items have constituted labeling of the article of device, and which contain statements and representations pertaining to the existence of orgone energy, its collection by, and accumulation in, orgone energy accumulators, and the use of such alleged orgone energy by employing said accumulators in the cure, mitigation, treatment, and prevention of disease, symptoms and conditions:

shall be withheld by the defendants and not again employed as labeling; in the event, however, such statements and representations, and any other allied material, are deleted, such publications may be used by the defendants; and

(6) That all written, printed, and graphic matter containing instructions for the use of any orgone energy accumulator device, instructions for the assembly thereof, all printed, and other accouncements and order blanks for the items listed in the paragraph immediately above, all documents, bulletins, pamphlets, journals, and booklets entitled in part, as follows: CATALOGUE SHEET, PHYSICIAN'S REPORT, APPLICATION FOR THE USE OF THE ORGONE ENERGY ACCUMULATOR, ADDITIONAL INFORMATION REGARDING SOFT ORGONE IRRADIATION, ORGONE ENERGY ACCUMULATOR ITS SCIENTIFIC AND MEDICAL USE, ORGONE ENERGY BULLETIN, ORGONE ENERGY EMERGENCY BULLETIN, INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF SEX-ECONOMY AND ORGONE RESEARCH, INTERNATIONALE ZEITSCHRUFT FUR ORGONOMIE, EMOTIONAL PLAGUE VERSUS ORGONE BIOPHYSICS. ANNALS OF THE ORGONE INSTITUTE, and ORANUR EXPERIMENT, but not limited to those enumerated, shall be destroyed; and

(7) That the directives and provisions contained in paragraphs (1) to (6) inclusive, above, shall be performed under the supervision of employees of the Food and Drug Administration, authorized representatives of the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare; and

(8) That for the purpose of supervision and securing compliance with this decree the defendants shall permit said employees of the Food and Drug Administration, at reasonable times, to have access to and to copy from, all books, ledgers, accounts, correspondence, memoranda, and other records and documents in the possession or under the control of said defendants, including all affiliated persons, corporations, associations, and organizations, at Rangeley, Maine, or elsewhere, relating to any matters contained in this decree. Any such authorized representative of the Secretary shall be permitted to interview officers or employees of any defendant, or any affiliate, regarding any such matters subject to the reasonable convenience of any of said officers or employees of said defendants, or affiliates, but without restraint or interference from any one of said defendants; and

(9) That the defendants refrain from, either directly or indirectly, in violation of said Act, disseminating information pertaining to the assembly, construction, or composition of orgone energy accumulator devices to be employed for therapeutic or prophylactic uses by man or for other animals.

SUPREME COURT of the UNITED STATES

October Term, 1956

No...688.....

WILHELM REICH, THE WILHELM REICH FOUNDATION and MICHAEL SILVERT, Petitioners,

v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Respondent.

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FIRST CIRCUIT

Petitioners above named pray that a writ of certiorari issue to review a decision and judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit which affirmed judgments of the United States District Court for the District of Maine, Southern Division, entered on May 25, 1956 (R. 534-541).

For background and scientific development of Wilhelm Reich, see Appendix page 11a.

The petitioner Silvert is a licensed physician who has employed the principles of Orgonomy in the treatment of patients and worked with Reich among other physicians and scientists in recent years in the development of cosmic energy experiments.

The Wilhelm Reich Foundation* was established and incorporated in the State of Maine as a non-profit organization under Chapter 50 of revised statutes.

Both the Wilhelm Reich Foundation and Michael Silvert have agreed to adopt as their own the petition and argument of Wilhelm Reich. The Foundation was suspended in 1954 and dissolved December 31, 1955.

*The purposes of said corporation were:

1. To conduct research and teaching in cosmic orgone energy (orgone physics, orgone biophysics), and natural science generally, its medical, technical, other and all future applications;

2. To establish, operate and maintain laboratories and observatories for scientific purposes;

3. To establish, operate and maintain clinics and hospitals for orgonomic medical research and medical orgone therapy;

4. To establish, operate and maintain educational institutions;

5. To establish, operate and maintain bio-energetic research in agriculture;

6. To acquire and preserve the instruments, library and archives of Wilhelm Reich;

7. To preserve the discoveries of Wilhelm Reich and secure them for posterity by the establishment of institutions of learning, maintenance of museums or otherwise;

8. To publish any material concerning the discoveries and work of Wilhelm Reich; and all future work of the corporation based on these discoveries. (Orgone Energy Bulletin, 1951, burned on Court order, August, 1956.)

OPINIONS BELOW

The United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit delivered an opinion by Woodbury, Circuit Judge. That opinion has not yet been reported and is printed as an appendix to this petition. (See p. 1a). There was no opinion in the District Court.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the Court of Appeals was dated, made and entered on December 11, 1956. (See p. 9a) The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1254 (1), 62 Stat. 928.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

A. Whether the responsible citizen has, in a self-governing society, within the framework of the Constitution of the U.S.A., the natural civic right to ignore an unlawful court order, if this order directs him to break into a safe; to violate the Constitution of the U.S.A.; to lie under oath; or to submit to a commercial and political conspiracy to defraud the U.S. public of a discovery crucial during a planetary emergency.

(p. 4)

B. Basic Statutory Questions Involved in Setting Legal Precedent:

I. GENERAL: Whether congressional statutes, well defined to rule a certain circumscribed realm of social functioning (A), may be lawfully applied to realm (B), a new realm of nature, also circumscribed and defined, but entirely different from (A)?

II. CONCRETELY: Whether statutes which rule the functioning of railway systems may be lawfully applied to the functioning of air travel systems? Or are rules which govern air travel legally applicable to future space travel?

III. SPECIFICALLY: Whether the Act of Congress (Pure Food Act, 52 Stat. 1043, 21 U.S.C.), which rules the production and distribution of foods and drugs, may be applied to basic scientific research in general, and research in the realm of the "ETHER" or "COSMIC ENERGY" in particular?

C. 1. Whether injunctions against basic scientific research in newly discovered realms of nature, obtained by fraud, by misrepresentation of facts to the courts, by concealment of pertinent facts, and by outright falsification of facts, are lawful orders.

2. Whether court orders obtained by fraud and conspiracy are, as unlawful orders, automatically null and void. Whether the law requires orders to be lawful orders based on fact not opinion only, on truth and not on falsification, misrepresentation and concealment of fact.

(p. 5)

3. Whether government has jurisdiction to determine questions of scientific opinion in realms of new knowledge of basic natural research.

4. Whether basic research in natural science in hitherto unknown realms of nature requires new laws of administration and should not be subjected to existing statutory laws, designed to administer established knowledge of a different kind.

D. Whether non-appearance in court to answer a fraudulent complaint is legally justified, IF

1. a) the acting judge has been informed of the decision not to appear, and of its reasons;

b) these reasons (not to appear in Court) are such that it can be shown by factual evidence and argument, it would have inevitably led to ruin at the hands of a cunning conspiracy;

c) there is no other way to avoid entrapment;

d) it can be shown that the acting judge was victimized to the detriment of his objectivity to do justice in the case.

2. Whether, furthermore, such non-appearance may lawfully be used by the conspirator to carry through his plan to obtain the default injunction.

3. Whether such non-appearance confers jurisdiction upon the Court under influence of conspiracy to proceed without examining its own jurisdiction.

STATUTES INVOLVED

I. The case on Trial and on Appeal is without factual and legal Precedent: (Appeal Brief, WR vs. U.S.A., pp. 2-20, 21-51):

1) Factually: Discovery of Cosmic Energy involves space problems without precedent: Petitioner succeeded in disabling space craft May 12, 1954 (see p. 8, et seq.).

2) Judicially: There are no applicable Congressional Statutes since material substance of the discovery is without precedent: Space Ships are causing planetary ("DOR") Emergency by draining Life Energy from the Planet, causing drought and desert development.

II. Constitution of the U.S.A.

1) The scope of judicial power of Federal Judges over basic scientific research. Art. III, 2.

2) Exclusion of pertinent evidence from jury trial. Art. III, 3.

3) Obedience to unlawful orders obtained by fraud and designed to serve conspiracy. Art. III, 2.

(See Appendix, p. 10a.)

III. Procedural Rules Involved

1) Rule of Criminal Procedure, Rule 12, Subdivision (b), (2) and (4):

Subdivision (b) (2): "Lack of jurisdiction or the failure of the indictment or information to charge an offense shall be noticed by the court at any time during the pendency of the proceeding."

Subdivision (b) (4): "A motion before trial raising defenses or objections shall be determined before trial unless the court orders that it be deferred for determination at the trial of the general issue. An issue of fact shall be tried by a jury if a jury trial is required under the Constitution or an act of Congress. All other issues of fact shall be determined by the court with or without a jury or on affidavits or in such other manner as the court may direct."

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND BACKGROUND

I. A Cosmic Event Without Precedent (May 12, 1954)

First Contact with Outer Space

On May 12, 1954, seven weeks after issuance of the injunction, an unprecedented event occurred at Orgonon, Rangeley, Maine, where the Orgone Institute Research Laboratories of the Wilhelm Reich Foundation are located.

The following is a verbatim excerpt from the "Second Oranur Report (1951-1956)", under the title, "First Contact with Outer Space" (Vol. V, Rec. App., Suppressed Evidence, R. 585):*

An Event Without Precedent

(On Trial Record under secret code, OROP DESERT Ea)

"I made actual contact by way of the cloudbuster with luminous objects in the sky on May 12, 1954, between 9:40 and 10:45 p.m.

"During this hour men on earth saw for the first time in the history of man and his science two 'Stars' to the west fade out several times when cosmic

*Vol. V of Record Appendix in Appeals Court (see "Group D" in "Parts of Record to be Printed," p. 5r, Appendix to Appeal Brief of WR), being voluminous to the extent of about 300 pages, could not be submitted to the Circuit Court of Appeals in due time. A motion to extend time for filing was denied. Vol. V of the Record Appendix contains the crucial evidence which was suppressed at the trial, May 3-7, 1956. It constitutes, also, the evidence which would have freed the defendants had the jury known its contents. The substance of this report, however, was at the time top secret. This report is not under injunction. It was the main objective of the commercial and political conspiracy and of espionage activities which harassed the work and life of the Discoverer of the Life Energy and his staff for a full 10 years, beginning 1946 (see Exhibit No. 4, Vol. I of Record Appendix: "Red Thread of a Conspiracy" and "Table of Events").

energy was drawn from them. The shock of this experience was great enough not to repeat such action until October 10th, 1954. The reason for the hesitation was obviously the risk to precipitate an interplanetary war by such experimentation. The event was kept secret until 1957.

"The (AAF) Ruppelt report on UFO's (Unidentified Flying Objects) clearly reveals the helplessness of mechanistic method in coming to grips with the problems posed by the spacemen. The cosmic orgone energy which these living beings are using in their technology is beyond the grasp of mechanistic science since cosmic laws of functioning are not mechanical but what I term 'functional.' Even the mathematical theory necessary to formulate these problems and make them technologically usable, cannot use any of the old mechanistic methods of thought to cope with the functional OR facts.

"The helplessness of mechanistic thinking appears in the tragic shortcoming of our fastest jet fighter planes to make and hold contact with UFOs. Being unavoidably outdistanced is not a flattering situation for military pride. The conclusion seems correct: Mechanistic methods of locomotion must be counted out in coping with the spaceship problem. Neither propeller nor jet will or can ever get us into space beyond.

"Easy contact was made on that fateful day with what obviously turned out to be a heretofore unknown type of UFO. I had hesitated for weeks to turn my cloudbuster pipes toward a 'star,' as if I had known that some of the blinking lights hanging in the sky were not planets or fixed stars but SPACE machines. With the fading out of the two 'stars,' the cloudbuster had suddenly changed into a SPACEGUN! From then onward, too, our approach to the problem of space became positive, affirmative, confident in using our carefully screened data.

(p. 10)

New Tools of Knowledge Needed

"When I saw the 'star' to the west fade out four times in succession, what had been left of the old world of human knowledge after the discovery of the OR energy 1936-1940 tumbled beyond retrieve. From now on everything; anything was possible. Nothing could any longer be considered "impossible." I had directed drawpipes, connected with the deep well, toward an ordinary star, and the star had faded out four times. There was no mistake about it. Three more people had seen it. There was only one conclusion: The thing we had drawn from was not a star. It was something else; a'UFO.'

"I must remind the reader that in May 1954 I had read only one report on UFOs; I had not studied anything on the subject. I knew practically nothing about it. But my mind, used to expecting surprises in natural research, was open to meet anything that seemed real. I had to be convinced myself first. Most people try to obtain consent of their impressions before having been convinced themselves. I had long since given up hope to convince anyone steeped in present-day mechanics or mysticism. There were no authorities. There was no one to whom to report this observation.

"(In May 1954, the assault by the American drug business had just begun to bother us a few weeks before.) We were still laboring at an understanding of what had happened in early 1951 when Oranur had burst into our lives; we were still trying to dig out humanly, emotionally and scientifically from under the avalanche of new observations, facts, ideas which Oranur had thrown in our way. I knew, we had without intending it, drilled a hole, as it were, into the wall which had for millennia separated man from the universe around him. We were hard pressed in our attempt to survive the flood of events in good form. A U.S. court of law had issued an order on March 19th, 1954 to stop all OR research activities including publication. We thus had to face the flood of incredible new facts, our own emotional and physical misery and the assault by the American and Russian mechanistic mind. It all tied in with our basic research neatly as one single fact: EARTHMEN HAD ENCOUNTERED SPACE AS IT REALLY WAS; not as science had conceived of it heretofore."

II. Survey of the Development of the Cosmic Event

Discovery of Orgastic Convulsion in 1923-1926;
Application of Knowledge of Orgastic Convulsion in CHARACTER ANALYSIS, 1927-1933;
Application of the Same Principle in Human Physiology and the Cancer Shrinking Biopathy, 1934-1945; in Physics and Astrophysics and in the Oranur Experiment, 1946-1956.

Orgastic Plasma Convulsion

The discovery of the orgastic convulsion at the climax of natural mating opened up a vast field of new human knowledge. In 1923, the discovery was made of the function of "orgastic potency" or orgastic convulsion. A basic principle of life was uncovered by careful study of human experience in natural mating. The physiological function of "orgastic potency" was the red thread guiding Orgonomic basic research ever since 1923 in the pathology of human character development.

(CHARACTER ANALYSIS, three editions, under decree of injunction, first published 10 years before the discovery of the Cosmic Life Energy.)

(p. 12)

The function of the orgastic convulsion was, after completion of the studies of human character development in 1933, further applied in human physiology as a central problem of human psycho-somatic pathology: Biopathies. The cancer disease was adopted as a biopathic object of experimentation on the basis of the functions involved in orgastic convulsion. The result of this application of the principle of "orgastic potency" and the natural function of orgastic convulsion was conducted in cancer pathology from about 1934, beginning in Norway, and ending 1945 in the U.S.A.

It was, as a matter of fact, not the cancer disease itself, but the life functions and their disturbances entailed in this disease which prompted me to test experimentally the validity and usefulness of the natural function of orgastic potency in the cancer disease, especially in connection with the problem in what manner alive mobile cancer cells develop within the human organism; they cannot be found in the air. The result was a report written and published in successive parts between 1939 and 1947 and compiled in a book, "THE CANCER BIOPATHY." It was published in 1948. It was fiercely fought ever since by some American drug industries.

"The Cancer Biopathy" did not promise any cancer cures. On the contrary, ever since the beginning of cancer experimentation, careful avoidance of proclamation of any cures and strict adherence to the principle of reporting failure as well as success was due to a crucial discovery in the realm of cancer pathology.

(p. 13)

Cancer Shrinking Biopathy

It was found through experimentation with the life energy discovered in the so-called "bions" or "energy vesicles" in living tissue around 1938: The cancer disease is due to severe bio-energetic resignation with consequent shrinking in the living organism. The result of this disturbance of energetic metabolism in living tissue is gradual loss of energy, succeeded by loss of substance and vitality, and finally a process of shrinking of the total system, known but not understood heretofore as "cachexia" in routine pathology. In other words, "The Cancer Biopathy" stated that the local cancer tumor, the only object until then of cancer treatment, was only a by-product of a general plasmatic shrinking biopathy. It develops in the human organism from emotional resignation due to chronic frustration of natural genital love life from childhood through adolescence.

This was a major conclusion in human pathology. It threatened at once the continued existence of industries and medical practices based on the old concept. As was to be expected, they were interested in the continuation of ignorance of the true background of the cancer disease. They proceeded, accordingly, to kill the discovery. "The Cancer Biopathy" was condemned as "promotion of fraudulent cancer cures" by highly placed commercial and political conspirators, and, following them innocently, I assume, a chemist Smyth of the Pharmaceutic Council of the American Medical Assn. (1948), a department of the Consumers Union, under influence of the original instigator, Brady, and finally the food and drug agency.

No cancer or other medical experimentation with orgone energy was done any longer after about 1946.

(p. 14)

The Oranur Experiment

I shifted my laboratory facilities in New York and at Orgonon, Maine, completely over to basic experimentation in the physical realm of the Cosmic Energy. The result of this experimentation, to make it brief, was the discovery: Space is not empty. Highly evacuated, airless tubes can be charged by cosmic energy and be made to luminate upon certain irritation. This discovery shattered the notion of an empty space. It established the universal existence of the Cosmic Energy discovered by me. I had hit upon the fundamental Law of Nature. In the spring of 1950, I gave up all activities in New York, including rich income from teaching, and established permanent work in Maine.

When the Korean War came down upon us later in 1950, I rearranged my laboratory again to be ready to help in the war effort, if requested. I published the "First Oranur Report" on the experimental work done in physics between 1946 and 1951: "The Oranur Experiment." It was received with great interest and some appreciation by dozens of top agencies in the U.S. Government, in the U.S. civic administration and in civilian U.S. agencies; also abroad. A list of these recipients of literature is enclosed in the volume "Conspiracy," No. 41 of which was and still is in the hands of the FDA counsel.

The First Oranur Experiment Report was the acute object of a dangerous international conspiracy and of espionage activities directed from Moscow. The conspiracy was directed to steal this discovery for the U. S. S. R. and to kill it in the United States. (See "Table of Events" on public court record (R. 41-46) and Appendix to Appeal Brief of WR of October, 1956, especially "Historical Record of Information Given Regarding Oranur," p. 35r).

(p. 15)

My strenuous efforts to effectuate the recognition by the U. S. Government of the national and international impact of the Oranur Experiment was not immediately met with success due to the very same conspiratorial espionage activities.

III. Reinstatement of certain enjoined activities due to civic responsibilities after the repetition of the Cosmic Event of October 10, 1954

> Establishment of the desert research project, on official court record all through the trial and in Parts of Record to be Printed in Appendix to Appellants' Briefs, (Reich Brief 5r) submitted September 10, 1956, to Clerk, U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, "Group D--Supressed and Top Secret Evidence, Referred to on Trial Records as 'OROP Desert Ea' and as 'Espionage'."

The cosmic event of May 12, 1954, was carefully investigated all through the summer of 1954. The decision was reached to repeat the experimental observation. Finally, October 10, 1954, was designated as the day of the second test.

Also, all during the summer of 1954, work was being done on the Archives of the Orgone Institute to establish as accurately as possible the extent to which the Russian espionage system in the United States had succeeded in collusion with U. S. Government employees and single treacherous individuals planted in high places in American civil organizations to obtain information from and at the same time to destroy and discredit orgonomic research in the United States. (p. 16)

The first result of these research activities during the summer of 1954 was the compilation, printing and distribution of a volume of the series, "History of the Discovery of the Life Energy," entitled "Conspiracy," with the subtitle "An Emotional Chain Reaction." This compilation contained only original documentary material beginning early 1942 and carrying through 1954. The original documents were numbered in succession and a summarizing "Table of Events" was compiled and added. Copies of this volume were distributed, partially gratis, and partially for recompensation among prominent organizations and personalities of the U. S. A.

A complete set of the impounded literature was sent to the District Court in Portland, Maine, specifically to Judge Clifford in February, 1954. One volume of "Conspiracy" in a black binder was sent to Judge Clifford for information and confirmation of a "Response" sent on February 25, 1954. The "Response" (Petitioners' Ex. 5, R. 85, 336) informed the court that a conspiracy existed and secret research work was at stake. The authentic documentary volume completed this information. The volume was sent to the court openly; it was fully accessible to the acting United States Attorney, Peter Mills. A volume, No. 41, was sent in September 1954 to the U. S. Department of Health and Welfare.

Now, the two lines of activities at Orgonon merged on October 9, 1954: The experimental work on UFO's was crucial, pressing and evoked a sense of social responsibility strong enough to force a decision: A letter to Judge Clifford was sent through the Clerk of the Foundation, William Moise. This letter, dated October 9, 1954 (contained in suppressed Record Appendix Vol. III, p. 43), informed the court as follows:

COPY

To the United States District Court
Portland, Maine

We wish to inform your good offices that, in the course of October 1954, the Orgone Institute Press will resume its normal function of filling orders for books in the realm of natural science and orgonomic medicine. This decision was made when it was ascertained, beyond any reasonable doubt, that the injunction of March 19th, 1954 was pursued and obtained in a criminal manner by Moscow-directed, American conspirators. We are sending, for your files, a volume of the History of the Discovery of the Life Energy which the Orgone Institute is sending out in connection with this fact.

It was felt that the District Court in Portland should be informed on this step. Should the District Court in Portland have any objection to the resumption of the normal scientific activities of the Orgone Institute and its affiliate organizations, information to this effect would be appreciated.

It is out of deep respect for the basic principles of truth and justice, in whose behalf American Courts are functioning, that the Orgone Institute is proceeding to fulfill its scientific and medical duties.

Sincerely yours,

/s/ William Moise

William Moise,
Oranur Weather Control Operator
On order from the ORGONE INSTITUTE
On behalf of the Orgone Institute Press

Sent: Vol. History of the Discovery of the Life Energy, CORE Vol. VI, Nos. 1-4
cc: Office of the President of the USA.
Mrs. Hobby, Secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare
Commander, Air Technical Intelligence Center, Air Force
J. Edgar Hoover, Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation

Thus, conspiracy and object of conspiracy were united in one formation and remained united until the present day.

The injunction had so far put a stop to our work. It had greatly reduced our financial resources to pursue our civic responsibilities and research activities.

Agents of the drug agency of the U. S. Government had deceived the acting judge at the trial. The fact was concealed that until October 10, 1954 no literature was being distributed. On October 10, 1954, only the distribution of the literature was resumed, for reasons of information and for financial resources.

No orgone energy devices were to my knowledge ever shipped after October 10, 1954, in interstate commerce, with the exception of the transfer of the accumulators from Rangeley to New York by Dr. Silvert to his own address and not to any customers; a transfer which was accomplished without my knowledge or consent (Appeal Brief for Dr. Michael Silvert, p. 13).

The decision to resume distribution of literature was thus made in the performance of civic duties to remove the obstacle which obstructed our work on which depended the future fate of the planet. The second test of the effects of the space gun upon Unidentified Flying Objects (Ea's in our terms) was performed after careful preparation on the evening following the date when the letter of October 9, 1954, was sent to Judge Clifford. Operations with orgone energy or cosmic energy which, according to the civil complaint of February 10, 1954, "did not exist," succeeded once more: For the second time "stars" were dimmed, stopped luminating and moved as if in flight in different directions. They were space machines.

There was no doubt whatsoever after this second experience that our cosmic energy research was on the right track. It was standing up to the most exacting techniques of control and testing. The cosmic event was reported to the Air Force Technical Intelligence by one of the operators, William Moise, the Clerk of the Foundation, on his way to Arizona in Dayton, Ohio, on October 14, 1954, at 4:00 p.m.

(See "The Second Oranur Report," FIRST CONTACT WITH OUTER SPACE, p. 78.)

For further information, reference is made to this volume.

We must return now to the interlacing of our further Cosmic Ea Research with the continued attempts on the part of the drug agents and their conspiratorial consorts in and out of the American Government.

It is necessary to emphasize the interlacing of research work and conspiracy. The legal representative of the FDA deceived the Court of Appeals as he had previously deceived the District Court judges. He argued in his redbound Brief for Appellee to the Court of Appeals on November 5, 1956, to quote verbatim (p. 5):

"References to 'conspiracy' are threaded throughout the record and briefs as well as references of the appelants to some nebulous super secrets involving, among others, 'Invasion from Outer Space' (Reich Brief 32) to mention but one such immaterial subject." (Italics by Reich.)

(p. 20)

The representative of the FDA wrote this sentence into a response to the Court of Appeals, while their accomplices were trying to intrude and to obtain information on exactly the very same "nebulous" and "immaterial super secrets": OROP DESERT Ea.

The FBI was continuously kept informed on the illegal intrusions and the harassment by espionage agents during the summer months of 1955 and 1956. The bulk of that sequence of events is beyond my domain.

IV. THE FRAUD

The complainant, or whoever directed his activities, had deceived and misled the District Court so completely and thoroughly that it took several years of careful research to understand how such continued deceit could have been so successful heretofore at all. A simple inspection of quotations from the literature in the original complaint and comparison with the original text shows the fraud (see R. 409 and especially R. 436, 437, 438 compared with Petitioners' Ex. 5, R. 95-104, 336).

(p. 21)

An Example of Deceit of Court
(From Brief for Appellee, Court of Appeals, No. 5160, p. 4--Italic lines by WR.)

"In the brief of the appellant The Wilhelm Reich Foundation we understand its argument to be that the District Court erred during the contempt proceeding in refusing to hear evidence showing that the injunction was obtained by fraud and suppression of evidence. We find no motion by this appellant to dismiss the amended complaint on these grounds. We nevertheless discuss the proposition since appellant, Reich, adopts the point in his Statement of Questions Involved (Reich Brief 1). Initially, it must be stated that there is not the slightest indication in the record, other than appellants' unsupported allegations, of any such actions on the part of the Government. There is no foundation whatsoever for these serious charges. Moreover, there is nothing in the record to show that the appellants ever offered any proof, or indicated what the proof would be, to sustain these charges.

"We have scrutinized the record in an attempt to understand the basis for the error charged to the District Court of preventing a showing that the injunction decree was obtained by fraud and suppression of evidence. Furthur we searched to learn where the claimed fraud lay, what evidence was suppressed, and at what stage of the proceedings the alleged suppression occurred."

Here, the opponent deceived the Court in the open. He could rely on the reluctance of the Court to really believe that anyone would dare to deceive so grossly and so openly right into the face of acting judges!*

*See also legal summary on fraud in Appendix, p. 27a.

(p. 22)

DECEIT NO. 1: "We find no motion by this appellant to dismiss the complaint on these grounds."

RECORD: On October 18th, 1955, in chambers of District Court Judge Clifford, in the presence of Maguire, U.S. Attorney Peter Mills, Counsel Charles Haydon and the Court Clerk Poole, I told the judge that the nature of procedures heretofore made it doubtful that Maguire was a bona fide U.S. Government agent.

On the same day, at the following public hearing, I charged fraud perpetrated upon the court in the form of "misrepresentation of facts" (R. 502). The motion was postponed by Judge Clifford.

Specifically, I moved in a subsequent written "motion to dismiss the amended information on the grounds of illegal misrepresentation of facts" (R. 500) on October 24th, 1955. The motion was made in preparation of the presentation of these motions in oral argument at the hearing scheduled by Judge Clifford for November 4th, 1955 (R. 505, 506).

The hearing on November 4th, 1955, was devoted in its entirety to these motions to dismiss the information on the grounds of "fraud perpetrated upon the Court." The opponent "was not listening to Dr. Reich while he was talking." (R. 506, bottom.) Maybe this gentleman never listened all through these proceedings when Fraud, Conspiracy and Perjury charges were brought forth. . . The motions were denied in open court hearing, although espionage was specifically charged at the same hearing (R. 504ff, 519).

(p. 23)

DECEIT NO. 2: ". . . there is not the slightest indication in the record, other than appellant's unsupported allegations, of any such actions (fraud) on the part of the Government."

RECORD: Here, the mastermind has washed our brain, figuratively speaking, by "double-talk" and "double-think" ("1984" by Orwell) in order to deceive. He conceals at this point before the Court the fact that these motions were denied that same day and that, accordingly, the allegations are on record as charges in the above-quoted motions themselves. This fact was deliberately concealed in order to mislead the Appellate Court again. (Petitioner's Ex. 5; R. 96-104, 336, "Atoms for Peace vs. the Hig," Documentary Appendix.)

DECEIT NO. 3: "Moreover, there is nothing in the record to show that the appellants ever offered any proof, or indicated what the proof would be, to sustain these charges.

"We have scrutinized the record in an attempt to understand the basis for the error charged to the District Court of preventing a showing that the injunction decree was obtained by fraud and suppression of evidence. Further, we searched to learn where the claimed fraud lay, what evidence was suppressed, and at what stage of the proceedings the alleged suppression occurred."

(p. 24)

RECORD: This sentence demonstrates the mostrosity of the deceit before the Court. The monstrous bigness of the deceit is the very factor that prevents its detection since no one would believe that such open deception before courts is possible.

The proof of these allegations looms large all through Record Appendices: Vol. I of the evidence for the defense admitted in court at the trial, Petitioners' Ex. 4, R. 1-62, 336, "The Red Thread of a Conspiracy," and Petitioners' Ex. 5, R. 63-104, 336, "Atoms for Peace vs. the Hig"; also in the Appendix to Petitioners' Ex. 5, R. 95, et seq.

We quote here verbatim the charge of fraud brought forth in this evidence, Exhibit 5 for the defense, R. 102-104:

APPENDIX TO FACTUAL PRESENTATION

Compiled by WILLAIM MOISE, Secretary,
EPPO, OROP DESERT EA

The Food and Drug Administration misrepresented the following publications as dealing with the "cure", "mitigation", "prevention of the disease conditions and symptoms hereinafter enumerated * * * which constitute labeling" (Civil Action 1056) * * *; while at the same time the FDA concealed from the court the factually true content of the publications:

PUBLICATION

1. THE SEXUAL REVOLUTION, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is the fact that CANCER does not appear at all in either content or index; the fact is that this book was written long before the discovery of the Orgone.

Not True is the FDA allegation that this work deals with the cure, mitigation, prevention, or treatment of CANCER.

(p. 25)

Concealed from the court by the FDA is the fact that the true content of this book is on the failure of the Russian experiment in establishing sexual reforms, due to human structural incapacity for freedom.

2. THE MASS PSYCHOLOGY OF FASCISM, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is the fact that CANCER does not appear at all in either content or index; the fact is that this book, too, was written years before the discovery of the Orgone.

Not True is the allegation by the FDA that this book is about the cure, mitigation, prevention and treatment of CANCER.

Concealed from the court by the FDA is the fact that the true content of this work described how all forms of irrationality in politics (Red and Black Fascism used as examples) are derived basically from combined structural irrationality of human masses; that this book is an important text for present political psychology (in the libraries of the U.S. State Department and Central Intelligence Agency); that this book was ordered destroyed and burned by Hitler.

3. CHARACTER ANALYSIS, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is is the fact that CANCER does not appear in the index, chapter headings, or outlines; that "cancer tumor" cannot be found in the contents.

Untrue is the claim that this book is about the cure, prevention, mitigation, or prevention of CANCER TUMORS.

Concealed was the fact that this work is a basic textbook in psychiatry, detailing the character-analytic technique of the discoverer from its beginnings in psychology to its present firm basis in natural science in the form of orgone biophysics.

4. COSMIC SUPERIMPOSITION, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is that CANCER, COMMON COLD, ICHTHYOSIS, RHEUMATIC FEVER, HYPERTENSION, or DIABETES appear not at all in either content or index of this work.

Untrue is the presentation by the FDA that this work is concerned with the cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of CANCER, COMMON COLD, ICHTHYOSIS, RHEUMATIC FEVER, HYPERTENSION, DIABETES.

Concealed, the fact that this work deals with hurricanes, the shape of the galaxies, and the "ring" of the aurora borealis; that their request for the enjoining of the entire book was solely upon the inclusion of the Bibliography of Works on Orgone Energy at the back of the book.

5. ETHER, GOD AND DEVIL, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is that CANCER does not appear in the index or content, with the following one exception, p. 123, Chp. VI, "Concentrated Orgone Energy has many beneficial effects on living organisms which I have tried to describe in my CANCER BIOPATHY * * *"

Not True is the allegation that this book deals with the cure, mitigation, prevention, or treatment of CANCER.

Concealed again is the factual content of this work: the description of how the process of functionalism led to the discovery of Orgone Energy (Ether) through objective logic of the thought process; how humanity until this, had evaded discovery through various erroneous thought systems: mysticism, mechanism, etc. * * *

6. THE MURDER OF CHRIST, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is that CANCER appears not at all in index or content.

Not True is the claim that this work constitutes a claim of cure, mitigation, treatment, and prevention of CANCER.

Concealed again from the court is the true content: The Murder of Christ which is the Murder of Life through the ages by and in each of us through the Emotional Plague.

7. PEOPLE IN TROUBLE, by Wilhelm Reich, M.D.

True is that this work is a translation of the original German manuscript "Menschen im Staat" (1936-7), translated in 1947; that on page 123 of the Appendix the discoverer writes of, "The new set of problems grouped around the natural functions of endogenous infection and decay * * *", "The cancer process is a long-drawn-out process of decay within the human organism due to the bioenergetic shrinking of the life system."

Not True is the opinion that this book constitutes a claim of cure, mitigation, treatment, of CANCER.

Not True is the opinion by the FDA that "Blood" or "Tissue" is a "disease", a "disease condition" or a "symptom"; that this book states them as such; that this book constitutes a claim of cure, treatment etc. * * *

Concealed, that this work is a historical document of the discoverer's experiences in the socialist and psychoanalytic movement of 25 years ago, between 1927 and 1937.

(signed) WILLIAM MOISE

The opponent here used the "BIG LIE" technique. This Exhibit (5) evidence was admitted at the trial (R. 336). It could not be brought directly into the trial record because it showed the fraud, and my attempts of proving fraud ("WHY" or Motives of my attitude to injunction) were ruled out by Judge Sweeney.

At the hearing before the Appellate Court for the First Circuit on November 5, 1956, I brought forth in oral argument the charge of perjury against Joseph Maguire and Peter Mills in my reply to their reply argument. I had hesitated until then bringing forth this grave charge. When in his reply to my argument he continued to slander me financially, and proved once more that he was completely devoid of any sense of truth or decency, it would have been unwarranted to further adhere to restraint and good breeding, or to further hesitate from medical consideration to tell the truth about a man of such character.

"Joseph L. Maguire and Peter Mills have both committed perjury in addition to previous fraudulent deceit of U.S. Courts on the witness stand at the trial on May 5, 1956. The perjury concerns their knowledge of the content of the documentary compilation 'Conspiracy' (Vol. No. 41) (abstracted in Record Appendix, Vol. I, Exhibit No. 4 for the Defense 'The Red Thread of a Conspiracy'). This compilation contains documentary proof of treason against the U. S. A." (Reply Brief, Wilhelm Reich, p. 1).

The Contradictory Testimony of Joseph Maguire and Ilse Ollendorff on Vol. 41 of "Conspiracy"

1. Joseph Maguire denied under oath on the witness stand knowledge of the "Conspiracy" document.

2. Witness Ilse Ollendorff testified that he had been in possession of Vol. No. 41 of "Conspiracy" while interrogating her.

3. Knowing the content of the "Conspiracy," Vol. No. 41; he also knew that he had received it from Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Oveta Culp Hobby, to whom it was sent on September 1, 1954, in full reliance on the integrity of the Health Department of the U.S. Government.

4. Joseph Maguire deceived the Health Department when he used this volume for his own information only, and not as information for the U.S. Public on the matters contained therein.

5. Having had knowledge of Vol. No. 41 of "Conspiracy," the social administrator, Joseph Maguire, knew well the following of its contents, among others:

(a)The documents concerning the Red Fascist conspiracy in the U.S.A., including the attack upon the Discovery of the Life Energy. (See Record Appendix, Vol. I, "The Red Thread of a Conspiracy.") Maguire kept silent before the Court.

(b)The people who were involved in the conspiracy.

(c)The search for information on WR's laboratory work and its invasion by tools of an espionage ring operating in the U.S.A.

(d)Information regarding the orgone energy motor and William Washington's involvement, 1948-49.

(R. 333-335. All emphasis by WR.)

JOSEPH MAGUIRE, a witness, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Dr. Reich:

Dr. Reich: Mr. Maguire, you conducted the case against Orgone for how long, — since when did it begin?

Mr. Maguire: Well, in the first place, I have conducted no case.

Dr. Reich: Well, you have presented it?

Mr. Maguire: I have conducted no case against Orgone, at any time.

Dr. Reich: But you were the lawyer?

Mr. Mills: I object, Your Honor, as entirely irrelevant.

The Court: I will allow it. I am going to give him a little more latitude than a lawyer would have.

Dr. Reich: (Shows book to the witness) Can you identify this book, please?

Mr. Maguire: I have never seen this book before.

Dr. Reich: You say you have never seen this book before. On July 26, you had the same book in your hands, and you quoted from it. Would you kindly read the title of the book?

Mr. Maguire: "Wilhelm Reich, History of the Discovery of Life Energy—1942-1954."

Dr. Reich: Just read the title of the book, that's all.

The Court: Read the title.

Mr. Maguire: Well, there is so much on here, I don't know what is the title.

Dr. Reich: It is right here.

Mr. Maguire: Reading what Dr. Reich has pointed out to me, which is the title, and which is in rather small print, "Conspiracy and Emotional Chain Reaction."

Dr. Reich: Have you ever had that in your hand?

Mr. Maguire: I have had what might be a similar volume.

Dr. Reich: Similar or identical?

Mr. Maguire: I can't answer that. The way the book is constructed, it is loose leaf and the pages can be withdrawn very readily.

Dr. Reich: Mr. Maguire, may I repeat my question? Did you see that book? Did you ever have it in your hands on July 26--yes or no?

The Court: He said he did not know.

Mr. Maguire: No.

The Court: I can't receive that in evidence.

Dr. Reich: Did you ever see this pamphlet?

(p. 31)

Mr. Maguire: I have seen one similar to it.

Dr. Reich: Would you read the title, please?

Mr. Maguire: "Wilhelm Reich, Biographical Material--History of the Discovery of the Life Energy--Documentary Supplement No. 2--The Red Threat of a Conspiracy."

Dr. Reich: Is that known to you?

Mr. Maguire: Well, I said I have seen something or probably similar to this.

Dr. Reich: Did you see this pamphlet?

Mr. Maguire: No, I didn't.

Dr. Reich: You never saw this pamphlet?

Mr. Maguire: No, I didn't.

Dr. Reich: The third one--this is the last one. Do you know this one? Here is the title. The same series?

Mr. Maguire: I don't understand what you mean.

Dr. Reich: Did you ever read it or have it in your hands? Are you acquainted with this title? Would you please read it?

Mr. Maguire: Did I have this pamphlet in my hands?

Dr. Reich: Not this one.

Mr. Maguire: I have seen and had one in my hands, I presume.

Dr. Reich: With the same title. Would you read the title?

Mr. Maguire: "Atoms for Peace vs The Higs."

Dr. Reich: Did you read it?

Mr. Maguire: I think I read that one.

Dr. Reich: You think you read it?

Mr. Maguire: Yes.

(p. 32)

Dr. Reich: I offer this as an Exhibit now.

Mr. Mills: I object. It is irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Are these books covered by the decree?

Mr. Mills: I believe so.

The Court: All right I will admit them.

Mr. Maguire: May I make a statement? That book is not covered by the Decree.

His own witness, Ilse Ollendorff, revealed on the witness stand the identity of the Vol. #41 of "Conspiracy" from which he had quoted during her examination, and which had been sent to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare:

(R. 355-358)

ILSE OLLENDORFF, a witness, called by and on behalf of the respondents, first being duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Dr. Reich:

Dr. Reich: Miss Ollendorff, I shall not ask you any questions as to identification since we know who you are. Do you know this volume? (Shows document to witness) (Conspiracy--WR)

Miss Ollendorff: Yes.

Dr. Reich: Will you tell the jury what that is, please?

Miss Ollendorff: This is a volume of photostated copies of original letters and newspaper clippings that I helped to collect during the time I was an employee of the Foundation. It was collected in a loose leaf binder like that.

Dr. Reich: When was that material collected? When was it done, exactly?

(p. 33) Miss Ollendorff: I was there at the time. Part of the material was contained in the files and records that I kept, and it was collected in the present order after the injunction was filed.

Dr. Reich: Will you please tell the jury why this material was collected?

The Court: I don't think we are interested in why it was collected.

Dr. Reich: Will you please read the title?

Miss Ollendorff: "Conspiracy and Emotional Chain Reaction"

Dr. Reich: Will you tell the jury whether you saw this volume here in the hands of Mr. Maguire Tuesday? (May 1, 1956--WR)

Miss Ollendorff: I saw a volume of this material. It was a limited edition, No. 41.

Dr. Reich: Of this volume?

Miss Ollendorff: Of this material in Mr. Maguire's office on Tuesday.

The Court: This is of this year?

Miss Ollendorff: Yes, when I was called again to identify some of the material from the bookkeeping records.

Dr. Reich: Will you please tell the jury how it came about that I brought that here?

Miss Ollendorff: You showed me a document, a statement, that I gave as a witness before, and you asked me if I was aware of what this document contained in this volume. I said I was not sure of it. I knew that I wrote that document but I took your word that it was in this volume because it would be one of the documents that would be contained in this volume.

Dr. Reich: You are quite certain? You are under oath. Are you quite certain that the volume, which you saw in Mr. Maguire's hands and the volume I show you, are the same series, the same kind?

(p. 34) Miss Ollendorff: It is the same material.

Dr. Reich: Are you aware that Mr. Maguire had denied that?

Mr. Maguire: I certainly object to that. That is absolutely an incorrect statement. May I have the Court Reporter read the testimony back?

The Court: The jury will be the people to decide. The jury has heard your testimony, and now they have heard this testimony, and they will decide it.

Dr. Reich: May I repeat the question?

The Court: You may.

Dr. Reich: This morning, when Mr. Maguire was on the witness stand, I held up the same volume * * *

The Court: Let me put this question to you. It is your testimony that you saw that in the hands of Mr. Maguire, and whether it was about some statement of yours that was in there. Do you consider it inconsistent with his testimony this morning?

Miss Ollendorff: I consider it inconsistent and I was disturbed about it.

The Court: All right.

Dr. Reich: I have no more questions.

It would be anticlimactic to bring forth more such activities of the counsel for our Health Department. The Court records are full of such examples of pranking somersaults.

The "Cosmic Event" of May 12, 1954 and all that preceded and followed this event was excluded from testimony at trial, although it was "OROP Desert Ea" which constituted the central object of the conspiracy (Appeal Brief, WR vs. U.S.A., 5160, Summary, pp. 4-20).

The counsel for the complainant again committed fraud when he denied that he has found record of suppressed evidence. The trial records are full of suppression of the crucial evidence, "OROP DESERT Ea", i.e., the planetary emergency in consequence of invasion from outer space.

(See p. 45 below for statement on Jurisdiction of District Court.)

SPECIAL REASONS FOR ALLOWING THE WRIT

I. The PLANETARY EMERGENCY due to invasion of the earth's atmosphere from outer space, requiring Orgonomic Basic Research, is acute and critical.

II. The injunction against orgonomy was obtained by unlawful means in a conspiracy to kill the Discoverer of the Cosmic Energy and to usurp his approach to the space problem for the atomic industry. The injunction blocks crucial scientific research and work in an emergency of planetary dimensions.

III. Security and independence of basic natural science from interference by interests other than learning. (p. 37)

IV. The Discoverer of the Cosmic Energy respectfully requests the privilege to be heard in oral argument for further elaboration of the planetary emergency, which is being furthered by the unlawful injunction.

V. Reasons I-IV for allowing the Writ require the ultimate decision on important questions of federal law not yet settled by the Supreme Court.

ARGUMENT I

The Decision of the Court of Appeals

The opinion of the Appellate Court, rendered by Justice Woodbury:

1. has decided an important question of federal law which has not been, but should be settled by this Court;

2. has decided a federal question in a way in conflict with applicable decisions of this Court;

3. has so far departed from the accepted and usual course of judicial proceedings, or so far sanctioned such a departure by a lower court, as to call for an exercise of this Court's power of supervision.

(Revised Rules of the Supreme Court of the U. S. A. Part V, Jurisdiction on Writ of Certiorari, Section 19, 1 (b).)

Summary of Trial Errors submitted to Circuit Court of Appeals:

1. No legal precedent.

(p. 38)

2. Evidence for defense submerged in secrecy, kept from view of the Jury and the acting Judge.

3. The fact that the trial court did not permit testimony as to the motives, the "WHY" in this case is an error by the trial court and constitutes a legal basis for reversing the decision of the trial court.

Ten Principles of Truthful Conduct

The following Ten Principles of Truthful Conduct in Both Basic Research and Jurisprudence were submitted to the Court of Appeals:

1. Battles for Truthful Procedure are lawful battles.

2. Juries must render their verdicts fully informed.

3. There are no authorities on new knowledge, that is, "Knowledge of the Future." The only authority is the rule of learning.

4. Government must not interfere with basic research.

5. Scientific literature must not be ever impounded or burned anywhere on this planet. (It was done in the U.S.A. by the FDA, August 1956.)

6. Non-appearance in Court as self-defense against fraudulent complaints is a lawful means to avoid legal entrapment by master connivers.

7. Bona fide scientists must not be dragged into Court to be harassed to death by competitive commercial or political interests (R. 503).

8. Disclosure of scientific information, especially if secret, must not be forced by Court action or by administrative invasion of property and records. There are peaceful ways via conference and agreement.

(p. 39)

9. New knowledge requires new administrative laws.

10. Judicial errors must be realized and corrected. They must not be perpetuated (Brief on Appeal for Wilhelm Reich, No. 5160, pp. 1-2).

The following principles were presented, among others, in argument:

Common Principles of Basic Natural Science and Jurisprudence

"The following is a self-evident truth in natural science and its derivative, the judicial common law: Results obtained by unlawful means are themselves unlawful, invalid in the technical sense of jurisdiction. The legal profession adheres to these basic self-evident principles of all jurisdiction, since it does not wish to forsake the very foundations of the administration of justice. Conscious, systematic deviation from this principle constitutes the 'shyster,' defined in

Webster's dictionary and in the Encyclopedia Britannica as the 'pettifogging lawyer.' (Reich in Brief for Michael Silvert, p. 10 and Reply Brief for Reich, 'Principles Involved,' p. 1a et seq.)

"On Procedure and Law: If procedure is so designed that it kills truth and fact, then procedure, and not factual truth, must yield to revision.

"If law is practiced in such a manner that quite obviously to everyone, the guilty one goes free and the innocent and decent one faces imprisonment, then the law practice must be changed as quickly and as radically as possible.

"These are the ABC's of justice, obvious a priori."

(p. 40)

"On Responsibility of Science and Medicine: It is the duty of courts of justice to guard over the dignity of the court and against the abuse of privileges of freedom of action and speech. However, scientists and medical men in high position have the terse duty to watch over the independence of scientific inquiry into the laws of nature from any interference whatsoever, especially from ignorance, arrogance, prejudice, political or commercial interests. Science meets with jurisprudence at the very roots of man's existence in fact, reason and functional logic. Let us not, however, neglect those common roots. We have painfully learned what replacement of such principles by arbitrary interference has done to destroy security and human happiness.

"On Security of Natural Science: It is crucial to demonstrate the principle of security of basic research. The very security of Natural Science is in question." (Appeal Brief for WR, p. 49)

The only way that was open to the petitioner to blunt and avert the assault in the original complaint was information to acting Judge Clifford in the "Response" (Petitioners' Ex. 5, R. 85-89, 336) and non-appearance in court. This necessity, to avoid disaster, was explained in District Court hearing before Judge Clifford and in Court of Appeals.

The Court of Appeals ruled against these basic principles involved in the test case. The question involved here is specifically whether scientists and medical men in high position have the terse duty to guard the independence of scientific inquiry into the laws of nature against any interference whatsoever, especially from ignorance, prejudice, political and commercial interests.

The test as to the legal urgency of such principles is now brought before the Supreme justices of the U.S.A. Human lives are staked on the answer to this question.

(p. 41)

ARGUMENT II

Consequences of Decision of Court of Appeals

The decision in Appellate Court established the following LEGAL PRECEDENT, should it not be reversed by the U. S. Supreme Court:

1. Fraud is lawful procedure in government to enforce unlawful orders.

2. Single federal judges have the power to issue unlawful orders obtained by fraudulent presentations and distortions of facts. Single men, subject to human error as anybody else, functioning judges on the bench, may make up crimes as they please; they may mete out such punishment as ideological whim, political dependence, ignorance in certain matters or irrational prejudice may motivate.

3. The judge may keep pertinent facts from the jury in disregard of the Constitution of the U. S. A. The concepts of "due process of law" in criminal cases "have always meant at least two basic things (1) There must be a law enacted by the proper legislature defining the crime, and (2) the right of trial by jury has always meant that no judge had control over the facts of the case, which are the sole province of the jury." (Quotation from an unnamed prominent Washington lawyer, U. S. News and World Report, December 28, 1956.)

4. Basic civic functions are imperiled by permanent injunctions based on fraud. The doors are opened wide for any action that any federal district court may choose to take without any regard to any law; such as issuing a general injunction, telling everybody that no one can do anything contrary to the decree.

(p. 42)

Article III (Appendix, 10a) is express and clear: United States courts may act only under laws of Congress granting jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of the district courts is completely subject to congressional action and such courts may even by abolished by Congress at any time.

In the case before the Supreme Court, the essential substance of the legal case is without legal precedent; the factual substance is not on the congressional statute books and the court order was thus without basis in congressional legislation: Planetary Emergency due to Invasion from Outer Space is unknown to present Law.

5. Such "dragnet" injunctions would include anyone in the U.S.A., and, through the person being under court order, anyone who has any connection with this person. For example, to talk about or work with Cosmic Orgone Energy in connection with problems of outer space; to construct cosmic energy research tools, would be subject to contempt action by any Federal Court anywhere in the U.S.A. and throughout its realm of influential power.

6. Such unconstitutional injunctions would endanger the existence of anyone who acted as a physician in accordance with his medical conscience and duty.

7. It would threaten to jail any publisher here or abroad who, in performance of civic duties, would print such enjoined literature of science, as "Character Analysis," "Mass Psychology of Fascism," "The Oranur Experiment," "Ether, God and Devil" for general reading, or would touch upon the Oranur Space Problem.

(p. 43)

8. A single judge's personal opinion regarding cosmic or any other pioneer work would be considered "THE LAW" of the land.

Anyone would be threatened by such unlawful procedures to be seized and jailed, as is the lawless practice in dictatorships. One might well ask; in accordance with the Washington lawyer "Publius" (Pseudonym) (see U. S. News and World Report of December 28, 1956):

"The Fifth and Sixth Amendments provide: 'No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury.'

"1. Where is the statute, constitutionally passed by Congress, which defines the crime of which one stands accused?

"2. Where is the statute, constitutionally passed by Congress, which gives any court jurisdiction over anyone and everyone who he thinks might disagree with his decrees?

"3. Where is the presentment or indictment by a grand jury accusing * * * of violating what law?

"4. What are the limits of this power? If a judge, without law, can sentence one man to 30 days in jail, can he also hang him?

"5. If the courts can create such jurisdiction and powers for themselves, what other powers may they assume?"

(p. 44)

These questions concern in a clear-cut manner the danger of development of a dictatorship in the U. S. A.

The Supreme Court "has supervisory jurisdiction over the proceedings of the federal courts. If it has any duty to perform in this regard, it is to see that the waters of justice are not polluted." (Chief Justice Warren in Stephen Mesarosh v. U. S. A., U. S. 77 S. Ct. 1, No. 20, October Term, 1956.)

If ever the waters of justice have been polluted, it was in this case.

The Discoverer puts to TEST before the supreme judicial body of our land the question:

Jurisdiction of the District Court

The court in first instance had no jurisdiction, since fraud perpetrated upon the court vitiates the jurisdiction. It must be considered and decided upon before further steps are taken. This was not the case in District Court when my "Response" was submitted. The injunction was issued without inquiry into the charge of Conspiracy contained in the "Response."

What was in this test case more important to a responsible citizenry, its society and judicial system:

a. Mechanical obedience to an unlawful, unconstitutional order obtained by subversion and fraud,

OR

b. Functioning in order to act in a grave emergency on our planet?

The decisions in the courts below are warrants to federal agents and officials to perpetrate fraud and deceit in the name of the United States of America upon District Courts for the purpose of achieving unlawfully private commercial or political ends through injunctions in civil cases.

(p. 45) The Court of Appeals has held that officers and agents of the Federal Food and Drug Administration could procure a valid and enforceable injunction against Basic Research in this Realm of Primordial Cosmic Energy, Crucial to Research in the realm of Unidentified Flying Objects in the Atmosphere of Our Planet; this was done in the name of the United States, by the perpetration of a fraud upon a United States District Court.

It held further that the District Court did not err when it prevented those afflicted by the fraud from showing it to a jury which tried them for contempt.

The Court of Appeals has thus decided a question of federal law which has not been, but should be, settled by the Supreme Court.

The manner in which the Court of Appeals decided the question gives judicial approval to fraud and is so far a departure from the accepted and usual course of judicial proceedings, and is a sanction of such a departure by the District Court, as to call for the exercise of the Supreme Court's power of supervision.

(p. 46)

THE CHARACTEROLOGICAL ERROR:

Neglect of Irrational Motivation of Crime and Judgment in this Case

Masters in deceitful litigation do not know or respect truth and fact. They believe that being smart is the same as being just.

The true assailant, the mastermind, in the legal action remained well hidden in the background. He used--and abused--emotionally sick individuals: Peeping Toms, persons offended personally by my disclosures about the "Little Man" (book enjoined and banned as "labeling" of "fraudulent" medical devices), phallic-sadistic-homosexuals who expressed their admiration for me and their wish to be treated by me as they would in my medical office: by assault with a knife, by sadistic derision, slander, or--as a schizoid character--by actual attempt to murder me. These examples may suffice to disclose some of the pathology in the background; passive-homosexuals, submitting to the phallic character, the mastermind in conniving.

My authority to state such characteristics of the assailants will scarcely be challenged by those who know my "Character Analysis." Only a mechanistic neurologist who remained sitting on the spot where pathology was 60 years ago will challenge my contentions; the assailant has no right to challenge it after having slandered my good name all over the place.

Distinction between government official in official function and in the bio-psychiatric medical office is of crucial importance to do justice in any legal case.

(p. 47)

As long as my medical work on human nature had been confined to individual treatment of emotional disturbances in seclusion, I was only exposed to individual attack by those treated.

But, when I gave up individual work and turned of necessity to work on the prevention of mental and emotional disease on the social scene around 1930, in other words, when Social Pathology and Social Psychiatry began to develop, the field of operations changed for the patient, too. Now, not only the individual case, but anyone in public office suffering from emotional disease felt entitled to use his official position or authority against me and my work for personal (irrational) reasons.

The legal test problem before the Court is a problem of pathology rather than of Law: The attack upon orgonomy was mainly due to irrational fear of disclosure of deep, otherwise well-hidden motivations. This attack only brought to a peak what had been going on for decades.

Based entirely upon the rationalistic concepts of human nature of the 18th and 19th Centuries, today's jurisdiction is, in the procedural-legal sense, unaware of irrational motivation. Motivation of human action was a mystery of transcendental origin in the 18th Century, emerging from the Reformation with a remnant from the Middle Ages.

Motivation was thought of as rooted in mechanical reflexes and impulses of the brain in the 19th Century, newly developing mechanistic materialism. According to this view, the brain acted like a general, giving his orders to the executive nerves and organs below; a truly hierarchic, mechanistic view, in accordance with the period of the Prussian birth of militarism.

(p. 48)

In the 20th Century, the discovery of irrational and repressed motivation of human action replaced or superseded the mechanistic brain-nerves-organ view, still surviving today in mechanistic neurology and chemotherapy. The "mental drugs" of today are the last stragglers of an over-aged mechanistic concept of Life. The brain gives no orders to the organisms, since the living has functioned without brain development for ages, merely by way of autonomic nerves or even mere protoplasm, i.e., by organized Orgone Energy functions. The brain is no more than an advanced central station of better impulse coordination, that's all.

With the fall of mechanistic thinking in physiology and the advance of bio-energetic thinking, motivation of human activity entered the scene. "Character" became the term denoting so-called bio-energetic, "structural" motivation, readable in "emotional expression."

This now 30 year old knowledge is not on the statute books. Life, however, and the science of life have advanced. The developments in the forms of human love life of the last 25 years have certainly demonstrated the deep bio-energetic changes in human behavior. Of this, many judges have taken practical, personal and professional notice; but human behavior and its bio-energetic motivation is not in judicial-procedural awareness, as it were. The results of this gap are insolvable legal problems, such as "Juvenile Delinquency." Irrationally based, little understood and therefore legally not manageable, procedures as those which characterized the attack upon Orgonomy by emotionally disturbed individuals in commerce and politics, are the results of the characterological gap in legal application of Irrational Motivation.

Without careful study and integration of irrational motivation in legal procedure, nothing can be expected for due process in jurisdiction, in keeping with the advances in human development in this century. Injustice, due to lack of characterological knowledge concerning human irrational nature, must inevitably result. Unprotected, not understood and exposed to slander, irrational hatred of life, fear of bodily sensations, etc., Life is at present severely handicapped in maintaining itself. Still it is the only basic issue that counts, on which all the rest, including jurisprudence, depends.

If the irrational motivation of human activity were included in legal thinking, procedures and statutes, such problems would be much more easily accessible and solvable. The racial problem is bound up and locked in the irrational (Hitlerian) apprehension of the genital embrace between negro and white; this is the emotional, irrational motive in the racial conflict. Nature tends to merger of races in every respect; what aims at suppression of primal nature tends to keep segregation and racial hatred going.

There can be little doubt that such catastrophic entanglements of social administration as, for example, in the Clinton, Tennessee, racial segregation case, subterraneous pranksters were active to disorganize and prevent orderly, gradual integration of the races in America.

(p. 50)

On Laws Needed for the Protection of LIFE IN NEWBORNS and of TRUTH

(From Wilhelm Reich: "The Murder of Christ," 1951, given to Judge Sweeney on May 7th, 1956; Reply Brief for Wilhelm Reich, 16a-17a)

A careful study of the realm of social pathology reveals the fact that there exists no law in the U.S.A. which would directly protect factual truth against underhanded lie and attack motivated by irrational interests. Truth is at present at the mercy of chance. It depends entirely on whether a law officer is personally honest or dishonest, emotionally rational or irrational, subjectively inclined toward or against factual functions. It is most difficult to operate as a pioneer in new fields of human endeavor, if any emotionally sick individual anywhere on the social scene can—unhampered—destroy work or knowledge he dislikes, and if truth is in no position to defend itself against underhanded attack. It is obvious that the future of the U.S.A. and the world at large depends on the rational upbringing of the newborns in each generation which will enable them to make rational decisions as grown-ups. (See Wilhelm Reich: Children of the Future, OEB,* October, 1951.) There do not exist any laws as yet to protect newborns against harm inflicted upon them by emotionally sick mothers and other sick individuals. However, there are many old laws rendered obsolete long ago by progress in the understanding of the biology of man, which threaten progressive educators with extinction if they transgress technically these old laws. These facts, together with the operation on the social scene of emotionally sick individuals, block progress and the search for better ways in medicine and education. Although laws which are serving the welfare of people at large can never accomplish factual changes, life affirmative laws can protect those who strive practically for betterment of the fate of humanity. Therefore, two laws, one to protect Life in Newborns, and a second to protect Truth against underhanded attacks (beyond the scope of libel laws which are not suited for this purpose), should be studied and formulated by legislatures, institutions of learning and foundations whose work is primarily devoted to securing human welfare and happiness.

(p. 51)

To illustrate: Truthful and thorough investigation of natural love life in children and adolescents, one of the most crucial tasks in present day mental hygiene, is held up and rendered helpless by the single fact that any bio-pathic individual who himself has been emotionally warped in childhood or adolescence through frustration of his needs for love, is in a position to put in a complaint to an Attorney General's Office to the effect that those who investigate the subject of love life in childhood and adolescence, and make certain suggestions as to its solution, are committing a crime, the crime of "seduction of minors." If the attorney happens to agree emotionally with the complainant, the investigation of fact is completely at the mercy of chance. There exists, according to rich experience in actual situations, no provision on the statute books to prosecute the biopathic individual on the basis that his motivation is not truth-seeking, or helping children or adolescents, but only hate of such scientific procedures. The motivation of an accusation should always be taken into consideration, just as the motive for a murder is taken into consideration.

This example must suffice to illustrate the situation. The Archives of the Orgone Institute contain enough factual evidence to prove that the situation is bad indeed where pioneering efforts are burdened with the rather hopeless struggle with such irrationalism in addition to the factual difficulties entailed in the pioneering job.

(This is the text of a proposal made to the Congress of the U.S.A. in November, 1952 by The Wilhelm Reich Foundation.)

THE LOGICAL ERROR

in the Procedure before the Court

In times of stress and distress such as ours, it is appropriate to look occasionally backward in time while searching forward into the unknown.

The principles of jurisprudence developed from certain common laws of decent, life-positive conduct. The same principle which emerged from common laws of decent conduct also gave birth to certain abstractions of human experience. A certain "natural philosophy" always precedes and underlies advances in natural science. Critical religious thoughts precede religious developments. The Christian religious philosophy grew out of the principles of Judaism through criticism of rigidities in the Jewish common laws which had stifled the movement forward of society as a whole.

By the same token, certain novel trends of pure thinking usually precede and underlie social developments. Buddha's and Confucius' philosophy underlay life in Asiatic countries. Western philosophies in general derive their principles from Locke, Hume, and others in the 18th Century and from
(p. 53) "materialistic," "mechanistic" approaches of the philosophers, beginning with Buechner and leading up to Karl Marx in the 19th Century and the Russian Revolution, 1917. (An abused mechanistic materialism led to the recent mass murder in Hungary (1956).) German idealistic philosophy led to Hegel and the absolute Kaiser-State-Idea. This State Idea plunged the world into the first world war.

It is, most regrettably, unknown that Karl Marx was the first to dissolve a communist organization, the "Kommunisten Bund" in Germany in 1847. Already then a rampant Little Man philosophy of power drunkenness, combined with lack of will to learn, had appeared on the scene, foreshadowing, as it were, the mass murders of the Stalinite-Hitler type one hundred years later.

It has become obvious by now, in the second half of the 20th Century, that all these systems, true and forward driving as they were at their time, have failed to guide our generation along in the present chaos. With the masses of the Eurasian and African continent reaching out without technical or emotional preparedness for the fruits of an advanced technology, most systems of thought failed practically. Until then it was always someone "above" or "in favor of" or "against" the masses of living human beings who did the caring for, suppressing, or feeding or providing "for" people.

For the first time in the history of mankind, partially due to the great technological advances, the masses THEMSELVES aspire in this 20th Century to rule their own lives.

Having been deeply immersed in misery over the ages, a "period of written history of some 10 millennia," they want freedom; but they do not know what freedom really is like, how difficult, responsible, exacting at times to hold,
(p. 54) to preserve and to develop. They learned to die for freedom or liberties or abstract ideas. Now they die en masse in their own confusions. The leaders of the confusion are organized psychopathic individuals in government

("Higs")* who abuse to their own pathological ends the confusion of the past and present in the human multitudes: FASCISM in all its color in political parlance; Organized Emotional Plague in parlance of Bio-Psychiatry.

Now, this over-aged kind of thinking is beginning to go under. The masses are leaderless, without guiding direction, as it were.

WHERE IS THE NEW KIND OF THINKING THAT, EMERGING FROM THE CONFLICTS OF THE PAST, IS BECOMING THE BEACON INTO THE FUTURE?

If we take the present legal conflict as an example of confusion and entanglement instigated by Higs, we may not find the beacon, perhaps, but we may succeed in obtaining some first orientation. Our first steps will be highly theoretical in thinking, but very practical in real life as applied to the test case before the Supreme Court:

The 18th Century thinkers, the founding fathers of the American Law System, devised an abstract system of logical thought which was factless, formal to the extreme, still alive in England, inescapable in its conclusions, according to the following very much simplified form:

PREMISE ONE:	TWO X EQUAL ONE Y
PREMISE TWO:	ONE Z EQUALS ONE Y
CONCLUSION:	TWO X EQUAL ONE Z

This abstract logical thinking underlies most present-day abstract mathematical logic. The conclusions formed in this lawful manner are "necessary," i.e., inescapable conclusions. They are considered fool-proof, inevitable. They underlie our present legal thinking in the western world. They ran into much trouble and conflict with the realities of living social life with the advent of the international labor movement which took hold, in Europe at least, of the less rigid, more "practical" materialistic philosophy, deriving from Buechner and developed toward Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels (1848-1914).

*Hoodlums In Government

According to the above logic, if two X equal one Z, then it follows that one X equals $\frac{1}{2}$ Z; this is logically perfectly true.

Let us, however, test this truth in living reality. Let us replace the abstract symbols, X, Y and Z, by living things. Let us put it thus:

PREMISE ONE:	TWO HORSES ARE EQUAL TO PULLING ONE LOADED CARRIAGE
PREMISE TWO:	ONE OX IS EQUAL TO PULLING ONE LOADED CARRIAGE.
CONCLUSION:	TWO HORSES EQUAL ONE OX (in pulling one loaded carriage)

This conclusion is logically and practically perfectly correct. There will be no conflict in that respect between an abstract logician and the practical driver of the specific carriage, i.e., the functional logician.

However, living life has certain specific qualities, called in ORGONOMY "FUNCTIONAL," which distinguish life from all other (mechanical) existence and set it apart in natural science, as it were. This can easily be shown by pursuing the above logical conclusion further as we did with the abstract symbols, X, Y and Z.

ONE X EQUALS ONE-HALF Z is a correct statement in fact as well as in formal logic.

IF it is true, as it truly is, that two horses are equal to one ox in pulling a loaded carriage, then it must also be true that:

ONE HORSE IS EQUAL TO ONE-HALF OX IN PULLING A LOADED CARRIAGE

This, however, is not so under any circumstances. One-half ox cannot pull anything whatever; it is dead.

At this point, the abstract, formal, factless procedure of reaching conclusions established by our 18th Century philosophers breaks down completely, becomes useless unless it takes into account the practical application of its abstractions and logical procedures in each single concrete living case, each time anew. What is called "conclusion" in abstract logic is the same as what we called "due process of law" or "legal procedure" in jurisdiction. These procedures are designed, as are the procedures of conclusion in logic, to arrive at the factual truth; to secure "due process"; to avoid error or judicial injustice.

However, it became quite obvious from our demonstration, that the abstract, formalistic, factless, legalistic procedure must lead to illogic, untruth and consequently to gross injustice if it omits the factual, concrete events in real living life. "One-half ox does NOT EQUAL one whole horse in pulling a loaded carriage." It is dead as a doornail. The abstract formal deduction has its limitations and becomes false when it omits concrete living facts. Let us now apply this truth to the case, Wilhelm Reich versus the U. S. A., in the formal abstract-legal version, or WILHELM REICH VERSUS THE HIG, in the factual, concrete meaning of the actual case before the court. It is so very obvious: The FDA is NOT "The" U.S. Government. And may our good fate protect us from such identity.

The logical breakdown here looks like this:

PREMISE ONE:	DISOBEYAL OF COURT ORDERS IS A CRIMINAL OFFENSE.
PREMISE TWO:	DISOBEYAL OF COURT ORDERS WAS DONE BY WILHELM REICH.
CONCLUSION:	WILHELM REICH HAS COMMITTED A CRIMINAL OFFENSE.

Since criminal offenses are subjected to punishment, WR has to be punished; this according to abstract, formal, legal, logical procedure.

Still, everyone involved in these procedures knew well that Wilhelm Reich had committed no crime, that he was no criminal, that jailing him would be an extreme injustice, that the case should be dismissed. The true "criminals" were those who had instigated the assault upon the discovery of the life energy and had conspired to kill it and its discoverer by fraudulent presentation to the Court. And, finally, WR had done a great service to the nation, to civil rights and principles of science by his resistance to organized evil.

The law procedure was obviously entangled in confusion. It was stuck in abstract, factless, unconcrete, mechanistic, legalistic thinking.

(p. 58)

All seemed logical and just by way of abstract formal procedure. All was so inescapably unjust in the face of the living, factual reality. Wilhelm Reich is just as little a criminal as half an ox can pull a carriage. And whoever is no criminal, whoever is innocent, has done his duty as a citizen in defying unlawful orders, should not be jailed. This is the functional conclusion from living life.

Where was the limitation of the truthfulness of abstract logics in the case: WILHELM REICH versus THE HIG?

The limitation lay in the omission of the FACTUAL background and true factual nature of the legal case; in the mechanistic, illogical, rigid separation of the facts of the civil complaint 1056, from the motives of the Discoverer not to appear in court; in the elimination of the factual motivating substance of the legal conflict at the trial by the lower court. The logical error rested fully on the failure to apply the legal abstraction in the concrete reality of living facts and indivisible processes; shortly, the legal procedure failed to be functional-factual in addition to being procedural.

> "If procedure is so designed that it kills truth and fact, then procedure, and not factual truth, must yield to revision.
> "If law is practiced in such a manner that quite obviously to everyone, the guilty one goes free and the innocent and decent one faces imprisonment, then the law practice must be changed as quickly and as radically as possible.
> "These are the ABC's of justice, obvious a priori."
> (Appeal Brief for WR, 5160, p. 49)

(p.59) Can it be that this FUNCTIONAL LOGIC is the searched-for new kind of thinking that may guide us along in the present chaos? We shall have to apply functional logic to actual social reality in order to tell. And thus we have reached the very substance of our test case:

Is a political mass murderer not a murderer to be routed from human society forever only because he is formally,"legally""posing" as a "statesman"?

Is a "diplomat," acting as a spy, not a traitor only because he is formally a "diplomat"?

Is a man a judge because he wears a black robe? Or because he knows right from wrong?

The chain of such factual arguments is endless. Does anyone really expect to guide the world to better conditions of living if touching hot potatoes of truth is further eschewed?

Does not, seen at close range, good breeding, "Bostonian" reluctance to "hurt feelings," or plain "pass-the-buck" philosophy contribute its share to commitments of mass murder? It certainly does.

It is true: Orders must be obeyed. But, we must add and never forget: Orders must themselves be lawful. Never forget this, lest we go down in history as traitors to mankind. Corrupt thinking has nearly succeeded in destroying our civil liberties; our natural rights; our hopes; the fruits of our toil; the cleanliness of our lives; the right to be bona fide wrong; the mercy toward bona fide error; trust among friends, between parents and children or lovers.

Are orders issued on principles of untruth, based on opinions only, not on facts, or distortion of facts according to expediency; falsification of history in the service of principled lie; eradication of integrity as a basic foundation of social law — are these "laws" LAWFUL laws? It is on the principle of unprincipled, arbitrary, unlawful orders that all tyranny rests.

(p. 60)

MY CONCLUSION IN THE APPEAL BRIEF
TO THE APPELLATE COURT

"We must set the principles of truthful conduct against the continued practices of pettifogging deceit in the service of evil and treason.

"We must reiterate the basic principles of decent conduct against deliberate misrepresentation and outright fraud perpetrated on Courts of Justice.

"We must adhere to and never let go of the principle which declares all judgments and orders null and void which were obtained by fraudulent misrepresentation of facts. (See Excerpts of Hearing, November 4, 1955, R. 504-527 and Petitioners' Ex. 5, R. 85-104, 336, 'Atoms for Peace vs. the Hig.')

"The case should be dismissed and reopened again to procedures which will guarantee the absence of such deceit."

ORDERS HAVE TO BE LAWFUL ORDERS, BASED ON TRUTH AND NOT LIE, ON FACT AND NOT OPINION.

Orders have to be lawful to be obeyed, lest the judicial doors be widely open to intrusion of social evil.

This principle is now put to the test of jurisdictional decision within the framework of the American Constitution before the Supreme Court of the U.S.A.

(p. 61)

RELIEF SOUGHT

The Writ of Certiorari should be granted.

The decision of the Court of Appeals should be reversed.

Adequate judicial steps in legislation should be taken to prevent such dangerous entanglement of decent hard-working citizens by irrational administrative practices and unlawful orders.

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
For the First Circuit

Opinion of the Court
December 11, 1956

WOODBURY, Circuit Judge. The United States, on February 10, 1954, filed a complaint under §302(a) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, 52 Stat. 1043, 21 U.S.C §332(a), in the United States District Court for the District of Maine asking for an injunction restraining the Wilhelm Reich Foundation, a Maine corporation, and Wilhelm Reich and Ilse Ollendorff, individuals residing in Rangeley, Maine, from violating §301(a) and (k) of the above Act by either introducing, or causing the introduction into interstate commerce, or, while being held for sale after shipment in interstate commerce doing anything resulting in the misbranding of, certain devices known as "orgone energy accumulators,"* which it was alleged were adulterated within the meaning of §501(c) of the Act and misbranded within the meaning of §502(a) thereof. Service of the complaint and summons was duly made on the defendants on the same day that the complaint was filed.

* In their commonest form these are box-like structures in which the patient sits for treatment. It is asserted by the Government that these devices were being falsely held out to the public at large by the defendants as at least beneficial in the treatment of a great number of human ills ranging from cancer to the common cold.

(p. 2a)

The defendants entered no appearances and filed no answers. Indeed, in a letter to the judge of the court below dated February 25, 1954, the defendant, Dr. Wilhelm Reich, indicated unmistakably that he, at least, had no intention of filing either an appearance or an answer. Dr. Reich wrote to the court in part:

> "My factual position in the case as well as the world of science of today does not permit me to enter the case against the Food and Drug Administration, since such action would, in my mind, imply admission of the authority of this special branch of the government to pass judgment on primordial, pre-atomic, cosmic orgone energy."

On the day after this letter was written requests for admissions were propounded by the United States and served on each of the defendants. These requests were ignored, and on March 19, 1954, upon request of the United States, the default of each defendant was entered by the clerk of the court below. On the same day the United States moved for default judgment, its motion was granted, and the court immediately entered a decree of injunction as prayed for in the complaint. By the terms of this injunction the named defendants, and "each and all of their officers, agents, servants, employees, * * * and all persons in active concert or participation with them or any of them" were "perpetually enjoined and restrained" from indulging in the practices set out in detail in the complaint. Furthermore all orgone energy accumulators out on a rental basis or otherwise owned or controlled by the defendants were ordered recalled to the defendants' place of business in Rangeley, Maine, and there either destroyed or dismantled for salvage under the supervision of employees of the Food and Drug Administration, and in addition all printed labels and order blanks for orgone energy accumulators, and certain listed descriptive literature pertaining thereto, were ordered destroyed.

Certified copies of the decree of injunction were served on the named defendants on March 22, 1954, and at the same time copies were either served or mailed to several other persons in the Rangeley area who were either employees of or contractors for the defendants in the manufacture and distribution of the devices. At the same time copies of the decree were also mailed to a number of duly licensed physicians in the New York, New Jersey, and Philadelphia area, most of whom specialized in psychiatry, who were known to have used orgone energy accumulators in the treatment of their patients. Included in this group was the appellant herein, Dr. Michael Silvert.

On March 30, 1954, the defendant Ilse Ollendorff as clerk of the corporate defendant sent a telegram to the United States Attorney for the District of Maine stating:

> "The Wilhelm Reich Foundation is far advanced in preparing full compliance with injunction of March 19, 1954 Stop An exact account of measures taken and still in progress will be sent to your office for your information."

No further account of measures taken to comply with the injunction was ever sent to the District Attorney, nor does it appear that in fact any such measures ever were undertaken.

Next, on May 5, 1954, the doctors in the New York-Philadelphia area referred to above, including as we have already noted the appellant Dr. Michael Silvert, applied to the court below for leave to intervene. Their application was denied on November 17, 1954, in accordance with an opinion of the court below of that date recorded in 17 F.R.D. 96 (1954). This court affirmed on that opinion sub nom Baker v. United States, 221 F. 2d 957 (1955).

We turn now to the case before us which was initiated by the United States Attorney for the District of Maine on July 15, 1955, when, acting under §302(b) of the Act, he filed in the court below an information charging the Wilhelm Reich Foundation, Dr. Wilhelm Reich and Dr. Michael Silvert with failing and refusing to obey the injunction of March 19, 1954, and asking for an order to show cause why they should not be adjudged in criminal contempt for their misbehavior. The defendants appeared and filed motions to dismiss, which were denied; the United States moved to amend, its motion was allowed, and the defendants again moved to dismiss and their motions were again denied. They also filed several other motions, all of which were denied, and do not require description or discussion. It will suffice to say that the defendants were given full opportunity for hearing on every occasion.

Eventually, on May 3, 1956, the defendants, in accordance with their request, were put to trial by jury on their pleas of not guilty. They were found guilty by the jury and thereafter sentenced by the court, the corporation to a fine and the individuals to terms of imprisonment. These appeals are from the respective judgments of sentence.

The defendants did not contend below and do not urge here that the injunction of March 19, 1954, had in fact been obeyed. On the contrary, they admitted at the trial that no attempt had been made to comply with its terms. Their contention is that the court below had no jurisdiction to issue the injunction. The individual appellants say that they, both individually and acting through the corporate defendant, of which Dr. Reich was the moving and guiding spirit, were engaged in basic scientific research which no agency of the Government had jurisdiction to interfere with or control, and that furthermore and more specifically, the court below had no jurisdiction to issue the injunction for the reason that it had been procured by fraud and deception practiced upon the court by officers and agents of the Food and Drug Administration. In addition Dr. Silvert contends that he is not bound by the injunction because he was not a defendant in the original suit in which it was issued and had not been served with process therein.

None of these contentions have any merit.

We turn first to Dr. Silvert's separate contention. It has been settled law for a long time that one who knowingly aids, abets, assists, or acts in active concert with, a person who has been enjoined in violating an injunction subjects himself to civil as well as criminal proceedings for contempt even though he was not named or served with process in the suit in which the injunction was issued or even served with a copy of the injunction. In Re Lennon, 166 U.S. 548, 554 (1897); Alemite Mfg. Corp. v. Staff, 42 F. 2d 832 (C.A. 2, 1930) and cases cited. See also Rule 65(d) F.R. Civ. P. The question then is whether Dr. Silvert had actual knowledge of the injunction of March 19, 1954, issued against the Wilhelm Reich Foundation, and Dr.

(p. 6a)

Wilhelm Reich and Ilse Ollendorff personally. There can be no doubt that he did. He was mailed a copy of that injunction when it was issued, he admitted at the trial that he read the injunction when he received it, and moreover he was one of those who moved to intervene in the suit in which it was issued. Thus it is abundantly clear that he knew of its existence and knew its terms.

The appellants' first jurisdictional contention does not deserve much comment or discussion. Its refutation is obvious from its mere statement. Of course the United States Government has power to forbid and power to take appropriate steps to prevent the transportation in interstate commerce of devices of alleged therapeutic value if they are adulterated or misbranded.

The appellants' second jurisdictional contention deserves only slightly more extended consideration. There can be no doubt whatever that Congress in §302(a) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act gave the District Court jurisdiction over the subject matter of the original suit. Nor can there be any doubt that the District Court obtained personal jurisdiction over the defendants in that suit by legal service of process upon them in Maine. This jurisdiction, once obtained, certainly would not be terminated by any fraud practiced upon the court by the successful litigant. On the contrary, the Court's jurisdiction would necessarily have to continue in order to permit the court to entertain an application by the victims of a successful litigant's fraud to vacate the injunction through the remedies and procedures for relief outlined in detail in Hazel-Atlas Glass Co. v. Hartford-Empire Co., 322 U.S. 238 (1944).

(p. 7a)

And the remedies and procedures available to a defrauded litigant certainly do not include refusal to obey an injunction. It is too well settled to require a lengthy citation of cases that an injunction, temporary or permanent, must be obeyed as long as it is in force and effect: Howat v. Kansas, 258 U.S. 181 (1922); United States v. United Mine Workers of America, 330 U.S. 258, 289, et seq. (1947) and cases cited. Nor is this rule a mere technical quirk of procedure, for as the Supreme Court pointed out in Gompers v. Bucks Stove & Range Co., 221 U.S. 418, 450 (1911):

> "If a party can make himself a judge of the validity of orders which have been issued, and by his own act of disobedience set them aside, then are the courts impotent, and what the Constitution now fittingly calls the 'judicial power of the United States' would be a mere mockery."

See also the remarks made by Mr. Justice Frankfurter at the bottom of page 311 and the top of page 312 of his concurring opinion in the United Mine Workers case, supra.

It follows that the court below did not err in refusing to permit the defendants at their trial for contempt to show in their defense that officers and agents of the Food and Drug Administration had procured the injunction of March 19, 1954, by fraud perpetrated upon the court.

Although the court's refusal to permit the defendants to show fraud in procuring the injunction is the only error asserted by them to have occurred at their trial, we have nevertheless, because the defendants were not represented by counsel in the court below and only partially on appeal, examined the record with particular care. We find ample evidence that Dr. Reich and the Wilhelm Reich Foundation deliberately refused to obey the injunction and that Dr. Silvert aided and abetted them in flouting it. Nor do we find any erroneous rulings of law. Indeed, it is evident from the record that throughout the trial the presiding judge solicitously protected the appellants' rights and gave them full opportunity to present every defense available to them under the law.

(p. 8a)

Judgment will be entered affirming the judgments of the District Court.

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS

For The First Circuit

JUDGMENT

December 11, 1956

This cause came on to be heard on the record on appeal from the United States District Court for the District of Maine, and was argued by Wilhelm Reich, pro se, and Michael Silvert, pro se, and by counsel for The Wilhelm Reich Foundation, appellant, and for appellee.

Upon consideration whereof, It is now here ordered, adjudged and decreed as follows: The judgments of the District Court are affirmed.

By the Court:

/s/ ROGER A. STINCHFIELD

Clerk.

(cc. Messrs. Haydon and Maguire, and Messrs. Reich and Silvert.)

(For judgments of District Court, see R. 534-539)

EXCERPTS FROM THE CONSTITUTION

Article III, Section 2:

"1. The judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more States, between a State and citizens of another State, between citizens of different States, between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, or subjects.

"2. In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, and those in which a State shall be a party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all other cases before mentioned the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

"3. The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury, and such trial shall be held in the State where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State the trial shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by law have directed."

(p. 11a)

Article III, Section 3:

"1. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

"2. The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture except during the life of the person attainted."

BACKGROUND AND SCIENTIFIC DEVELOPMENT OF WILHELM REICH

(From the Orgone Energy Bulletin, Vol. V, Nos. 3-4, 1953, burned on Court order August, 1956.)

Wilhelm Reich's basic scientific discoveries include the following: Orgasm theory and technique of Character-Analysis (1923-34); Respiratory block and muscular armor (1928-34); Sex-economic self-regulation of primary natural drives in their distinction from secondary, perverted drives (1928-34); The role of irrationalism and human sex-economy in the origin of dictatorship of all political denominations (1930-34); The orgasm reflex (1934); The bio-electrical nature of sexuality and anxiety (1935-36); Orgone energy vesicles, BIONS, (1936-39); Origin of the cancer cell from bionously disintegrated animal tissue, and the organization of protozoa from bionously disintegrated moss and grass (1936-39); T-bacilli in sarcoma (1937); Discovery of the bio-energy (Orgone Energy) in SAPA Bions (1939), in the atmosphere (1940); Invention of the Orgone Energy Accumulator (1940); and the Orgone Energy Field Meter (1944); Experimental Orgone Therapy of the Cancer Biopathy (1940-45); Experimental investigation of primary biogenesis (Experiment XX, 1945);

(p. 12a)

Method of Orgonomic Functionalism (1945); Emotional Plague of man as a disease of the bio-energetic equilibrium (1947); Orgonometric equations (1949-50); Hypothesis of cosmic superimposition of two orgone energy streams at the basis of hurricanes and galaxy formation (1951); Anti-nuclear radiation effects of Orgone Energy (The Oranur Experiment, First Report, 1947-51).

Wilhelm Reich was born on March 24, 1897, in Imperial Austria, as the son of a well-to-do farmer. His mother language was German. Until 1938, Wilhelm Reich (hereafter, WR) was an Austrian (Viennese citizen). He had no religious education. He adheres to no religious creed and to no political party.

WR's early education (1903-07) was as a private student. He passed his examinations at an Austro-German public school. He attended a German high school between 1907 and 1915, preparing for natural sciences, and graduated in 1915 with "Stimmeneinhelligkeit". His best subjects were German, Latin and Natural Science.

WR's interest in biology and natural science was created early by the life on the farm, close to agriculture, cattle-breeding, etc., in which he took part every summer and during the harvest. Between his 8th and 12th years, he had his own collection and breeding laboratory of butterflies, insects, plants, etc., under the guidance of a private teacher. The natural life functions, including the sexual function, were familiar to him as far back as he can remember. That may well have determined his later strong inclination, as a bio-psychiatrist, toward the biological foundation of the emotional life of man, and also his bio-physical discoveries in the fields of Medicine and Biology, as well as Education.

After the death of his father, in 1914, WR, at the age of 17, directed the farm work quite on his own, without interrupting his studies, until the war disaster put an end to this work and destroyed all property in 1915. He was in the Austrian Army from 1915 to 1918, a lieutenant from 1916 to 1918.

WR entered the Medical School of the University of Vienna in 1918, earning his living and paying his way through school by tutoring fellow students in premedical subjects. War veterans were permitted to complete the 6-year course in 4 years. WR passed the 18 Rigorosa in 18 medical subjects except one easily, and in all the premedical subjects received "excellent" ("ausgezeichnet"). He was graduated and obtained the M.D. degree in July, 1922, from the University of Vienna.

During his last year of medical school, WR took postgraduate work in Internal Medicine at the University Clinics of Ortner and Chvostek at University Hospital, Vienna. He continued his postgraduate education in Neuro-Psychiatry for 2 years (1922-24) at the Neurological and Psychiatric University Clinic under Professor Wagner-Jauregg, and worked one year in the disturbed wards under Paul Schilder. His postgraduate study also included attendance at polyclinical work in hypnosis and suggestive therapy at the same University Clinic and special courses and lectures in biology at the University of Vienna. Also, while still in medical school, in October 1920, WR attained membership in the Vienna Psychoanalytic Society, then under Professor Sigmund Freud.

(p. 14a)

WR began psychoanalytic and psychiatric private practice in 1922. By 1933, the demands of work in orgone energy research required the termination of private practice.

WR was First Clinical Assistant at Freud's Psychoanalytic Polyclinic in Vienna (under the directorship of Dr. Edward Hitschmann) from its foundation in 1922 until 1928; Vice-Director of the Polyclinic, 1928-1930, and Director of the Seminar for Psychoanalytic Therapy at the same institution, 1924-1930. As a member of the faculty of the Psychoanalytic Institute in Vienna, 1924-1930, WR gave lectures on clinical subjects and biopsychiatric theory. He did research in the social causation of the neurosis at the Polyclinic from 1924, and at mental hygiene consultation centers in various districts in Vienna (Sozialistische Gesellschaft fuer Sexualberatung und Sexualforschung), centers which he founded and led from 1928 through 1930. He continued his mental hygiene work in Berlin, 1930-33, as lecturer at the Psychoanalytic Clinic and at the Worker's College, and as head physician in mental hygiene centers of various cultural organizations in Berlin and other German cities.

Between 1934-39, WR lectured and did research in orgone biophysics at the Psychological Institute of the University of Oslo, Norway.

The Orgone Energy Laboratory was transferred by WR to Forest Hills, New York, WR coming to the U.S.A. on a non-quota Professor visa, in August, 1939. He was Associate Professor of Medical Psychology at the New School for Social Research, New York, 1939-41, giving lectures on orgone biophysics.

(p. 15a)

The Orgone Institute was founded by WR in 1942 in New York, and in the same year 280 acres of land were acquired in Maine and called "Orgonon", the future home of Orgonomy, the Science of the Life Energy. The Wilhelm Reich Foundation was founded in Maine, 1949, by students and friends, to preserve the Archives of WR and to secure the future of WR's discovery of the Cosmic Orgone Energy.

GLOSSARY

A new scientific discipline must employ new terms if old ones are inapplicable. Orgonomy introduced the following terms:

ANORGONIA. The condition of diminished or lacking orgonity (q.v.).

ARMOR. See character armor, muscular armor.

BIONS. Energy vesicles representing transitional stages between non-living and living substance. They constantly form in nature by a process of disintegration of inorganic and organic matter, which process it has been possible to reproduce experimentally. They are charged with orgone energy (q.v.), i.e., Life Energy and may develop into protozoa and bacteria.

CHARACTER. An individual's typical structure, his stereotype manner of acting and reacting. The orgonomic concept of character is functional and biological, and not a static, psychological or moralistic concept.

(p. 16a)

CHARACTER-ANALYSIS. Originally a modification of the customary psychoanalytic technique of symptom analysis, by the inclusion of the character and character resistance into the therapeutic process. However, the discovery of the muscular armor necessitated the development of a new technique, namely vegetotherapy. The later discovery of organismic orgone energy ("bioenergy") and the concentration of atmospheric orgone energy with an orgone energy accumulator necessitated the further development of character-analytic vegetotherapy into an inclusive, biophysical orgone therapy. (See physical and psychiatric orgone therapy.)

CHARACTER ARMOR. The sum total of typical character attitudes, which an individual develops as a blocking against his emotional excitations, resulting in rigidity of the body, lack of emotional contact, "deadness." Functionally identical with the muscular armor. (q.v.)

CHARACTER, GENITAL. The un-neurotic character structure, which does not suffer from sexual stasis and, therefore, is capable of natural self-regulation on the basis of orgastic potency.

CHARACTER, NEUROTIC. The character which, due to chronic bioenergetic stasis operates according to the principle of compulisve moral regulation.

(p. 17a)

EMOTIONAL PLAGUE. The neurotic character in destructive action on the social scene.

MUSCULAR ARMOR. The sum total of the muscular attitudes (chronic muscular spasms) which an individual develops as a block against the break-through of emotions and organ sensations, in particular anxiety, rage, and sexual excitation.

ORGASM. The unitary involuntary convulsion of the total organism at the acme of the genital embrace. This reflex, because of its involuntary character and the prevailing orgasm anxiety, is blocked in most humans of civilizations which suppress infantile and adolescent genitality.

ORGASTIC IMPOTENCE. The absence of orgastic potency. It is the most important characteristic of the average human of today, and--by damming up biological (orgone) energy in the organism--provides the source of energy for all kinds of biopathic symptoms and social irrationalism.

ORGASTIC POTENCY. Essentially, the capacity for complete surrender to the involuntary convulsion of the organism and complete discharge of the excitation at the acme of the genital embrace. It is always lacking in neurotic individuals. It presupposes the presence or establishment of the genital character, i.e., absence of a pathological character armor and muscular armor. Orgastic potency is usually not distinguished from erective and ejaculative potency, both of which are only prerequisites of orgastic potency.

(p. 18a)

ORGONE ENERGY. Primordial Cosmic Energy; universally present and demonstrable visually, thermically, electroscopically and by means of Geiger-Mueller counters. In the living organism: Bio-energy, Life Energy. Discovered by Wilhelm Reich between 1936 and 1940.

ORANUR denotes orgone energy in a state of excitation induced by nuclear energy. (DOR denotes Deadly OR energy.)

ORGONE THERAPY

Physical Orgone Therapy: Application of physical orgone energy concentrated in an orgone energy accumulator to increase the natural bio-energetic resistance of the organism against disease.

Psychiatric Orgone Therapy: Mobilization of the orgone energy in the organism, i.e., the liberation of biophysical emotions from muscular and character armorings with the goal of establishing, if possible, orgastic potency.

ORGONITY. The condition of containing orgone energy; the quantity of orgone energy contained.

ORGONOMETRY. Quantitative orgonomic research.

ORGONOMIC ("ENERGETIC") FUNCTIONALISM. The functional thought technique which guides clinical and experimental orgone research. The guiding principle is that of the identity of variations in their common functioning principle (CFP).

(p. 19a)

This thought technique grew in the course of the study of human character formation and led to the discovery of the functional organismic and cosmic orgone energy, thereby proving itself to be the correct mirroring of both living and non-living basic natural processes.

ORGONOMY. The natural science of the cosmic orgone energy.

ORGONOTIC. Qualities concerning the orgonity of a system or a condition.

SEX-ECONOMY. The body of knowledge within Orgonomy which deals with the economy of the biological (orgone) energy in the organism, with its energy household.

STASIS. The damming-up of Life Energy in the organism, thus the source of energy for biopathy and irrationalism.

STASIS ANXIETY. The anxiety caused by the stasis of sexual energy in the center of the organism when its peripheral orgastic discharge is inhibited.

STASIS NEUROSIS. All somatic disturbances which are the immediate result of the stasis of sexual energy, with stasis anxiety at its core.

WORK DEMOCRACY. The functioning of the natural and intrinsically rational work relationships between human beings. The concept of work democracy represents the established reality (not the ideology) of these relationships which, though usually distorted because of prevailing armoring and irrational political ideologies, are nevertheless at the basis of all social achievement.

(p. 20a)

TESTIMONY OF PETER MILLS
(R. 348-354)

(All emphasis by WR)

PETER MILLS, a witness, called by and on behalf of the defendants, first being duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Dr. Reich:

Dr. Reich: Here is the first Exhibit, Mr. Mills. This was taken from the records about your activities in connection with what you did for us. Mr. Mills, what is this?

Mr. Mills: This is a table of events from the records. What is your question, Doctor?

The Court: I presume, Mr. Mills, that all he means is this: To the best of your knowledge, is this a fair representation of your activities.

Dr. Reich: This is an abstract of our association?

Mr. Mills: I don't know.

Dr. Reich: Would you please inspect it?

Mr. Mills: I am presented, Your Honor, with an eight-page list of items and dates and I am in no position to verify or deny.

The Court: Do you have any reason to challenge any of it from your memory?

(p. 21a)

Mr. Mills: No, I have no reason to challenge it but I haven't any reason to confirm it either, Your Honor, as they are listed. I could state, generally, that I would try to be responsive to any questions that the examiner asks.

The Court: They have a right to show the transactions. If we have to go through the books and take item by item, and you use the charts and books, I think you should check that this noontime and let us see if it is a fair and accurate representation. He asked you if that is a fair representation of your activities in relation to the corporation.

Mr. Mills: Well, I am looking at the photograph, and it bears my signature, which I recognize as a statement, as a Notary Public, on August 11, 1947. I believe that was the first contact that I had with Dr. Reich. Dr. Reich called at my office to have a Notary take a statement and I notarized that statement and I affixed my name on it.

Dr. Reich: There are dozens of them?

Mr. Mills: There was one other occasion.

The Court: I am going to ask you to hand that list to Mr. Mills and I am going to ask you during the recess to check, so far as you can, whether that is a fair representation of your activities.

(Recess 12:20-2:05)

MR. MILLS resumes the stand:

Dr. Reich: Mr. Mills, did you look through the material?

Mr. Mills: I did.

Dr. Reich: Is it authentic material in connection with your connection with Orgone Institute and the Wilhelm Reich Foundation?

(p. 22a)

Mr. Mills: I did not get the first few words?

Dr. Reich: Is this material legal material which you have handled in your function as a counsel for the Foundation, for the Orgone Institute, and for many of its employees and directors?

Mr. Mills: It is not.

The Court: Let me ask you this: Is that list a fair representation of activities in which you were engaged in relation to the corporation or some of its subsidiaries?

Mr. Mills: It is not, Your Honor.

Dr. Reich: Mr. Mills, have you been the counsel of the Corporation of the Wilhelm Reich Foundation? Did you incorporate the papers and sign all documents?

Mr. Mills: Part of your question I would say in the affirmative. I was at one time counsel for the Corporation, and I was the attorney at the time it was incorporated.

Dr. Reich: Did you act as counsel for the Corporation?

Mr. Mills: Yes.

Dr. Reich: That was in 1949?

Mr. Mills: I think 1950 or 1951.

Dr. Reich: The Wilhelm Reich Foundation was incorporated by you as a lawyer in 1949. Isn't that true?

Mr. Mills: I was the attorney at the time of the incorporation.

Dr. Reich: You partook in the meetings of the physicians who constituted the board of trustees of the Wilhelm Reich Foundation?

Mr. Mills: Some of them.

Dr. Reich: But you were our counsellor, our attorney?

(p. 23a)

Mr. Mills: On some matters.

Dr. Reich: Yes, on basic matters, some of our legal matters, from 1949 to 1952?

Mr. Mills: I believe that that is correct.

Dr. Reich: That is about three years?

Mr. Mills: Yes.

Dr. Reich: The documents which pertain to this service, that you rendered, are in there?

Mr. Mills: I couldn't say all of them are in there, but certainly many of them are.

Dr. Reich: Would you permit that I submit this material as evidence?

The Court: The question is: Does he agree that this material, which he identifies, substantially or partially, represents his transactions. Will you agree that that be put in evidence?

Mr. Mills: I would not agree to agree or disagree. I would not from my review of it.

Dr. Reich: My question was, do these documents pertain to your service as our counsel?

Mr. Mills: There is a great deal more in these documents that I have no knowledge of.

Dr. Reich: Would you agree to eliminate those which do not pertain to your service as counsel?

Mr. Mills: I would agree that many of these are. There are corporation papers here. There are many other things which certainly appear to be authentic.

Dr. Reich: For instance, one or two examples—one document there appears to be a notarization?

Mr. Mills: Yes.

Dr. Reich: Another notarization is a very important, crucial document pertaining to what we called Vacor Phenomenon. Do you remember that?

Mr. Mills: I do.

Dr. Reich: You do?

Mr. Mills: Yes.

Dr. Reich: The fact that I want to establish here is only one. You were for three years—for more than three years—a good friend of ours and a counselor?

Mr. Mills: That's correct. I was professionally, but not intimately.

Dr. Reich: There was some private contact?

Mr. Mills: Yes, a cup of coffee.

The Court: With cream and sugar in it?

Dr. Reich: That's right.

Dr. Reich: Now, Mr. Mills, the problem which is before us here, in this legal case—I think the Court will permit me, as a human being, to ask one central question which pertains to the Injunction since you are the counsel for the opponent.

Mr. Mills: Are you asking me a question or testifying?

Dr. Reich: I am leading up to my question. My question is now why you changed from our counsel to be the counsel for the opponents?

Dr. Reich: This problem, Your Honor, I submit to you to be admitted in Court.

The Court: Well, what is your question?

Dr. Reich: My question is, under the circumstances, what reasons, or what facts induced Mr. Mills after being our counsel for three years, and I regarded him as a good friend, to be our opponent's counsel, and the one to (p.25a) prosecute me and Dr. Silvert as criminals?

The Court: That is a fair question if there is anything.

Mr. Mills: The question is, what prompted me?

Dr. Reich: What made you change your mind?

Mr. Mills: I have never changed my mind. I am not conscious of changing changing my mind.

The Court: Wait a minute. The original question was what prompted you to change sides.

Mr. Mills: I never changed sides. I first made my connections, I believe, with you on August 29, 1952. I never advised you on matters concerning the Pure Food and Drug Administration. I did not read the law with respect to the Pure Food and Drug Administration. I did not know it had any application in this business. You did not advise me.

Dr. Reich: In 1952 you stopped being our counsel, and then in 1954—I think it is 1953, because we have information that the complaint was here in court for a long time, and you were the attorney for the opponent in 1952. Do you remember that in 1952 to put it correctly and legally, that you were present at a meeting with the Pure Food and Drug Administration * * *?

Mr. Mills: I do not.

The Court: Let him finish the question.

Dr. Reich: You don't know?

Mr. Mills: That's right.

Dr. Reich: You do not remember the meeting where the physicians were there in my study, in the Observatory?

Mr. Mills: The only recollection I have with reference to the Pure Food and Drug Administration, in your connection, is one afternoon we were on the premises, you and I, and you said to me "spies--The Pure Food and Drug Administration * * *"

(p. 26a)

Dr. Reich: I do not remember that, but do not interrogate me. I will ask you questions. You will have plenty of time to interrogate me later. I am sorry, but that was out of step. Are you convinced that I am trying to get out the truth here?

Mr. Mills: I presume so.

Dr. Reich: Will you agree with me also that it is the job and the task and the obligation of everyone to get out the truth?

Mr. Mills: I certainly do.

Dr. Reich: You will certainly agree that the function of the District Attorney is not to prosecute by all means and to convict, but to find the truth? I will appreciate it if you will help to find the truth.

Mr. Mills: I certainly agree with you. I will try to help you.

The Court: You are getting argumentative. You have shown he was your counsel for three years. You can argue the rest of it when you argue your case, but I do not think you ought to pursue it any further.

THE FRAUD AND THE CONTEMPT PROCEEDINGS*

(Legal Summary)

The information charging the petitioners with contempt was filed by their former attorney who is now the United States Attorney for the District of Maine (R. 348, et seq., and Appeal Brief for WR, pp. 7r-43r, Appendix to Brief). It was charged that Reich and the Foundation failed to comply with the injunction (R. 470, et seq.).

---

*The injunction should not have been granted. The order was entirely void. Although it was called to the attention of the Court of Appeals, it overlooked the overwhelming weight of judicial authority to the effect that a person charged with contempt may always show in his defense that an order is void. (Citations from Reply Brief for The Wilhelm Reich Foundation by Counsel Charles Haydon, pp. 4-5.)

(p. 28a)

Immediately, the Foundation and WR moved to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction (R. 463-464). Then, on October 10, 1955 motions were made and argued on behalf of all of the petitioners to dismiss the information and vacate the decree of injunction for suppression and falsification of evidence (R. 468, 484).

In order further to demonstrate the fraud and suppression which appellants prove permeated the entire case from its inception, on November 4, 1955, Wilhelm Reich argued his motion to show "illegal misrepresentation in Court of pertinent facts" (R. 500). The motion was denied on that day, despite the argument of Reich that he sought to proceed "with enumeration of the misrepresentations of pertinent facts" (R. 513). He was prevented from so doing by the Court. At that time none of the appellants were represented by counsel (R. 504 and Petitioners' Exs. 4 and 5, R. 1-104, 336).

Thereafter on November 17, 1955, the appellant Reich sought to inspect material subpoenaed from the Food & Drug Administration, including reports on actual experiments, but that motion was denied as well (R. 530).

No testimony was permitted to be taken and no hearings were held on any of the motions, which were all denied.

Again, at the trial itself, the Court prevented the development of such evidence of fraud by the petitioners when it ruled at virtually the outset of the trial:

(p. 29a)

"I am not interested in anything that took place prior to the issuance of the injunction." (R. 121)

The rulings of the Court below deprived the petitioners of the opportunity to show that the entire decree was the result of a fraudulent conspiracy, and that they were thus convicted without due process of law.

DO NOT DISTURB: The Emotional Plague in Education, by Jerome Eden
This monograph expresses the rational anger of a Functional Educator who, for several years in both public & private schools, was "shot at" from ambush by pestilential people who were not motivated by a sincere desire to educate children, but who desired to crush any real work in that direction.
Mimeographed: 8½ x 11", with Cover...28pp, $1.00

SUFFER THE CHILDREN: Fascism vs. Freedom in Education, by J. Eden
A book for anyone interested in the development of happy, healthy, democratic children: based upon the author's teaching experiences in public and private schools, from the "Blackboard Jungle" of New York City to the "better" schools of suburban communities. It deals vividly and trenchantly with the prevailing sexual misery of children and adolescents which is at the roots of present-day juvenile delinquency.
Hard cover, clothbound: 168pp., $3.00

OUR PLANET IS IN TROUBLE: The Fight of Wilhelm Reich, M.D. for Life on Earth...Dr. Reich made crucial medical, sociological, and cosmic discoveries which threaten the existence of commercial interests now thriving on human misery and ignorance. The Red Facists, directed from Moscow, succeeded in stopping Dr. Reich's vital research. His books were burned and banned in August, 1956 in the USA, and Dr. Reich died in a federal penitentiary in 1957. This volume contains Public Court Documents: The Injunction banning Dr. Reich's books & research, his "Response", and his "Writ of Certiorari" to the U.S. Supreme Court. 60pp, Mimeographed...$2.00

MEMOIR OF F.A. MESMER (1799) 68pp, limited hand-set & printed edition $2.00...

MAXIMS ON ANIMAL MAGNETISM, by F.A. Mesmer, Clothbound, 78pp, $3.00

Translated by Jerome Eden, these books are the first English translations of Dr. Mesmer's original Principles and Procedures respectively. Dr. Mesmer's original work, as contained in these two books, demonstrates once again how the Emotional Plague kills by silence, defamation, or distortion, the vital findings of a pioneer scientist.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE DIRECTOR

The following book review of "Science Versus Crime", by Henry Morton Robinson, was prepared in this unit:

Reviewing a historical background of man's dealing with criminals and what has been considered evidence in criminal cases, the author cites interesting cases which show the gradual world wide progress made in scientific crime detection. In a general discussion of crime is noted that "today there is no single source or volume from which the slightly apocalyptic vision of the new police science may be derived". Throughout the book, the author commends the Bureau under the Director's guidance, the material concerning the Bureau, its facilities, activities being handled in an efficacious manner.

RECORDED & INDEXED

Though the subject matter of the text covered, scientifically scrutinized, may be found faulty and the author over zealous upon occasion, the lay reader will find it an intense informative recital of cases exemplifying methods in scientific crime detection.

DEC 2 - 1935

Chapters are devoted to the fields of Fingerprinting, Firearms Identification, Inks, Questioned Documents and Handwriting, Photography, Toxicology, Blood Tests, Wood Experts and the Hauptmann case, Dust, Moulage, Safe Cracking, Dissemination of Police Alarms, Science of obtaining confessions from 1200 B. C. to the Lie Detector, and finally in a chapter entitled "Social Indictment", is observed that our American Police Agencies have not availed themselves of the methods developed by science for the detection and apprehension of criminals. Poor personnel is deplored, resulting in the "ghastly police tipstavery" which was shown in "the opening chapter of the Lindbergh case".

"Science versus Crime" affords the Special Agent not only a pleasant review of subjects with which he should be thoroughly conversant, but, also brings to mind the vast possibilities of application of scientific methods to crime detection and criminal apprehension, through the author's many case examples.

Respectfully,

Edward Scheidt.

DE LA CRYPTOGRAPHIE, published by Payot and C, Paris, 1918, Library of Congress Class Z 104, Book .L 27.

This book was not written as a complete exposition of cryptography, but on the other hand it is considered generally as criterion. It does describe the principal systems, gives a brief statement with reference to the history of the subject and includes various frequency tables which would be useful in the work of the laboratory in some cases. These frequency tables are arranged for the French language, English, German, Italian, Spanish, and Russian. The book is written in French and has not been read by the writer.

This is a technical reference work on all phases of legal medicine even to the legal procedure and similar matters. The chapters on the identification of the living and the dead, diagnosis of causes of death and the statement of the effects of various causes of death are exhaustive and very valuable. There is a very good chapter giving the technical details of almost all of the recognized tests of blood stains. There is also a very good exposition of medical examinations in sexual offenses. The examination of stains is given preferred treatment.

The above constitutes the first portion of the book and the remainder is entirely devoted to Toxicology, being an authority on all phases of this subject.

Page 71 of the volume of the Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland, published by Trubner and Company in 1877, appears the article on human hair by Dr. Pruner-Bey. This article shows the results of the microscopical examination of hair for the purpose of investigating the possibility of determining race in hairs alone. The conclusion of the writer was that race could be told from an examination of the transverse section, and variation in shape, running from one extreme end represented by the negroes to the other end represented by the Japanese and similar races, the Arians occupying intermediate space.

The article is accompanied with prints and measurement data which is valuable, although this is an early writing on the subject.

HAIR AND WOOL together with AN ESSAY UPON THE RAISING AND BREEDING OF SHEEP - by Peter A. Browne, L.L.D. - published by J. H. Jones, Printer, Philadelphia - Library of Congress Chapter QL942, Shelf .B89, Copy 2.

This was written in 1853 and concerns nothing except hair which the author calls pile because he desires to describe both hair and wool. This book describes the results of a large number of examinations of hair, wool, fur, and similar coverings of animals. In so doing there are given a large amount of data such as the dimensions and other characteristics of the particular varieties of animals. There are drawings of the microscopic appearances to illustrate the data in the test. Considerable amount of the examination was devoted to measuring the strength and elasticity of hairs of different animals. Notwithstanding its age and the stressing of strength, there are considerable data in this book of value which might be referred to by calling for the book from the Library of Congress. This is a contribution to the Library of Congress of the Smithsonian Institute.

Other than this article I do not feel that it will be necessary to consult this volume very often.

*SOME PERSONS UNKNOWN - by Henry T. F. *Rhodes - published by John Murray, London. HV 8073 .R55

This is intended for popular reading. The author reviews the history of the use of science in crime detection work. He refers to the absence of any methods of this kind and the situation concerning poisoning from the fifteenth through the seventeenth centuries when it was considered a proper political method to poison opponents.

He refers to examination of dust, how in a great many cases, which were cited, the microscopic examination has resulted in evidence which helped to prove the identity of the criminal.

The author then refers to fingerprints, to photography, to the ultra-violet light, to forgeries in which he discusses the use of the microscope and the chemical examination of the ink, to tampering with the mails, that is, to detect the opening of registered mail, to the examination of blood, to the psychology of the criminals, to bombs, and to the appearance of an expert witness in Court. At the end of the book is included the bibliography.

This book was published in England in 1931 and I do not consider it anything but a graphic description of some features of scientific investigation for the public.

Of course, the book then concerns itself with the use of the so-called lie-detector machine, that is the instrument promoted by Leonarde Keeler of Northwestern for recording blood pressure, respiration, and electrolytic changes in the body simultaneously during the questioning. This is one of the best arguments for the device that I have seen and a large number of cases in which the instrument was used are described.

The effect of injuries with firearms from projectiles is discussed and suggestions are given for the diagnosis from these effects of the manner of causing the injury, particularly the distance of the firearm from the body. This is illustrated by the same illustrations as appear in other writings on this subject, particularly those of the head of the laboratory of Mexico City.

There is a good exposition of the subject of Ballistics, including the examination of cartridges and cases as well as of the projectiles. There are given several tables showing the weight and kind of powder, the number of grooves and direction of bullets and data of many small arms. Not all of these used in the United States are shown. There are tables also of gun shot. Photographs of the various powders and a good statement of this phase of ballistics are given.

SCIENTIFIC MURDER INVESTIGATION - by Luke S. May - published by the Institute of Scientific Criminology (which appears to be owned by Mr. May) - Library of Congress HV 8073 .M3.

In this volume, which is a little pamphlet, Mr. May relates his principle of building up the evidence in a murder case. He furnishes a chart similar to a routing chart of a business organization in which the victim is in a block on one side, the cause of death in a block on the other side, and lines run from these to various other blocks, all of which in the end combine in going to the Prosecuting Attorney and the Court.

The outline used is based more upon a theoretical division of the evidence into the Res Gestae, Dying Declarations, Suspicious statements, and so forth, than it is to the steps to be taken by the investigator. On the other hand, Mr. May claims that these subjects represent the essential elements which the detective must remember in his inquiry and he does include statements that corpus delecti and such essential elements must be proven.

I feel that he is in error in using these headings as elements which exist in every case. He follows the outline strictly in the remainder of his pamphlet in stating what the investigator should do, and some parts of this, such as the examination of the scene of the crime, are valuable.

Because of his particular theories regarding these so-called elements, I do not think this writing is worth very much. It appears also to be a sort of advertisement for his school.

MECHANICAL INK MARKS - by Webster Adam Melcher, Handwriting Expert, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

In this pamphlet the author describes his studies of mechanical ink makrs as distinguished from those made by the human hand. This author had in 1912 referred to a method of the examination of handwriting by examining the edges of the lines. In this writing in 1914 he carries this same method further to include the examination of marks made by mechanical objects. His descriptions of his method induce the writer to be skeptical because he claims to depend on characteristics which none of the other experts in this field assign, the prominence given by Melcher. He goes on and shows how these methods are applied to stamping, typewriting, duplicating machines, and marks.

Mr. Melcher concludes from his studies that there is not the same fixity of relations in serration numbers that exist in handwriting. By this he means that in handwriting, according to his earlier writings, he is able to identify two different specimens because of the similarity of the number of serrations on the edge of the lines caused by the vibration of the human body. Apparently a similar vibration mark was not observed in any of the mechanically produced lines.

There is some value in this pamphlet because Mr. Melcher did, to some extent, examine mechanical writings produced by various processes and, therefore, ascertained some characteristics of the lines.

SCIENCE AND THE CRIMINAL - by Charles Ainsworth Mitchell - published by Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, LTD, London. HV 8073 .M6.

This book was published in 1911 and is another of Mitchell's familiar volumes in which he simply relates ways in which science has been used in criminal cases. Mr. Mitchell writes in a popular vein and his writings are evidently intended for popular consumption, although, they are not in any sense lurid.

In the beginning of his book he refers to the history of the development of scientific methods starting with England, referring to the difficulty of apprehending fugitives and the development of handbills and other means of aiding in this apprehension. In this connection, he refers to blood hounds and French police dogs.

In the third chapter entitled "Personal Identification", Mr. Mitchell deals with the fallibility of eye witness testimony. In the next chapter he deals with the systems of identification, including photography, the Bertillon system and the fingerprint system.

In the next chapter he deals with handwriting, the effect of heredity, illness, and similar conditions. In the next chapter he deals with forged documents, refers to the use of the microscope, to photographic methods, to the examination of typewritten documents and to charred fragments.

Chapter eight is devoted to ink and he reviews early methods of telling the age of ink by the color. This method of judging age by the presence of blue dye has to some extent been exploded by recent experiments of Dr. Waters at the Bureau of Standards. Following this, Mr. Mitchell refers to two notable trials and then passes to sympathetic inks. In the next chapter he again relates certain forgery trials and in the following chapter refers to the identification of blood and hairs. Chapter thirteen relates early poisoning trials and the remainder of the book is devoted to trials, except for a chapter on the adulteration of food.

QUESTIONED INK MARKS - by Webster A. Melcher -,

In this pamphlet Melcher, who is a handwriting expert, relates his investigations of methods for determining the age of ink. He shows how tests may be made with the microscope by chemical reagents and by the color method. This was written in December, 1911, and, in my opinion, is far surpassed by other writings on the subject of ink.

There is a second chapter to the pamphlet dealing with what the author calls human dynamograms, which outlines the method of identifying handwriting by mieroscopic examination of the edge of a line. He claims that because of the vibration of the human body, the edges of all lines written by each individual are serrated. These may be counted and, since they are uniform in each writing of an individual, may be used in comparison with suspected writings to reach a conclusive determination whether they were written by the same individual.

I consider this writing of no value.

In Volume 1 the author includes various articles of the Assistant Commissioner of the City of London Police and other individuals which combine to introduce the volume, give a history of the London Police, the C.I.D. or Scotland Yard, the Provincial Detective Forces, Dock Detectives, and the Constable. There are articles by C. Ainsworth Mitchell of the various so-called scientific aids which are merely descriptive. Sydney A. Smith, well known in legal medicine circles, includes an article called "The Pathologist and the Detective" which refers to subjects of legal medicine such as the cause of death, types of wounds, and the estimation of the range of firearms by these wounds. Dr. Leonard A. Parry has as article on Medical and Surgical Evidence in which he describes several cases. W. Teignmouth Shore's articles include his introduction, one on Direct Evidence which is supposed to include guides as to the way of taking evidence so that that which is not true may be eliminated, an article called the Identification of the Living which describes various visual means of identification, pointing out the danger of such methods, and an article called the Motor Age which concerns changes brought about in police activities by automobiles and describes police telephone boxes and the flying squad. There is an article on Circumstantial Evidence by H. Fletcher Moulton, a lawyer; one on Photography by the Chief Constable of Worcester; one on Plans and Sketches by the Chief Constable of Worcester; one on Firearms by Robert Churchill; another article by Mitchell on Identification After Death by teeth, tattoo marks, laundry marks, and similar clues. There are also included in this volume an article by an ex-superintendent of Constabulary in regard to Police Dogs and one called The Detective at Work by Alfred Crutchett, Ex-Chief Detective Inspector, Metropolitan Police, New Scotland Yard. He refers to the investigation of a murder case and, although, his article is general, it is good reading for investigators.

The second volume is also a compilation edited by Shore, of various articles. This book, however, is devoted entirely to the descriptions of individual cases which are narrated in detail. In these narratives the methods of detection are given. While, as a usual thing, I think such stories as these should be classed as stories because they are prepared after the case is over and edited very carefully no doubt, yet, I think it extremely valuable for investigators to read such stories. If nothing else is accomplished, a very good idea of the difference in crimes and the originality displayed by criminals may be obtained.

contention that scientific "truths" are nothing more than folklore and part of an international plot among scientists always to interpret the workings of mechanical contrivances in the same way, the author will certainly arouse the ire of all truly scientific men, than whom there are none more distrustful of "facts" as discovered and propounded by brother scientists. They insist on "being shown" not by one investigator and his complacent lieutenants, but by the independent checking up of a score of others who take a fiendish delight in showing up inaccuracies and fallacies, should such exist. Exception will also be taken to the author's vigorously stated belief that a great many scientific discoveries and truths are the adventitious outcome of "fiddling" with machines, weights, measures, glass tubes, and so forth. No one could deny that many valuable and in some cases epoch-making discoveries were stumbled upon almost accidentally. This does not in any way diminish their significance; many apples fell before the particular one that impressed Newton, but no one previously had attached significance to the phenomenon or taken the trouble to inquire further. It would be foolish to infer that all scientific discoveries were mere happenings. The failure to find an explanation and cure for cancer and tuberculosis are cited by the author as instances of the barrenness of frontal attacks on problems. He evidently does not nourish the hope, as others do, that out of the stupendous amount of research done on these problems, a solution will come and by design, not by accident.

There are three excellent chapters on the lure of machines, the kingdom of machines, and the industrial revolution. The thought running through the first two is strongly reminiscent of Butler's Erewhorn (referred to at length) and Kapek's R. U. R. What the author has to say here leads naturally and logically to his contention that in reality the industrial revolution has not much more than started—is a thing of the future and not of the past. The chapter on dissolution points out that already, and with little realization on our part, some of our supposedly firmly rooted institutions are disintegrating under the insidious influence of the "machine".

For the scientists who, earnestly or with tongue in cheek, attempt to keep peace between science and religion, the author has nothing but scorn. The only thing to do is to relegate religion to Sunday and let it go at that, since a real reconciliation would have to be so general, so philosophical that in it both science and religion would disappear.

One might go on at great length, alternately admiring and "picking holes", or trying to, in this thoroughly readable and thought-compelling book, but this is not justifiable now. We may not be convinced that "in all the affairs of men, science included, the wind bloweth where it listeth", and in fact the author himself may not be as convinced as he leads us to believe he is. That a great many true things are said, and said well, is sufficient to warrant one in commending the book to all who are not afraid to have their beliefs closely analyzed and sharply challenged.

[illegible] - 1X48

THE REPRESSION OF CRIME. By Harry Elmer Barnes. New York: George H. Doran Company, 1926. 382 p.

This book is a careful study of the history of methods used in an effort to suppress crime. After a preliminary chapter on crime in the light of modern social and medical science, the author presents successively the steps in the development of criminal codes and penal institutions from the original 1676 code, the Quaker codes prevailing from 1682 to 1718, and the establishment of the Puritan code in 1718, through the developments in Pennsylvania and New York prison systems, to the present time. He discusses with the cool objectivity of the trained historian the origins and development of prison labor, of trial by jury, and of contemporary prison administration.

The book has three striking features. In the first place, it gives a lot of information that will be new to many people. It is interesting, for example, to realize that until William Penn introduced it in Pennsylvania, imprisonment was not regarded as punishment. Imprisonment was resorted to for the purpose of detention until punishment could be inflicted, but it had evidently not occurred to people to regard confined loafing as painful enough to constitute punishment. Once instituted, imprisonment became more and more prevalent as a punishment in itself, with various modifications such as the introduction of prison labor, which was first made as a result of the activity of American Quakers and other prison reformers. In 1822, however, one Sidney Smith advocated in the Edinborough Review that prisoners should be given as monotonous, irksome, and dull a task as possible without opportunity to see the results, with no share in the profits, and "no work but what was tedious". "This genial idea", said Mr. Barnes, "triumphed over the program of the prison reformers and was followed by the orgy of the experiment with the treadwheel and crank . . . so that prison labor in England was set back for half a century by the meddling of those practical and sober souls who had God's ear in the matter of penal administration."

A second notable point about Professor Barnes' book is his frank exposition of the present unsatisfactory state of affairs. In addition to a survey of the inadequate methods and measures of most prisons at the present time, Mr. Barnes devotes an entire chapter to exposing the faults of the jury system with such penetrating shafts as this: "But even if we had the most accurate testimony, by witnesses of the highest intelligence and undisputed veracity, its value and significance would be practically lost upon the illiterate, inattentive, and distracted jury. Hence the outcome is essentially this: a body of individuals of average or less than average ability who could not tell the truth if they wanted to, who usually have little of the truth to tell, who are not allowed to tell even all of that, and who are frequently instructed to fabricate voluminously and unblushingly, present this largely worthless, wholly worthless, or worse than worthless information to twelve men who are for the most part unconscious of what is being divulged to them, and would be incapable of an intelligent interpretation of the information if they heard it." (Page 313.) Professor Barnes says that he would be quite willing to defend the thesis that, in so far as certainty and accuracy are concerned, the modern jury trial is not a whit superior to the ordeal or trial by battle.

He gives a long list of cases in which justice was sacrificed in the interests of "pinhead jurisprudence" of the sort in which convictions were set aside for such reasons as a misprint or a misspelled word in the indictment.

Most interesting of all to the psychiatrist and to those interested in the advance of the ideas implicit in the mental-hygiene movement is Professor Barnes' frank avowal of the psychiatrist's position with reference to the treatment of the criminal. It is difficult, he says, to find a better example of the inability of the average citizen to learn by experience than is to be observed in "the contemporary hysteria concerning the increase of crime and the accompanying attack upon scientific criminology and penology. . . . The modern criminologist is even more alarmed at the increase of crime than the lawyer and business man, for he knows so much better than they how unnecessary it is and how far we are from having enough social intelligence to introduce an adequate method of dealing with the menace." (Page 637.) Professor Barnes puts into one paragraph a statement of the position of modern psychiatry better than it could be expounded in a whole pamphlet: "The new criminology will delegate the study and treatment of the criminal to a permanent group of experts under the leadership of trained and enlightened psychiatrists. Such a group will not be concerned primarily with the mere legal guilt of the person accused. Guilt of criminal action will be regarded only as a symptom of initial significance. Accusation and guilt will be viewed chiefly as means of bringing a criminal personality into the custody of scientists. The important question will be the menace of the individual to society and the possibility of so treating him as to eliminate that menace. If it is found that his personality is such as to make it permanent and serious, he will be segregated for life, whether he has committed a multiple murder or stolen a bag of peanuts. On the other hand, many a person who has committed a murder will be committed to a sanitarium for treatment, with the expectancy of his ultimate release to a life of freedom if his motivating compulsive disorder is of the type which promises recovery under treatment." (Page 323.)

Professor Barnes takes the position that it is now as scientifically absurd to talk of capital punishment or any other "punishment" for criminals as it is to discuss punishing tuberculous patients or paretics. This, he indicates, does not mean that the principle of painless extermination might not be used even far beyond the scope of the present death penalty.

Professor Barnes' book is highly critical, but his criticisms are constructive. He proposes a program. He thinks provision should be made for thorough and accurate criminal statistics; for the application of the principles of eugenics; for the improvement of the educational system to include an understanding of the necessity for obedience to law, manual and vocational education for every able-bodied citizen, and efficient methods for the aiding of backward children; for personal hygiene and proper housing and recurrent compulsory examination of children; and for the elimination of slum conditions, of the exhibition of crimes in the moving pictures, and of lurid accounts in newspapers. All these have to do with crime prevention.

For more adequate provision for the apprehension and conviction of the criminal, he suggests that the police system be taken out of politics and made an expert profession and that the energies of the police be reserved, so far as possible, for the discovery and apprehension of the more serious types of criminals rather than the suppression of crap games and petting parties. He advocates a reconstruction of the jury system and far-reaching changes in court procedure, particularly with relation to the rules of evidence. Insanity cases should be taken out of the hands of ordinary juries; criminals should be given the advantage of mental examinations and the results put before the judge.

With reference to the reformation of the criminal, Professor Barnes thinks that the most important thing is a change in public attitude so that we will regard penal institutions as places for such treatment of the criminal as will return him to society determined and equipped to lead a law-abiding existence or else for detaining him permanently. He advocates the separation of first offenders and veteran convicts. Those convicted of petty offenses should, as far as possible, be kept out of penal institutions, and handled through fines, probation, psychiatric clinics, and social guidance unless there are evidences of potential seriousness. He advocates the administration of institutions by non-political and trained experts, comparable to staffs of physicians and nurses in the best hospitals, with provision for social reëducation, self-government, and labor wages from which the cost of maintenance, reimbursement indemnity, and support for the prisoners' dependents should be deducted. The teaching of a trade to the prisoners he thinks exceedingly important, and to aid in their establishment after discharge from the prison there should be an efficient parole and follow-up system in the hands of experts instead of the present situation characterized by careless indifference, politics, and inquisitorial supervision.

Mr. Barnes says all the things that the progressive psychiatrists, sociologists, and educators would want him to say, and he says them with a background of historical evidence marshaled after the fashion of the historical scholar that he is. As an effective instrument in the education of any one who wants the facts impartially presented, this book is unsurpassed.

PROBLEMS OF HUMAN REPRODUCTION. By Paul Popenoe. Baltimore: Williams and Wilkins Company, 1926. 196 p.

In spite of the title of this book, the publishers state on its outside cover that it is "a sane and simple interpretation of the known facts of human reproduction for the non-technical reader". The book certainly deals less with problems than with facts. It consists of 196 small pages, divided into twenty-one chapters. Each subject is considered very briefly and consequently incompletely. The book presents in the main what is generally accepted as true regarding the anatomy and physiology of the reproductive system. On the whole the material is as clearly presented as brevity and the absence of illustrations would permit. The best chapter is the one on the determination of the sex of offspring. This rather technical subject is made very clear.

In a number of cases the author has given space to relatively unimportant facts or to theories not generally accepted. In a book of this size, intended for laymen, it might have been better to use the space for the more important or more fully accepted facts. The author's idea of what to include in so small a book will not coincide with that of a good many clinicians. For example, he gives an entire chapter to spermatoxins, and another chapter to artificial insemination, of which the greater part is devoted to the subject of insemination when the husband is sterile. In the chapter on menstruation he gives more than three pages to a discussion of the improbability of the moon or the tides being the cause of the twenty-eight-day cycle, about three pages to mid-menstrual crises, and a full paragraph to the excretion of a poison in the various fluids of the menstruating woman. In the same chapter he states that "the tendency in colleges and other institutions where large numbers of girls are under the care of a physical instructor (especially if the latter is an unmarried woman) is now not even to excuse a girl from exercise, unless she reports symptoms of discomfort". Although such may exist, we do not personally know of any college where exercise is permitted that would not be approved by competent gynecologists. The statements made by many of the colleges that gymnasium appointments must be kept by all those who are not ill should not be interpreted as meaning that the full exercise program will also be required. Carefully selected exercise or else complete rest in a favorable recumbent posture are the substitutes for more general activity. We believe the author would find the college point of view on the whole even more conservative than his own.

Among the problems well discussed is that of sterility. Many of those matters, however, that are recognized as problems from the biological, sociological, or other points of view are either not stated or no theories regarding their solution are offered. In general the author stops at stating the facts from which problems arise. For example, sex antagonism is discussed in a limited way from the point of view of its causes and purpose, but is dismissed as a biological phenomenon which has persisted because of its utility to the race.

The non-technical reader, for whom the book is intended, will be surprised (and pleased or not, as the case may be) at certain of the author's definite assertions. For example, he states that "if there is no striking difference in the kind of mentality women possess, there is a noteworthy difference in the amount of it". This is in the first chapter, entitled Male and Female. In the chapter entitled The Weaker Sex, he states that the male is "born with a constitutional handicap which he cannot, by any possible method, eliminate". If the reader takes these statements at their face value, as universally accepted, undebatable facts, and makes use of them in conversation, he will be likely to find himself in the center of a storm of argument. Anticipating this probable difficulty on the part of his readers, the

BOOK REVIEW OF WARDEN LEWIS E. LAWES' "CELL 202 - SING SING"

Four men through roundabout and wholly different paths found themselves ultimately in a cell in Sing Sing - not at the same time but successively. As one man came out another entered. The process took almost 100 years. Each man lived in a wholly different cycle of social, political and religious conditions, yet all lead toward the same end. Warden Lawes invites four men, respectable and recognized in their communities to meet him in his office on the afternoon on June 28, 1933. They are the heirs of the four men who scratched the following epitaphs into the stone of Cell 202 - Sing Sing:

1826
Rebel
1846

1846
EDMUND ROLPHE
Cynic
1866

1866
ARNOLD BRANDT
Skeptic
1886

1886
STEPHEN YERKES
Marionette
1911

Through these four prisoners Lawes takes the reader over the ways that "America had traveled, pushing and stampeding, toward unexpected, unchartered goals. Each life, starting hopefully in vigor and promise, had broken upon its peculiar reef, the victim not alone of its own digression but of tides that finally engulf it. Obscure as he was, each of those four prisoners reflected in his life's story the humors of his epoch: the hopes and disillusionments, programs and creeds, the strength and weaknesses that periodically brought prosperity and privation to adolescent America. They paid the price for the passion, the creed, the extravagances and follies that, contemporaneously, filled the hearts and minds of their fellows."

62-41[illegible]-2

The names are more than a record. On the granite is cut the philosophies of those men and the motivating force that lead each of them to that cell.

ABNER WILDE - A REBEL

Abner Wilde was fronti r born. Orphaned by marauding Indians he enlisted and served under Perry on Lake Erie in the War of 1812. Contrasting the turmoil of life as he saw it on the frontier with the possibilities in New York with his mother's people, Wilde goes to his uncle, George Todd, and becomes one of his household consisting of three sons, Edward, Robert, Terry and a daughter Jane. After peace was signed which was received with mixed reaction among the people, as the war had been profitable to numerous profiteers, he becomes a clerk in the Todd Shipping Company; depression sets in, his uncle dies, he is separated from his sweetheart Jane when he is shanghaied, becomes a world traveler, and sailor; witnesses an attempted pirating and a battle on a slave ship which ultimately brings about the death of Edward Todd and the supposed death of Captain Burgess, who married Jane after having had Wilde shanghaied. Family fortunes are lost and recouped but Wilde kills Captain Burgess, who unexpectedly returns after having been given up as dead, when he attempts to persecute Jane and Wilde.

For this killing, Wilde was sentenced to 20 years in prison. He began his imprisonment at Newgate and the principle keeper, upon his entrace, expressed the prison philosophy at that time in the following statement:

"I'm the keeper. I have my sworn duty. Men of all conditions are forced into prison, as all the rivers run into the sea. That's what a wise man said. And it's true. They send me these men without reason or purpose. The good turn bad. The bad stay bad. I wish they could live here with me and watch hope fade into despair."

Conditions are further described in this quotation:

"The law in those early days of the nation were stern but slow of motion. It had no vigor and no sense of direction. It concerned itself with liberty and life and yet within a few yards of the cradle of its fostered beginning it was developing a notorious center of crime and viciousness" - the reference being made to New York.

At this time began the perverted theory of penology, that the sole cure of crime lies within prison walls.

There is described the merciless beatings and forms of punishment prevalent in that day which is brought out in the vivid picture of prison life as lived by Abner Wilde. Wilde is removed to Sing Sing which was supposedly the last word in the penology of the early 19th century but the whippings and punishment of the convicts continues. It was after a whipping that Wilde began to chisel into the stone in his cell wall with the intention of carving his name and his record in stone, while the prison administration carved its record in human flesh. Because of the turbulent spirit Wilde thought that the word Rebel best portrayed his life and Sing Sing.

It was some years before his release that he finds that his wife Jane's faith had never been broken in him, that she had died of a broken heart and that his family was waiting for him in the new West. This prompted him to begin scratching the line through the word Rebel, feeling as he did, that he had been wrong in thinking that that portrayed his spirit. After Wilde's release he is reunited with those nearest to him and begins life anew in the new West.

EDMUND ROLPHE - CYNIC

In the epidemic of 1822 Edmund Rolphe loses his mother. His father Emory Rolphe, a steamboat captain, leaves his son Edmund and daughter Jenny in the care of Uncle Henry, a free negro. By the year 1827 Captain Rolphe has amassed considerable wealth, but through the efforts of one Jonathan Peck and Bob the Wheeler he invests in worthless securities. There follows the panic of this period and everything is lost. In this same year Captain Rolphe rescues Elizabeth and Joshua Peck from a river disaster and takes them into his home despite the fact that he discovers that their father swindled him. The captain dies shortly thereafter in another riverboat explosion. Edmund now comes under the influence of ambitious Daniel Kerrian whose dreams of fortune fade with another panic. Bob the Wheeler, thief and racketeer of his day, is finally killed by Edmund to prevent Bob's unscrupulous enterprises from coming between Edmund and his wife Elizabeth. For this he is sent to Sing Sing broken because of his belief that Elizabeth is more vitally concerned in Evangelistic movements and the freeing of slaves in the Abolitionist movement than in his own plight.

Throughout this portion of the book is described the New York of that time, dirty streets, class distinction, tragic individual portraits, the big fire, and "the chaotic industrial age spawning slums and attending crime". In Sing Sing Rolphe becomes what is known as the ideal prisoner and as the man without a friend. Five years pass. Rolphe scrutinized the word REBEL scratched into the stone and decided that for him, who had no hope for betterment or for life there remains only virulence contempt and cynicism.

Through Rolphe's prison life is depicted the reaction to progress in prison reform which set in as a result of political pressure brought to bear by hirers of prison labor. Prison life becomes one series of harsh treatment and terror and Rolphe realizing the futility of everything in Sing Sing which "hammers down the human emotions and fashions nothing but hate" was convinced that the word CYNIC should best describe him.

In one of the prison revolts Rolphe is injured, loses his mind and his only mental drive is to finish his carving in the granite. The prison director becomes interested and through the records finds Elizabeth, Rolphe's wife, and persuades her to come to Rolphe in prison. He recognises her but a moment and she leaves him unreconciled. On the day he was to be released after serving 20 years he is found dead in his cell, having died despaired of men, his record in stone - CYNIC.

ARNOLD BRANDT - SKEPTIC

In 1857, Arnold Brandt, a criminal lawyer, defends a murderer and saves him from the gallows with an oration, typical of the lawyers of the time, pointing out that the prisoner, Jim Reynolds was a product of the imperfect social order which was a cymbol of America's failure towards its masses and a victim of economical slavery. Brandt becomes famous through his ability to play on the emotion and obtain light sentences and acquittals. He goes West on a vacation with the pioneer Patrick O'Dogherty and sees the possibilities of frontier development. After a distinguished service in the Civil War, Arnold Brandt returns to the practice of law. Pat O'Dogherty made wealthy by a gold strike and land sale has left a fortune in bonds with him for safekeeping for Patrick's son. Brandt is offered a directorship in a railroad if he invests $100,000 which could be accomplished if he used Patrick's bonds. He is subjected to the ruthless urge of power and wealth and thinks he will allow nothing, including the law, to stand in his way. Jim Reynolds in the interim has been released from prison and through the influence of Brandt's wife has become an Evangelist. The presence of Reynolds caused Brandt to go into a frenzy as momentarily Reynolds personified a freedom of guilt which he himself could not obtain. In this frenzy Brandt kills Reynolds. The reason for his deed was not clear to Brandt himself but, after meditation, he looked forward to his term of imprisonment hoping to clear himself of the oppression of his mind.

The Sing Sing of his time was under the control of an autocrat whose rule was sustained by brute force by fear and suppression. Men like him had made Sing Sing a byword among decent people, having transformed and developed the prison into a "sewer of unholy passions and human filth". Reading the carving in the stone in his cell he felt that "each man yields to a peculiar and intimate pull that dragged him over the borderline of normality. Each man's life was his own". Like those two who had left their records, the REBEL, who had found life whole, the CYNIC whom it had overwhelmed. In Brandt's mind the men and women of Sing Sing were not really prisoners of society. Actually, they were held in bondage by the very power that had steered them from life.

Years pass, gradual changes are made through many administrations, Reform is begun and prison conditions bettered but economic pressure and politics brought to bear on penologists of the time found little progress actually being made. For sometime Brandt had thought that he would carve the word Courage into the stone but soon he began to doubt and became a SKEPTIC. Realizing his own skepticism he began carving the word SKEPTIC. There follows a description of the lives of the prisoners, their treatment and mental reactions until Pat O'Dogherty the son of the old Pat for whom Brandt had been keeping the bonds comes to prison himself. He tells young Pat what he has done and finds that he has cleared his conscience and has freed himself of his old skepticism finding renewed faith in life. He says, "I am free. Free to live and love. Cells, bars, walls - I do not feel them. There is no man more free. I see it all so clearly now. My fetters were not physical. At first it was the soul's desire for power - power that costs. I paid too dearly for it, a price that left me frustrated. I gave my soul for it". He begins to scratch through the word SKEPTIC.

Brandt is released from prison at the termination of his 20 years is reunited with his family and begins efforts of restitution and to obtain Patrick's release from Sing Sing.

STEPHEN YERKES - MARIONETTE

Stephen Yerkes came from a family who for many years had served with distinction in the United States Army. He set out with everything in his favor, but the panic of 1873 drove his father to suicide and his family into bankruptcy. He sets out to recoup the family fortune and to marry the girl who scorned his poverty. Through his employer, the girl's father, he becomes implicated in criminal activities. His criminal activity recounts that period in American economic development when there was much criminal activity on the stock market during which time famous fortunes, such as the Vanderbilt's, were built up. Yerkes becomes powerful as a financier and the head of a famous thieves organization. His sentence to Sing Sing is the result of killing another thief in an effort to protect his wife from the knowledge that her father and husband were not the respectable financiers she thought them, but high class thieves.

Going to Sing Sing Yerkes finds the prison system of the state had been forced through legislative action in Albany to abandon contract labor. In 1886 an aroused public conscience, or possibly the insistence of free labor, demanded the abolition of contract labor. The events of prison life were brought out through Yerkes' life and experiences at Sing Sing. There is described the building of the death house at Sing Sing, which is to inaugurate the electric chair for the death penalty. After 14 years Yerkes makes his escape, being driven by the thought of seeing his son and wife. Returning to New York he finds that his son does not know of his existence and that his wife has married Howard Ayres, who was greatly responsible for Yerkes' misfortunes. This so stuns him that he voluntarily returns to Sing Sing to finish serving his sentence.

Yerkes begins his carving in the stone and decides upon - MARIONETTE, his philosophy being that brains mean nothing. We are no better than the meanest of new prisoners. All are puppets. "Marionettes, dancing to the strings of their own weaving". 1911- after 25 years Stephen Yerkes is released from prison. His thoughts are full of vengeance for the manner in which life has treated him. Returning to some of his old friends and while conniving to bring the downfall of Howard Ayres, a yegg knowing of Yerkes' story and of his son, threatens to let the boy know everything about his father, whereupon Yerkes kills him. For this crime he was electrocuted.

EPILOGUE

This portion of the book consists of a letter to Warden Lawes by Judge Edmund Rolphe, the heir of the ex-convict, writing for the four men mentioned in the prologue, and the answer to the Judge by the Warden, in which Warden Lawes expresses the opinion that "the best we can hope for is to provide the setting that will inspire a spiritual renaissance. When that is achieved physical torment can assume purifying proportions". He says further, "The permanence of our institutions depends upon the degree of individual responsibility toward public peace and security. There is no universal panacea. Simpler legal codes will help. Simpler habits of thought and living. A more even distribution of opportunity to achieve contentment, but above all, our educational, social and economic agencies must be reorganized with the view to strengthening our moral fiber as individuals and as a nation".

In reading this lengthy book one cannot help being impressed by the enormous amount of research that must have gone into its production. The vividness of each character is emphatic, the life stories cover a wide range of human drama and the four episodes of the book appear not only to comprise one powerful unity but to illuminate the temper of the times as well as the change and development of American penology.

The above-entitled book has been reviewed in this section by Agent Suttler.

This is one of the most important and far-reaching books of our time. It is a condemnation of socialism and national planning. It is a warning to well-intentioned planners and socialists who, during the past 50 years, have unconsciously led England and America away from the type of planning advocated by Washington, Jefferson and Hamilton to the type of planning advocated by Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin. No words are wasted in this book. The author packs every page with meat and the book must be read in its entirety to be fully appreciated. It is a difficult book to review as the reviewer is tempted to quote endlessly in an effort to portray the picture Mr. Hayek has presented in its true light.

62-46855-2X

Austrian born, the author has lived in England since 1931, when he became Professor of Economic Science at the University of London. In 1938 he became an English citizen. His life in Austria before moving to England leads Mr. Hayek to say in his introduction, "The following pages are the product of an experience as near as possible to twice living through the same period -- or at least twice watching a very similar evolution of ideas." And further on in speaking of Germany he states, "Although one does not like to be reminded, it is not so many years since the socialist policy of that country was generally held up by progressives as an example to be imitated".....and....."a generation before the last war German thought and German practice influenced ideals and policy in England and, to some extent, in the United States."

"The supreme tragedy is still not seen that in Germany it was largely people of good will, men who were admired and held up as models in the democratic countries, who prepared the way for, if they did not actually create, the forces which now stand for everything they detest. Yet our chance of averting a similar fate depends on our facing the danger and on our being prepared to realize even our most cherished hopes and ambitions if they should prove to be the source of the danger. There are few signs yet that we have the intellectual courage to admit to ourselves that we may have been wrong."

Mr. Hayek hits the very keynote of his argument when he says, "Few are ready to recognize that the rise of fascism and nazism was not a reaction against the socialist trends of the preceding period but a necessary outcome of those tendencies. This is a truth which most people were unwilling to see even when the similarities and many of the repellent features of the internal regimes in communist Russia and National Socialist Germany were widely recognized. As a result, many who think themselves infinitely superior to the aberrations of nazism, and sincerely hate all its manifestations, work at the same time for ideals whose realization would lead straight to the abhorred tyranny."

The author states that the socialism which we all refer to today is not a party matter, nor does it affect our problem that some groups may want less socialism than others. The important point is that, if we take the people whose views influence developments, they are now in the democracies in some measure all socialists; that scarcely any body doubts that we must continue to move toward socialism, and most people are merely trying to deflect the movement in the interest of a particular class or group. "It is because nearly everybody wants it that we are moving in this direction."

Mr. Hayek indicates that if the people whose convictions now give the move toward socialism an irresistible momentum began to see what only a few yet apprehend, they would recoil in horror and abandon the quest which for half a century has engaged so many people of good will.

In his first chapter entitled "The Abandoned Road," the author refers to the road of progress which civilization has made and goes on to mention that when the course of civilization takes an unexpected turn -- when, instead of the continuous progress which we have come to expect, we find ourselves threatened by evils associated by us with past ages of barbarism -- we naturally blame everybody but ourselves.

"We are ready to accept almost any explanation of the present crisis of our civilization except one: that the present state of the world may be the result of genuine error on our own part and that the pursuit of some of our most cherished ideals has apparently produced results utterly different from those which we expected.

"We still believe that until recently we were governed by what are vaguely called nineteenth-century ideas or the principle of laissez faire. Compared with some other countries, and from the point of view of those impatient to speed up the change, there may be some justification for such belief. But although until 1931 England and America had followed only slowly on the path on which others had led, even by then they had moved so far that only those whose memory goes back to the years before the last war know what a liberal world has been like." And the author then takes a sentence from the Macmillan Report, "England finally took the headlong plunge and, in the short space of the inglorious years 1931-39, transformed its economic system beyond recognition.

Only since industrial freedom opened the path to the free use of new knowledge has science made the great strides which in the last hundred and fifty years have changed the face of the world

Hayek points out, and adds that by the beginning of the 20th century the workingman in the Western world had reached a degree of material comfort, security, and personal independence which a hundred years before had seemed scarcely possible. "With the success grew ambition -- and man had every right to be ambitious. What had been an inspiring promise seemed no longer enough, the rate of progress far too slow.....it was no longer a question of adding to or improving the existing machinery but of completely scraping and replacing it."

In sizing up the reason for the change in civilization during the past half century Mr. Hayek states for over 200 years English ideas had been spreading Eastward. The rule of freedom which had been achieved in England seemed destined to spread throughout the world. But about 1870 the reign of these ideas had reached its easternost expansion and from then onward it began to retreat and England lost her intellectual leadership in the political and social sphere and became an importer of ideas. Then for the next 60 years Germany became the centre from which ideas destined to govern the world in the 20th century spread east and west. He says, "Whether it was Hegel or Marx, List or Schmoller, Sombart or Mannheim, whether it was socialism in its more radical form or merely "organization" or "planning" of a less radical kind, German ideas were everywhere readily imported and German institutions imitated"-----He goes on to show how socialism flourished in Germany and German thoughts exercised a powerful intellectual influence on the whole world and built up a "Western civilization meaning West of the Rhine; that the people the West continued to import German ideas and were even induced to believe that their own former convictions had merely been rationalizations of selfish interests, that free trade was a doctrine invented to further British interests, and that political ideals of England and America were hopelessly outmoded and a thing to be ashamed of.

In Chapter 2 the author discusses what he terms "The Great Utopia" and warns that it is rarely remembered now that socialism in its beginning was frankly authoritarian. The French writers who laid the foundation of modern socialism had no doubt that their ideas could be put into practice only by a strong dictatorial government. To them socialism meant an attempt to "terminate the revolution" by a deliberate reorganization of society on hierarchical lines by the imposition of a coercive "spiritual power."

Where freedom was concerned the founders of socialism made no bones about their intentions and they regarded freedom of thought as the root of all the evil of 19th century society and the pioneer of modern planners, St. Simon, even predicted that those who did not operate his proposed planning boards would be "treated as cattle."

The author states that "nobody saw more clearly than De Tocqueville that democracy as an essentially individualist institution stood in an irreconcilable conflict with socialism."

De Tocqueville stated, "Democracy extends the sphere of individual freedom, socialism restricts it. Democracy attaches all possible value to each man; socialism makes each man a mere agent, a mere number. Democracy and socialism have nothing in common but one word: 'equality.' But note the difference: 'while democracy seeks equality in liberty, socialism seeks equality in restraint and servitude.'" These words were spoken in the year 1848.

Continuing, Mr. Hayek states, "To allay these suspicions and to harness to its cart the strongest of all political motives -- the craving for freedom -- socialism began increasingly to make use of the promise of a 'new freedom'.....the subtle change in meaning to which the word, freedom, was subjected in order that this argument should sound plausible is important.....the demand for the new freedom was thus only another name for the old demand for an equal distribution of wealth....there can be no doubt that the promise of greater freedom has become one of the most effective weapons of socialist propaganda and that the belief that socialism would bring freedom is genuine and sincere. But this would only heighten the tragedy if it should prove that what was promised to us as the road to freedom was in fact the high road to servitude.

"Unquestionably the promise of more freedom was responsible for luring more and more liberals along the socialist road, for binding them to the conflict which exists between the basic principles of socialism and liberalism, and for often enabling socialists to usurp the very name of the old party of freedom. Socialism was embraced by the greater part of the intelligentsia as the apparent heir of the liberal tradition: therefore, it is not surprising that to them the idea of socialism leading to the opposite of liberty should appear inconceivable.

"Even communists must have been somewhat shaken by such testimonies as that of Max Eastman Lenin's old friend, who found himself compelled to admit that 'instead of being better, Stalinism is worse than fascism, more ruthless, barbarious, unjust, immoral, antidemocratic, unredeemed by any hope or scruple,' and that it is better described as super fascist; and when we find the same author recognizing that 'Stalinism is socialism, in the sense of being an inevitable although unforeseen political accompaniment of the nationalization and collectivization which he had relied upon as part of his plan for erecting a classless society,' his conclusion clearly achieves wider significance."

The author in his effort to show the close connection between Marxism, fascism and national socilaism quotes a British writer by the name of F. A. Voigt who after many years of possible observation of developments in Europe as a foreign correspondent concluded that "Marxism has led to fascism and national socialism, because, in all essentials, it is fascism and national socialism."

Mr. Hayek quotes Walter Lipman at length to show that the generation to which we belong is now learning from experience what happens when men retreat from freedom to a coercive organization of their affairs, and in attempting to promise themselves a more abundant life they do in fact renounce it and as the organized direction increases, the variety of ends must give way to uniformity. "That is the nemesis of the planned society and the authoritarian principle in human affairs."

The author states that Peter Drucker, a German writer, expressed the same conclusion as Walter Lippman and F. A. Voigt when he stated, "The complete collapse of the belief in the attainability of freedom and equality through Marxism has forced Russia to travel the same road toward a totalitarian, purely negative, non-economic society of unfreedom and inequality which Germany has been following. Not that communism and fascism are essentially the same. Fascism is the stage reached after communism has proved an illusion, and it has proved as much an illusion in Stalinist Russia as in pre-Hitler Germany."

Continuing, the author states that everyone who has watched the growth of these movements in Italy or in Germany has been impressed by the number of leading men, from Mussolini downward and not excluding Laval and Quisling, who began as socialists and ended as fascists and Nazis. He states that "many a university teacher during the 1930's has seen English and American students return from the Continent uncertain whether they were communists or Nazis and certain only that they hated Western liberal civilization.

"While to many who have watched the transition from socialism to fascism at close quarters the connection between the two systems has been increasingly obvious, in the democracies and majority of people still believe that socialism and freedom can be combined. There can be no doubt that most socialists here still believe profoundly in the liberal ideal of freedom and that they would recoil if they became convinced that the realization of their program would mean the destruction of freedom."

In Chapter 3 the author discusses "Individualism and Collectivism" and states that the successful use of competition as the principle of social organization precludes certain types of coercive interference with economic life, but it admits of others which sometimes may very considerably assist its work and even requires certain kinds of government action. It is necessary in the first instance that the parties in the market should be free to sell and buy at any price at which they can find a partner to the transaction and that anybody should be free to produce, sell and buy anything that may be produced or sold at all. And it is essential that the entry into the different trades should be open to all on equal terms and that the law should not tolerate any attempts by individuals or groups to restrict this entry by open or concealed force. Any attempt to control prices or quantities of particular commodities deprives competition of its power of bringing about an effective coordination of individual efforts, because price changes then cease to register all the relevant changes in circumstances and no longer provide a reliable guide for the individual's actions.

By destroying competition in industry after industry, this policy puts the consumer at the mercy of the joint monopolist action of capitalists and workers in the best organized industries, according to the author. And he further states that such independent planning by industrial monopolies would, in fact, produce effects opposite to those at which the argument for planning aims. "Once this stage is reached, the only alternative to a return to competition is the control of the monopolies by the state -- a control which, if it is to be made effective, must become progressively more complete and more detailed. It is this stage we are rapidly approaching.

"The idea of complete centralization of the direction of economic activity still appalls most people, not only because of the stupendous difficulty of the task, but even more because of the horror inspired by the idea of everything being directed from a single center.

"It is of the utmost importance to the argument of this book for the reader to keep in mind that the planning against which all our criticism is directed is solely the planning against competition -- the planning which is to be substituted for competition. This is the more important, as we cannot, within the scope of this book, enter into a discussion of the very necessary planning which is required to make competition as effective and beneficial as possible. But as in current usage 'planning' has become almost synonymous with the former kind of planning, it will sometimes be inevitable for the sake of brevity to refer to it simply as planning, even though this means leaving to our opponents a very good word meriting a better fate."

In Chapter 4 the author discusses the inevitability of planning and states that it is a revealing fact that few planners are content to say that central planning is desirable. Most of them affirm that we can no longer choose but are compelled by circumstances beyond our control to substitute planning for competition, and the author describes this attitude as being a fallacy as he feels the tendency toward monopolies and planning is not the result of any objective facts beyond our control but the product of opinions fortered and propagated for half a century until they have come to dominate all our policy.

He states that the most comprehensive study of these facts undertaken in recent times is that made by the Temporary National Economic Committee on the Concentration of Economic Power and indicates that the final report of this committee arrives at the conclusion that the view according to which the greater efficiency of large-scale production is the cause of the disappearance of competition finds scant support in any evidence which the committee had been able to find. The committee also found that monopoly is frequently the product of factors other than the lower costs of greater size and that it is attained through collusive agreement and promoted by public policies.

Mr. Hayek feels that an investigation of conditions in England would lead to the same results found by the T.N.E.C. and feels that his conclusion is strongly supported by the historical order, in which the decline of competition and the growth of monopolies manifested themselves in different countries. He indicates that this system first appeared during the last third of the 19th century in the United States and Germany. "In the latter country especially, which came to be regarded as the model country typifying the necessary evolution of capitalism, the growth of cartels and syndicates has since 1878 been systematically fostered by deliberate policy. Not only the instrument of protection but direct inducements and ultimately compulsion were used by the governments to further the creation of monopolies for the regulation of prices and sales."

The author states that in Germany with the help of the state the first great experiment in scientific planning and conscious organization of industry led to the creation of giant monopolies and that it became commonplace to use the phrase of "Germany where all the social and political forces of modern civilization have reached their most advanced form."

The second theory on the growth of monopolies set forth by the auther is the contention not that modern technique destroys competition but that, on the contrary, it will be impossible to make use of many of the new technological possibilities unless protection against competition is granted, that is, a monopoly is conferred. But Mr. Hayek feels that if a new technique for satisfying our wants is really better, it ought to be able to stand up against all competition.

Continuing further he states that "while it is true, of course, that inventions have given us tremendous power, it is absurd to suggest that we must use this power to destroy our most precious inheritance: liberty.....while there can thus be little doubt that the movement toward planning is the result of deliberate action and that there are no external necessities which force us to it, it is worth inquiring why so large a proportion of the technical experts should be found in the front rank of the planners..... it is the frustration of his ambitions in his own field which makes the specialist revolt against the existing order.

"It will be foolish to deny that the instances of planned or semiplanned societies which we know do furnish illustrations in point, good things which the people of these countries owe entirely to planning. The magnificent motor roads in Germany and Italy are an instance often quoted, even though they do not represent a kind of planning not equally possible in a liberal society. But it is equally foolish to quote such instances of technical excellence in particular fields as evidence of the general superiority of planning. It would be more correct to say that such extreme technical excellence out of line with general conditions is evidence of a misdirection of resources.....whether it was not a case where the planners decided in favor of 'guns' instead of 'butter' is another matter. But by our standards there is little ground for enthusiasm."

The movement for planning, according to the author, owes its present strength largely to the fact that while planning is in the main still an ambition, it unites almost all the single-minded idealists, all the men and women who have devoted their lives to a single task. "The hopes they place in planning, however, are the result not of a comprehensive view of society but rather of a very limited view and often the result of a great exaggeration of the importance of the ends they place foremost.....from the saintly and single-minded idealist to the fanatic is often but a step.

In Chapter 3 Mr. Hayek discusses "Planning and Democracy" and in speaking of planners he draws the logical conclusion that it is impossible for any man to survey more than a limited field, to be aware of the urgency of more than a limited number of needs and whether his interests center around his own physical needs, or whether he takes a warm interest in the welfare of every human being he knows, the ends about which he can be concerned will always be only an infinitesimal fraction of the needs of all men. "This," he states, "is the fundamental fact on which the whole philosophy of individualism is based. It does not assume, as is often asserted, that man is egoistic or selfish or ought to be. It merely starts from the indisputable fact that the limits of our powers of imagination make it impossible to include in our scale of values more than a sector of the needs of the whole society."

He rather agrees with Professor Laski who stated, "It is common ground that the present parliamentary machine is quite unsuited to pass rapidly a great body of complicated legislation. The National Government, indeed, has in substance admitted this by implementing its economy and tariff measures not by detailed debate in the House of Commons but by a wholesale system of delegated legislation." Mr. Hayek feels it is important clearly to see the causes of this admitted ineffectiveness of parliaments when it comes to a detailed administration of the economic affairs of a nation. And he protests strongly that "a democratic assembly voting and amending a comprehensive economic plan clause by clause, as it deliberates on an ordinary bill, makes nonsense.

"The delegation of particular technical tasks to separate bodies, while a regular feature, is yet only the first step in the process whereby a democracy which embarks on planning progressively relinquishes its powers.....many separate plans do not make a planned whole — in fact, as the planners ought to be the first to admit, they may be worse than no plan. But the democratic legislature will long hesitate to relinquish the decisions on really vital issues, and so long as it does so it makes it impossible for anyone else to provide the comprehensive plan.....the belief is becoming more and more widespread that, if things are to get done, the responsible authorities must be freed from the fetters of democratic procedure.....the cry for an economic dictator is a characteristic stage in the movement toward planning."

The author states that in Germany, even before Hitler came into power, the movement had already progressed much further. And he feels it is important to remember that for sometime before 1933 Germany had reached a stage in which it had, in effect, had to be governed dictatorially. He states that Hitler did not have to destroy democracy; he merely took advantage of the decay of democracy and at the critical moment obtained the support of many to whom, though they detested Hitler, he yet seemed the only man strong enough to get things done.

"It is now often said that democracy will not tolerate 'capitalism.' If 'capitalism' means here a competitive system based on free disposal over private property, it is far more important to realize that only within this system is democracy possible. When it becomes dominated by a collectivist creed, democracy will inevitably destroy itself.

"The clash between planning and democracy arises simply from the fact that the latter is an obstacle to the suppression of freedom which the direction of economic activity requires.....the fashionable concentration on democracy as the main value threatened is not without danger. It is largely responsible for the misleading and unfounded belief that, so long as the ultimate source of power is the will of the majority, the power cannot be arbitrary. The false assurance which many people derive from this belief is an important cause of the general unawareness of the dangers which we face.

"There is no justification for the belief that, so long as power is conferred by democratic procedure, it cannot be arbitrary; the contrast suggested by this statement is altogether false: it is not the source but the limitation of power which prevents it from being arbitrary. Democratic control may prevent power from becoming arbitrary, but it does not do so by its mere existence."

In Chapter 6 the author discusses "Planning and the Rule of Law." He points out the general distinction between the Rule of Law and arbitrary government stating that under the first the government confines itself to fixing rules determing the conditions under which the available resources may be used and leaving to the individuals the decision for what ends they are to be used. Under the second the government directs the use of the means of production to particular ends. He states that by giving the government unlimited powers, the most arbitrary rule can be made legal; and in this way a democracy may set up the most complete despotism imaginable.

"How even a formal recognition of individual rights, or of the equal rights of minorities, loses all significance in a state which embarks on a complete control of economic life, has been amply demonstrated by the experience of the various Central European countries."

In Chapter 7 "Economic Control and Totalitarianism" is discussed and the author starts off this chapter by stating that most planners who have seriously considered the practical aspects of their task have little doubt that a directed economy must be run on more or less dictatorial lines. He discussed the value of paying for services rendered in money rather than rewards of various types, as an individual who is paid in money has the opportunity to choose his purchases and control his economic life where an individual paid in rewards of various kinds would mean that the recipient no longer would be allowed to choose and that whoever fixed the reward determined not only its size but also the particular form in which it should be enjoyed.

"The question raised by economic planning is, therefore, not merely whether we shall be able to satisfy what we regard as our more or less important needs in the way we prefer. It is whether it shall be we who decide what is more, and what is less, important for us, or whether this is to be decided by the planner.....and whoever controls all economic activity controls the means for all our ends and must therefore decide which are to be satisfied and which not. This is really the crux of the matter. Economic control is not merely control of a sector of human life which can be separated from the rest; it is the control of the means for all our ends..... our freedom of choice in a competitive society rests on the fact that, if one person refuses to satisfy our wishes, we can turn to another. But if we face a monopolist we are at his mercy.

Mr. Hayek feels that people in general hate to face the real facts that there is an economic problem of any kind; that in their wishful belief there is really no longer an economic problem people have been confirmed by irresponsible talk about "potential plenty" -- which, if it were a fact, would indeed mean that there is no economic problem which makes the choice inevitable. He then states, "The reader may take it that whoever talks about potential plenty is either dishonest or does not know what he is talking about.

"Even a good many economists with socialist views who have seriously studied the problems of central planning are now content to hope that a planned society will equal the efficiency of a competitive system.....the passion for the collective satisfaction of our needs with which our socialists have so well prepared the way for totalitarianism, and which wants us to take our pleasures as well as our necessities at the appointed time and in the prescribed form, is, of course, partly intended as a means of political education..... the economic freedom which is the prerequisite of any other freedom cannot be the freedom from economic care which the socialists promise us and which can be obtained only by relieving the individual at the same time of the necessity and of the power of choice; it must be the freedom of our economic activity which, with the right of choice, inevitably also carries the risk and the responsibility of the right."

Chapter 8 entitled "Who, Whom?" is a discussion of the merits of competition and the author feels that although competition and justice may have little else in common that it is as much a commendation of competition as of justice that both are blind and that both are no respecter of persons. He feels that the fact that the opportunities open to the poor in a competitive society are much more restricted than those open to the rich does not make it less true that in such a society the poor are much more free than a person commanding much greater material comfort in a different type of society. He states that it is only because we have forgotten what unfreedom means that we often overlook the patent fact that in every real sense a badly paid unskilled worker in this country has more freedom to shape his life than many a small entrepreneur in Germany or a much better paid engineer or manager in Russia.

Mr. Hayek feels that what our generation has forgotten is that the system of private property is the most important guaranty of freedom, not only for those who own property, but scarcely less for those who do not. "And who will deny," he says, "that a world in which the wealthy are powerful is still a better world than one in which only the already powerful can acquire wealth?"

An interesting part of this chapter is the following: "It is pathetic, yet at the same time encouraging, to find as prominent an old communist as Max Eastman rediscovering the truth." Then the author quotes Max Eastman in the following statement: "It seems obvious to me now -- though I have been slow, I must say, in coming to the conclusion -- that the institution of private property is one of the main things that have given man that limited amount of free and equalness that Marx hoped to render infinite by abolishing this institution. Strangely enough Marx was the first to see this. He is the one who informed us, looking backwards, that the evolution of private capitalism with its free market had been a precondition for the evolution of all our democratic freedoms. It never occurred to him, looking forward, that if this was so, these other freedoms might disappear with the abolition of the free market."

The author goes on to relate that the nightmare of English 19th-century political thinkers, the state in which "no avenue to wealth and honor would exist save through the government," would be realized in a completeness which they never imagined -- though familiar enough in some countries which have since passed to totalitarianism. And he states that it was Lenin himself who introduced to Russia the famous phrase, "who, whom?" during the early years of Soviet rule the byword in which the people summed up the universal problem of a socialist society. Who plans whom, who directs and dominates whom, who assigns to other people their station in life, and who is to have his due allotted by others?

"Security and Freedom" is the heading for Chapter 9 in which the author states that the planning for security which has such an insidious effect on liberty is that for security of a different kind. It is planning designed to protect individuals or groups against diminutions of their income.....against losses imposing severe hardships having no moral justification yet inseparable from the competitive system.

The author says that in any system which for the distribution of men between the different trades and occupations relies on their own choice it is necessary that the remuneration in these trades should correspond to their usefulness to the other members of society, even if this should stand in no relation to subjective merit ....."we all know the tragic plight of the highly trained man whose hard-learned skill has suddenly lost its value because of some invention which greatly benefits the rest of society. The history of the last hundred years is full of instances of this kind, some of them affecting hundreds of thousands of people at a time.

He feels that anyone suffering such a great diminution of his income and bitter disappointment of all his hopes through no fault of his own, and despite hard work and exceptional skill, undoubtedly offends our sense of justice, and that demands of those who suffer in this way, for state interference on their behalf, are certain to receive popular sympathy and support. Thus governments have not only approved of such demands not merely to protect the people so threatened but to secure to them the continued receipt of their former income and to shelter them from the vicissitudes of the market.

The author feels very strongly about the expression, "stabilization of particular prices," and states there has never been a worse and more cruel exploitation of one class by another than that of the weaker or less fortunate members of a group of producers by the well established which has been made possible by the regulation of competition, and few catchwords have done so much harm as the ideal of a "stabilization" or particular prices or wages, which, while securing the income of some makes the position of the rest more and more precarious.

"The general endeavor to achieve security by restrictive measures, tolerated or supported by the state, has in the course of time produced a progressive transformation of society -- a transformation in which, as in so many other ways, Germany has led and the other countries have followed."

Continuing to protest against the idea of the government offering security to particular classes, the author states that there can be no question that adequate security against severe privation, and the reduction of the avoidable causes of misdirected effort and consequent disappointment, will have to be one of the main goals of policy. But if these endeavors are to be successful and are not to destroy individual freedom, security must be provided outside the market and competition be left to function unobstructed.

In Chapter 10 Mr. Hayek explains "Why the Worst Get on Top" in a totalitarian system. He states there are three main reasons why such a numerous and strong group with fairly homogeneous views is not likely to be formed by the best but rather by the worst elements of any society.

In the first instance, the author relates it is probably true that, in general, the higher the education and intelligence of the individuals become, the more their views and tastes are differentiated and the less likely they are to agree on a particular hierarchy of values. It is a corollary of this that if we wish to find a high degree of uniformity and similarity of outlook, we have to descend to the regions of lower moral and intellectual standards where the more primitive and common instincts and tastes prevail.

Mr. Hayek's second reason of explanation is that a dictator cannot solely rely on those whose uncomplicated and primitive instincts happen to be very similar as their number would scarcely give ~~him~~ sufficient weight to their endeavors. He must obtain the support of all the docile and gullible who have no strong convictions of their own but are prepared to accept a ready-made system of values if it is only drummed into their ears sufficiently, loudly and frequently.

The third and a very important aspect of why the worst elements rather than the best elements of society get on top in a totalitarian government is in connection with the deliberate effort of the skillful demagogue to weld together a closely coherent and homogeneous body of supporters and it seems to be almost a law of human nature according to Mr. Hayek's way of thinking that it is easier for people to agree on a negative program -- on the hatred of an enemy, on the envy of those better off -- than on any positive task. Therefore, the enemy -- in Germany it was the Jew -- is selected and this, he feels, is an indispensable requisite in the armory of a totalitarian leader.

In furthering his argument on why the worst get on top in a totalitarian form of government the author states that those in authority must cast out of their system or early training any virtuous or human thoughts. They must be ruthless and ready to sacrifice all for the sake of the state. From the collectivist standpoint intolerance and brutal suppression of dissent, the complete disregard of the life and happiness of the individual, are essential and unavoidable consequences of this basic premise. "When German philosophers again and again represent the striving for personal happiness as itself immoral and only the fulfilment of an imposed duty as praiseworthy, they are perfectly sincere, however difficult this may be to understand for those who have been brought up in a different tradition.

"But where a few specific ends dominate the whole of society, it is inevitable that occasionally cruelty may become a duty; that acts which revolt all our feeling, such as the shooting of hostages or the killing of the old or sick, would be treated as mere matters of expediency; that the compulsory uprooting and transportation of hundreds of thousands should become an instrument of policy approved by almost everybody except the victims; or that suggestions like that of a 'conscription of women for breeding purposes' can be seriously contemplated. There is always in the eyes of the collectivist a greater goal which these acts serve and which to him justifies them because the pursuit of the common end of society can know no limits in any rights or values of any individual."

To be a useful assistant in the running of a totalitarian state, it is not enough that a man should be prepared to accept specious justification of vile deeds; he must himself be prepared actively to break every moral rule he has ever known.....and must be completely unprincipled and literally capable of everything."

Chapter 11 entitled "The End of Truth" informs the reader that if a totalitarian system is to function efficiently it is not enough that everybody should be forced to work for the same ends. It is essential that the people should come to regard them as their own ends; that the process of creating a myth is a justifiable act and the truth is practically unknown in the totalitarian government. The author states that the word, truth itself, ceases to have its old meaning; that it describes no longer something to be found with the individual conscience as the sole arbiter of whether in any particular instance the evidence warrants a belief, it becomes something to be laid down by authority, something which has to be believed in the interest of the unity of the organized effort and which may have to be altered as the exigencies of this organized effort require it.

In Chapter 12 the author discusses the socialist roots of Nazism and goes into some detail discussing the various notorious socialists of history. He states it is a common mistake to regard national socialism as a mere revolt against reason; that the doctrines of national socialism are the culmination of a long evolution of thought, a process in which thinkers who have had great influence far beyond the confines of Germany have taken part. The war hysteria of 1914 which, because of the German defeat was never fully cured, is the beginning of the modern development which produced national socialism.

"By 1918," the author relates, "the union between socialism and ruthless power politics had become complete." And Professor Johann Plenge, a great advocate of Marx, stated, "It is high time to recognize the fact that socialism must be power policy.....just from the point of view of socialism, which is organization, is not an absolute right of self-determination of the peoples the right of individualistic economic anarchy? Are we willing to grant complete self-determination to the individual in economic life?.....

The author relates that the ideals which Professor Plenge expressed were especially popular among certain circles of German scientists and engineers who, precisely as is now so loudly demanded by their English and American counterparts, clamored for the centrally planned organization of all aspects of life.

Chapter 13 discusses "The Totalitarians in Our Midst." Mr. Hayek states that the very magnitude of the outrages committed by the totalitarian government has rather strengthened the assurance that "it cannot happen here." He warns, "But let us not forget that 15 years ago the possibility of such a thing happening in Germany would have appeared just as fantastic.....it is not the present Germany but the Germany of 20 or 30 years ago to which conditions in the democracies show an ever-increasing resemblance.

"How far in the last 20 years England has traveled on the German path is brought home to one with extraordinary vividness if one now reads some of the more serious discussions of the differences between British and German views on political and moral issues which appeared in England during the last war.

"No description in general terms can give an adequate idea of the similarity of much of current English political literature to the works which destroyed the belief in Western civilization in Germany and created the state of mind in which Nazism could become successful.....as was also true in Germany, most of the works which are preparing the way for a totalitarian course in the democracies are the product of sincere idealists and often of men of considerable intellectual distinction."

The author then cites examples of particular individuals, whose writings he feels are having a great deal of influence toward preparing the road of totalitarianism in England and America. He mentions particularly Professor E. H. Carr and his books on the "Twenty Years' Crisis" and the "Conditions of Peace." He states that Professor Carr condescendingly pities the well-meaning people, especially the people in English-speaking countries who, steeped in the 19th-century tradition, persist in regarding war as senseless and devoid of purpose.

Mr. Hayek states that the servility of the scientists to the powers-that-be appeared early in Germany hand in hand with the great development of state-organized science, which today is the subject of so much eulogy abroad.

The author seeks out another individual named C. H. Waddington whose book entitled "The Scientific Attitude" combines claims for greater political power for the scientist and advocates ardently wholesale planning. Dr. Waddington makes the claim that the scientist is qualified to run a totalitarian society on the basis that science can pass ethical judgment on human behavior.

Chapter 14 entitled "Material Conditions and Ideal Ends" is a very interesting chapter of this important book. The author states that our generation likes to flatter itself, that it attaches less weight to economic consideration than did its parents or grandparents. "The 'End of Economic Man' bids fair to become one of the governing myths of our age. Theorists," states the author, "have in the past blamed competition as the cause of destruction of stocks or raw materials or the suppression of inventions, though they are precisely the sort of thing which could not happen under competition and which are made possible only by monopoly and usually by government-aided monopoly.....the frequent use that is made of the occasional destruction of wheat, coffee, and so forth, as an argument against competition is a good illustration of the intellectual dishonesty of much of this argument, since a little reflection will show that in a competitive market no owner of such stocks can gain by their destruction."

Mr. Hayek feels that our generation is less willing to listen to economic considerations because this generation is impatient and intolerant of all restraints on their immediate ambitions and unwilling to bow to economic necessities. He feels that a continued refusal to submit to anything we cannot understand must lead to the destruction of our civilization.

He makes an excellent point when he states, "In his anxiety to escape the irksome restraints which he now feels, man does not realize that the new authoritarian restraints which will have to be deliberately imposed in their stead will be even more painful."

Mr. Hayek feels that those who argue that we have to an astounding degree learned to master the forces of nature and that we must learn to master the forces of society in the same manner, fail to realize that to master the forces of society in this way is not only the path to totalitarianism but is also the path to the destruction of our civilization and a certain way to block future progress.

The author states that one of the dominant features of the immediate postwar situation will be that special needs of war have drawn hundreds of thousands of men and women into specialized jobs where they were enabled to earn relatively high wages during the time of war and they will have to be employed after the war in a lower-wage scale or if the trade unions successfully resist any lowering of the wages of a particular group, there will be only two alternatives open: either coercion will have to be used, that is, certain individuals will have to be selected for compulsory transfer to other and relatively less well paid positions or those who can no longer be employed at the relatively high wages must be allowed to remain unemployed until they are willing to accept work at lower wages. The point he makes is that if we are determined not to allow unemployment at any price, and are not willing to use coercion, we shall be driven to all sorts of desperate expedients, none of which can bring any lasting relief.

"There is little doubt that after the war wisdom in the management of our economic affairs will be even more important than before and the fate of our civilization will ultimately depend on how we solve the economic problems we shall then face.....the one thing modern democracy will not bear without cracking is the necessity of a substantial lowering of the standards of living in peacetime or even prolonged stationariness of its economic conditions."

He feels that the virtues which are less esteemed and practiced in this generation, such as independence, self-reliance, and the willingness to bear risks, the readiness to back one's own conviction against a majority, and the willingness to voluntary cooperation with one's neighbors, are essentially those on which the working of an individualist society works, and that collectivism has nothing to put in their place.

In speaking of the leftists the author states that the Left intellectuals have so long worshiped foreign gods that they seem to have become almost incapable of seeing any good in the characteristic English institutions and traditions and he decries the trend of current political discussion and propaganda. He states that if we are to convince Germany of our democratic sincerity we can never hope to accomplish such a goal by continually allowing ourselves concessions to their system of thought. He states, "We shall not persuade them by following them half the way which leads to totalitarianism."

Mr. Hayek feels that the Germans have learned from experience that neither good intentions nor efficiency of organization can preserve decency in a system in which personal freedom and individual responsibility are destroyed and that the Germans and Italians who have learned this lesson desire above all else protection against the monster state.

In Chapter 15 the author discusses "The Prospects of International Order." He wonders how many people in England would be prepared to submit to the decision of an international authority regardless of the fact that it might be democratically constituted and whether they would be very happy over the fact that such an authority would decree that the development of the Spanish iron industry would have precedence over similar development in South Wales, et cetera?

Mr. Hayek feels fairly certain that in any planned international system the wealthier and therefore the most powerful nations would to a very much greater degree than in a free economy become the object of hatred and envy of the poorer ones.

The author states that there are no doubt many people who honestly believe that if they were allowed to handle the job they would be able to settle all problems between various countries justly and impartially. "What these dangerous idealists do not see is that where the assumption of a moral responsibility involves that one's moral views should by force be made to prevail over those dominant in other communities, the assumption of such responsibility may place one in a position in which it becomes impossible to act morally.....and international authority can be very just and contribute enormously to economic prosperity if it merely keeps order and creates conditions in which the people can develop their own life; but it is impossible to be just or to let people live their own life if the central authority doles out raw materials and allocates markets, if every spontaneous effort has to be 'approved' and nothing can be done without the sanction of the central authority."

If anything is evident, it should be that, while nations might abide by formal rules on which they have agreed, they will never submit to the direction which international economic planning involves.....there can be no international law without a power to enforce it.

Mr. Hayek drives his points home when he states that nowhere has democracy ever worked well without a great measure of local self-government, providing a school of political training for the people at large as much as for their future leaders.

His summation is that an international authority which effectively limits the powers of the state over the individual will be one of the best safeguards of peace, and that neither an omnipotent superstate nor a loose association of "free nations" but a community of nations of free men must be our goal.

The author feels also that we must aim at preventing future wars as much as possible but we must not believe that we can at one stroke create a permanent organization which will make all war in any part of the world entirely impossible. "If we can reduce the risk of friction likely to lead to war, this is probably all we can reasonably hope to achieve."

In his final chapter entitled "Conclusion," (Chapter 16), Mr. Hayek states that the purpose of this book has not been to sketch a detailed program of a desirable future order of society but he fails to give any summarized statement as to the purpose of the book. He merely states that if we are to build a better world we must have the courage to make a new start and divest ourselves of the obstacles which human folly has placed in our path. We should never forget that it is we, the 20th century, and not they, of the 19th century, who have made a mess of things and our guiding principle should be that a policy of freedom for the individual is the only truly progressive policy and that it remains as true today as it was in the 19th century.

MEMORANDUM FOR MR. LADD

BOOK REVIEW - "I AM A SPY"

Some time ago I read the book entitled "I Am A Spy" by "E.7", a British publication which was brought back from England by Mr. Clegg, for the purpose of determining any information or details of interest in conjunction with our espionage investigations.

This book is the personal account of "E.7", who claims to have operated as a professional spy for a number of years, chiefly for the British, but also for the Japanese. His narrative is interwoven with melodramatic and romantic episodes surrounding his female confederate of quasi-Oriental origin. The author extols at length the results of his confederate's work and credits her with a high degree of ability, at the same time confessing innocence of her detailed methods of operations.

So far as revealing any new or different techniques employed by espionage agents, with which we have not already become acquainted through our investigations, this volume is of no material value. Confidential contacts within governmental departments are mentioned, through whom copies of confidential documents are secured, and the establishment of microphone surveillances to cover conferences in foreign embassies. The remainder of the author's work in espionage relates to the evasion of apprehension by the authorities, his success being attributed to the development of circumstances in his favor rather than to any outstanding cunning on his part.

On August 4, 1951, a note was received from the Director to get and review two books, if we did not have them in the library. The books were:

1. "Sabotage - How To Guard Against It" by Harry D. Farren, published by Nat. Foremen's Institute.

2. "Time To Understand" by E. R. Posnack, publisher, Greenberg, 1950.

The 56 page book, "Sabotage - How To Guard Against It" by H. D. Farren, has been in the Bureau's Library for 10 years. The author deals with sabotage in World War One; Black Tom, et al., and explosions in the year 1940, the Hercules Powder Company, et al., and says this book serves as a warning to American workers to prevent loss of life, bloodshed and disaster such as was suffered in 1916-18.

He starts out by relating the details of Hercules Powder Company explosions at Kenvil, New Jersey, on 9-12-40.

He then cites on page 7 the Black Tom explosions of 1916.

On page 9 he gives full credit to the daring and vigilance of "government operatives" of the Department of Justice for preventing greater loss by unearthing even greater plots than Black Tom during World War I period. He then sets forth details of some of the plots, using names of persons involved, companies and places scheduled for demolition by saboteurs. He refers to a Department of Justice Agent called only the "Baron" and reports the part he played in thwarting Dr. Frederick W. Bischoff and his group at Newark, N. J. He relates the DuPont Powder Works explosion by Bischoff. He then relates highlights of some of the major explosions in the year 1940. (P. 19-21)

After citing these fires and explosions during September and October 1940 the author says: "Can there be any doubt in the minds of any of us that we are at war with the saboteur?" (P. 21)

Martin Dies is quoted on page 23 as saying that 300,000 persons were engaged in subversive activities in America and 5000 saboteurs were working in auto factories in New York.

The Director is quoted at length on pages 24 and 25.

The FBI's breaking of the Dr. Ignatz Greibl case is cited on page 29. The FBI's plant protection program is mentioned on pages 30 - 33.

Pages 33 - 39 are devoted to discussions of what had happened in England and France in the sabotage field.

The von Rintelen case of World War I is cited on pages 40 - 41 and the rest of the book is devoted to what America should do to prevent sabotage of our plants, food and labor. The author discusses hiring of personnel, fire equipment, arson and employee's responsibilities.

* * * * * * * * * *

The book, "Time To Understand" by Emanuel R. Posnack, was not in the Bureau's Library, but a copy has been obtained and reviewed.

The book is divided into five main parts, e.g., (1) Communism and Its Reputation, (2) Marxism in the Twentieth Century, (3) Retarded Free Enterprise and the Twin Technologies, (4) Bridging the Gap between East and West, (5) Where Today's Capitalism and Restrictive Society Fail. An appendix has been added entitled, "A Pictorial Study of the Money System."

The book is a summation of the misconceptions and inconsistencies of Communism from both the Marxian theories and the way it is practiced in Russia.

There are no references to the FBI in the book, nor does it deal with Communism in the United States, but more on an international scale with emphasis on the economic fallacies of the Communist Doctrine of Russia today.

In his preface the author states:

> "One of the greatest obstacles to the development of intelligent social consciousness in the masses is the insufficiency of books designed to give the man of average education a basic understanding of the economic and social aspects of society -- to provide him with a measuring rod for evaluating the changing spectrum of human affairs...I have tried to treat the subject matter concisely, presenting both the theoretical and practical aspects of today's dominant economic creeds. The method employed follows a threefold course -- explanation, criticism and comparison with liberal free-enterprise proposals. To provide an encompassing view of society, the book offers a critical analysis of both Communism and the prevailing system of restrictive capitalism. It traces the causes of poverty and scarcities in our own economic order to specific barriers, which could readily be removed by our technologically advanced capitalistic world, if the initiative and will to do so were not lacking..."

62-46855-3X

Excerpts from the author's introduction keynote adequately the context of the book.

"Communism is spreading throughout our fissionable planet--despite the opposition of most of the world's nations.

"To stem the tide, billions of dollars are being spent and valuable manpower is being unproductively used in armies of occupation. And every known diplomatic expedient is being employed in anti-Soviet maneuvers -- with the concomitant counter-maneuvers, breaches of treaties and counter-breaches, encouragement of civil strife, and betrayal of oppressed groups. The very foundation of the United Nations, the only organized force for world peace, is being knowingly undermined in the frantic attempt to repel the advance of Communism.

"In the light of such extraordinary efforts, it is startling to note that practically nothing is being done to explain to the general public why it is believed that Communism will not work...

"The average American's fear of Communism is rooted in ignorance. And this applies to all cultural levels. Indeed, college heads are heard to warn their students to be wary of the 'Reds'...

"We have a valid case against the creed of Communism. But today's tensioned atmosphere is conducive to its spread. Ideas are contagious, and they can multiply rapidly.

"Shouting, the waving of big sticks, and the incanting of slogans cannot repel the advance of communistic ideas. But counter-ideas can -- if the public is armed with these counter-weapons..."

Much of the data in the book is a re-hash of tenets of Communism which are of no value to the FBI such as shown in Chapter 2 when Mr. Posnack sets forth the "proposals of Communism" and Socialism.

Typical of the trend of this book are these passages taken from the chapter on the "Refutation of Communism."

"Instead of abolishing competition -- as Communists would do -- society should encourage it to the fullest extent..." (P. 19)

"The Communist charge that the competitive system is inherently inefficient loses its surface plausibility when examined in the penetrating light of human experience..." (P. 19)

"The politico-economic system of today's Russia is not true Communism. The productive wealth of the nation is not distributed according to the needs of the individual citizen, but rather according to the needs of the state -- according to the worker's contribution to production. Higher wages are paid for more labor, better work, greater skill. The incentive system is employed just as under capitalism..." (P. 24)

"Under ideal Communism (as distinguished from the present allegedly temporary Soviet system) the state, being without competition in its own realm, would have no need to seek new ideas or inventions for the purpose of attracting customers for its goods, or for gaining a competitive advantage over anyone in its own sphere..." (P. 30)

On page 48 an instance of proof that Russia has its own brand of Communism is shown by the author.

"Hence, in an allegedly communistic society where the selected method of wealth distribution is to pay wages according to the nature of services rendered or according to the need for services, the capital needs of the state could be supplied from the surplus wealth of its people only by offering a reward for the use of this wealth -- which reward must be in the form of interest. And that is why Russia today is paying interest on its bonds and on its citizens' bank deposits. It is in the expectation of this reward that labor is spurred on to greater efforts -- toward the storing up of excess labor in the form of surplus wealth for use as capital. And where labor has the right to employ its excess produce in the form of income-producing capital, there can be no Communism..." (P. 48)

BASIC CONCEPTS AND ETHICS (CHAPTER 6)

"Every proposal of Communism is based on the conception of the supremacy of society over the individual..." (P. 55)

"To establish an ethical justification for their position, Communists have resorted to Darwin's theory of evolution as proof that man is not born into this world with natural rights..." (P. 55)

"Darwin's theory is thus used by Communists as a scientific and ethical prop in support of their proposition that man has no natural rights. But how can it be reconciled with their other proposition of the supremacy of the state?..." (P. 56)

"Indeed, many political philosophers and economists adopt Darwinism as the very creed of individualism..." (P. 56)

MORAL VALUES AND THE CLASS STRUGGLE

"Inherent in today's great ideological controversy are the different values which Communism places upon the ethical standards of two 'classes' of society -- the 'owning class' and the 'working class.' It is the assumption that there are different moralities for these two alleged classes that is primarily the basis for the Marxist idea of an 'irrepressible class struggle.'" (P. 60)

"There are three basic personal qualities which, together with the primary driving force of self-interest, determine all human behavior -- and the dynamics of society. They are the qualities of humaneness, integrity, and competence. The last is used in the broad sense to include mental and physical capacity and ability and their concomitants of creativeness, curiosity and initiative..." (P. 62)

"The quality of humaneness is dampened by the dogmatic subordination of the individual to the state and his relegation to the role of a mere social unit of a super-organism..." (P. 63)

"The quality of integrity also suffers a process of disintegration under the strict surveillance to which Communist citizens are necessarily subjected..." (P. 63)

> "Because communistic society, by its very nature, suppresses the qualities of humaneness, integrity, and competence of the individual man, it offers very little hope of an improved total society. But outside the area of Communism the horizon of the modern world does reveal opportunities for general betterment" (P. 63)

A NEW SPECIES OF MAN:

> "Give man the means to mingle with his fellow inhabitants of our planet, and he will develop more understanding -- and humaneness. Give him the means to scan the far reaches of the earth, to see and hear its people, and he will learn the truth -- and develop greater integrity. Give him the means to learn from others, and he will develop increased competence." (P. 64)

The author sets forth on pages 69, 70 and 71 "Facts Showing Russian Trend Toward Capitalism," and modern socialism's trend toward Communism.

In Chapter 9 the author discusses "Capitalism Today" to show that our own system which allows a favored few to control concentrations of wealth has caused vast regions of poverty, a dearth of living space, food and work. (P. 77)

On page 113 the author says today society is attempting to solve the troubles of the world by power politics, negotiation, and legislation in an atmosphere in which power politics are provocative and negotiations on critical issues are useless.

An outline of the U. S. trend toward socialism is set out on pages 116-118.

In his next to the last chapter "Perspective," pages 123-166, the author discusses the economic theories of supply and demand for the peoples of the earth.

His last chapter, # 15, is titled "Summation" which are his ideas of 20th Century Man, the economic troubles of today and tomorrow. He says "Mankind is trapped...Millions of humans...are waiting for orders.. to destroy civilization." (P. 168)

The Executives Conference on 10/3/49, those present being Messrs. Tolson, Glavin, Tracy, Harbo, Mohr, Carlson, Ladd, Nichols, Rosen and Clegg, considered a suggestion made by NA Counselor Ronald Phillips, based upon a recommendation made on the floor at the NA Associates' Retraining School, that book reviews of law enforcement books on a national scale be included in the National Academy bulletin which is sent to all Associates. It was argued that this would provide the Associates an opportunity to decide whether they desired to purchase newly-published books on law enforcement.

The Conference unanimously recommended that, when it was deemed advisable and appropriate to provide a book review, the book review be included in the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin primarily. Objections to widespread or frequent book reviews were voiced since favorable reviews are subsequently quoted by the publishers and authors for the purpose of implementing the sale of such books, and thus it was believed that these book reviews should be on a very selective basis as occasions would demand or suggest.

Are Government Workers Free to Do as They Choose?

ALL HONORABLE MEN, by David Karp (Knopf; $3.95) is worth reading because it offers a somewhat different slant on the perennial quarrel between liberalism and conservatism. It is focused on the issue of whether persons like Government workers and teachers are free to think, speak and make friends as they choose.

This novel also is commendable because it is adroitly planned and filled with suspense. Mr. Karp, author of "One," a terrifying picture of a future totalitarian state, is a skillful writer.

Despite these praiseworthy qualities, however, the novel, like so many that uphold the liberal position against both communism and reaction, is not plausible. Most of its characters are stuffed examples of one shape of opinion or another.

The story concerns a Dr. Burney, a famous anti-Communist liberal, who has directed a great foundation. He is offered the executive direction of a new organization, the Institute of American Studies, which is designed, so he is told, to uphold the conservative position on a high intellectual level. He accepts, only to find that the sponsors are a bunch of educated, anti-septic Ku Kluxers or Silver Shirts.

Dr. Burney comes to grief over an investigation of the qualifications of a Dr. Ness, an economist, proposed for the faculty—a former Government official whose associations takes on a red tinge. Ness, a timid, naive liberal, who is not a Communist has always meant well.

Although the Institute is a private enterprise, the case takes on all the aura of a congressional investigation. Dr. Ness' daughter turns out to be a Communist. When the papers get hold of the issue, the applicant's future career is in the balance. What happens to him is one of several alternatives which might be guessed.

For one thing, a man of Burney's reputation and background never would have joined such an outfit without knowing more about its backers, his employers. For another, the Institute, a private corporation, could not have wielded the influence attributed to it. Then, too, the characters talk more like editorials stating the liberal or conservative view than human beings. You also get the impression that all conservatives are bigots, without reasonable or rational minds.

In spite of these flaws, "All Honorable Men" is an absorbing story.

BOOK REVIEWS

SYNOPSIS:

This memorandum summarizes the captioned book which was copyrighted in 1956. Author Karp also wrote "One," in 1953, and "The Day of the Monkey," in 1955, and is free-lance radio and television writer. No references in Bufiles. Bufile #121-38722 reflects Alfred A. Knopf, believed identical with publisher, member of several Communist fronts, and this company reportedly has published number of books written by persons whose loyalty has been questioned.

"All Honorable Men," a suspenseful novel, one more of a long line of literary efforts concerning loyalty investigations. The hero of the story is Dr. Milo Dexter Burney, famous anti-Communist liberal, educator, assiduous after-dinner-speaker, head of Rutledge Foundation for Social Sciences, who joins four wealthy individuals in a project "dedicated to honest, decent conservatism." This project is to ultimately establish an institute for post-graduate training and research and work to be called the Institute for American Studies. Almost immediately Dr. Burney discovers one member of the group, J. J. Van Ord, a retired Brigadier General, is particularly ruthless concerning the past political affiliations of candidates for the faculty of the Institute.

The entire story revolves around the case of economist, Dr. Joseph Selig Ness, whose candidacy is questioned on the basis of charges against him contained in a letter to the FBI, a copy of which Van Ord has obtained in some unexplained way. In opposition to the other members of the Board, Dr. Burney decides to defend Ness in the matter of these unevaluated charges. An investigation is begun which reveals Dr. Ness's daughter had participated in a Communist-infiltrated group. In addition, the investigation reveals that Ethel Glucker, sister of one of Burney's assistants, is a Communist and a lecturer for the Young Communist League; the farmhouse of Oliver Candell, another of Burney's assistants, is wiretapped; and Candell's past political affiliations are revealed. Ultimately, news of the charges against Ness break in the papers and finally Ness commits suicide. Burney resigns from the Institute and joins Ness's lawyer in a citizens' Committee for Justice which proposes to give the Institute "the kind of public exposure they've been demanding for others" and show the world "how poisonous and dangerously vicious such thinking and thinkers are."

The FBI is mentioned frequently throughout the book. Since the entire story concerns the investigation of the charges against Ness contained in the letter to the FBI there are numerous references in this connection. These frequent references and the context in which they are used could be construed as a subtle attack upon the Nation's security system. Two of the more salient references are:

On pages 88 and 89, for example, Van Ord admits his possession of this document is illegal but insists that his informant is a person of high personal loyalty to the United States and tells Burney, "If you will not accept this statement as an official report despite the fact that it comes from FBI files--well, I'd like to say that you do not display a proper respect for one of our great Federal safeguards when you imply that it would accept malicious rubbish into its files."

After the first leak to the newspapers, Dr. Burney, in an argument with Van Ord, asks him if he is ready to explain publicly "by what means you came into possession of the FBI letter concerning Dr. Ness?" Taking a completely different attitude, Van Ord replies, "You're using a misnomer when you call Miss Ryan's letter an 'FBI letter.' It has nothing to do with the FBI. It is merely a copy of a letter written by a private citizen, to the FBI. It in no way represents an official document of the FBI. I don't think it is improper for us to be in possession of it..." (page 183)

RECOMMENDATION:

For information.

Memorandum for Mr. Nichols March 21, 1956

The book "All Honorable Men," by David Karp, was released recently by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., New York, New York.

AUTHOR, DAVID KARP

David Karp, born in New York City NY in 1922, was educated at the College of the City of New York, from which he was graduated with a Bachelor of Social Science degree in 1948, having been delayed by three years' service with the Army in the Pacific. His writing career began in 1948. In that year he won the Ward Medal in English composition at C.C.N.Y. and the Ohio State Award for writing the best radio program on social and personal problems, and went to work as a continuity writer on New York City's station WNYC. Now a free-lance radio and television writer, he lives with his wife and son on Long Island.

Mr. Karp's first novel, "One," published in 1953, was a Book-of-the-Month Club choice. Two years later his second novel, "The Day of the Monkey," was published. (Book Jacket)

A check of the "Readers Guide to Periodic Literature" reflects that stories by Karp have appeared in the magazines, Collier's and the Saturday Evening Post.

Bufiles reflect no information identifiable with the author.

A check of Bufiles re Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., publisher of "All Honorable Men," indicates numerous references in security cases. Bufile #121-38722 reflects that one Alfred A. Knopf, believed identical with this publisher, has been a member of several Communist fronts, and this company reportedly has published a number of books written by persons whose loyalty has been questioned.

THE BOOK

The book, "All Honorable Men," described as a suspenseful novel, is one more addition to the long line of literary efforts concerning loyalty investigations.

The story concerns Dr. Milo Dexter Burney, a famous anti-Communist liberal, educator, assiduous after-dinner speaker, and head of the Rutledge Foundation for the Social Sciences, an 18-million dollar fund for the advancement of man's study of man. A group of wealthy individuals invite Dr. Burney to join them in a project dedicated to honest, decent conservatism. Indicating that they have become concerned over the drift of this country toward socialism, they describe their intended project as a means to drown socialism in a new conservatism, promoted and propounded by the brightest, the finest, the clearest and most vigorous minds of our country and ultimately to establish an Institute for post-graduate training and research and work to be called the Institute for American Studies. The purpose of this institute would be to provide selected candidates with an opportunity to study, describe, and propound the philosophic bases of enlightened conservatism. The Institute would be conducted on the highest levels of intellectual endeavor and would draw its pupils from the United States, Canada, England, and Australia.

Despite warnings that he will find himself mixed up in something which may prove distasteful to him, Dr. Burney decides to accept the offer to head the Institute. The project gets under way with Dr. Burney and the four persons who proposed the project constituting the Board of Governors which will also operate as a Final Selection and Review Committee on applicants and instructors. These four persons are: Vincent Locke, an immensely wealthy manufacturer of candy and sugar products; his wife, Edna Sutton Locke, a New York socialite; Macy Sutton, young Broadway playwright and half-nephew of Edna Sutton Locke; and Brigadier General J. J. Van Ord, chairman of the board of Locke Products and formerly on the staff of General Patton.

Almost immediately differences of opinion crop up. Dr. Burney discovers his office help is being required to sign a loyalty oath, apparently adapted from forms used by defense plants that have to meet security regulations of the armed forces, and puts a stop to it. At a Board of Governors meeting Van Ord takes exception to a proposed faculty member, a famous political scientist who, in his vigorous defense of Negro rights, once supported Paul Robeson. Burney decides not to make an issue over this teacher's name. Dr. Burney finds Van Ord is particularly ruthless concerning a candidate's past political affiliations. Burney states in his diary that Van Ord "is armed with a sheaf of lists of un-American organizations compiled from all sorts of sources. He keeps it to himself, as if the lists were secret. During a recess I tried to look at the lists, but Van Ord would not surrender them. Short of demanding them from him, I could not think of any way of seeing them. But I will vigorously fight if the only barrier to the acceptance of a candidate is a chance affiliation with one of Van Ord's malodorous organizations."

Three weeks after the first meeting of the Board of Governors, one of the candidates for selection to the Institute, Joseph Selig Ness, an economist, calls on Dr. Burney and states he wishes to withdraw his name from the panel. In explanation, Ness states that he was in Federal service, first with the OPA and later the Department of Agriculture, and that after he left Government service he learned that some unknown individual had made some charges against him, which charges he had been advised would probably wind up in the "FBI's raw files of unevaluated data." Burney advised Ness that while they desired to employ only men who had shown a complete devotion to the ideals of their profession, they were willing to accept men who had honestly made mistakes in their past political affiliations and now honestly declared their mistakes, adding that the Institute did not have access to FBI files, unevaluated or not. Burney stated that Ness's interview had been favorably received by the entire Board and suggested if he let matters ride he would be offered a contract which he would be free to accept or reject.

At a Board meeting two days later, Van Ord reveals that he has new information concerning a candidate already accepted which forces him to the decision that his acceptance should be set aside. Macy Sutton and Van Ord get into an argument which ends in Van Ord stating he has information "from completely reliable sources" concerning economist, Dr. Joseph Selig Ness. This report described Ness as a one-time member of the Watson Group in Washington, D. C., an organization to discuss creative writing which, although it professed to be unaffiliated with any national writers' organization, received literature from the League of American Writers, an organization listed as a front organization. After the reading of the report, Dr. Burney, who felt the report was merely spitefulness on the part of someone whom Ness had sharply criticized, is surprised by the reaction of others. Van Ord states a man with such serious charges against him is unfit to teach at the Institute and begins a formal motion, which Dr. Burney rules out of order. Burney reiterates his conviction that any candidate charged with certain political affiliations, or the prior expression of certain sentiments, must be given a chance to explain his reasons and his present attitude. A two-week adjournment for the Christmas holidays is the result.

Ness again requests Dr. Burney to withdraw his name, but Burney, satisfied in his own mind that there is nothing to the charges, tells Ness he should fight. When Ness agrees, Dr. Burney tells his two assistants, Oliver Candell and Irving Glucker, of his decision to defend Ness. Glucker who was opposed to Dr. Burney's move to the Institute from the beginning tries, without success, to dissuade Burney. At the next meeting of the Board of Governors, Van Ord receives the authorization of the Board to assign a private detective agency to investigate the charges against Ness and it is agreed that Ness will be called before the Board in three weeks.

The weekend before the scheduled Ness hearing, Dr. Burney accompanies Oliver Candell to his farm in Connecticut. Ness and Victor Vircassian, a lawyer notable for his defense of American Communists and fellow travelers, appear at the farm. Vircassian produces a sheaf of folded papers which he states were left in Ness's mailbox that morning. These papers prove to be photostats of the investigator's reports on Ness; however, in addition to data concerning Ness's participation in the Watson group, the report indicates that Ness's daughter, Sylvia Ness Wells, had been a member of a so-called "social, cultural" group which was reportedly Communist infiltrated, and further, that Sylvia had had an abortion performed five years prior to her marriage. Vircassian asks Dr. Burney what he will do when these are presented at the hearing and Burney says they constitute new charges and that he will close down the hearings to give Ness an opportunity to produce material in defense of these new charges.

Dr. Burney and Candell agree that Irving must have made this material available to Ness. Irving admits supplying Ness with the photostats and his only explanation is that he felt Ness should have them.

At the scheduled hearing, Ness reads a statement in reply to charges that he was a member of the Watson group. When Van Ord attempts to question Ness concerning the additional charges, Burney decrees that Ness is to have three weeks to prepare his answer. Subsequently, Van Ord and Vincent Locke call Macy Sutton to a private meeting where they intimate there may be some question of Dr. Burney's loyalty. They also reveal that Irving Glucker was the person who furnished Ness with photostats of the reports and that Glucker's sister, Ethel Glucker Saxman, was a lecturer for the Young Communist League and leader of the group attended by Sylvia Wells.

Under pressure from Vircassian, Sylvia admits that everything in the report concerning her is true. Thereafter, Vircassian talks with Irving who admits his sister is a Communist and reveals that approximately eight years previously Dr. Ness had addressed the group at his sister's house. Irving doesn't think Ness knew any of the group were members of the Young Communist League. Meanwhile, Dr. Burney and Candell discover that Candell's farm has been wire tapped.

A news item hints at trouble in the Institute and when Burney asks Van Ord if he is responsible for the leak, Van Ord suggests Burney look to his own personal staff, naming Irving Glucker as a possibility. Burney reiterates his belief that the Ness matter should be kept confidential and backs it up by threatening to assist Ness in the prosecution of a libel, slander and defamation of character suit against Van Ord, the other members of the Board, and the Institute, in the event the matter is not kept confidential.

Irving finally confesses all to Dr. Burney, including his interview with Vircassian. Dr. Burney talks with Vircassian and suggests that perhaps he can persuade the Board to drop the Ness hearing and merely reject his name for "lack of professional competence." Vircassian, while he believes in Ness's innocence, feels they don't stand a chance in view of Sylvia's implication and therefore agrees. Once too cowardly to fight, Ness now refuses to give up and Vircassian is finally forced to tell him the truth about his daughter. Meanwhile, Burney sounds out the members of the Board concerning dropping the hearing. Van Ord reveals his investigators have turned up evidence that Oliver Candell had once been a member of the American Labor Party and a member of several Communist front organizations between 1934 and 1939. Burney tells Van Ord he already knew that, and later advises Candell to go back to the Rutledge Foundation.

The Board subsequently refuses to drop the hearing on Ness and votes to make the findings public. Vircassian returns to Ness who has recovered from the blow of learning about his daughter and tells Vircassian he has been offered a teaching job in a small college. Vircassian tells Ness of the Board's refusal,,advises him not to appear at the hearing, and further suggests that he leave the country since after this he will not have any future.

Two days before the scheduled hearing, the "New York Journal American" carries a copyrighted story concerning the investigation being made by the Institute. The following morning, Ness's body is found hanging from a rope noose in the Ness's cellar.

On Monday morning following Ness's suicide, Van Ord calls an emergency meeting of the Board. Dr. Burney accuses them of being responsible for Ness's death and Van Ord suggests no motion is needed to accept Burney's resignation. Locke believes Burney should be fired outright, but the others agree firing Burney will give the Institute a "black eye." They agree to accept Burney's resignation, but he refuses to resign except on the condition that Oliver Candell's name not be brought into any further statements since he has already resigned and so far has not been mentioned.

Meanwhile, Candell, refused reinstatement at the Rutledge Foundation because they have received a report of his past political activities, has retreated to his farm in Connecticut where he receives a call from Victor Vircassian. Angered by the "dirty deal" accorded Ness and his resultant suicide, Vircassian has organized a citizens' Committee for Justice which he invites Candell to join. Candell refuses and later is very much surprised when Dr. Burney says he is going to join Vircassian. The hastily formed Committee for Justice has come in for much criticism because of some of the people who have joined and Vircassian is about to give it up when Dr. Burney and Irving Glucker appear.

Burney suggests junking the Committee as it is and starting a new Committee to be comprised of more acceptable personages, which will "Give Locke and Van Ord and Sutton the kind of public exposure they've been demanding for others." Burney says, "Let's strip these swine down to their proper size and color and hold them up for inspection. Let's really go at these men so as to show the whole wide world how poisonous and dangerously vicious such thinking and thinkers are. These men haven't had a fight on their hands before. I propose we give them a fight they won't forget, that we show up that Institute for American Studies as the garbage heap it really is."

MENTION OF THE FBI

The FBI is mentioned frequently throughout the book. References of an innocuous nature appear on pages 37, 42, 68 and 130.

The entire story revolves around the case of economist Joseph Ness, whose candidacy for acceptance to the Institute is questioned on the basis of charges against him contained in a letter to the FBI, a copy of which Van Ord has obtained in some unexplained way. The frequent references to this FBI report and the context in which they are used could be construed as a subtle attack upon the Nation's security system. The most outstanding references are set forth below:

On pages 87 and 88, Dr. Burney questions Van Ord concerning the alleged FBI report. When Van Ord refuses to reveal how he got the report, Dr. Burney suggests calling the FBI to find out if it is an official report. Van Ord hastily replies "This material was given to us by an individual of deeply loyal feelings. It would compromise both this individual and ourselves if we should involve the FBI." In further explanation Van Ord states, "Our possession of this document is illegal. That we have the good of our country at heart is something else again. The courts often take narrow views in such cases, although I have absolutely no shame for what I have done and my informant is a person of high personal loyalty to the United States and everything it stands for. If you will not accept this statement as an official report despite the fact that it comes from FBI files--well, I'd like to say that you do not display a proper respect for one of our great Federal safeguards when you imply that it would accept malicious rubbish into its files."

The report of the detective agency hired to investigate the charges against Ness (page 103) reveals that the letter sent to the Department of Justice in 1947 concerning Ness's participation in the Watson group was executed by Kitty Ryan, a known alcoholic and hysteric. The report offers the opinion that Miss Ryan had written the letter of accusation because an affair she and Ness had been having was coming to an end.

After the first leak to the newspapers, Dr. Burney, in an argument with Van Ord, asks if Van Ord is ready to explain publicly "by what means you came into possession of the FBI letter concerning Dr. Ness?" Van Ord replies, "You're using a misnomer when you call Miss Ryan's letter an 'FBI letter.' It has nothing to do with the FBI. It is merely a copy of a letter, written by a private citizen, to the FBI. It in no way represents an official document of the FBI. I don't think it is improper for us to be in possession of it. I think it was you yourself who pointed out that the letter is not an official document." (page 183)

Other references in connection with the letter concerning the charges against Ness appear on pages 44, 45, 54, 57, 58, 90, 91, 136, 154, 167, and 274.

SUBJECT: BOOK REVIEW
"ACQUITTED OF MURDER"
BY WILLIAM SEAGLE

U.S.

SYNOPSIS:

Director sent brief review of above book clipped from Sunday Star, 1/11/59, and said: "It might be well for us to review this book. H." Memo to you of 1/12/59, advised book had been purchased and was being reviewed in Crime Records Section. O BOOK REVIEWS

The Director is mentioned at the bottom of page 251 and top of page 252 when the author says: The police and prosecuting officials of the national capital have not suffered in silence when the courts have struck particularly mortal blows at criminal law enforcement. 'From. J. Edgar Hoover to Assistant United States attorneys who have been deprived of their sleep, they have been vocal enough. Perhaps the most outspoken of all have been Police Chief Robert V. Murray and United States Attorney Oliver Gasch."

On page 251 the author states the Mallory case has probably created the most convenient loophole of all time for hard-pressed criminals. He then refers to a survey in the Washington Star on 1/12/58 which allegedly reported that the police and prosecutors were in a race with the clock, since the slightest delay in arraignment might ruin a case against a suspect. "Assistant United States Attorneys were being frequently awakened in the middle of the night by the metropolitan police or by FBI Agents, when they had a prisoner who had confessed at night, were not sure whether they should wait until the following morning before arraigning him."

In his introduction author says the fear of convicting the innocent has had an overwhelming influence in shaping every system of criminal justice which attaches importance to protection of the individual; that popular sentiment has been that it is better for ten guilty persons to escape than for one innocent person to suffer. "It must be admitted that the ten-to-one school has never been lacking in horrible examples of miscarriages of justice to support its point of view. On page 5 the author states that one of the most awful examples of the ten-to-one school was the case of Albert Anastasia,"Lord High Executioner" of Murder, Inc. He was allegedly tried for murder in 1921, convicted, sentenced to die and the New York Court of Appeals awarded him a new trial on a technicality and when the state was ready to try him again it was found that all key witnesses had been murdered. "Police debited Anastasia with personally killing thirty-one men and with ordering the execution of another thirty-two." (Page 5) "In American courts, the procedural dice have always been loaded in favor of the person accused of crime. The administration of the criminal law has deliberately been made inefficient, a subject on which I have dwelt at length in my book, Law: The Science of Inefficiency. A person accused of crime at once becomes the darling of the law and enjoys all the advantages which it can possibly bestow on him." (Page 6)

On page 9 the author states: "Apart from the courts themselves the whole machinery of criminal justice is designed to facilitate the escape of persons accused of crime. To be sure, the resources which modern science has made available to the police in the detection of crime are formidable, but they have been negated to a great extent by the greater procedural resources of the defense, and the lack of organization in the machinery of prosecution."

Author takes a slap at district attorneys elected to office who are more interested in getting a conviction than making it stick and says the misconduct of district attorneys is one of the most frequent of the causes for reversing criminal convictions. (Page 10) Author says on page 11 he has selected case histories to prove his allegations against the American courts favoring criminals accused and convicted of crimes rather than theoretical discussion. "All cases selected have involved murders, and the murderers, although found guilty by juries, escaped all punishment except for relatively brief periods of incarceration which they had to endure while their fates were being decided." (Page 11)' He then cites in great detail seven cases covering 180 pages between the years 1806 and 1931 which are of no value to this memo.

In his last chapter titled "Post-Mortem" he cites statistics on reversals in murder cases in California from 1850 - 1926; Texas from 1900 - 1927 and 1924 - 1944 the latter showing 37 percent reversals out of 1438 appeals in murder cases. (Page 196) He goes into the Illinois Crime Survey of 1929 and the Missouri Crime Survey of 1926 to show the high percentage of reversals in murder cases. The author says the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri achieved undoubted leadership in quashing defective murder and rape cases towards the turn of the century when they found indictments to be fatally defective because of typograpical and misspelled words and allowed a rapist to go free because the word "the" had been ommitted in the phrase "against the peace and dignity of the state." (Page 199)

He discusses the continually increasing number of reversals based on unlawful arrests, unlawful searches and seizures, confession, delay in arraignments, wiretapping, etc. (Page 203-204) He criticizes the U. S. Supreme Court on pages 206 and 207 for the judge-made doctrines which have facilitated the escape of the guilty and not supported by the Constitution. He ridicules the Court's interpretation of wire-tapping laws as "the fruit of the poisonous tree." (Page 208-209) He discusses the Mallory case, page 212, and shows its far reaching and devastating effect upon law enforcement.

Author says the penitentiaries have become veritable habeas corpus mills as a result of Supreme Court pronouncements on constitutional rights; that the leading law school is no longer Harvard but Joliet Prison and Alcatraz. He says 3000 legal documents a years are sent forth from Alcatraz; that 400 inmates have typewriters; and prisoners are allowed to keep a maximum of eight books in their cells. (Page 220) Author cites case of "Treetop" Turner, a tall Negro who confessed to killing 2 men in a robbery. He was tried and convicted of murder 5 separate times and each time the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania reversed the trial court over a period of 12 years 1945-1957 at which time Turner's case was nolle-prosed and today he is a free man. (Page 222-229)

Author blasts District of Columbia as the Number One haven for criminals in the U. S. He blasts the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals for the reversible decisions they have made in favor of criminals admittedly guilty, but merely because of a technicality of no real bearing on the guilt or innocence of the accused. (Page 233-256)

Author cites interesting statistics on criminals freed because of insanity at time of crime, page 240; mentions celebrated Monte Durham case as well as the Dallas Williams case known in Washington as "The Bad Man of Swampoodle." He said Williams record showed 100 arrests, 11 convictions for crimes of violence and after he shot a man in both legs he was tried 5 times but they failed to convict him and in 1957 he was let loose upon the community once more. (Page 242)

Author says most celebrated case of application of the new constitutional doctrines is the case of Judith Coplon, arrested by the FBI. After her trial and conviction the U. S. Court of Appeals declared "her guilt is plain," but they reversed her conviction because she had been unlawfully arrested without a warrant and her wires were tapped. She was again tried and convicted and the higher court again reversed it and she walked out of court a free woman. (Page 243-244)

Author says Mallory decision is the greatest obstacle to successful police work in the District in cases of murder, rape and robbery. (Page 245)

SUBJECT: "HERBLOCK'S SPECIAL FOR TODAY," BOOK BY HERBERT BLOCK

The above-captioned book, written by the well-known cartoonist for the "Washington Post and Times-Herald," contains some 430 cartoons by Herblock as well as some 30,000 words of explanatory text. The book deals with virtually all phases of public life, with cartoons and text on such items as secrecy of Government files, foreign policy, politics, civil rights, Government operations, etc.

Herblock attacks Congressional investigative committees, such as the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities. (HCUA) He also is critical of the FBI. His comments are a rehash of well-known canards about the Bureau, such as that the Bureau is not as closely scrutinized by Congress as other agencies; that it relies on confidential informants; that the Director has harsh ideas regarding the handling of juveniles; that the Bureau joined with the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities in attacking Cyrus Eaton, etc.

These key points are made by Herblock:

(1) The FBI has not been given the same careful scrutiny as other agencies in the Government.

Herblock mentions that in a column written in July, 1957, Drew Pearson cited some examples of cases in which he said the FBI and the Director received more credit than they deserved, adding that no newspaperman, including himself, had published the complete truth in these cases. (This undoubtedly refers to a Pearson column published on July 10, 1957, in which Pearson erroneously claimed that the Bureau hogged the credit in the Nazi Saboteur, Elizabeth Bentley, Greenlease and Brinks cases). (94-8-350-881) 62-46855-7

EX-102 REC-33 3 FEB 9 1959

Herblock then adds: "Certainly this bureau has not been given the same careful scrutiny as others in government. And J. Edgar Hoover, particularly when he is delivering pronouncements on debatable subjects, could benefit from the kind of critical appraisal that is given such other public servants as, say, the President of the United States or the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court."

(2) The Director is a good policeman, but when he leaves that role he is unreliable.

The author says the Director strongly defended the Government's security program and "implied that anyone who criticized this program or disapproved of complete reliance on anonymous informers must be either a Communist or Communist dupe."

Herblock then says: "Mr. Hoover has performed some good work in his capacity as a policeman; but when he tried to get away with that kind of talk he got himself caught, as you might say, flat-footed. Happily, there were at least a few newspapers which said so, in editorials that did not support him in the manner to which he had become accustomed. This was a healthy reaction from members of a free press who should not have any sacred cows - or sacred bulls."

(3) The Director advocates harsh treatment of juvenile offenders.

It is mentioned that the Director issued a statement in 1958 demanding tougher methods for handling juvenile delinquents and attacking a "distorted notion of justice" which, according to the Director, had "even permeated our court system." (Introduction to FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin, April, 1958). Herblock then states that Monsignor John O'Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, criticized the Director's position, asserting that Mr. Hoover had contributed to police work but this did not entitle him to the position of an oracle in dealing with juvenile delinquency. (File 94-37133 reflects that O'Grady in a letter to the editor of the Washington Star on April 9, 1958 did make such a statement).

(4) The Director likewise is "not exactly our greatest authority on constitutional law, on what can properly be shown on movies and TV, on how to cope with Communism, or on a number of other subjects on which he has spoken in oracular fashion."

Herblock speaks of Cyrus Eaton, saying that Mr. Hoover and the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities in the spring of 1958 "joined in doing some televiewing-with-alarm." He characterizes Eaton as "a plain-spoken and unintimidated man" who at the age of 75 "was in no mood to learn any other kind of Americanism." After Eaton's interview on the Mike Wallace show, the Director declined equal time, but the House Committee, "which had not even been mentioned in the broadcast," demanded and received broadcast time. u

Mention is then made that the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities threatened to serve Eaton with a subpoena. "Both the committee and Mr. Hoover explained that they had nothing against free speech, mind you. The committee only wanted to make inquiries, and Mr. Hoover merely deplored 'inaccuracies in the exercise of free speech.'" (Director's quotation taken from introduction of Law Enforcement Bulletin, July, 1958). However, public reaction was adverse, and the HCUA dropped the entire matter. u

Herblock then goes on to quote from the Director's speech before the American Legion (September, 1957), in which Mr. Hoover criticized "certain organizations" which thwart the concepts of security, claim to be anti-communist but actually launch attacks against Congressional legislation designed to curb communism. Such comments of the Director, Herblock says, betray Mr. Hoover's "imprecise speech exercises," in that he doesn't identify these "organizations." However, according to Herblock, the Director let the "cat out of the bag" a few sentences later when he talks about "The recent campaign to throw open the files of the FBI is a case in point." u

Herblock states: "At this point - or at this case in point - the cat was out of the bag on all four pussy feet, and we discovered the kind of dangerous subversives who were the objects of Mr. Hoover's creeping McCarthyism. First and foremost on anybody's list of 'organizations' which would 'throw open the files of the FBI,' as Mr. Hoover misrepresented the matter, would have to be that familiar group of desperadoes, the Supreme Court of the United States. And Mr. Hoover's tirade was brought on by their 7-1 decision which upheld the rights of people being prosecuted to see government material necessary for their defense - as, for example, the various conflicting statements of an informant like Harvey Matusow." u

These comments then follow on the Director and the Supreme Court: "As one who believes that all government actions are subject to questioning and comment, I don't hold that federal court decisions are always right or above criticism. There are some I'd quarrel with. But in a choice, I'd certainly take the considered deliberations of the Supreme Court in preference to the statements of a policeman so carried away by his own power and his own press releases that he has taken to impugning the integrity and patriotism of all who disagree with him." u

Herblock makes this biting sarcasm:

"A more forthright crack at the Court appeared in a mid-1958 report of testimony by Mr. Hoover before a Congressional committee. He said, 'The Supreme Court must come to grips in a realistic manner with facts and join all the forces for good in protecting society.' (Page 174 of Director's Testimony before the Subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives, January 16, 1958, reflects that Mr. Hoover actually said: "But the courts themselves must also eventually come to grips in a realistic manner with facts and join all forces for good in protecting society.") u

"This was pretty big of our most publicized bureau chief. He might have said simply that the U. S. Supreme Court must go. But he was forbearing, though firm. He allowed the members of the nation's highest tribunal a chance to give themselves up and to 'join all the forces for good.' u

"Who knows to what heights men like Earl Warren and Hugo Black might have risen had they but obeyed and grasped the opportunity for redemption? They might have traded in their black robes for white hats, to show they were forces-for-good guys instead of forces-for-bad guys. They might even have become Junior G-men. But they remained steeped in their iniquities, steeped in the law, steeped in the old idea that the rights of American citizens are even more important than the barkings of cops and committees. u

"Actually, the law that has been operating against the Eastlands, the Jenners, the Walters and the Hoovers is one which has never been passed upon by the Supreme Court, and which appears not in legal books but in economic ones. That is the law of diminishing returns." u

(5) Building up a myth of communist strength inside the United States. u

Herblock severely criticizes the FBI for trying to create a myth of communist strength inside the United States, when actually there is none - a "basic law" that "the fewer the Communists and the less their influence, the more imminent the danger from them." u

These are Herblock's final comments:

"With all their combined efforts, they have not been able to keep the country's fears of internal 'subversion' whipped up to the fever pitch of the McCarthy era. The Russian gains on world scientific, economic and political fronts have brought a sobering realization of the real dangers which confront us. And the Suspect-Thy-Neighbor groups have been up against the additional handicap that the strength of the Communists in the U. S., which was never large at any time, has dwindled to near zero. u

"In their efforts to overcome the law of diminishing returns, Mr. Walter and Mr. Hoover have tried to proclaim a kind of basic law of their own invention - that the fewer the Communists and the less their influence, the more imminent the danger from them. u

"If it were a fact that our internal peril is now as great as ever, that would hardly seem much of a testimonial to these men, who have supposedly been eliminating the dire threat that we're all going to turn red some morning. But in the face of clear and present dangers to their personal prestige, they could hardly be expected to worry about little matters of logic. u

"The business of hunting Americans guilty of no crimes and of finding 'subversion' in such things as free speech and freedom of assembly is not yet played out. But the chases aren't what they used to be. u

"The pursuers are still willing, but the audience is getting tired. And, worst of all, the pursued aren't all co-operating in quite the old way. It takes at least two to make a chase. Somebody has to run away, or maybe drop dead when you point at him. But people aren't dropping the way they used to - or falling for all the old charges. As for running, the Supreme Court just sits there, handing down judicial opinions. People like Cyrus Eaton sit there handing out personal opinions; and instead of fleeing when a pursuer comes roaring up, they just stand and spit in his eye. u

"Perhaps Mr. Hoover has detected something in the air. Lately I've been reading lots of newspaper stories about an FBI list of Ten Most Wanted Men. This sounds like an echo of the old Public Enemy days when Mr. Hoover built his reputation by catching criminals, and by upholding the laws instead of trying to dictate them. u

"Jenner has bowed out. And if the business of pursuing law-abiding citizens keeps dropping off, I don't know what people like Eastland and Walter are going to do for action. Some time when they come up for new appropriations, Congress could suggest that they go chase themselves." u

The text is accompanied by several cartoons (which have previously been published), all of a derogatory nature to the Bureau and the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities. u

SUBJECT: "HOW THE CHURCH CAN HELP WHERE DELINQUENCY BEGINS" BY GUY L. ROBERTS
BOOK REVIEW
CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Guy L. Roberts gives minister's viewpoint on delinquency in captioned book. Has written book to express belief that church has a vital role to perform with problem children and their families. He states that the church should be first source of help to individual and family. It is in an excellent position to counter fear and hate, common with problem children, with faith and love. Dr. Roberts believes that "problem young people" are basically religious, but their religious lives are functionally weak. A more realistic and creative type of Christian education is needed. This will combat philosophy of "self-expression" and "empty freedom" which rules out the claims of "self-sacrifice" and "self-control." By neglect, we have made the modern family what the Marxists by social planning have made it. Failures in community living produce delinquency. The relative failure of the probation system is due to failure to establish adequate counseling relationships. Church is in position to make available consecrated men and women properly equipped for this task. However, a key factor in any planned approach to delinquency problem is adequate counseling service in schools. Dr. Roberts holds more hope for future as churches are finding and accepting a primary responsibility in alerting the community to its responsibilities. Dr. Roberts does not refer to Director or FBI. No information in Bureau files identifiable with Dr. Roberts, a Methodist minister.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: "HOW THE CHURCH CAN HELP
WHERE DELINQUENCY BEGINS"

AUTHOR GIVES MINISTER'S VIEWPOINT ON DELINQUENCY

"How the Church Can Help Where Delinquency Begins," by Guy L. Roberts is essentially a minister's viewpoint regarding problem children. Dr. Roberts has specialized in psychology and counseling. He earned his Ph. D. degree at the University of Pittsburgh and pursued other graduate work at Columbia University and the University of Glasgow (Scotland). He attended the Seminary of Boston University and studied at Southern Illinois University and the University of Pittsburgh. Dr. Roberts is currently the minister of the First Methodist Church, Clarkston, Washington.

Nothing in Bureau files identifiable with Dr. Roberts. The Director and FBI are not referred to in this book. The author uses various other authorities and statistics based in case studies to support position. (Book jacket)

CHURCH HAS VITAL ROLE TO PERFORM

This book was written to express the belief that the church has a vital role to perform with problem children and their families. While a growing number of religious leaders know this fact, the general public and vast majority of church members do not. Dr. Roberts discusses the various bases of juvenile delinquency from the various so-called authoritative sources. Dr. Roberts notes that the pattern in the course of juvenile delinquency differs from case to case but in all cases "love" is inadequately expressed. A primary function of the church is to make (Christian) love applicable to the individual and the family. It should be the first source of help. (pp. 7, 35)

ALL CHILDREN ARE POTENTIAL DELINQUENTS

According to Dr. Roberts, many children have problems that may become too difficult for them to solve. Thus, all children may become problem children or delinquents because of the stress of these insolvable problems. One child in a family of several children can become a delinquent because no two children in a family have the exact environment or problems. Many seemingly unimportant environmental factors such as comic books may "trigger" the immediate pattern of delinquent response. However, with most problem children, fear and hate have won over faith and love. Of course, the parent should step in to assist potential delinquents with their difficult problems, but the church is in excellent position to step in and re-create around problem children patterns of wholesome social relationships based on understanding, faith, and love. Dr. Roberts described "love" as meaning discipline and firmness, as well as tenderness. (pp. 31, 40, 42-43, 144)

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
RE: "HOW THE CHURCH CAN HELP
WHERE DELINQUENCY BEGINS"

SHALLOW-ROOTING OF CHRISTIAN IDEAS

Among Dr. Roberts' conclusions is a statement "These problem young people of ours--of our churches, our communities, our homes--are basically religious." However, religious lives of delinquents may be idealistically strong though functionally weak. We need to provide a more realistic and creative type of Christian education. Right ideas have been accepted uncritically but concepts and convictions were shallow-rooted and the deeper emotional drives, such as resentment and aggressive feelings, left largely unaffected. (pp. 73, 74)

SELF-EXPRESSIONS AND EMPTY FREEDOM

Dr. Roberts quotes a source stating that we are doing by neglect much of what the Marxists have done by social planning. In this connection, the modern family makes three fundamental mistakes. "First it sees a marriage as mere contract, second, it understands marriage as a private affair, and third, it adopts a philosophy of self-expression and empty freedom which rules out the claims of self-sacrifice and self-control." He states that the church has the only adequate philosophy of family life to counter this weakness and has access to the family as no other agency has. Countering this deficiency in family life will aid the prevention of delinquency. Dr. Roberts indicated that he does not mean to say that the frightened and irresponsible parent can delegate the authority to the church, "but his church is the one supporting agency that can work with him every step of the way from the birth of the child to its maturity..." Problem children must suffer the consequences of the church's failure to live up to their potentialities. (pp. 75, 76, 92, 96)

ROLE OF THE CHURCH IN THERAPY

The counseling function of ministers and the role of the church in therapy are questioned by professional and lay workers in religious and social services. In some instances where resentment and anxiety are not too deep or alienation not too complete, the problem child may be able to adjust to other persons in the church atmosphere of fellowship and love. However, many children are beyond this and need the help of a trained counselor. Dr. Roberts claims that the church today has recognized this need and is training its ministers to be counselors. He does not believe technical training is enough as counseling is more an art than a science, the art of establishing a relationship.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: "HOW THE CHURCH CAN HELP
WHERE DELINQUENCY BEGINS"

Based on a study of 200 delinquent boys and girls in Texas, the book set forth the following conclusions relating to the delinquents and their homes:

"(1) In about 75 per cent of the homes of the respondents, parents have shown some attempts at attending church.

(2) There is a definite lack of interest on the part of the parents toward active participation within the organization of the church.

(3) There is a noticeable lack of religious literature in the homes of the respondents--found in only one-third of the homes.

(4) There is little religious training in the homes, but a great desire on the part of many of the respondents for such training.

(5) Churches have had some contact with over three-fourths of the respondents; two-thirds of the respondents claim church membership and slightly over three-fourths of them claim regular or occasional attendance at Sunday school and church, particularly in early childhood.

. . . . . .

(II) Positive attitudes toward the Church, the Bible, and Jesus, and positive beliefs in the existence of God seem to indicate a tacit acceptance of the values of God, the Bible, Jesus, and the Church."
(p. 72, 73)

On this premise, Dr. Roberts feels that the problem youth are basically religious. Thus, the church has a solid entree to aid the problem youth and their families.

PROBATION HAS BEEN ONLY RELATIVELY SUCCESSFUL

In the past, probation has been only relatively successful. The relative failure of the probation system is basically a failure in establishing an adequate counseling relationship. The Church is making available to the courts the consecrated men and women best equipped to establish this relationship. Certainly, a key factor in this program is an adequate counseling service that begins in the schools. Two centuries of scientific progress, industrial development and social changes have brought so many changes in social functions under the control of secular agencies that the role of the church and its influence have greatly lessened in modern life. The trend in changing; the churches of the community are finding and accepting a primary responsibility in alerting the community to its responsibilities.

Delinquency is failure in community living. The prevention and cause of delinquency (and mental illness) reside in the community. (pp. 144, 147-150)

"THE U. S. GOT RED CHINA ALL WRONG" BOOK REVIEWS

The New York Times, Monday, March 2, 1959, issue (page C-25) carried the following information:

> "The U. S. Got Red China All Wrong -- as seen by an old China hand -- Shows why & how Mao Tse-tung won the hearts & minds of the Chinese. Refutes every point in U. S. policy of nonrecognition. CONTROL BY PUBLICATIONS DESK
CENTRAL RESEARCH SECTION
62-46855

Reference is made to the Memorandum to All Bureau Officials and Supervisors dated January 21, 1959, entitled "Book Review Control by Publications Desk, Central Research Section." Referenced memorandum set forth current procedures to be followed in connection with book reviews conducted at the Seat of Government. It is vital that all personnel handling book reviews in the respective divisions be aware of the procedures set forth in the referenced memorandum.

For additional information in this matter, a copy* of all book reviews should be placed in Bufile 62-46855.

Interested personnel in the respective divisions should also be aware that the Publications Desk is now listed on the yellow FBI Telephone Directory under the caption "Classified," and inquiry concerning book review matters should be directed to this Desk.

RECOMMENDATION:

That this memorandum be forwarded to all Division heads for appropriate handling.

SUBJECT: BOOK ENTITLED
"SUFFER THE CHILDREN"
BY JEROME EDEN

BACKGROUND:

By letter to the Director dated March 2, 1959, attached, Mr. Jerome Eden, of the Eden Press, Mount Vernon, New York, transmitted a copy of his newly published book entitled as captioned. In his note Mr. Eden expressed the hope that his book will throw more light upon the menace that threatens freedom-loving peoples everywhere. It is noted that the bibliography of this book lists "Masters of Deceit," on page 152 as Item 19.

In the acknowledgement to his book, Mr. Eden mentioned, among other things, that all he knows about the biological, life-energy of the living organism, of its functional identity with the sexual energy in man, he is indebted either directly or indirectly to the work of Dr. Wilhelm Reich. The preface to the book indicates that Eden is an educator and a member of a civilization which has reached a perilously critical stage in its development. Eden has been deeply concerned over local, national and planetary events of recent years. He states that it is his conviction that what is happening has its roots in the personal relations between the individual man and woman, parent and child, child and teacher; further, that it is man who perverts the warm streaming love of the child into a cold, dirty "act" of pornography.

INFORMATION IN BUFILES:

Bufiles reflect that Dr. Wilhelm Reich founded The Orgone Institute at Rangeley, Maine, in 1942 to commercialize his theory of cancer treatment through control of biological energy. Reich was subject of an Internal Security investigation (Bufile 100-14601) and we have a voluminous file on his foundation (Bufile 105-11461). In 1954 the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) secured an injunction against Reich and his associates for their quack methods of curing cancer and other serious diseases. In October, 1957, our files indicated at that time, that Reich was serving a prison sentence for contempt of court for violation of this injunction.

M. A. JONES to DELOACH MEMO

Since November, 1955, Reich and members of his staff bombarded the Bureau with complaints of perjury, fraud and other irregularities in handling of the FDA and court action against them. As a matter of policy, the Bureau has not been acknowledging communications from Reich and his associates. According to Mr. Eden's book, Reich died on November 3, 1957.

Further, files reflect that we received letters from Mr. Jerome Eden dated 5-31-58, pertaining to the work of Dr. Reich, and another letter dated 10-13-58, wherein he forwarded to the Bureau's attention a pamphlet dealing with psychopolitical warfare. Neither of these two communications was acknowledged.

RECOMMENDATION:

That instant letter from Mr. Eden and his book not be acknowledged by the Director.

BOOK REVIEWS
Bufile 62-46855

Reference is made to the memorandum from M. A. Jones to Mr. DeLoach dated 2-9-59, captioned "Dr. Bernard Schwartz, Former Chief Counsel of the House Subcommittee on Legislative Oversight." Referenced memorandum indicated that a book by Schwartz was to be published 2-17-59. Schwartz, it will be recalled, recently received wide publicity which stemmed from charges he made alleging that undue influence was being exerted by Government officials on matters pending before Federal regulatory commissions.

A copy of the captioned book has been received by the Central Research Section and is enclosed. The book warrants review to determine whether it contains information of an investigative nature of interest to the Bureau as well as for any information of general interest to the Director or other Bureau officials.

Book reviews, it will be recalled, are currently handled in accordance with instructions contained in the memorandum to all Bureau officials and supervisors dated 1-21-59, captioned "Book Review Control by Publications Desk - Central Research Section."

RECOMMENDATION:

That the enclosed book be forwarded to the Investigative Division for review.

BOOK REVIEWS
Bufile 62-46855

Book filed in Training Library Annex

This is to advise that the above book written by Dr. Bernard Schwartz, former chief counsel, House Subcommittee on Legislative Oversight has been reviewed. In the book Schwartz details the experiences of his relatively brief career investigating the six Federal regulatory commissions. There is nothing new in the book that has not been disclosed by public hearings of the subcommittee and in newspaper accounts of the hearings, nor is the FBI mentioned.

Schwartz cites the historical and legislative background of the six regulatory commissions, the problems and obstacles he faced in conducting his inquiries and his observations relative to his ouster as chief counsel of the subcommittee.

Schwartz recounts the alleged illegal influences exerted by Thurman A. Whiteside, Miami attorney, on Richard A. Mack who was a commissioner for the Federal Communications Commission. His allegations related to the activities of Mack and Whiteside in connection with the granting of a TV license for Miami Channel 10 to Public Service Television, a firm which Whiteside represented. Our investigation of the Mack-Whiteside matter resulted in the indictment of these individuals on 9/25/58, for conspiracy and obstruction of justice in the U. S. District Court, Washington, D. C. This matter is awaiting trial.

Schwartz also restates allegations of improper influence by Sherman Adams on behalf of Bernard Goldfine in connection with the Federal Trade Commission and Securities Exchange Commission matters involving Goldfine.

Schwartz also recommends the transfer of the judicial powers now vested in regulatory commissions to the ordinary Federal courts to eliminate the existing evils in the regulatory commissions.

It appears from a review of the book that Schwartz considers Congressman Oren Harris the main villain in placing obstacles in his path in conducting an objective and searching investigation of the regulatory commissions. It is noted that the recent press indicated that Congressman Harris was quoted as stating that Schwartz' book merely reconfirmed his opinion that the greatest mistake the subcommittee made was employing Schwartz in the first instance.

Dear Mr. Christy:

I am indeed sorry that I was unable to see Mrs. Christy and you during your recent visit to FBI Headquarters.

Special Agent C. Benjamin Fulton, with whom you talked, has advised me of your favorable comments regarding the FBI and my administration of its activities, and I am very grateful. In addition, I have seen the volume, "Story Telling Time," which you left. Your interest and concern for the welfare of the American youth are most encouraging. While I would like to comply with your request, as a matter of policy I must refrain from making any comments on the volume along the lines you suggested. I know you can understand my position in this regard. The volume is being returned to you under separate cover.

SUBJECT: MR. AND MRS. DEL CHRISTY
ADVERTISING CONSULTANT
SUITE 543
WASHINGTON TRUST BUILDING
WASHINGTON, PENNSYLVANIA

The above-captioned individuals were interviewed by SA C. Benjamin Fulton upon referral from the Director's Office on March 23, 1959. Mr. Christy advised that he is an advertising consultant in Washington, Pennsylvania and that he has written a series of stories slanted for children to be read to children by their parents. He stated he had spent several years completing the series which was illustrated by Yolanda Lengyel.

The complete volume is entitled "Story Telling Time." Mr. Christy explained that it was his hope that he would be able to see the Director briefly just to say hello and leave the series of stories with him so that Mr. Hoover could review the stories. He informed that he and Mrs. Christy would be in Washington, D. C., for a few days, and it is their hope that the Director may have a moment to see them. It was explained to the Christys that the Director was not in and that no encouragement could be given them regarding a meet with Mr. Hoover due to the extremely heavy schedule and the great number of urgent matters confronting him. In addition, it was pointed out to Mr. Christy that due to the great number of similar requests he received and in view of his position as Director of a Federal investigative agency, it has been necessary for Mr. Hoover to adopt a policy of declining to comment, offer opinions or suggestions regarding such articles.

They desired to leave the volume and requested that it be brought to the Director's attention. It is noted that Mr. and Mrs. Christy appeared to be very personable, high type individuals and their admiration of the Director and the FBI was sincere. While in Washington, D. C., they are stopping at the South Gate Motel in Arlington, Virginia.

Bufiles do not reflect any information identifiable with the Christys or with the artist Yolanda Lengyel. A cursory review of the stories indicate they are fairly well written; however, they are in the first person and depict in some respect the childhood life of Mr. Christy. The series is self serving and quite obviously fictious to a great extent. The volume is attached for information. 1959

Jones to DeLoach memorandum

In view of the Director's heavy schedule, it is believed he should not take time to see the Christys. If you agree, Christy will be contacted by SA Fulton, the Director's regrets will be expressed and the brochure of stories will be returned to him.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

(1) That the Director not take time from his busy schedule to grant the Christys request for an interview.

(2) That the brochure of stories be returned to Mr. Christy and the Director's regrets expressed.

ADDENDUM:

An attempt was made to contact Mr. Christy at the South Gate Motel on 3-25 without success. He was reached on the afternoon of 3-26 and advised of the Director's inability to meet with him for a few minutes. The Director's regrets were expressed. Mr. Christy had hoped that Mr. Hoover would be able to comment on his volume of stories for children. He stated it would be appreciated if the volume could be mailed to him at his home address inasmuch as he would not be coming back downtown to Washington. He was informed that this would be done. It is noted the Christy's were planning to do further traveling before returning to their home at Washington, Pennsylvania/ CBF:sl

Information contained in this booklet about the author reflected that he was born and raised in China, educated in an American missionary college in Shanghai, and worked for the Chiang Kai-Shek Government for a few years during the Sino-Japanese War. The article reflected that he had traveled extensively in China, Southeast Asia, and Europe as a journalist and writer and has resided in the United States for the past 18 years.

Examination of the Philadelphia files reflected that ZIA may be identical with HSIEH ITZEN and the same individual referred to in report of SA LAWRENCE L. WHELDON at Philadelphia dated 10/24/42 captioned "LE-CHEN HSIEH, was: Yee Chen Hsieh, C. Y. Zia, Yee Chen; INTERNAL SECURITY - X." Analysis of this file reflects background information on subject similar to that furnished in captioned booklet. Chinese Translator ROBERT YOUNG of the Philadelphia Office advised that based upon similarity of names, it is very likely that HSIEH ITZEN is identical with LE-CHEN HSIEH.

Philadelphia files contained no information on the Quire Printing Company or (PNU) QUIRE.

SUBJECT: BOOK REVIEW - THE CASE OF THE SLEEPING PEOPLE
BY DR. DALE ALFORD, CONGRESSMAN FROM ARKANSAS,
AND HIS WIFE, L'MOORE ALFORD
CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER

SYNOPSIS:

In The Case of the Sleeping People, Dr. Dale Alford is portrayed as a patriot who selflessly stepped forward to champion the cause of segregation at a time when he believed the Federal Government was illegally forcing racial integration in Little Rock, Arkansas, schools. He describes Little Rock as the battleground where democracy is pitted against dictatorship of the Federal judiciary. Among causative factors contributing to the integration crises, the authors name "Warren-dominated" Supreme Court, which is charged with being influenced by foreign social-economic philosophy and by an "international conspiracy" which seeks to divide the South and destroy our country from within. Neither the FBI nor our investigation of the Hays-Alford election is discussed. The Director is mentioned only in connection with Masters of Deceit, from which quotations are cited by Dr. Alford. (pp. 78, 117)

RECOMMENDATIONS:

1. For the information of the Director.

2. That the enclosed copy of The Case of the Sleeping People be returned to the Bureau Library when this memorandum has served its purpose.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
RE: BOOK REVIEW-THE CASE OF THE SLEEPING PEOPLE
BY DR. DALE ALFORD, CONGRESSMAN FROM ARKANSAS,
AND HIS WIFE, L'MOORE ALFORD

The Critical Congressman Writes

When Congressman Dale Alford (D-Arkansas) delivered his vitriolic attack on the FBI and the Department of Justice from the floor of the House of Representatives on February 11, 1959, he mentioned a book which he and his wife had written about the "occupation" of Little Rock by Federal troops and about how the present Attorney General had set himself and his Department against the constitutional rights of free Americans. Mrs. Alford delivered a copy of the book to the Bureau on March 20, and it has been reviewed in the Central Research Section pursuant to the request of Mr. DeLoach. (Memo Mr. DeLoach to Mr. Tolson, dated 3/24/59)

Segregation-A Patriotic Cause

The Case of the Sleeping People, by Dale and L'Moore Alford, 142 pp., is an apology for the stand taken by Dr. Dale Alford during the Little Rock school integration crisis of 1957 and during his successful campaign for Congress in 1958. As an outspoken segregationist member of the Little Rock School Board, Alford opposed the majority of the board in its short-lived effort to integrate local high schools. After a special election in September, 1958, indicated Little Rock voters' support for school segregation by a 3-to-1 margin, Alford stepped forward to declare himself a write-in candidate for the congressional seat which had been occupied by "moderate" Brooks Hays for 18 years. Alford's successful eight-day whirlwind campaign was based solely on the school segregation issue. His victory over the "moderates" is portrayed in The Case of the Sleeping People as vindication of the Alford theme-namely, that the fight to maintain segregation in the South is a patriotic cause, one which pits the concept of popular democracy against the dictatorship of the Federal judiciary.

Democracy vs. Judicial Oligarchy

In developing their theme, the Alfords point to the use of Federal troops and the action of the Justice Department in implementing Supreme Court decisions as illegal and unconstitutional Federal interferences with States' rights. As causative factors behind the judicial decisions and the organized efforts to bring about integration in the public schools, Alford's campaign speeches charge that the "Warren-dominated" Supreme Court was influenced in its school-desegregation decisions by foreign social-economist Gunnar Myrdal and that the mass agitation for immediate integration results from an "international conspiracy" which seeks to divide the South and to destroy the Nation from within. There is no specific development of the Alford theory that an international conspiracy is responsible for race agitation in Arkansas or any other place, but he brings communism into the picture by quoting directly from the Director's book, Masters of Deceit. (The Case of the Sleeping People, p. 78)

References to Masters of Deceit

The impact of Masters of Deceit on the Alfords is apparent throughout their book. For example, when describing the moment of decision in which her physician husband elected to abandon his medical practice in order to run for Congress, Mrs. Alford wrote as follows: "Pointing to the book, Masters of Deceit, by J. Edgar Hoover, he (Dr. Alford) said, 'Remember that our enemies and their dupes and the skeptics will do everything they can think of to stop our solving this mystery and bringing out the TRUTH.' " (ibid., p. 92) The book contains several additional references to Masters of Deceit, and quotations from it were credited in the acknowledgments. One reference to Masters of Deceit which appeared in Dr. Alford's televised speech just prior to the Little Rock election on the integration issue in September, 1958, is quoted as follows: "This is no longer a so-called Southern problem, so my appeal is to all America to wake up before the 'Masters of Deceit' succeed in placing the 'Trojan horse of Communism' in our midst through the guise of integration." (p. 72) Other direct quotations are used to illustrate the need for education in democracy in order to overcome communism. (pp. 78, 117) It is noted that Dr. Alford, in one of his speeches, used a direct quotation from Masters of Deceit without reference to its source. (p. 117) This is a portion of the same quotation regarding the need for education in democracy, referred to above, which was properly credited in the text on page 78. The FBI is not discussed at any place in the text, and there is no mention of the FBI investigation to determine whether election laws were violated in the Alford campaign last fall. There is, however, indication that there was congressional controversy over the seating of Alford as the Democratic Representative from the Fifth District of Arkansas.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
RE: BOOK REVIEW-THE CASE OF THE SLEEPING PEOPLE
BY DR. DALE ALFORD, CONGRESSMAN FROM ARKANSAS,
AND HIS WIFE, L'MOORE ALFORD

Evaluation

The Case of the Sleeping People succeeds only in making the point that the Alfords look upon the integration problem in Little Rock, Arkansas, as the crucial issue which will decide the future of States' rights in America and that Dale Alford has come forward at great personal sacrifice to act as a patriotic spokesman against the impending threat of Federal dictatorship. There have been more penetrative and persuasive writings which treat the integration problem. In this book, the reasoning underlying the Alfords' stand has been only superficially exposed.

"THE UNDERWORLD OF SEX"
BY HUBERT J. BADEAUX

SYNOPSIS: O Reviews

Captioned book forwarded to Mr. DeLoach anonymously. Book unbound, privately printed, distributed through Herald Press, Inc., New Orleans, Louisiana. It is identified as advance edition for restricted circulation only, and as "A Documented Account of Organized Sexual Degeneracy." Printed in 1959. Book opens with quotation in preface from Director's speech before American Legion National Convention 9-19-57, which pertains to peddlers of obscene pictures and writings which have flooded the nation, and need for an aroused public to stop flow of obscene literature, as well as necessity for longer sentences and heavier fines against purveyors. Preface ends by repeating part of quotation relative to aroused public being necessary, and Badeaux adds people must also not countenance any attempts to prevent it from being aroused. In Chapter 18, Badeaux reproduces some letters pertaining to his investigation in New Orleans, Louisiana, into organized degeneracy when he was a sergeant on police force. On Page 271 there is a letter from Senator Allen J. Ellender to president, Greater Gentilly Civic Council, Inc., New Orleans, to effect Ellender referring council's request for Federal assistance to FBI. On Page 273 a letter from Director to Senator Ellender dated 2-21-58 is reproduced advising our New Orleans Office developed information that activities of certain members of nudist camp were being investigated by New Orleans Police Department, and State District Attorney's office in New Orleans, and U. S. Postal Inspectors. Director's letter stated Ellender's letter being forwarded to Chief Postal Inspector. On Page 272 Badeaux states that police investigation into activities of nudist camp referred to by Director was nothing more than an attempt by New Orleans Police Department to hide existence of international degeneracy ring. He adds he furnished FBI in New Orleans clear evidence of international degeneracy and perhaps it was forwarded to Director and perhaps not. He says, "At any rate, a short time after Mr. Hoover wrote the letter to Senator Ellender, the Agent in Charge of the New Orleans Office of the FBI announced his retirement." Badeaux states that contrary to what Mr. Hoover said, State District Attorney's office in New Orleans conducted no investigation.

Despite Badeaux's claim that State District Attorney's office had not entered investigation, our New Orleans Office advised by airtel 8-5-58 last chief investigator for State District Attorney's office had injected himself into the investigation and was being assisted by Sgt. Badeaux. As a result of information developed that members of nudist movement in New Orleans and elsewhere have transported wives interstate for "wife-swapping parties," New Orleans Office advised by airtel 10-15-58 that White Slave Traffic Act case had been opened. This investigation still pending (31-86928) although numerous U. S. Attorneys have declined prosecution.

Badeaux devoted part of book to Guy Banister, former FBI SAC, who assigned Badeaux to investigate organized degeneracy in 1956, when Banister was Assistant Superintendent of New Orleans Police Department. He indicates he only trusted Banister because of corruption in New Orleans Police Department and when Banister was dismissed "after it was charged that Banister, a high-ranking police official, had capriciously drawn his revolver in a public place," Badeaux's investigation bogged down and this was the first in a series of unfortunate incidents which blocked investigation of organized degeneracy. Primary target of Badeaux's investigation into nudism and its allied degenerate activities is one Louis Stewart, who was the primary subject in Bureau White Slave Traffic Act investigation. On 12-22-58 Stewart pleaded guilty in U. S. District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana, to two counts of sending obscene matter through the mail and was sentenced to 18 months in custody of Attorney General on each count to run concurrently. This investigation handled by postal authorities. This matter has been followed in Crime Research Section since 7-30-58 as research matter in connection with our sex offender file.

Badeaux's book has two main themes, one pertaining to corruption in New Orleans Police Department and city government and the other to a far-reaching ring of sexual degenerates which has its roots in nudist colonies, primarily the Three Lakes Nudist Camp in Louisiana. Badeaux was sergeant on police force New Orleans and resigned in 1958 after public officials allegedly thwarted his efforts to uncover organized sexual degeneracy because some of higher-ups in community were involved. He castigates Mayor deLesseps S. Morrison who allegedly purposely overlooked the sexual degeneracy situation, although his political success was based on a "clean government" campaign. Badeaux refers to New Orleans Superintendent of Police Provosty A. Dayries as inept and bungling, and tells of administration which constantly threw obstacles in the path of the organized sexual degeneracy investigation.

The book spares little in its description of the sexual orgies and there are reproduced photographs, letters, sex orgy club applications, etc., which in themselves make Badeaux's book an obscene publication.

Jones to DeLoach memorandum

Bufiles reflect Badeaux, as Agent in Charge of Division of Intelligence Affairs, New Orleans Police Department, was in charge of Communist Party investigations in that city, and has testified before committees on communism. He has also testified that National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is a Communist Party pawn, and is an outspoken segregationist. Chapter by chapter summary of book attached.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

(1) That this book be discussed informally with postal authorities by the Liaison Section relative to its apparent obscenity and transmittal through the mails.

(2) If approved, our New Orleans Office will be instructed to contact Badeaux and set him straight regarding our SAC's transfer from New Orleans and the fact that this matter was reported to the Bureau by our New Orleans Office and appropriate attention is being given to it.

DETAILS

BACKGROUND

"The Underworld of Sex," by Hubert J. Badeaux, was forwarded to Mr. DeLoach anonymously. The book is unbound and is privately printed, distributed through the Herald Press, Inc., New Orleans, Louisiana. It is identified as an advance edition, for restricted circulation only. It is further identified as "A Documented Account of Organized Sexual Degeneracy." It was printed in 1959.

GENERAL OUTLINE AND OBSERVATIONS

The book opens with a quotation in the preface from the Director's speech before the National Convention of the American Legion on September 19, 1957, which pertains to the peddlers of obscene pictures and writings which have flooded this nation, and the need for an aroused public to stop the flow of obscene literature, as well as the necessity for longer sentences and heavier fines against the purveyors of such material. The preface ends by repeating a part of the quotation relative to an aroused public being necessary, and Badeaux adds that the people must also not countenance any attempts to prevent it from being aroused.

This book has two main themes, one pertaining to corruption in the New Orleans Police Department and city government and the other to a far-reaching ring of sexual degenerates, which has its roots in nudist colonies, primarily the Three Lakes Nudist Camp. Badeaux was a sergeant on the police force in New Orleans and resigned in 1958 after public officials allegedly thwarted his efforts to uncover organized sexual degeneracy, because some of the higher-ups in the community were involved. He castigates primarily Mayor deLesseps S. Morrison, who allegedly purposely overlooked the sexual degeneracy situation even though his political success was based on a "clean government" campaign. Badeaux refers to the Superintendent of Police, Provosty A. Dayries, as inept and bungling, and told of the administration who constantly threw obstacles in the path of the organized sexual degeneracy investigation.

Badeaux's investigation primarily involved the Three Lakes Nudist Camp, which he claims is the center of sexual degeneracy in the New Orleans area. He further believes that the international nudist movement is nothing but a cover-up for unspeakable sexual activities between its members, sometimes reaching nationwide proportions through "wife-swapping parties." The primary target of Badeaux's investigation into nudism and its allied degenerate activities is one Louis Stewart, and he is the primary subject in an investigation opened by the Bureau under the White Slave Traffic Act classification in October, 1958. This investigation by the Bureau is still pending although numerous U. S. Attorneys declined prosecution. On December 22, 1958, Stewart pleaded guilty in United States District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana, to two counts of sending obscene matter through the mail, and was sentenced to 18 months in the custody of the Attorney General on each count to run concurrently. This investigation was handled by postal authorities. This matter has been followed in the Crime Research Section since July 30, 1958, as a research matter in connection with our sex offender file, because of the alleged degeneracy involving interstate travel on a national basis for immoral purposes.

REFERENCES OF INTEREST TO FBI

In Chapter 19, Badeaux reproduces some letters pertaining to his investigation in New Orleans, Louisiana, as a sergeant on the police force into organized degeneracy. On Page 271 a letter appears from Senator Allen J. Ellender to the president of the Greater Gentilly Civic Council, Inc., of New Orleans, to the effect that he is referring its request for Federal assistance to the FBI. On Page 273, a letter from the Director to Senator Ellender dated 2-21-58, is reproduced, advising that our New Orleans Office developed information that the activities of certain members of the Three Lakes Nudist Camp were being investigated by the New Orleans Police Department, the State District Attorney's Office in New Orleans, and the U. S. Postal Inspectors in New Orleans. The Director's letter informed Senator Ellender that a copy of his letter and its enclosures were forwarded to the Chief Postal Inspector.

On Page 272, Badeaux writes that the investigation into the activities of certain members of the Three Lakes Nudist Camp referred to by Mr. Hoover was nothing more than an attempt by the New Orleans Police Department to hide the existence of the international degeneracy ring. He adds he furnished the FBI in New Orleans with clear evidence of the international degeneracy ring and that perhaps it was forwarded to Mr. Hoover and perhaps it was not. He then says, "At any rate, a short time after Mr. Hoover wrote the letter to Senator Ellender, the Agent in Charge of the New Orleans Office of the FBI announced his retirement." Badeaux also stated that contrary to what Mr. Hoover stated, the State District Attorney's office in New Orleans conducted no investigation.

Despite Badeaux's claim that the State District Attorney's office had not entered the investigation, our New Orleans Office advised by airtel dated 8-5-58 that the chief investigator for the State District Attorney's office, John J. Grosch, had injected himself into the investigation and was being assisted by Sgt. Badeaux.

As a result of information being developed that members of the nudist movement in New Orleans and elsewhere had transported their wives interstate for "wife-swapping parties," the New Orleans Office advised by airtel dated 10-15-58 that a White Slave Traffic Act case had been opened. This investigation is still pending (Bufile 31-86928), although numerous U. S. Attorneys have declined prosecution.

Badeaux also devoted part of his book to Guy Banister, former FBI SAC. He stated that he was assigned to investigate organized degeneracy in 1956 by Banister, who was then Assistant Superintendent of the New Orleans Police Department. He indicates that he only trusted Banister, and Chapter 2 states Banister was dismissed from the New Orleans Police Department "after it was charged that Banister, a high-ranking police official, had capriciously drawn his revolver in a public place." Badeaux indicates Banister's dismissal was the first blow in a series of unfortunate incidents which blocked his investigation of organized degeneracy.

SUMMARY OF CHAPTERS

PREFACE

After quoting the Director regarding obscene literature, Badeaux stated that for two years while an employee of the New Orleans Police Department he investigated organized sexual degeneracy. His conclusion was that organized nudism is a menace to the moral structure of America and that nudism has deceived many into forwarding a nefarious aim which is to reduce human beings to the status of beasts. Badeaux remarked, however, that a week after linking the nudist movement to widespread sexual degeneracy he became the target of such abuse and harassment from official sources that he was compelled ultimately to resign from the police department. His evidence was suppressed, newspapers maintained an editorial silence, clergymen pretended not to know what the furor was about, and a huge gambling probe was undertaken to outshine his investigation. He claims that sexual degeneracy was being practiced by some of the nicer element in the seclusion of their nice homes, which is the reason why his investigation became bogged down.

PROLOGUE

This deals with the election of deLesseps S. Morrison as mayor of New Orleans on a clean government campaign, and the fact that actually the city government did nothing to clean up the city. It also attacks Provosty A.

Dayries, who "came to the Department sufficiently bereft of knowledge and qualifications in police work to insure his complete dependence on someone else in making decisions." Dayries is described as a tool for Mayor Morrison.

CHAPTER 1

Badeaux discusses how his investigation got under way in 1956 at the direction of Mr. Guy Banister, then Assistant Superintendent of the New Orleans Police Department. The investigation was to cover sexual degeneracy, sexual misbehavior, sex crimes and pornography in general to determine whether there was any pattern or organization. He stated that just as the investigation began to uncover what they were seeking, Banister was dismissed from the police department.

CHAPTER 2

Badeaux refers briefly to the dismissal of Banister from the police department and states that the police department information office gave out misleading data to the press concerning the charge of the pistol-drawing incident in a public place. He states this misleading data reflected unfavorably on Banister. He states that Banister insisted that he continue his investigation, but that officialdom constantly thwarted his efforts.

CHAPTER 3

In this chapter Badeaux continues the discussion of how his efforts were thwarted by high officials and how he finally presented some of his evidence before a grand jury. He stated that the grand jury went out of office before he could make any complete and substantial case.

CHAPTER 4

Badeaux here deals with his efforts to place an undercover agent in a nudist colony and his final decision to use his brother, Don Badeaux, as this agent, when others of low moral character were too eager to infiltrate the nudist movement. He remarks, however, that his brother was completely taken in by the nudists at the Three Lakes group and did not consider them to be immoral persons.

CHAPTER 5

Badeaux takes up further the fact that his brother is hoodwinked by the nudists and states that while his investigation revealed that one Louis

Stewart was the ringleader in sexual orgies, his brother actually defended Stewart as being an upright individual. Badeaux manages to obtain possession of a large collection of pornography which belonged to Stewart.

CHAPTER 6

This chapter continues with the fact that Badeaux's brother refuses to believe Stewart is an immoral person, and Badeaux's efforts to obtain pornographic material which was in Stewart's possession.

CHAPTER 7

This chapter deals with the philosophy of nudism and its international aspects as well as its efforts to cloak its immorality through a connection with religion.

CHAPTER 8

Badeaux attempts to identify nudism as a subtle facet of Marxian revolutionary tactics. He points out that Christian religion and its concomitant, the sacredness of family life, are repugnant to the communists, and that nudism is the most effective onslaught yet devised against the married state and family life. He points out that nudist propaganda is nearly as effective as communist propaganda.

CHAPTER 9

This chapter deals with how nudists attempt to inject religion into their cult in an effort to make their activities righteous, and further goes into the philosophy of the nudist movement and the beauty and sanctity of the human body.

CHAPTER 10

This pertains to the record of Louis Stewart as an outstanding example of the exaggerated claims of nudists to propriety. Badeaux states that in 1939
, as a young boy, Stewart was convicted of the crime of robbery in Virginia, and sentenced to the penitentiary for 20 years. In 1940 he received a conditional pardon contingent upon his being removed to the Virginia Industrial School for Boys. In October, 1941, he was released from penal custody by a conditional pardon from Virginia's governor. The chapter also contains reproductions of applicationsfrom persons recruited into nudism by Stewart. The remainder of the chapter deals with the bizarre and disgusting activities of some of the nudists invarious sexual orgies.

CHAPTER 11

This chapter pertains to the arrest of Stewart by Badeaux and the revealing of his true immorality to the brother, Don Badeaux, who until this revelation had protected Stewart.

CHAPTER 12

This chapter is a reproduction of some of the evidence which Badeaux obtained and while he states that much of it is too revolting to be reproduced, that which he uses is extermely disgusting, reflecting the letters written back and forth between wife-swappers, showing sexual adherence as well as masochistic orgies. He reproduces some photographs of nudes and seminudes, as well as former applications filled out by persons for entry into the basest kind of sex clubs.

CHAPTER 13

This chapter deals with pornography, which is used by the nudists to stimulate themselves and to induce others to join the movement. This chapter shows they have complete contempt for God, religion, and normal sexual relationships.

CHAPTER 13
(Badeaux has two Chapter 13's, obviously an error)

This chapter deals with some of the disgusting activities of the degenerates, and Badeaux quotes them in their descriptions of some of their experiences. He also reproduces applications for entry into sexual degeneracy rings or clubs.

CHAPTER 15

This chapter contains further correspondence between wife-swappers and their immoral sexual activities.

CHAPTER 16

This deals further with the efforts of the officials to suppress the evidence Badeaux had obtained.

CHAPTER 17

Chapter 17 deals with the fact that some allegedly unscrupulous authorities tried to suppress Badeaux's activities by revealing that his brother was a member of the nudist camp, and takes up an arrest by Badeaux and other officers in Okaloosa County, Florida.

CHAPTER 18

This chapter deals further with Badeaux's alleged troubles with his superiors, who attempted to suppress his information, and the fact that Police Superintendent Dayries became highly incensed because of all of the publicity which went to Badeaux as a result of the breaking up of the sex ring. Badeaux resigned from the Department.

CHAPTER 19

Chapter 19, as set forth before, deals with the fact that Badeaux did receive recognition from some quarters, and reproduces some letters pertaining to his activities. As set forth previously, one of these is a letter from the Director to the Greater Gentilly Civic Council.

CHAPTER 20

Chapter 20 deals further with Badeaux's resignation and the fact that he was called before the grand jury to testify, but he doesn't go into what his testimony involved. Chapter 20 pertains to a write-up of the results of the investigation.

INFORMATION IN BUFILES RE HUBERT J. BADEAUX

Bufiles reflect that as Agent in Charge of the Division of Intelligence Affairs, New Orleans Police Department, Badeaux was in charge of Communist Party investigations in that city. On March 9, 1957, he testified before the Joint Legislative Committee on Segregation, State of Louisiana, and stated he had thousands of documents to back up the charge of the Communist Party's infiltration of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP); that communist leaders stated the Communist Party pledged to resolutely defend the NAACP. He stated the Communist Party was active in Louisiana and there was some activity in Baton Rouge. He testified the communists would infiltrate the Catholic church. He suggested the formation of a statewide "red-hunting group, to supplement the FBI, probably as part of the state police." (62-103863)

The May 7, 1957, edition of the New Orleans, Louisiana, Item, reported that in addressing a meeting held by the Jackson Citizens' Council and the American Legion, Badeaux claimed that the NAACP was one of the first pawns of the communists. (62-101087-21-A) On April 6, 1956, Badeaux testified before the Senate Subcommittee to Investigate the Administration of the Internal Security Act and Other Internal Security Laws of the Committee on the Judiciary Scope of Soviet Activity in the United States at New Orleans, relative to papers and personal affects belonging to Hunter Pitts O'Dell, which were seized by the New Orleans Police Department. (62-88217-1901) On May 6, 1957, Badeaux reportedly appeared before the Jackson (Mississippi) Citizens' Council and discussed tactics of communist subversion. (105-34237-33) On May 10, 1957, Badeaux wrote the Director thanking him for sending him a Uniform Crime Reports bulletin in response to his request of April 13, 1957, and for the Bureau's arranging to send future issues of the report to him. He is not now on the Uniform Crime Reports bulletin mailing list. (33-1-19811)

"REDEDICATION TO FREEDOM"
By Benjamin Ginzburg
CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER

Captioned book reviewed by Central Research Section. It strongly attacks all loyalty-security programs, includes numerous critical references to the Bureau and the Director, and parallels views of Cook's article in "The Nation" in October, 1958. Ginzburg claims that public has now been conditioned to accept continued existence of "antilibertarian institutions" (congressional investigating committees, prosecution of individuals for their political views, and loyalty-security programs). He deplores expansion of loyalty-security programs and claims that rights of communists cannot be abridged without undermining rights of all citizens. Alleges that spurious communist menace was created by Dies Committee in 1930's as part of Dies' efforts to discredit the New Deal. Postwar revelations of communist espionage lent further credence to the myth of the menace of communism. When loyalty program of Truman Administration was promulgated, the communist menace was, in effect, established by law. Ginzburg argues that loyalty-security programs are not effective in keeping spies out of Government, and he calls for their immediate and complete elimination and for a return to the Bill of Rights. Ginzburg born 2-15-98 in Russia and holds degrees from Columbia and Harvard. From 1955 to 1957 employed as research director for Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights. Investigations of Ginzburg by Bureau in 1942, 1951, and 1955 developed information that he is considered a "progressive," a "left winger," and an evolutionary, as opposed to a revolutionary, Marxist. Declared "eligible on loyalty" by Civil Service Commission in 1951. Ginzburg announced as one of contributors to October, 1958, issue of Emergency Civil Liberties Committee (ECLC) publication "Rights" which was to have dealt exclusively with FBI but which was not published.

DETAILS

By memorandum to Mr. Tolson dated March 12, 1959, Inspector DeLoach advised that Irving Ferman had furnished an advance copy of Ginzburg's book and recommended that it be reviewed by the Central Research Section.

The "Antilibertarian Institutions"

Ginzburg's book, published by Simon and Schuster, is an expanded version of an article by him which appeared in the July 6, 1954, issue of "The Reporter" and which was previously reviewed (121-32694-22). Ginzburg concedes that there has been an improvement in civil liberties since the death of Senator Joseph McCarthy. He claims, however, that the American public has been conditioned to accept the continued existence of the "antilibertarian institutions" which have developed in the past 20 years "in the name of fighting the menace of Communism." These are identified as the "public pillorying" of the "holders of unorthodox opinions" by congressional investigating committees, the prosecution of individuals for their political beliefs rather than overt acts, and a "vast network" of loyalty-security programs which "punish" individuals for their "unorthodox ideological sympathies and associations." Since these institutions will not disappear voluntarily, positive action must be taken to "shake them off." (pp. 1-19)

Freedom Is Indivisible

Ginzburg deplores the "expanding universe" of loyalty-security programs which now are applied not only to Federal employees but members of the Armed Forces, employees of private industry working on classified contracts, seamen and longshoremen, and individuals applying for passports and Government pensions. He claims that these programs are directed against not only communists but suspected communists, genuine or suspected former communists, members of present or former organizations in which communists are known or suspected to have been active, and all persons suspected of supporting causes championed by Communist Party, USA, "or any other suspect organization." He argues that, since freedom is indivisible, the rights and liberties of communists cannot be abridged without undermining the rights and liberties of all citizens. (pp. 20-58)

Spurious Menace

Ginzburg claims that a spurious communist menace was created during the 1930's by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, as part of Congressman Dies' efforts to discredit the New Deal. In 1941, a "Dies-inspired" rider was attached to the Department of Justice Appropriation Bill which ordered the FBI to investigate Government employees who were members of subversive groups or who advocated the overthrow of the Government. In complying with this provision, described as "the greatest and most fateful step" in promoting the myth of the communist menace, the Executive Branch included membership in communist front groups as one of the criteria for determining fitness for Government employment. This led to the acceptance of the principle of guilt by association. Ginzburg concedes that those responsible for administrating the loyalty-security programs are sincere in their beliefs regarding the gravity of the communist menace but claims that, after 20 years of "emotional warfare" against communism, it has become impossible for them to make an objective appraisal of this threat. (pp. 59-101)

Spy Scare

Ginzburg then claims that the spurious communist menace was afforded a "powerful impetus" by the revelations of communist espionage activity after World War II. He claims that, since Dies had by then retired from the scene, the views of the FBI and other intelligence agencies prevailed. He charges that the FBI "enthusiastically accepted" the information furnished by Elizabeth Bentley because it provided a "retroactive justification" of the Bureau's previous investigations of subversive activity. At the same time, he alleges, the Bureau admitted (in a letter to the White House dated 2-1-46) that it would be practically impossible to prove her charges. As a result of hearings "inspired and provoked" by the FBI, the House Civil Service Subcommittee established the principle that persons of "questioned loyalty" should be excluded from Government service and that all doubts should be resolved in favor of the Government. When this was followed by the Executive Order of President Truman establishing the loyalty program, the reality of the communist menace was, in effect, established by law. (pp. 102-124)

Loyalty-Security Programs Ineffective

As a result of the Cold War and the fusion of the communist menace with the traditional hatred of spies, the idea of protecting the country from communist espionage has developed to the point where it has become an "absolute value," which takes precedence over all other social interests, many of which are of equal or greater importance. Ginzburg claims that the loyalty program has not only failed to uncover any spies but did not prevent the Government employment of Judith Coplon and Joseph Petersen (who passed classified information to Dutch officials). Claiming that all loyalty-security programs will become inoperative in a period of all-out war because of the delays involved in obtaining clearance, he argues that they are a "luxury" which the Nation can afford only in peacetime. (pp. 125-138)

The book concludes with a brief review of the unfavorable public reaction to the Alien and Sedition Law of 1798 and the Palmer Raids which followed World War II. In the latter connection, the Director is described as the link between the old Bureau of Investigation and the present FBI. These examples are cited in support of the author's call for the American public to overcome its "moral and intellectual lethargy" and take immediate steps to "dismantle all the antilibertarian machinery that we have erected to combat the mythical Communist menace in the United States and go back to the Bill of Rights." (pp. 139-165)

Other Charges

In addition to the above attacks on the Bureau, Ginzburg also charges that:

By tapping telephones, conducting "promiscuous" surveillances, and compiling "dossiers," the FBI has become "a law unto itself." (pp. 42-45)

The Bureau "launched a shameless and illegal lobbying drive" to reverse the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Jencks case. (pp. 49-50)

The FBI, although unable to corroborate the information furnished by Elizabeth Bentley, treated it as a confirmed fact. (p. 52)

The FBI is likely to succumb to the temptation to "fabricate" evidence. (p. 57)

The Director, in spite of the decrease in Party membership, insists that the communist menace is greater than ever and characterizes those who are fighting for civil liberties as "dupes of the Communist conspiracy." (p. 63)

The case against Judith Coplon was dismissed because the FBI had tapped her telephone and had arrested her without a warrant. (p. 103)

The FBI was able to "usurp the function of policy making on loyalty-security," and the Truman loyalty program should have been named the J. Edgar Hoover loyalty program because the Director was "primarily responsible for bringing it about." (p. 106)

The FBI "lobbied" for an expansion of its functions and powers under the loyalty program. (pp. 113-117)

Although Secretary of State Dulles was investigated by the Bureau, "who clears the FBI"? (p. 135)

The Director, in a memorandum to Assistant Attorney General Donovan dated October 18, 1924, admitted that the Department of Justice had no right to investigate the activities of communists after World War I. (p. 160)

Miscellaneous Criticism

Ginzburg is also highly critical of the use of confidential informants; the "abuses" in the trials of Alger Hiss and the Rosenbergs, and the Smith Act and Internal Security Act of 1950. He lauds Cyrus Eaton's criticism of the FBI over a national television network; describes Fred J. Cook as an "experienced and disinterested newspaperman"; and relies heavily on Max Lowenthal's book as the source for his comments on the Palmer Raids.

Observations

Ginzburg's book shows a complete lack of any awareness of the menace of communism. Reinhold Niebuhr, who wrote the introduction, felt it necessary to point out that, in his opinion, "the Communist conspiracy was more dangerous than the author assumes." Ginzburg's complete naivete on this question is best illustrated by his claim that the extensive communist infiltration into practically every aspect of American life during the 1930's actually "served the cause of democracy."

In view of the announcement that Ginzburg would be one of the contributors to the special issue of the ECLC publication "Rights" on the FBI, it is interesting to note that the views expressed in his book, "Rededication to Freedom," closely parallel the underlying theme of the article by Fred J. Cook in the October 18, 1958, issue of "The Nation." (pp. VIII, 82-83)

The Author

Ginzburg was born February 15, 1898, in Russia and resides in Arlington, Virginia. He was graduated from Columbia University in 1919 and received his Ph. D. from Harvard University in 1926. Outside of the periods 1948-1951, when he operated a radio station in Norwalk, Connecticut, and from 1955-1957 when he was research director of the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights, he has been employed in various capacities as a writer. Applicant-type investigations of Ginzburg were conducted in 1942 and 1955 in connection with his Federal employment. He was investigated under the Loyalty Program in 1951 and declared "eligible on loyalty" by the Civil Service Commission. These investigations disclosed that Ginzburg is regarded as a "progressive," a "left winger," and an evolutionary, as opposed to a revolutionary, Marxist but one who is not disloyal to the United States. A summary of the information available on Ginzburg was furnished to the Senate Committee on the Judiciary by letter dated October 6, 1955. In July, 1958, he submitted a statement urging the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations to reject proposed legislation which would authorize the Secretary of State to refuse passports to communists. Ginzburg was listed in the September, 1958, issue of "Rights," official publication of the ECLC as one of the contributors to the October, 1958, issue of that publication which would be devoted exclusively to the FBI. This issue has not been published as yet. (77-14552; 100-419026; 121 32694; 100-384660-450)

SUBJECT: REQUEST BY DIRECTOR FOR REVIEW OF BOOK "FOR THE SKEPTIC," BY LYLE H. MUNSON CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER

Reference is made to the enclosed newspaper clipping from the New York Journal American dated April 24, 1959, concerning a book entitled "For the Skeptic," which is to be published soon. The Director noted: "We should take a look at this book." As the enclosed clipping indicates, the book is to be published May 1, 1959, and will be available through a New York City book firm. The New York office is being instructed to obtain the book immediately on publication and to send it to the Central Research Section for review.

This matter will be closely followed and upon receipt of the book a review of it will be prepared.

'FOR THE SKEPTIC'

Book Pinpoints Red Scheme

Any notion that Communist leaders or their followers in this country sincerely desire peaceful co-existence with the West is blasted in a unique new book, to be published May 1.

Entitled "For the Skeptic," it consists entirely of extracts from records of Congressional committees, assembled in their past probes of now-infamous Red conspiracies in the United States.

Yet the book is as timely as tomorrow in its warning to all Americans.

COMPLETE DOMINATION

While invaluable both as a reference work and as fascinating, real-life cloak-and-dagger reading, its major importance is that the warning message and supporting proof are contained in the same official words.

That damning, inescapable message—made without running outside comment—is that communism always has and always will seek the complete subjugation of every other political system in the world.

Compiler of the extracted committee reports and key testimony is Lyle H. Munson, 41, former Government intelligence agent with both the Office of Strategic Services and the Central Intelligence Agency.

In an introduction to his new, 200-page book, which is subtitled "Selected Reading on Communist Activity in the United States of America," Munson declares the material it contains is the distillation of 100 hearings.

FIRST SUCH BOOK

He says that in the course of reading some 22,000 pages of testimony, he became convinced of the need for a single book containing highlights of the most notorious Red activities previously exposed in this country.

"I was constantly reminded, he adds, "that the FBI is precluded by law from publishing such reports, the Executive Branch generally has refrained from doing so, and the Judiciary has shunned doing so."

Material is presented on little-known or forgotton key points of all the notorious cases, ranging from recruitment for the Abraham Lincoln Brigade in the Spanish Civil War to the recent Hollywood spy ring exposed by double-agent Harris Morros.

The sum total of the testimony, documents and findings cited serves to underscore for today, tomorrow and until communism is wiped out the declaration of Whittaker Chambers before a House subcommittee in 1948.

"Every Communist in the U. S.," he said as quoted in "For the Skeptic," is either an actual or a potential spy or saboteur and a permanent enemy of this system of government."

SUBJECT: Book Reviews
IN EVERY WAR BUT ONE
by Eugene Kinkead
CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER

SYNOPSIS:

Captioned book, reviewed by Central Research Section, discusses tactics used by Chinese communists in handling prisoners of war and is summarization of lengthy Army study on communist indoctrination of U. S. Army prisoners of war in Korea. In chapter entitled "Espionage for the Enemy," Kinkead indicates that some 75 repatriated prisoners of war had been "recruited to act as spies and had returned from prison with definite missions as enemy agents in the United States." Investigation conducted by Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence into this matter has completely debunked this allegation. Army has only one case with adequately substantiated or documented information concerning former prisoners of war who admitted accepting communist espionage missions. FBI mentioned on pages 57, 64, and 81 in a nonderogatory fashion.

Book is Expansion of Article Written in 1957

This book is an expanded version of an article entitled "The Study of Something New in History," written by Eugene Kinkead in The New Yorker for October 26, 1957. It represents a discussion of tactics used by the Chinese communists in handling prisoners of war and is actually a summarization of an intensive, five-year study made by the U.S. Army of the effect of communist indoctrination on those of its men held prisoners during the Korean War. Bureau files reflect no derogatory information regarding Kinkead, an editor of The New Yorker. They do, however, indicate past difficulties with The New Yorker in that it has been somewhat irresponsible and unreliable with regard to references concerning the Director and the FBI. (94-3-4-230-80)

Army Study of Repatriated American Prisoners of War

In Every War But One reflects the analysis of a detailed study by the U.S. Army of almost four thousand case histories of American soldiers taken captive in the Korean conflict who were returned to us. The study began in the Summer of 1950 and ended on July 29, 1955. Its broad aims were to evaluate both the communist treatment of Army prisoners, and the various problems that this treatment raised, including its military, medical, psychiatric, propaganda, and legal effects. In addition, the study noted the possible hazard to national security posed by American soldiers who had undergone prolonged ideological pressure at the hands of the communists and had been since discharged from the service.

Korean War Unique

According to the author, the Korean War was unique in that it was the only war in which the United States has fought that American prisoners of war have posed a grave problem. The survey indicated that (1) during the entire conflict there was not a single successful American escape from a permanent prison camp; (2) twenty-one American prisoners chose to remain in Korea; (3) almost one out of three collaborated in some manner with the enemy; and (4) 38% died in captivity--a higher prisoner death rate than that of any of our previous wars including the Revolution.

Well-Planned Communist Program

As a result of its study, the Army has concluded that the techniques of indoctrination, interrogation, and manipulation of the flow of prisoners' mail, "were part of a well-planned communist program which had three aims. First, the program sought to disseminate propaganda favorable to communism and unfavorable to the West across the world, particularly in the critical areas of Asia and Africa.

Second, it sought to control prisoners with a minimum of difficulty and a minimum use of guards. Third, it sought the outright conversion of American prisoners to communism--or, failing that, at least their acquiescence to the possible rightness of the communist position. The Army believes that this program succeeded in achieving its first two aims. Propaganda was made and was successfully disseminated; prisoners were controlled with a minimum of effort. The Army feels reasonably doubtful about their achievement in the third aim." (In Every War But One, pp. 123, 124)

Some 75 Espionage Agents Recruited by Communists

Kinkead, who assembled the material in this book in an interview pattern, credited Captain Bert Cumby, who was in charge of a special interrogation team in the Army's Far East Command with stating,

> "'In the Far East intelligence section, during reprocessing, we were naturally very much on the lookout for such espionage agents among American returnees. Actually, some seventy-five did turn up on initial and subsequent screening, either in the Orient or on the high seas before getting back to port in the United States. They were well prepared, we found for their assignments. They had codes and fairly explicit instructions as to how to reach and recognize their future contacts--equipment that revealed how substantial was the planning that had gone into this project and how protracted the aims the Communists had in mind for these men. For example, they were instructed to make their initial contact, in most cases, only after six or seven years had passed after their return to the United States.'" (In Every War But One, pp. 77, 78)

According to Cumby,

> "'The enemy had not only re-educated this entire group of captives to come back and spy of their own free will against their country, but this re-education was so successful that it stuck--except in the few cases of those who confessed. Fortunately for us, their confessions implicated the others. We should, I think, be careful neither to overestimate nor to underestimate this. We knew it was a possibility to begin with; and we were completely prepared for the possibility. Provision has been made, of course, for these men to be carefully watched in the future. Actually, the majority probably do not realize that they are known Communist agents.'" (In Every War But One, pp. 78, 79)

Later in the book, Cumby reportedly stated,

> "'Keeping track of known, and also of potential, enemy agents is, of course, a two-fold task... When they remain in the service, it's fairly easy. Once they leave it, the problem increases somewhat. We certainly can't and we don't want to, keep every potentially disloyal civilian returnee under observation for the next ten years. But the whereabouts of some of them have to be known so that they can be watched. It's a matter, of course, that has been considered by the top-level security people in the Army and definite plans have been made on how to deal with the problem.'" (In Every War But One, p. 188)

Army Investigation Into Espionage Allegations

As a result of these allegations of espionage, an investigation was conducted into this matter by Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence (ACSI) and the following information in essence was brought to the attention of the Attorney General on March 13, 1959.

Allegations of espionage on the part of former prisoners of war in Korea by Kinkead were credited by the author to Captain Bert Cumby, an Army officer stationed in West Germany. ACSI, at the request of the Under Secretary of the Army, looked into this matter in detail and prepared a summary of the background of those prisoners who allegedly had a communist mission in the United States. ACSI has completely debunked this allegation since the information came from a source who proved to be unreliable and who was unable to substantiate his allegation in any part. The original source of the information is Preston E. Richie, a former Korean prisoner of war, who had a record of collaborating with the communists while imprisoned. He has now been discharged from the Army and is being considered for investigation by the Bureau. Army interrogations and investigations have also failed to substantiate the allegation.

With the exception of one case, the Army has no substantiated or documented information concerning former prisoners of war who admitted accepting communist espionage missions. There have been instances in which allegations were made that certain repatriated prisoners of war were "suspected" or "believed" to have accepted communist espionage missions, but those allegations were never adequately substantiated.

On February 27, 1959, the Secretary of the Army received a request from the House Committee on Un-American Activities, over the signature of Frances E. Walter, Chairman, for detailed information concerning this allegation that appeared in Kinkead's book. In addition, this allegation was debated on the Dave Garroway show March 16, 1959, by the author Kinkead and Brigadier General S. L. Marshall, Retired, who represents a Detroit newspaper. 64	"A summary of the file on each of the men who had been discharged was sent to the office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the area in which the man lived, for the simple reason that all prisoners had been exposed to Communist propaganda. Two hundred and ten of the dischargees' summaries contained material that, in the opinion of the Army, might give the F.B.I. reason to investigate those particular men more thoroughly as possible security risks, or might cause the Department of Justice to examine the cases for possible criminal action against the men as civilians...."
64	"...Two hundred and fifteen cases (as compared to the 210 referred to the F.B.I.) were selected as deserving further study..."
81	"One of them, Cumby told me, was the most scurrilous he has ever seen. It came from the vice-president of an oil company who stated in unprintable language that he was going to see that the Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted an inquiry into the motives of every officer who took part in the trial on the government side, including the court members...."

Facts

The Army furnished us in excess of 300 counterintelligence files on returned prisoners of war whom the Army classified as security risks. We, in turn, reviewed these files to determine if we should open security investigations and also whether the cases should be referred to the Department for an opinion as to whether treason investigations were desired. Our standards for instituting security investigations of such returned prisoners of war were outlined in SAC Letter 53-15 and in practically every instance a security investigation was conducted. Also, in practically every instance the Department declined to authorize the institution of a treason investigation. A full treason investigation was conducted on each of the 21 prisoners of war who elected to remain in Korea. (100-400646)

The Batchelor case was handled entirely by the Army. Nothing can be identified with the unknown vice president of an oil company.

Books of The Times

By ORVILLE PRESCOTT

IN Western Germany, where business and industry prosper and politicians plan for when the grand old Chancellor retires, numerous citizens brood about a divided Germany and about Germany's probable role as the number one target for nuclear bombardment, if and when the sword of Damocles under which we all live falls. Among them no one, surely, broods more furiously than Hans Hellmut Kirst, author of "The Seventh Day,"* a powerful propaganda novel that eloquently champions a neutralist philosophy and pleads for peace.

Hans Hellmut Kirst

It is not necessary to agree with Mr. Kirst's fundamental position to feel terrified by his book. As long as men of might threaten each other while juggling H-bombs, books like these are certain to terrify. The special quality of Mr. Kirst's book is that, although it is not distinguished as fiction, it is sardonically amusing as well as appalling.

Hans Hellmut Kirst, who served for twelve years as a professional soldier in the German Army, is one of the ablest and most popular novelists in post-war Germany. His best-known work is a trilogy about the adventures of a humorously cynical soldier called Gunner Asch, in which German militarism is mercilessly ridiculed. That series was so popular in Germany that some people believe it contributed greatly to a general lack of enthusiasm for the Federal Republic's new army.

If "The Seventh Day" should be as popular, many Germans may feel that all is lost indeed, that some inept and well-meaning idiot is certain to start the first pebble rolling that will bring with it an avalanche of atomic bombs.

A Curious Chronicle

This is a curious novel written in a curious form. At least half of it consists of transcripts of radio broadcasts, public speeches, military reports and minutes of cabinet and NATO meetings that chronicle six days of multiplying disaster—from a rising in Poland and fighting between the forces of the two Germanies to Soviet intervention and general atomic war. By the seventh day no one is left alive, at least in Central Europe, to listen to communiqués.

The other half concerns the destinies of more than a dozen strategically located characters. These colorful and neatly silhouetted people move by so rapidly that following their affairs is somewhat breath-taking. Mr. Kirst hasn't tried to characterize them in depth, but he has certainly made them representative of many walks of life and has involved them in a huge variety of pitiful and dreadful circumstances.

"The Seventh Day" combines the bitter anger of a prophet denouncing the sins and follies of Nineveh and Babylon with the despairing pessimism of utter hopelessness. Nothing can be done, Mr. Kirst seems to say. Men of goodwill are helpless. The momentum of the cold war is too great. Statesmen, governments and peoples are too committed to prepared positions. Any small incident can launch a train of events that will destroy us all.

Dashes of Cheer Added

Such resigned gloom does not make for exactly cheerful reading. Nevertheless a certain amount of cheerfulness keeps breaking into "The Seventh Day." Mr. Kirst is fond of many of his characters. He writes about them with humor as well as with pity. And in his quotations from the jargon of government officialdom, he writes with just enough parody to be satirically entertaining while at the same time always sounding authentic. Nevertheless, expert as his statements by broadcasters, generals and politicians may be, they do grow tiresome. There are too many of them.

"The Seventh Day" in its general account of the outbreak and spread of the third world war is coldly realistic and thoroughly believable. That it should be believable is perhaps its most terrible comment on our unhappy age. But "The Seventh Day" is not just a book of general warning; it is a peculiarly German book. Mr. Kirst is parcicularly distressed by the mere existence of two German states, and the very idea of their rival existence seems more outrageous to him than it may to American readers. And he suggests more than once that the Federal Republic of Western Germany is almost as completely dominated by the United States as is East Germany by the Soviet Union.

This idea, of course, seems preposterous from our side of the Atlantic Ocean. If neither German government truly represents the German people, Mr. Kirst suggests, a third government uncontaminated by foreign influence might be able to do so. But with the grim realism that controls his entire book, he does not allow his advocates of a third all-German government to accomplish anything. They, too, are helpless in the track of the avalanche.

The other novels about the third world war that I have read seemed to me like rather dreadful science fiction. "The Seventh Day" may not be notable as fiction, but most of it is so convincing that it doesn't seem like fiction at all.

Memorandum to you of April 27, 1959, advised book had been ordered through New York Office. Book has been received and is reviewed herein.

Book placed in Bureau Library. DMB.

SYNOPSIS:

Book is compilation of extracts of testimony, chiefly concerning Soviet espionage in the United States given by witnesses before Senate and House committees investigating subversion. Editor Munson, anticommunist. References to Director and FBI give over-all favorable impression seen as antidote to smear campaign. Book should reawaken Americans to menace of communism at home and to fraud inherent in Soviet Union's phrase "peaceful co-existence." Serious weakness precluding recommendation of book is inclusion of testimony of Larry E. Harley, discredited former FBI Agent.

DETAILS:

Extracts of Testimony

For the Skeptic is a compilation of extracts of testimony given by numerous witnesses before the House and Senate committees investigating subversion. Testimony included touches upon the major espionage cases from the Amerasia case to the Rosenberg case. In 188 pages the editor has distilled much of the most disquieting testimony ever given on Soviet espionage activity and targets in the United States, and the assistance given to espionage by the American communists.

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont
Re: "For the Skeptic"
Edited by Lyle H. Munson, Book Review

References to the Director and the FBI

The Director was referred to in connection with the Amerasia case. Munson presented excerpts of testimony which stressed the FBI's diligent efforts in this case and the odds against which the Bureau was forced to proceed. A portion of the late Secretary of Defense Forrestal's personal papers under date of May 28, 1945, were quoted including the comments of his then advisor Major Correa. Correa "said that the FBI thought that unless speedy action were taken important evidence would be dissipated, lost or destroyed." Forrestal's remarks continued: "I asked Captain Vardaman to see to it that the President was informed in this matter and then I called Mr. Edgar Hoover (sic) and suggested that he advise Mr. Tom Clark and have him also see that the President is in full information of all the facts in the matter as well as their implications." (page 33)

There were numerous references to the FBI in this book. These selections were such as to create an over-all favorable impression of this Bureau.

The book is seen to be timely with reference to the smear campaign. One of the most persistent and malicious lies of the smear campaigners is the charge that the FBI deliberately manufactured the menace of subversion in this country. The excerpts in this book, on the other hand, give convincing reality to the communist menace.

The FBI is given due credit in such passages as that appearing in connection with the Rosenberg case where it is noted: "On February 3, 1950, on the basis of information furnished by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, British authorities arrested Dr. Emil Julius Klaus Fuchs..." The total impression created by this book is that of a timely antidote for the poison of the current smear campaign.

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont
Re: "For the Skeptic"
Edited by Lyle H. Munson, Book Review

A Serious Weakness: Inclusion of Testimony by Lawrence Kerley

This book is seen to possess this significant weakness: pages 35 to 60 are devoted to excerpts of the testimony of discredited former Special Agent Larry Ernest Kerley. The testimony in question was given by Kerley before the Subcommittee on Immigration and Naturalization of the Committee on the Judiciary, United States Senate, on a bill to amend the immigration act of October 16, 1918, and related to his appearances before this body on September 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, 15, 28, 29, 1949.

You will recall the difficulties that the Bureau has had with Kerley. Unable to adjust to the work of an Agent, Kerley resigned on October 1, 1945, at which time he received an adjective rating of only "Fair." Kerley violated his oath of office signed September 17, 1941 to protect the confidential character of information learned by him during his Bureau employment by disclosing and furnishing after he resigned data concerning four Russian espionage cases to Howard Rushmore, a reporter for the New York Journal-American, who published same. After resigning, Kerley retained possession of copies of Bureau bulletins, investigative reports, and Bureau notes. Other disclosures he made after his resignation concerning Bureau investigative techniques impaired the Bureau's investigative work. After a long delay by the Department in considering Kerley's prosecution, same was ultimately declined, with the result, it might be added, that Kerley has continued to plague the Bureau with his allegations (e.g. to George Sokolsky in 1956) that the Bureau has persecuted him.

The most recent reference to Kerley in his Personnel File is a letter to Mr. Kimball Johnson, Chief, Investigations Division, U.S. Civil Service Commission dated September 24, 1957, concerning Charles Gurchot, U.S. Civil Service Commission, in which it was necessary to correct an impression given by Kerley in his testimony of September 15, 1949, before the Subcommittee, Senate Judiciary Committee. The testimony in question, which appears on pages 51 and 52 of the book, For the Skeptic, stated that Gurchot was a contact of Soviet Vice Consul Gregori Kheifets and was turned over to Gregori Kheifets, who succeeded Kheifets in May, 1944. It is apparent from the testimony that Kerley had been an FBI employee and the inference might be drawn that his information was derived from his service with the Bureau. It was necessary to advise the Civil Service Commission in our letter of September 26, 1957, that our files disclosed no information that Gurchot was turned over to Kasparov by Kheifets and no information that Gurchot was in contact with Kasparov. It is highly unfortunate that this book is now published with this erroneous information repeated on its pages. (67-106599)

CONCLUSIONS:

For the Skeptic sounds a timely warning to Americans to keep alert to the living danger of communism in this country and to the deadly fraud being practiced by the Soviet Union in using the propaganda phrase "peaceful co-existence." Favorable references to the FBI scattered throughout the testimony promise considerable potential in countering the smear campaign.

It is extremely unfortunate, however, that Kerley's testimony is included. In the reviewer's opinion, this fact precludes recommending this book.

SUBJECT: BOOK REVIEWS
CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER
62-46855 Form 5-103

The "Memorandum To All Bureau Officials and Supervisors" dated January 21, 1959, initiated a book review control by the Publications Desk, Central Research Section. This program is being closely followed to make it as efficient as possible. Current experience indicates that the mechanics involved in referring information regarding potential books for review to the various sections or divisions at the Seat of Government can be streamlined through the implementation of a form. The enclosed form is recommended as an effective means for expediting and cutting down on dictation and paper work of this kind.

In this connection, Central Research Section will continue to recommend for review books critical of the Director or the Bureau which have not been reviewed or considered for review. Books relating to communism generally, Bureau investigations, crime, law enforcement, and the like, which may be of interest to a particular section or division, will continue to be referred to the interested sections or divisions to determine whether the particular book should be obtained and reviewed.

In a little over three months, a total of twenty-six books have been routed through the Bureau for consideration as to review. These books have covered categories including the Mafia, segregation, Central Intelligence Agency and national security, proposed legal advisors for indigent defendants, prisoners of war, international communism, civil rights, corruption in city government, juvenile delinquency, sabotage, guilt by association, criminal law enforcement, and Federal committees.

RECOMMENDATION:

That the enclosed, suggested form be submitted to the Forms Desk, Training and Inspection Division, for approval.

SUBJECT: EVALUATION OF BOOK REVIEW CONTROL DESK
CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER

BOOK REVIEWS W.C.S.

SYNOPSIS:

The Book Review Control Desk was established in the Central Research Section in January, 1959, as a focal point of information on matters pertaining to book reviews to be conducted at the Seat of Government (SOG). Through the establishment of this desk, it is now possible to immediately determine the status of any book review which either has been done or is being done at the Bureau as well as books which have not as yet been reviewed. The main function of this desk is to keep aware of newly published books and to route the information to the appropriate section or division at the SOG for determination as to whether a book review is warranted. In the past six months twenty books have been reviewed at the SOG. The Book Review Control Desk maintains tickler copies of these reviews for sixty days and maintains a card index concerning the books for a period of one year. Since the desk was established, it has received and resolved approximately forty inquiries concerning book reviews. The work procedure has been streamlined to eliminate unnecessary paper work, and the desk was established to function without any increase in personnel. Thus, the cost to the Bureau has been insignificant while the value of the desk as a focal point of evaluation and control has been proven by the number of inquiries it has resolved. No present changes are contemplated in the operation of the desk.

RECOMMENDATION:

That the Book Review Control Desk continue to operate as a function of the Central Research Section in its presently established form.

60 AUG 6 1959

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: EVALUATION OF BOOK REVIEW CONTROL DESK

DETAILS:

Purpose:

The purpose of this memorandum is to evaluate the functions of the Book Review Control Desk in the Central Research Section.

Origin:

In December, 1958, Inspector John F. Malone recommended that a central control and repository for book reviews at the SOG be created by placing such responsibility with the already established Publications Desk in the Central Research Section. Inspector Malone's recommendation was approved and the Book Review Control Desk was established in January, 1959. (100-352546-1755)

Responsibility:

The new desk was to have responsibility for (1) recommendations, in general, and evaluation of requests concerning what book should be purchased and reviewed at the SOG and which division or section should prepare the reviews; and (2) maintenance of a properly indexed record of the pending and completed reviews, assignments, and an approximate period of time.

On January 21, 1959, a memorandum to all Bureau officials and supervisors was distributed advising of the establishment of the desk, its purpose, and its proposed method of functioning.

Control:

(1) A main control file (62-46855) on the subject "Book Reviews" was opened in accordance with approval of a recommendation made in a memorandum from Mr. Sullivan to Mr. Belmont dated January 28, 1959. The original or a copy of all memoranda on book reviews is routed to this file.

(2) A card index of all books ordered for review or assigned for review was created and is currently maintained by the Book Review Control Desk. The card maintained on each book includes the author; title; identity of the official, section, and division recommending purchase and review of the book; identity of the section and division to which the review was assigned; and the date the review was completed.

(3) In the memorandum to all Bureau officials and supervisors on January 21, 1959, instructions were set forth that a tickler copy of all book reviews should be designated for the Publications Desk to assist in the proper maintenance of an index system on book reviews. Once each month the main control file on book reviews is checked to assure that everyone preparing book reviews is complying with these instructions.

Policy of Reviews:

The Book Review Control Desk recommends for review books critical of the Director or the Bureau; books relating to communism generally; books concerning Bureau investigations, crime, law enforcement, and the like. Other books are reviewed upon the specific request of the Director or other Bureau officials. When the subject matter is general, the Central Research Section does the review. Where the subject matter indicates that a specific section or division would be interested because of related work interest, the book is routed for a decision as to whether a review should be done as well as for assignment of the review. The person responsible for the functioning of the Book Review Control Desk reviews daily publications and other periodicals to be alert for newly published books so that they may be brought to the attention of the appropriate section or division.

Streamlining Procedure Adopted:

The routing of books for review or for recommendation as to assignment for review to another section or division by the Book Review Control Desk initially involved dictation and paper work which it has been possible to simplify. A form was devised and approved through which the dictation and paper work have been eliminated during the course of routing books or information concerning books to other sections or divisions by the Book Review Control Desk.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: EVALUATION OF BOOK REVIEW CONTROL DESK

Over-all Value:

The over-all value of the function of the Book Review Control Desk stems from its role as a focal point of information concerning book reviews at the SOG. Whereas formerly there was duplication of effort, such as in two reviews being conducted by different section at the SOG, and there was often time wasted through the efforts required to ascertain whether anyone else at the SOG was doing or had done a review that was contemplated, today it is immediately possible to: (1) determine if anyone already has done or is doing a review of a specific book; (2) obtain a copy of a review recently done; and (3) avoid duplication of reviews by various sections.

The value of the desk in this regard is shown by the fact that in six months approximately forty inquiries have been made of the desk by other sections or divisions at the SOG to resolve questions concerning book reviews.

Reviews Conducted:

In the 6-month period of its operation, the Book Review Control Desk has considered for review approximately 51 books which from one source or another came to the attention of the Bureau. Of these, 20 have been reviewed either by the Central Research Section or other sections to which routed. Seventeen were determined not worth reviewing and the remaining fourteen were routed to other sections for a decision as to whether a review was warranted and were rejected on the basis of the decision of other sections.

The reviews which were done are broken down as follows:

Domestic Intelligence Division - 10
(Central Research Section - 8 Internal Security Section - 2)

Investigative Division - 4

Crime Records Division - 6

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: EVALUATION OF BOOK REVIEW CONTROL DESK

Cost of Operation:

The establishment of the Book Review Control Desk has not added any significant cost to the Bureau's budget. The work was absorbed by combining the new function with that of the previously existing Publications Desk without any increase in personnel. The streamlining procedure used to facilitate routing eliminates the paper work of the new function, and the over-all value of the desk as a focal point of information has been established through the number of inquiries resolved by the desk.

Contemplated Action:

The process of maintaining tickler copies of reviews for review index cards for reference raised the question of the desirable length of time to maintain such records. Based on practical experience, it appears most advisable to maintain the tickler copies of reviews in accordance with standard Bureau instructions; that is, for a period of sixty days. Thereafter, inquiries concerning the reviews can be resolved either from the review index cards maintained or through the main control file. The review index cards have proven invaluable for reference purposes, and it appears most desirable to maintain them for one year in view of the numerous inquiries which can be resolved through them and without reference to files.

Future Action:

The Central Research Section will continue to closely evaluate the work of the Book Review Control Desk to be alert for further streamlining procedures which may be introduced in connection with the function of this desk. At present, it appears no changes are necessary as the desk is functioning smoothly. In six months another status report on the operation of the desk will be submitted.

Dear Mr. Shaw:

The book "The Age of Treason" by Dr. R. Swinburne Clymer, was received June 22, 1959. I appreciate your thoughtfulness in sending it.

Sincerely yours,

NOTE: We have had prior cordial correspondence with Shaw who has shown a great deal of interest in the Director's speeches and articles by reprinting some of them. This book deals with numerous controversial subjects and the letter is purposely perfunctory in the event Shaw may be desirious of obtaining the Director's endorsement of it.

CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER

Reader's Digest

Synopsis

Eugene Lyons, Senior Editor of Reader's Digest gave speech on Soviet blueprint for world domination before Executives' Club of Chicago, May 8, 1959. Stated that the Free World has refused to understand the nature of communism and the American business community is particularly lax in this respect. Communists inflexibly committed to permanent revolution and to goal of world-wide communist society. Agreements entered into by Kremlin, even if kept, are not binding upon rest of communist apparatus throughout world. Soviet leaders are afraid of an all-out war with the Western powers but do not desire all-out peace. Delusion that we have been at peace is carefully nurtured by communists in order to reduce our vigilance. Communists use technique of compelling Western world to center all its attention on the crisis of the hour, such as Berlin today, thus diverting its mind from the larger pattern. While Free World must keep its military strength at peak, it must also use economic, political, and psychological methods to meet the communist challenge. RE: "SEEING THROUGH THE RED"
SPEECH BY EUGENE LYONS
REVIEW

LYONS SPEAKS ON SOVIET PLAN FOR WORLD CONQUEST

On May 8, 1959, Eugene Lyons, Senior Editor of the Reader's Digest, gave a talk concerning the Soviet formula for world domination before The Executives' Club of Chicago, Illinois. This speech was made available to the Bureau by SAC R. D. Auerbach through the medium of the Executives' Club News, dated May 15, 1959, a copy of which is enclosed. The Executives' Club of Chicago is a group of over three thousand businessmen who frequently sponsor prominent speakers at luncheon meetings of the club. Among those who have appeared as guest speakers at the forums are Harry S. Truman, former President of the United States; Stuart Symington, U. S. Senator from Missouri; James P. Mitchell, Secretary of Labor; Harold R. Medina, Judge, U. S. Court of Appeals; and Dr. Konrad Adenauer, West German Chancellor. (94-1-12563-29)

The Director and the FBI are not mentioned in Lyons' speech.

FREE WORLD REFUSES TO UNDERSTAND NATURE OF COMMUNISM

Lyons emphasized that the great majority of the free peoples of the world have refused to understand the real nature of the communist challenge, and the American business community has been particularly vulnerable on this score. In this connection, he pointed to financier Cyrus Eaton as one of the foremost preachers of appeasement of communism today. Lyons referred to the pressure applied by financial and business interests for diplomatic recognition of Soviet Russia in the thirties, the aid of thousands of foreign technicians (many of them Americans) for Stalin's first five-year plan, and the cordial reception universally given by American businessmen to Anastas Mikoyan, Soviet Deputy Premier, on his recent visit to the United States.

KREMLIN PLAYS DUAL ROLE

In speaking of negotiations with the Soviets, Lyons said that for the communists, negotiation is not and never can be a road to genuine accommodation--that they are inflexibly committed to permanent revolution with one communist world as its goal. The Kremlin plays a dual role--that of heading a conventional government, and at the same time as the spearhead of a world revolutionary movement. Agreements entered into by Moscow in its role as a government, even if they were kept, are not binding upon its world-wide apparatus of communist parties, fellow travelers, and para-military formations. Lyons believes that the Western Governments must stand firm in the present talks over the Berlin crisis and give absolutely no concessions to the Soviets, or the independence of West Berlin will be "chiseled away."

SOVIETS AFRAID OF ALL-OUT WAR

According to Lyons, the Soviet leaders are ruthless but are not suicidal maniacs and actually fear a real war even more than the Western powers. They have to reckon with the possibility of rebellion in the satellites and they can not count the allegiance of their own subjects as a certainty especially if the conflict took an unfavorable turn. He decried the assumption by three-week tourists to Russia that the Russian people are fervently behind the regime and stated that the Iron Curtain isn't there to keep us out but to keep the Russians in. After 42 years of absolute power, the Soviet dictatorship still doesn't risk the slightest freedom of speech and press and must continue to seal its frontiers against outside news and ideas by jamming and censorship and medieval punishments.

PEACE PROPOSALS A MANEUVER BY SOVIETS

While the Kremlin does not desire to unleash an all-out war, neither does it want all-out peace. The ultimate objectives of world communism call for class struggle, civil wars where they can be fomented, constant world tension and chaos. Lyons says that the delusion that we have been, and are now, at peace, is carefully nurtured by the communists in order to reduce our vigilance and disarm us psychologically. He describes this maneuver as a "species of revolutionary jiu-jitsu that enabled the communist world, even when it was small and weak, to throw the vastly larger and stronger non-Soviet world."

DEADLY TECHNIQUE

One of the most deadly of communist techniques has been to compel the Western powers to center all their attention on the crisis of the hour, diverting their minds from the larger pattern. Today, it is Berlin, but there is also communist infiltration into the Middle East, the Red Chinese build-up against Formosa, and systematic communist penetration into all the newly independent and politically immature African countries, in India and Indonesia, and in places as far apart as the Southern Pacific and the Caribbean area.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
RE: "SEEING THROUGH THE RED"
SPEECH BY EUGENE LYONS
REVIEW

FREE WORLD'S GOAL

Lyons asserts that while it is only common sense to maintain our military vitality at peak strength that is not enough to win the battle against the communists. Communism scored its greatest triumphs in the years when the Free World held overwhelming military superiority. Its advantage lies on other levels--in its superior grasp of the total historic pictures, its zeal and consistency, and its unswerving drive to a definite goal. The Free World's goal should be just as definite, as clearly formulated, as openly proclaimed--"namely to roll back and defeat communism, liberating the victims and freeing the rest of mankind from the incubus of the Red nightmare." We must use economic, political, and psychological methods to meet the communist challenge. Lyons concludes by saying,

> "We can intensify the tides of mutiny in the Red slave-states. We can exploit every Soviet vulnerability, expose communist crimes and cruelties, puncture communist lies and indict communist imperialism. We can mobilize the forces of morality and decency on both sides of the Iron and Bamboo Curtains and turn man's inherent hunger for freedom and individual dignity into weapons for liberation." (Executives' Club News, May 22, 1959, p. 8) of fundamental policies, to the articulation of shared interests, and to the investigation of the conditions for securing such policies and interests. The task, in its preliminary aspects, is one of stock-taking, of ascertaining and assessing with as much explicitness and specificity as possible, by utilizing all the insights and operational techniques offered by the contemporary social sciences, the policies actually sought and effectively applied by different decision-makers in their external interactions. From such stock-taking might emerge a map, as it were, of the configurations of public order that in fact presently obtain on a transnational scale. In its fullness, the task involved has been aptly described:

> (1) to develop a jurisprudence, a comprehensive theory and appropriate methods of inquiry, which will assist the peoples of the world to distinguish public orders based on human dignity and public orders based either on a law which denies human dignity or a denial of law itself for the simple supremacy of naked force; and (2) to invent and recommend the authority structures and functions (principles and procedures) necessary to a world public order that harmonizes with the growing aspirations of the overwhelming numbers of the peoples of the globe and is in accord with the proclaimed values of human dignity enunciated by the moral leaders of mankind.[18]

This is the more precise statement of the challenging opportunity thrust upon scholars of international law. It is hoped that with or without further harassment, Mr. Jenks may turn his very considerable powers to the fuller exploitation of this opportunity.

MASTERS OF DECEIT. By J. Edgar Hoover. New York: Henry Holt & Co., 1958. Pp. 374. $5.00.

WORKS such as the collage, African primitivist statuary, the canvasses of Jackson Pollack, and the finger painting of talented monkeys have revived debate recently over the classic problem of æsthetics—what is Art? Philosophers have noted that there are at least three analytical perspectives from which one can approach this question—the intention of the artist, the intrinsic merits of the work, and the subjective reaction of the viewer—and that one's judgment about a controversial work usually will depend upon one's vantage point. Although this seems a singularly inapposite opening for a review of J. Edgar Hoover's best-selling volume on communism, I find these exceedingly helpful terms in which to consider Masters of Deceit.

Hoover deals with five topics. He describes the personalities and doctrines of international communism from the days of Marx and Engels to the present, a description which includes a sketch of early American communists. He discusses communism's appeal to certain Americans and why most of these people have broken with the theory or the party. The contemporary American Communist Party is portrayed in its "open" activities and, in a separate section, in its underground operations. Finally, Hoover offers a refutation of the "false religion" of communism and presents a brief program for insuring that Americans "stay free."

The Author's Intention

Why, in 1958, did Hoover choose to write this book, and at its specific level? In his foreword, the author tells us that, since 1919 (when he made his initial "extensive and penetrating study" of the communist movement), he has been a close observer of communist ideas and activities. Now, he felt, it was vital to give the American public, without "sensationalism," the "basic, everyday facts of communism," presented "in almost primer form." Since Hoover describes Communist Party literature in the United States as "written in a simple style and slanted to the average reader," Masters of Deceit may be taken as an attempt to fight fire with fire.

His intention explains a good deal about the tone and flow of the volume. For example, the narrative of "day-to-day" life in the American Communist Party features passages such as the following:

> Eleanor is washing the dishes. Her husband, Henry, has just gone to work. The two children are scurrying around the house, ready to leave for school.
>
> Suddenly, there is a knock at the door. It is Ruth, who lives across the street. Ruth is chairman of the East Side Communist Club. Her husband, Robert, is state secretary of the Communist Party and a full-time paid functionary.
>
> "Starting the day out just right," smiles Ruth. "The kitchen is all cleaned up. You can come and help us."[1]

Portraits of the personalities who shaped the communist tradition are in the same genre. Here, for example, is Hoover on Marx:

> He was an intelligent child, but temperamental. At school his marks were superior, and his capacity for work, a trait that was to continue all through his life, tremendous. But he did not make friends easily, perhaps because of self-pride. He made arrogant remarks and wrote satirical verse. He was a "smart" young man, but already vain, bitter, and rebellious.
> Strangely, his heart held an inner love for a home-town girl, Jenny von Westphalen. . . . She was beautiful, charming, and of a socially high rank, much higher than that of the Marx family. She, too, was desperately in love, but she feared to tell her parents. What would they think—the daughter of Privy Councillor Ludwig von Westphalen marrying Karl Marx?[2]

1. P. 147.
2. P. 14.

Those who might wonder whether Marxist-Leninist theory lends itself to "primer" form will find this author equal to the challenge. Marx, he explains, "joined two very old ideas:"

> (1) That everything in the universe, whether a blade of grass, a human being, or society itself, is constantly changing and at the same time is in conflict. This is called dialectics. (2) That God doesn't exist and the world is composed of "living" matter. Hence, man is walking dust, without spark or image of his divine Creator. This idea is called materialism; hence, dialectical materialism.[3]

Whether Hoover struggled through draft after draft to produce these simple sentences, filled with simple thoughts for simple people, or whether they tripped effortlessly from his pen, we cannot know. We do know that he eschewed the services of a polished ghost writer; that he set himself to write a primer and that no literary critic is likely to question this self-description. Sophisticates who no longer find McGuffey's sentence structure as challenging as they did in earlier years will not derive æsthetic satisfaction from these pages. They, however, do not compose the audience for which the author has written his book.

The Work's Intrinsic Merits

When primers are written about politics, however, literary quality is only one issue involved. More fundamental is the question whether the popularization has escaped the dangers of oversimplification. The author has not been altogether successful in this regard. For example, he outlines the theories of Marx and Engels but does not explain why these doctrines held so much appeal for the European radical through whom they entered the Western intellectual tradition. Hoover seems to imply that the emergence of communism was the result of a conspiracy. When he describes the coming of the Soviet Revolution, his focus is upon the small band of men who seized power in a mammoth state. Conspiracy is stressed to the exclusion of historical ripeness, war exhaustion, the ineffectiveness of the Kerensky government, and the like. In describing events after 1919, he makes no mention of conflicts or modifications between the doctrines of Lenin and those of Marx, or between Stalin and Marx, or of socialists and Stalinists. It is as though Marxism were a single intellectual stream, without deviation or internal disagreement among those who embrace it.

Where these simplifications can lead is shown in several of Hoover's comments about current matters. Because he does not consider the nature of the revolutionary situation, he can make much of the point that at times the American Communist Party has had as many members as there were Bolsheviks when they seized power. And there is a table showing how few Communist Party members there were in relation to the total population of such countries as Albania and Hungary when they came under communist sway.

3. P. 18.

At least some readers will wonder whether this presentation adequately distinguishes between, on the one hand, the capacity of communist parties to seize power when social disintegration has occurred or when Soviet troops are present and, on the other, the capacities of the communists when national populations are alert to communist tactics and the social systems are basically healthy. Obviously, the existence of one situation rather than the other has significant implications for the choice of communist control policies in a democratic society. Again, Hoover gives the impression that the advances of communism in the past decades have resulted solely from the spread of a cancerous doctrine. Some readers will feel that an adequate treatment would have to apportion responsibility among Russian expansion, the example of Soviet industrial and military progress (however brutally achieved), the appeal of the Soviet egalitarian myth among nonwhite peoples, the failings and frequent missteps of opposition among Western powers, and similar factors with which communist doctrine has interacted. In short, Hoover's doctrinal discussion prepares readers more for debate along the Potomac than for the ideological clash which is actually raging beyond our shoreline.

Since Hoover has access to what probably are the best archives in the non-Soviet world on the American Communist Party, as it exists above and below ground, many readers will look to these sections as the most promising in any book authored by the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. And certain discussions of these topics—for example, Hoover's account of how a typical "Committee to Save John Doe" is manipulated by communist activists, and of how an opportunistic labor leader in the Midwest is brought into collaboration with the Party—are quite interesting. At one point, in telling about persons who are "concealed communists" passing themselves off as liberals, Hoover describes (but does not name) several persons whose identity will be immediately apparent to anyone familiar with the causes célèbres of recent years—for instance, "the editor-in-chief of a conservative book-publishing house,"[4] and "the program director of a television station in a large Southern city."[5] Assuming, as I do, that Hoover's information is accurate, this unequivocal identification is an intriguing footnote to those episodes.

Yet, even in these pages, the unidimensional quality of the accounts and the arguable assumptions which Hoover drops will doubtless invite dissent. For example, he quotes the estimates "of communist leaders themselves" that for every Communist Party member in the United States, "ten others are ready, willing, and able to do the Party's work."[6] This assertion, which Hoover has quoted often at FBI appropriation hearings before Congress in the past decade, raises two substantial issues. First of all, its numerical basis was nothing but myth in 1958 when Hoover chose to give the figures new currency in this book. Whatever may have been the fact when Earl Browder made the obviously self-serving ten-for-one boast, such "popular front" days have disappeared

5. P. 88.
6. P. 5.

since, at the very latest, the Korean War period, and probably since 1948. That Hoover did not see the need to discard or revise this estimate is disquieting. Second, Hoover's assumption accepts the communist definition of allies, a remarkably unsafe technique and one which ignores the meaning of such alliances on the American scene. In point of fact, fellow travelers have shown a steady disposition to treat the communists like disease carriers whenever world events disclose the true nature of communism—during the Soviet purge trials, the Nazi-Soviet Pact, the rape of Czechoslovakia, the Korean aggression, the Hungarian repression, and the like. At each point, and at every moment of deep crisis in United States-Soviet relations, the temporary nature of the American fellow traveler's adhesion to communism has been demonstrated, as with Henry Wallace's full repudiation of the communists in 1950 over Korea. Of course, popular-front movements serve to widen communist influence and to muddy the lines between liberalism, progressivism, and communism. But it is a mistake to talk as though ten or seven or even two fellow travelers per party member are simply glass-eyed zombies, under complete control on all issues and at all times, as Hoover implies. This picture simply tortures reality and even conflicts with Hoover's own description of how frequently people break from the "communist spell."

Viewed according to its intrinsic merits, then, Masters of Deceit is a study in equilibrium. For each issue that is simplified by Hoover's approach, a corresponding issue is raised by the simplification and left unanswered. Since any work which stirs the high school student and the adult primer-reader to thought about politics is a useful contribution, Hoover's text is welcome. To the extent that it is treated as Truth rather than Opinion, however, or that Hoover's special expertise in dealing with national security matters as a law-enforcement officer is taken to equip him for political analysis, Masters of Deceit is a misleading volume. Certainly, in comparison with another recent "primer" on the communist problem, Harry and Bonaro Overstreet's What We Must Know About Communism,[7] Hoover's book must be rated as distinctly inferior in quality.

The Subjective Reaction of the Reader

This viewer has already provided decidedly subjective reactions, of course, but there is still another judgment about this book which should be offered as a personal response. The volume tells us much about the author himself, a matter of importance in light of his national responsibility. Masters of Deceit is the first of Hoover's books to deal with a subject other than criminal detection. Its pages provide an important contrast with the picture of the FBI director that tends to emerge from his statements at appropriation time or from his testimony before congressional committees on matters relating to communist-control legislation. In those moments, Hoover emerges as a man of the political right, or, at the least, as a "tough-on-communism" figure whose efforts are directed at thwarting those civil libertarians who call for restraints on the internal-security programs. While there have already been some indications of Hoover's more circumspect qualities,[8] Masters of Deceit serves as an opportunity for him to enunciate his ideas about democracy, civil liberty, communism, and similar topics in full blown fashion. The effect is to present an image of a man who is much closer to the American center, perhaps even the liberal center, than most liberals assume. For example, Hoover emphatically states that opposition to anticommunist measures is part of everyone's right to free speech and does not create any imputation of communist inclination; that there is a clear line between socialists, who are democrats, and communists, who are not; that most Americans who stumbled into the Communist Party did so out of such motives as a desire for reform, rebellion in the face of discrimination against their minority groups, or similar reasons which deserve sympathetic understanding; and that society should help, not attack, former communists if America is to benefit by attracting back to our values those talented and useful people who have succumbed to the "communist spell." While deploring the way in which intellectuals have been lured into the Communist Party in the past, Hoover underscores the fact that the future of America's resistance to communism lies with the "free world's intellectuals," since it is they who must convince men of the superiority of liberal values.

In his chapter on communism and minorities, Hoover pens a strong endorsement of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and denounces those who try to assert that the NAACP is "communist controlled" or "communist inclined." In his chapter on Jewish groups, he denounces the canard that Jews have a peculiar susceptibility to communism. Because numerous Communist Party leaders claim a Jewish origin, Hoover notes, "does not . . . make them Jews, any more than William Z. Foster's Catholic background and Earl Browder's Protestant background give them standing in any present-day Catholic and Protestant communities in the United States."[9] In one passage which is worth quoting in detail, Hoover warns against Know-Nothing anticommunism:

> [W]e must be absolutely certain that our fight is waged with full regard for the historic liberties of this great nation. This is the fundamental premise of any attack against communism.
> Too often I have seen cases where loyal and patriotic but misguided Americans have thought they were "fighting communism" by slapping the label of "Red" or "communist" on anybody who happened to be different from them or to have ideas with which they did not agree.
> Smears, character assassination, and the scattering of irresponsible charges have no place in this nation. They create division, suspicion, and > distrust among loyal Americans—just what the communists want—and hinder rather than aid the fight against communism.

> Another thing. Time after time in this book I have mentioned that honest dissent should not be confused with disloyalty. A man has a right to think as he wishes: that's the strength of our form of government. Without free thought our society would decay.[10]

Other points which deserve notation in this regard are his discussion of the role of the FBI in disproving false charges levelled in the loyalty program, and his warnings against the dangers both of a national police force and of an FBI with evaluative powers. In his concluding section, Hoover warns that a negative attitude toward the communist issue is highly dangerous; democrats, he affirms, must be for something positive. In stressing such matters as social welfare and protection of individual dignity as the things we must be for, and must progress toward, he has closed on a note which many liberals can endorse.

It should be carefully noted, of course, that Hoover does not always apply his principles in a fashion which would bring unanimous applause from civil libertarians and his democratic credo has a few aspects, such as his stress upon religion as the foundation of democracy, to the exclusion of humanist or social-democratic bases, which will discomfit some readers. Nevertheless, the dominant picture which this book projects is that of a balanced and fair-minded man, one who may see more shadows in the land than others can always find but, withal, a man who mostly sees human beings and their human condition.

Viewed from this third perspective, Masters of Deceit should be a generally reassuring book for many who have been troubled about J. Edgar Hoover's ideology. Since he was not placed in office as a literary spokesman, we need not feel discomfited if his prose leaves much to be desired. Since he was not installed as our national political theorist, or as political historian of the American Communist Party, we can look to more trained and judicious writers for our volumes on these matters. Hoover holds office as chief of the nation's investigative bureau, and Masters of Deceit reveals a police officer with a high sense of fidelity to democratic ideals, one who will stand comparison with police officials in any foreign country or American state. In our society, he operates under standards set not by his own fiat but by the majority-will agencies of the nation—Congress and the President. If he at times influences these standards by what he urges upon the Congress or the President, he does so with the specialist's zeal, much as the soldier urges maximum weapons and the scientist maximum research expenditures. The wise policy for those critics who admit the necessity for some security measures (as for some weapons and some research) would seem to be opposition to Hoover's overextensions. At least, it seems to this writer that defenders of free speech sometimes appear to be angered that Hoover speaks his mind at all, rather than that he advocates particular measures. And his critics do not always take care to separate

10. P. 312.

Hoover's positions, as he enunciates them, from those of the McCarthyites who rush to praise Hoover but do not take his counsels of moderation.

In short, Masters of Deceit is most useful in showing how closely Hoover embodies the virtues and the vices of political man in our semipopulist democracy. He stops thinking at a point where the leaders and the led in our time have also struck a position of repose. We could have had far worse in an FBI Director and, given our society as it is rather than as the poets would have it, we may have done well indeed.

SUBJECT: "FIDEL CASTRO"
REVIEW OF BOOK WRITTEN BY JULES DUBOIS

O Book Reviews

There follows a review of the book written by Jules Dubois of the "Chicago Tribune" under the title "Fidel Castro: Rebel - Liberator or Dictator?" This book was published by Bobbs-Merrill and was issued in April, 1959.

In substance, the book outlines the background and career of Castro and traces the origin, progress, and ultimate success of his revolutionary July 26 Movement which overthrew the Batista dictatorship in January. While factual in many respects -- the book quotes at length from various speeches and articles of Castro as well as from other documentary material -- Dubois betrays a definite pro-Castro bias throughout. He has apparently relied almost entirely on Castro supporters for his material and has accepted statements of Castro and his followers at face value with little or no effort to critically evaluate them. In part, this uncritical approach may stem from fact that book was obviously written and edited on crash basis in order to capitalize on sudden public interest in Castro. But Dubois clearly indicates he considers Castro to be an heroic figure, and he has consistently minimized the procommunist flavor of the Castro regime and lightly dismissed other failings of the new Cuban government.

It is not surprising that Dubois would write favorably regarding Castro since latter has given him privileged treatment in form of exclusive interviews and following overthrow of Batista, designated Dubois as his personal emissary to Cuban newspaper publishers to discuss resumption of free press. Less understandable is the author's evident rancor against the U.S. State Department and Ambassadors Arthur Gardner and Earl Smith who are criticized at every turn for alleged approval of Batista dictatorship and lack of concern for Cuban people. In spite of Castro's prolonged delay in holding elections, Dubois terms him a "sincere idealist" who is devoted to constitutional and democratic government. According to the author, the Cuban Prime Minister is not unfriendly to the U.S. despite all evidence to the contrary. Regarding the widely criticized executions of Batista officials, including military officers, which occured following Castro's success, Dubois claims only that revolutionary justice is always one-sided and the Cuba of Castro was no exception."

As regards communist infiltration and influence in the Castro Government, the book concedes the "leftist" nature of many of Castro's top advisors but insists the communists will not be able to capture Castro, although the basis for this optimism is not clear. In response to charges that Raul Castro and "Che" Guevara, two of the principal figures in the new regime, are procommunist and anti-U.S., Dubois quotes these individuals as denying communist membership as though that settled the issue. No denial is made of their anti-U.S. attitudes.

There follows several examples which illustrate the author's willingness to overlook inconvenient facts in his appraisal of Castro:

1. In discussing Castro's background, Dubois reports that Castro proved himself a skillful politician even in his student days at the University of Havana. According to the book, Castro "wangled" communist support for his candidacy as vice president of the student body, but, once elected, began a militant campaign against them.

Comment: Aside from portraying Castro as a blatant opportunist, this passage is not supported by best information available to Bureau.

whose identity should be protected, has advised that Castro accepted and worked with communists at University although it was not proven that he was actual Party member himself.

2. Dubois characterizes Colonel Alberto Bayo, Castro's military advisor and instructor in the pre-revolution days, as an "anticommunist, anti-Franco fighter for freedom."

Comment: Bufiles reflect that Bayo, who served with Republican forces during Spanish Civil War, has been a professional revolutionary for many years. 5. In writing of the arrival of Castro's conquerors in Havana on New Year's Day, Dubois described the courteous, respectful and sober actions of the soldiers.

Comment: When Fidel Castro visited the U.S. in April, 1959, he brought his handpicked entourage. Our State Department was shocked at the actions of Castro's group, noted that they ground lighted cigar butts into plush carpets, drank liquor continually, were exceedingly vulgar and were the poorest representatives of a foreign country to ever visit the U.S.

SYNOPSIS: Book Reviews

Above-captioned law review contains extensive review of "Masters of Deceit" by Alan F. Westin, Assistant Professor of Government, Cornell University. Review contains some harsh critical comments, but also speaks favorably of book. Chief criticism of "Masters of Deceit" is that its style is "simple" and that in some instances political theories and facts are oversimplified. Westin talks about "simple sentences, filled with simple thoughts for simple people," adding that the Director set himself to write a primer and that no literary critic is likely to question this self-description. In regard to communist theory, Westin feels Director has stressed the conspiratorial aspect of communism too much, overlooking such historical facts as war exhaustion, the ineffectiveness of the Kerensky government, etc. Likewise Westin comments that "Masters of Deceit" gives the impression that the advances of communism have resulted solely from spread of a cancerous doctrine. Jones to DeLoach
Re: "Masters of Deceit"

DETAILS:

The above-captioned law review contains a rather extensive review of "Masters of Deceit."

After a brief introduction in which Westin sketches the main topics which "Masters of Deceit" covers, he analyzes the book under the following headings:

The Author's Intention

Westin makes mention of Mr. Hoover's comment that "Masters of Deceit" was written "in almost primer form." In fact, he is critical of the simplicity of the style. He talks about "simple sentences, filled with simple thoughts for simple people," and adds that the Director set himself to write a primer and that no literary critic is likely to question this self-description: "Sophisticates who no longer find McGuffey's sentence structure as challenging as they did in earlier years will not derive aesthetic satisfaction from these pages. They, however, do not compose the audience for which the author has written his book."

The Work's Intrinsic Merits

More important than literary style, however, are the dangers that popularization may result in oversimplicity. Westin is critical in this regard, saying, for example, that Mr. Hoover has oversimplified communist theory and the historical factors surrounding the events of 1917-1919. According to Westin, conspiracy is stressed to the exclusion of historical ripeness, war exhaustion, the ineffectiveness of the Kerensky government, etc. No mention, he says, is made of conflicts or modifications of Marxism as preached by Marx and later by Lenin and Stalin.

These "simplifications," Westin points out, affect Mr. Hoover's comments about current matters. Since the Director "does not consider the nature of the revolutionary situation," his statements concerning the small number of communists in a country in relation to the total population in regard to the seizure of state power, are not fully valid. "At least some readers will wonder whether this presentation adequately distinguishes between, on the one hand, the capacity of communist parties to seize power when social disintegration has occurred or when Soviet troops are present, and, on the other, the capacities of the communists when national populations are alert to communist tactics and the social systems are basically healthy. Obviously, the existence of one situation rather than the other has significant implications for the choice of communist control policies in a democratic society."

Again, according to Westin, Mr. Hoover gives the impression that the advances of communism in the past have resulted solely from the spread of a cancerous doctrine. Westin feels the factors such as the example of Soviet industrial and military progress, the appeal of the Soviet egalitarian myth among nonwhite peoples, should have been mentioned. "In short, Hoover's doctrinal discussion prepares readers more for debate along the Potomac than for the ideological clash which is actually raging beyond our shoreline."

Westin is more favorably impressed with the sections of "Masters of Deceit" dealing with the communist underground. Yet, even here, "the unidimensional quality of the accounts and the arguable assumptions which Hoover drops will doubtless invite dissent." He is critical of the Director's use of estimates of party leaders that for every party member in the United States, ten others are ready, willing, and able to do the party's work. Westin says the numerical basis of this statement in 1958 was "nothing but myth," since these statistics obviously come from the "popular front days." Also, he says, by using the statement Mr. Hoover "accepts the communist definition of allies, a remarkably unsafe technique and one which ignores the meaning of such alliances on the American scene." In Westin's thinking, fellow travelers are often highly unreliable and hence the Director's comments are unrealistic.

Westin comments:

> "Viewed according to its intrinsic merits, then, "Masters of Deceit" is a study in equilibrium. For each issue that is simplified by Hoover's approach, a corresponding issue is raised by the simplification and left unanswered. Since any work which stirs the high school student and the adult primer-reader to thought about politics is a useful contribution, Hoover's text is welcome. To the extent that it is treated as Truth rather than Opinion, however, or that Hoover's special expertise in dealing with national security matters as a law-enforcement officer is taken to equip him for political analysis, 'Masters of Deceit' is a misleading volume. Certainly, in comparison with another recent 'primer' on the communist problem, Harry and Bonaro Overstreet's 'What We Must Know About Communism,' Hoover's book must be rated as distinctly inferior in quality."

The Subjective Reaction of the Reader

Under this heading Westin sets forth some personal reactions. "Masters of Deceit," he says, tells much about Mr. Hoover, "a matter of importance in light of his national responsibility." The book provides an important contrast with the picture of the FBI Director which tends to emerge from his statements to congressional committees on appropriations or matters relating to communist-control legislation. "In those moments, Hoover emerges as a man of the political right, or, at least, as a 'tough-on-communism' figure whose efforts are directed at thwarting those civil libertarians who call for restraints on the internal-security programs." "Masters of Deceit," however, gives him an opportunity to enunciate his ideas about democracy, civil liberty, communism, etc. "The effect is to present an image of a man who is much closer to the American center, perhaps even the liberal center, than most liberals assume." Among positions taken by Mr. Hoover which Westin views favorably are: that to oppose anticommunist measures is part of the right of free speech and does not create an imputation of communist inclination; that society should help, not attack, former communists; that the intellectuals of the free world have a responsibility in combating communism; warnings against the dangers of a national police and an FBI with evaluative powers; protection of the dignity of the human being.

Although, in Westin's opinion, Mr. Hoover does not always apply his principles in a fashion to bring unanimous applause from civil libertarians, "the dominant picture which this book projects is that of a balanced and fair-minded man, one who may see more shadows in the land than others can always find but, withal, a man who mostly sees human beings and their human condition."

The final two paragraphs are quoted in full as they give Westin's summary of Mr. Hoover as viewed through "Masters of Deceit":

"Viewed from this third perspective, 'Masters of Deceit' should be a generally reassuring book for many who have been troubled about J. Edgar Hoover's ideology. Since he was not placed in office as a literary spokesman, we need not feel discomfited if his prose leaves much to be desired. Since he was not installed as our national political theorist, or as political historian of the American Communist Party, we can look to more trained and judicious writers for our volumes on these matters. Hoover holds office as chief of the nation's investigative bureau, and 'Masters of Deceit' reveals a police officer with a high sense of fidelity to democratic ideals, one who will stand comparison with police officials in any foreign country or American state. In our society, he operates under standards set not by his own fiat but by the majority-will agencies of the nation -- Congress and the President. If he at times influences these standards by what he urges upon the Congress or the President, he does so with the specialist's zeal, much as the soldier urges maximum weapons and the scientist maximum research expenditures. The wise policy for those critics who admit the necessity for some security measures (as for some weapons and some research) would seem to be opposition to Hoover's overextensions. At least, it seems to this writer that defenders of free speech sometimes appear to be angered that Hoover speaks his mind at all, rather than that he advocates particular measures. And his critics do not always take care to separate Hoover's positins, as he enunciates them, from those of the McCarthyites who rush to praise Hoover but do not take his counsels of moderation.

"In short, 'Masters of Deceit' is most useful in showing how closely Hoover embodies the virtues and the vices of political man in our semipopulist democracy. He stops thinking at a point where the leaders and the led in our time have also struck a position of repose. We could have had far worse in an FBI Director and, given our society as it is rather than as the poets would have it, we may have done well indeed."

He graduated from the University of Florida receiving an A.B. Degree in 1948 and received an LL.B. Degree from Harvard Law School in 1951. In [redacted] b6 b7C being noted that Westin was the author of an article in the 2/23/52 issue of "The Nation" on the subject of wire-tapping, which article was critical of the Bureau's policy and said the Bureau should not engage in this practice until congressional action recognized it. In November, 1953, and May, 1955, Westin contacted the Bureau and each time was given an "in-absence" reply. In July, 1955, the Director commented concerning Westin "he still writes like a communist - possibly a sleeper" and "under no circumstances should we be lulled into having any dealings with Westin." In September, 1958, Westin requested the Director to furnish information to him for use in a book on wire-tapping. Mr. Hoover by letter dated 9/5/58 declined. (100-401397)

Cuba: Island of Paradox by Ruby Hart Phillips is personal history of Cuba by correspondent for The New York Times. It covers revolution of 1933-34, career of former dictator Batista, and successful revolt led by Fidel Castro. Author cites United States diplomatic blundering for rise of anti-American sentiments in Latin America and flatly contradicts Herbert L. Matthews of The New York Times who has attempted to whitewash communist influence in Castro regime. Author declares whether future of Cuba and of all Latin America shall be decided from Moscow is a question in which the United States can and should be the decisive factor.

Cuban Correspondent

Ruby Hart Phillips, the dean of foreign correspondents in Cuba, has just written a book which recognizes the real and urgent communist threat to Cuba. (Cuba: Island of Paradox, McDowell, Obolensky, New York, 1959) Mrs. Phillips is an old hand on the Cuban scene, having spent some 28 years there. She had been an assistant to her husband who was The New York Times correspondent in Cuba. Upon her husband's death in 1937, she became his successor. She wrote Cuban Sideshow in 1935 which dealt with the revolution of 1933-34. As early as 1945, Mrs. Phillips wrote articles for publication which stressed that the Soviet bid for influence in Latin America had made Cuba one of the focal points of communist propaganda in the Western Hemisphere. Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: Cuba: Island of Paradox

Eyewitness Report

This book is a personal history of Cuba seen through the eyes of a foreign correspondent. It deals with three eras of recent Cuban history: the 1933-34 revolt which toppled Gerardo Machado's dictatorship; the career of Cuba's "strongman," Fulgencio Batista; and the successful revolt led by Fidel Castro.

As a personal chronicle of events and episodes in those critical years of Cuban history, the book is absorbing reading. But, the events and episodes are told simply as isolated items and there is too little of the correlation, explanation, interpretation, and editing which could have made for a more cohesive, meaningful picture. Despite this drawback, the book succeeds in scoring some telling points.

Diplomatic Blundering

Mrs. Phillips writes bluntly that rising anti-American sentiment in Latin America is "the harvest being reaped from years of vacillating, hesitant and cowardly policy by the United States government." She says that our objective should be "to weld the Western Hemisphere into a solid bloc through common interests--commercial and political--and the creation of an awareness in Latin America of the need for mutual defence." In her view, the United States is confronted with a problem of survival in the face of a Soviet military conspiracy to gain control of the world by force. She attributes much of the anti-American sentiment in Latin America to the failure of the United States to support and encourage the establishment and maintenance of democracy in those Latin-American nations "where people are striving for participation in their national affairs." (pp. 418-419)

The book is a sharp indictment of United States diplomacy. Mrs. Phillips attacks the "policy... in sending political appointees to Latin America as diplomatic representatives," describing it as "one of the great hindrances to friendly relations with these countries." She is equally upset by the professional diplomat who is too often concerned only with furthering his own career. Mrs. Phillips observes, "He is afraid to express an opinion or take a definite stand on any question in which the United States State Department needs guidance. Unfortunately, his career does not depend upon positive results. Instead, it requires that he make no mistakes; this, in turn, requires that he make no important decisions. 'If I do nothing, I can do nothing wrong!'" (p. 422)

Mrs. Phillips touches a particularly vulnerable spot when she declares, "One of the major reasons for the blunders of the United States Department of State in Latin America--as in the rest of the world--is the lack of accurate information upon which to base its policy...If trouble is brewing he (the ambassador) should know it and know the reasons behind it. The surprise so often expressed by our State Department reflects the incompetence of our representatives in foreign countries." (pp. 422-423)

Sharp Disagreement

Turning to Fidel Castro and his expressed lack of concern about communist influence in Cuba, Mrs. Phillips observes, "What Castro does not realize is that in a small country, determined and dedicated Communists can get control of a surprising number of posts in key positions, thus exerting a disproportionate influence in national affairs. Furthermore, propaganda directed to the uneducated masses is more effective than in the United States and Great Britain, where the educational level makes it difficult for the Communists to win followers by stereotyped arguments." (p. 417)

Perhaps, the most significant contribution this book makes to the current scene is its flat contradiction of another New York Times staffer, Herbert L. Matthews. It will be recalled that in a front-page article in The New York Times of July 16, 1959, Matthews, in effect, attempted a whitewash of the red-tinged Castro regime. The contradiction between these two New York Times correspondents is evident from these samples:

Matthews	Phillips
"This is not a Communist revolution in any sense of the word and there are no Communists in positions of control..." (The New York Times, 7/16/59, p. 1)	"...There is no doubt that the Communists wield tremendous influence in the Castro government and in the labor unions. Their methods of placing men in key posts are extremely effective." (p. 417)

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: Cuba: Island of Paradox

Decisive Factor

Recognizing that communism is a very real threat in Cuba and in the rest of the Western Hemisphere, Mrs. Phillips concludes her book with this sobering thought:

> "Whether the future of Cuba and of all Latin America shall be decided from Moscow and not by the countries of this hemisphere themselves is a question in which the United States can and should be the decisive factor." (p. 425)

SUBJECT: "THE ALTERNATE CASE"
BOOK BY JOSEPH F. DINNEEN,
REPORTER ON "BOSTON GLOBE"
AND FREE-LANCE WRITER
BOOK REVIEW

SYNOPSIS:

Book Reviews

You instructed that we review, as rapidly as possible, captioned book in order that it may be returned to Miriam Ottenberg of the "Evening Star." Book written in first person and although fictional, book is definitely take-off on Brinks case. Narrator goes by name of Jimmy Preston, a crime reporter.

Story deals with activities of two confidence men, Michaels and Kendall. These two and a third ex-con attempt to "shake down" executive by posing as policemen and surprising him in compromising situation with waitress. Man identifies himself as one Farman and persuades con artists to meet him at restaurant next day. Confronting pseudo-detectives at restaurant, he tells them he knows they are not police officers, that he is an auditor at the Denton Transfer Company, that he is carrying a gun and they will listen to his proposition. He persuades men to consider robbing Denton Transfer Company. The three men agree and later contact Tommy Morgan, a leading racketeer in the city. Agreement is reached to stage robbery, but Michaels wants no part of gun play and is counted out. The gang has Chester Harvey contact the auditor known as Farman and map out plans for robbery. Farman's reason for wanting robbery staged is to teach home office a lesson regarding security and protective measures. Subsequently, gang secures equipment to rob Denton Transfer Company.

Meanwhile, Michaels, "cut out" of Denton job, is contacted by ex-con Willie Wiseman, who has cased hotel in view of robbing payroll. Hotel is robbed and immediately thereafter the Denton Transfer Company is robbed. Denton robbery follows same pattern as incidents surrounding Brinks case. After robbery, gang is counting the loot and a radio commentator reports that auditors have ascertained that the gang obtained $1,200,000. The gang has just counted a total of $764,328 and immediately feel that Farman, the auditor, must have embezzled "... four hundred grand for himself."

Jones to DeLoach memorandum

Police dragnet goes out and numerous criminals are picked up for questioning. Billy Kendall, who participated in Denton Transfer robbery, walks into police station with alibi and convinces Deputy McGarrity that he (Kendall) had nothing to do with the holdup. Kendall mentions having seen Wiseman and another man shortly before Denton robbery and McGarrity, believing the Denton job to be an inside one, asks Kendall to accompany him to the Denton building on possibility that he can identify one of the employees as the man he said he had seen with Wiseman. Arriving at Denton building, Kendall is introduced to an auditor named Floyd Robbins whom Kendall recognizes as the man that he and Michaels tried to "shake down" in hotel room.

FBI enters case since some of loot is Federal funds. Local officials believe Denton robbery staged by same gang which pulled the Styvesant robbery a few years prior. One of the Styvesant holdup men, identified by witnesses, is serving prison sentence and because he has not been "taken care of," he requests to talk to two detectives. Morgan, Kendall and others involved in Denton robbery begin to "sweat" as it appears that individuals involved in Styvesant robbery will be hauled in again and Michaels, a former member of another mob, will probably be questioned and he knows about original plan to rob Denton's. Stabile and Bastone mob is prime suspect and Morgan, Kendall and Harvey decide to dismantle truck used in robbery and plant pieces near Stabile farm.

FBI Agents keeping Stabile and Bastone mob under surveillance and as Federal Statute of Limitations about to run out, U. S. Attorney makes presentment to Grand Jury. Based on rulings of Coplon and Gubechev case regarding wire taps FBI case is destroyed, but FBI decides to continue investigation. Michaels and two other hoods hold up gambling joint, and Morgan hires professional killer who kills one of trio and wounds Michaels. Michaels and Irving Cross decide to leave town.

They are later arrested in Pennsylvania for possession of firearms and while in jail, FBI Agents talk to Michaels. Agents tell Michaels they know he was in on the Denton job, offer him protection and suggest he may collect a part of the reward money. Meanwhile, Kendall approaches Jimmy Preston, narrator of the story, inasmuch as he is also interested in reward money and the State Statute of Limitations is about to run out. Subsequently, at trial, defense attorney decides that if he is unable to break Michaels' story, he will call Kendall to the stand. Michaels has been tutored and trained for the court room appearance, and when defense attorney is about ready to call Kendall to the stand, Morgan and Harvey turn Kendall's estranged wife against him and defense attorney, although doubting guilt of his clients, is afraid to call Kendall to the stand because he fears Kendall's wife will destroy his testimony.

Numerous references to FBI throughout the book, but pages 190 and 191 contain paragraphs which infer that FBI does all the cooperating, most detectives are envious and jealous of FBI Agents and the old-timers would enjoy making a fool of an FBI Agent. Reader who is familiar with Brinks case may doubt whether FBI arrested right men in Brinks case. Book contains page wherein local SAC accepts police officers' judgment, and Kendall who was really in on the robbery stays "....at large, free and unmolested."

Dinneen also author of "Anatomy of Crime" which was fictional take-off on Brinks case and was alternately favorable, impartial and unfavorable to Bureau. [redacted]

Letter from Boston Office dated 2-21-56, reflects Dinneen spoke at Communion Breakfast two days prior and praised FBI for work on Brinks case. Dinneen, in his speech, stated that in his opinion there was an "inside man" involved. This book, "The Alternate Case," makes it appear that Dinneen may still hold this belief. In reference to Dinneen's speech, Director noted "I want none of his praise! H." (62-100848)

DETAILS

BACKGROUND:

Reporter On Boston Globe

You instructed that we review the book entitled "The Alternate Case," written by Joseph F. Dinneen. The book was sent over to us by Miriam Ottenberg of the "Evening Star." As you recall, Miss Ottenberg stated that this book was a take-off on the Brinks case and intimated that the FBI had schooled and tutored certain witnesses. Set forth below is a brief review of the book.

- Summary

GENERAL STORY:

Miss Ottenberg was correct when she stated that the book is a take-off on the Brinks case.

Dinneen writes the novel as seen through his eyes, i. e. the story is told in the first person and the narrator goes by the name Jimmy Preston, a crime reporter on a Bay City newspaper. Although a fictional work, the author builds his story around the Brinks robbery using the case as a nucleus.

The novel centers around the activities of 2 confidence men by the names of Chester H. ("Honey") Michaels and Billy Kendall, both ex-convicts. At the beginning of the story Michaels and Kendall, with the assistance of one Russ Germain, also an ex-convict, are getting ready to set up a "Shake down" episode by using a waitress Rose Moline as bait. Rose works in a restaurant and has "set up" a man to meet her after work. Michaels, Kendall and Germain precede Rose and the man to a hotel where they wait in a room adjoining the room where Rose will lead the man. At a predetermined signal, the 3 ex-cons, posing as police officers, barge into the room and confront the man and Rose in bed. Germain acting as a police Lieutenant orders Rose to get dressed as he is going to take her down to "headquarters."

The man on the bed is led to believe that if he can raise six thousand dollars, he will be let off the "hook." The man gives the con artists his name (which later turns out to be the name of a man already deceased) and tells them that he will meet them at a particular restaurant the following day. Arriving at the restaurant, the man confronts the three psuedo-policemen with the fact that he has checked out their names at the police department that morning and found that no such individuals were on the force. He also confronts them with the fact that as an auditor with the Denton Transfer Company, he is allowed to carry a weapon which he then displays and advises the three that either they will listen to his proposition or he will put them in jail, and if they get any ideas, he will use the gun right there without fear of being embarrassed or ruined by the previous night's incident.

Explaining to the men that he knows how they can rob the Denton Transfer Company, one of the men confronts him with the possibility that perhaps he wants it robbed to cover up a misappropriation of funds. The auditor will not admit to anything; however, he convinces the three men that the home office needs to be taught a lesson regarding protection of the offices on the Eastern Seaboard. An agreement is finally reached, and the auditor goes his way while the 3 con men go theirs.

After thinking the matter over, the three men decide that this "operation" is too large for them to handle and so they present the plan to Tommy Morgan, controller of all the rackets in the Metropolitan District. Morgan has "... to have a part one way or another in every big-score holdup...." Morgan decides that Germain, Kendall and Michaels will be in on the "job," but Michaels decides that he wants no part of the "heist" inasmuch as he was once involved as a suspect in a killing, and he is afraid to carry a loaded gun. Morgan decides that since Michaels was originally interested in clipping the auditor for six thousand dollars, he pays Michaels six thousand and tells him he is "out" on the Denton Transfer Company job.

The next step is to line up a full crew for the robbery, and to have Chester Harvey, "... crisp and businesslike... ex-convict..." contact the auditor and discuss the various aspects of the robbery and study the layout of the building. Subsequently, the gang members steal a truck; go out of the city to buy guards' uniforms; rehearse the entire operation in an old barn; make timed runs between different points in the city and building to be robbed; purchase some Halloween masks; and secure the rubber-heel soft soled type shoes.

Prior to the robbery of the Denton Transfer Company, Michaels, who has been "cut out" of the Denton job runs into a couple of ex-convicts, one of which is Willie Wiseman, who have "cased" a Bay City hotel in view of stealing the payroll amounting to about forty-five thousand dollars. The 3 men carry out the hotel robbery. The gang lined up to rob the Transfer Company decides that it had better make its move immediately, as "The cops will be busy with this one (the hotel robbery)." On January 19, 1950, the Denton robbery is staged, and the story of the actual robbery follows much the same pattern as the incidents surrounding the Brinks theft, i. e. the men move in dressed as guards, they wear the Halloween masks; they tie up the tellers in the vault; stuff the money into laundry bags; and disappear into the night.

While the gang is counting the loot which comes to a total of $764, 328., a news commentator reports over the radio that "A battery of auditors... report that the total amount of money taken by masked bandits... is one million, two hundred thousand dollars." Russ Germain, one of the gang members states, "You mean the guy (referring to the auditor that they had tried to "shake down" in the hotel room) gave us a fast shuffle and took out four hundred grand for himself?"

As different members of the gang are picked up for questioning, Billy Kendall who has acted as an informant for the local police in the past, decides to save the police the trouble of picking him up and presents himself at Deputy McGarrity's office on the morning of January 20. Kendall has the alibi of having been at a movie and leads McGarrity to believe that he (Kendall) had nothing to do with the hold-up. At the same time, Kendall casually mentions the fact that he has recently seen Willie Wiseman about town with another man a few weeks before Christmas; and there had been a rumor among the underworld that "Denton's was ready to go." McGarrity has reached the conclusion that the Denton hold-up was either "... an inside job with outside help or an outside job with inside control." He has reached this conclusion because: "1. Of the four men wearing glasses in the counting cage, the Number One gunman had taken the glasses of the only key man who could give a quick estimate of the amount of money stolen. He was all but blind without them. 2. The gunmen knew enough to take the bill of lading on the last shipment to prolong the confusion. It followed that he must have had inside information." McGarrity asks Kendall to accompany him to the Denton building on the possibility that he may be able to identify the man that he had seen with Wiseman. Arriving at the Denton company, Kendall is introduced to a Floyd Robbins whom Kendall recognizes as the auditor that they previously had tried to shake down, and whom he knows by the name Farman. Kendall flips through the company's identification book on the pretense of identifying the man he had seen with Wiseman. As he flips through it, he runs across a photograph of a man named Donald Farman with the notation "Died September 21, 1949." Farman is the name that was given by Robbins, the auditor in the "shake-down" attempt.

The FBI enters the case inasmuch as some of the loot included "... Federal funds..." By this time, the Denton robbery had reminded some of the police officials of the Styvesant robbery in which one of the masked bandits sneezed during the robbery and blew off his mask. This bandit was later picked out of a police line-up by witnesses and goes by the name of Anthony Stabile. He is serving 12 to 15 years and has refused to "sing". However, he has started "...to burn..." because his friends have spent no money, politically, to have his sentence reduced, thus making him eligible for parole. Two detectives are sent to talk to Stabile but no information is given out concerning the subject discussed. All of the gang begins to "sweat" as the members of the Stabile mob are likely to be hauled in again, and among the members is "Honey" Michaels who knows about the original plan to rob Denton's. Inasmuch as the Stabile mob has been picked as a hot suspect, Morgan, Kendall and Harvey decide to cut up the truck used in the robbery and plant the pieces of it near Stabile's farm. This is done, and "...within an hour (after the pieces are discovered) state detectives and FBI Agents were crawling all over the place."

As the story continues, FBI Agents are keeping their eyes on all members of the Stabile and Bastone mob. Finally, the Statute of Limitations is about to run out, and six weeks before the expiration date, the United States Attorney makes a presentment to the Grand Jury. A large part of the FBI's case is made up of wire-tap and tape-recorded testimony of conversations between "Honey" Michaels and another hoodlum, and in these conversations they have been referring to "the big heist" which is actually the hotel robbery, but could apply just as well to the Denton job. However, the decisions "...by a New York Federal judge--ruling on the cases of Judith Coplon and Valentine Gubechev--who held that the FBI had no right to tap phones or record testimony..." destroys the FBI's case. Although the Statute of Limitations has run, the FBI decides to carry on the investigation. Although this is a reflection on the Bay City Police Department, their attitude is "They're (the FBI) asking for it...let them have it."

As time goes by the FBI continues to keep the members of the Bastone and Stabile mob under surveillance. "Honey" Michaels and two other hoods, running out of money, decide to stick up 6 gambling joints. Morgan decides to hire "Burp-gun McGuirk," a psychotic killer, a former paratrooper and expert professional assassin with a machine gun. McGuirk kills one of the robbery trio and wounds "Honey" Michaels. McGuirk is later apprehended but is aided in an escape from jail by Irving Cross, who is an expert locksmith. Michaels is afraid of being killed by the mob, Irving Cross becomes "hot" because of his reputation of being good at opening locks and so Michaels and Cross decide to "disappear." By this time, from all outward indications, Michaels is wanted again for questioning in connection with the Denton Transfer robbery. While Michaels and Cross are driving through Pennsylvania, they are stopped by a motorcycle patrolman for possession and transportation of firearms which they recently stole from a sporting-goods store. They are held in a small town jail and soon FBI Agents arrive to talk to Michaels. The Agents advise Michaels that they know he was in Denton's on the night of the robbery and advise him that one way or another they are going to take him back. The Agents offer Michaels protection and he decides that "... F. B. I. guys are on the level. When they say they'll protect him, they'll do it."

The FBI builds the case around Michaels' willingness to talk and as time goes by Michaels is trained and tutored in what to say, what to do and how to handle himself on the witness stand. Michaels names different members of the Stabile and Bastone mobs and goes along with the FBI plan. Michaels is also interested in the state attorney general's announcement that any one who came forward with information concerning the Denton robbery would be given immunity and a share of the reward. What Michaels did not realize is that the state attorney general who made this statement is not presently in office and the present incumbent is not obligated by any promises by his predecessors.

Meanwhile Kendall has approached Jimmy Preston with information on the robbery because the State Statute of Limitations has about run out and he is also interested in the reward money. Prior to this, Preston knows that Kendall was definitely in on the robbery, but he cannot get any information out of Kendall.

At the trial, Michaels appears as a completely different person on the witness stand. He is polished, intelligent a "... gentleman and unfortunately a criminal." The attorney for the defendants decides that if he cannot break Michaels' story, he will call Kendall to the stand. However, Morgan and Harvey--knowing that Kendall is out to collect part of the reward--go out to see Kendall's wife who has been living in poverty. Supplying her with plenty of money and clothes, they persuade her to show up at the courtroom in order that if Kendall should be called to the stand, she could "blast" him off the stand. By this time she has a deep hatred for her husband who has practically turned his back on her, and she is intent on destroying his testimony. It is decided to keep Kendall off the witness stand all together, and out of the original gang which staged the robbery, only 3 are brought to trial with the Stabile and Bastone mob, and this is because they have belonged to many different gangs.

SPECIFIC REFERENCES TO FBI:

Although there are numerous references to the FBI throughout the book, it is noted that on pages 190 and 191, the following references appear:

"The Federal Bureau of Investigation tries its best to cooperate with state, metropolitan, city and town police departments, but more often than not this cooperation is a one-way street; the F. B. I. does the cooperating and receives little of it in return. Detectives of all ranks are inclined to be jealous and envious of F. B. I. Agents. They are better-trained and educated. They are paid more money and they have expense accounts. The Bureau has been doing an excellent job in breaking down this prejudice by accepting patrolmen and police officers from cities and towns throughout the country for special training in the Academy of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington. It is an effective but slow process (about twelve hundred of them were then so trained and more have been added since), but it has hardly reached the case-hardened old-timers, veterans of the forces, usually executives by reason of seniority--the old dogs who cannot be taught new tricks. One of these would delight in tripping up an F. B. I. man to beat him to the arrest."

The author continues by saying that the FBI will not always confide in all local police officers, regarding an arrest, because it "...knows the character of policemen in some precincts and divisions. Crime reporters shudder at what might happen if they were so warned..."

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS:

To the reader who is familiar with the background of the Brinks case, this book is liable to raise some questions of doubt as to whether the Brinks case was really "solved;" i. e. did the FBI arrest the right men. As can be seen from the above, and from a reading of the book, Dinneen has presented the FBI as unknowingly going along with the local police department's theory that the gang that was framed was responsible for the robbery. Even when McGarrity goes to the local SAC, and tells him that Kendall is "... a faker, a phony, a chameleon...," and couldn't possibly be connected with the Denton Transfer robbery, the book states, "The agent in charge accepted McGarrity's judgment. Kendall was now at large, free and unmolested."

INFORMATION RE DINNEEN:

You will recall that Dinneen is also the author of "Anatomy of a Crime," which was a fictional take-off on the Brinks case and was alternately favorable, impartial and unfavorable to the Bureau. [redacted] b6 b7C

[redacted]

By letter dated 2-21-56, the Boston Office advised that Dinneen had spoken before a Church Communion Breakfast on 2-19-56. Reportedly, Dinneen devoted the last 15 minutes of his talk to the Brinks case, and praised the FBI in very glowing terms. He stated that he felt the FBI had caused the arrest of the appropriate persons in the Brinks case. It is noted during his talk Dinneen pointed out that in his opinion there was an "inside man" involved. Dinneen believed that such a robbery could not be perpetrated without such aid and guidance. Based on his current book, it appears that Dinneen still holds this belief. In reference to the letter from Boston dated 2-21-56 concerning Dinneen's speech, the Director noted "I want none of his praise! H." (62-100848)

BOOK REVIEW
"UNCERTAIN RESURRECTION, THE POOR PEOPLE'S WASHINGTON CAMPAIGN"
BY CHARLES FAGER

This is a review of captioned book, published in 1969 by William B. Eerdmans Publishing Company. The book is being placed in the Bureau library.

SYNOPSIS:

Bureau files indicate that, although the identification is not positive because of the lack of information concerning the author, the author of this book is a former member of the staff of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) who was arrested twice during the SCLC civil rights campaign in Selma, Alabama. He is a pacifist. His treatment of the Poor People's Campaign in this book is not favorable. He criticizes the organization and leadership, discusses the violence and internal dissension in the campaign and says the campaign failed both as a moral crusade and as entertainment. No mention of FBI.

REVIEW OF BUREAU FILES:

Our files indicate, based on the information in the book, that the author of this book is Charles Eugene Fager, a white man, born in [redacted] He was a member of the SCLC staff during the SCLC civil rights campaign in Selma, Alabama, in 1964 and 1965. He was arrested twice during the Selma campaign for unlawful assembly and parading without a license. He was convicted in Selma of contempt of court and was sentenced to five days and a $50 fine. He is a pacifist and in 1967 was one of the group of people who shipped medical supplies to both North and South Vietnam. His package of supplies was only worth $3. The name Charles E. Fager appeared in an advertisement in the New York Post in January, 1968, listing people who refused to voluntarily pay the 10% income tax surcharge and the 23% of their income tax being used to finance the War in Vietnam. Although from this book Fager apparently has had a falling out with the SCLC, our files do not show the reason.

BOOK REVIEW:

This book is about the Poor People's Campaign (PPC), a massive demonstration of the SCLC in Washington, D. C., during the Spring of 1968, during which a shantytown called Resurrection City was built on the Mall near the Lincoln Memorial. Fager makes no attempt to defend the PPC. He mentioned in the book that Martin Luther King, Jr., was driven to the Left politically during the last two years of his life. He criticized the organization and the leadership of Resurrection City. He told how urban gang members "were from their arrival constantly getting out of hand, drinking, assaulting other residents and outsiders, harassing newsmen, taunting police and stealing everything that could be lifted." He said "confusion seemed to reign so completely over the campaign that the hostility and internal quarreling appeared as its most consistent characteristics." One chapter of the book dealt with the violence inside and outside Resurrection City and Fager said that the accounts of the violence were not exaggerated very much. On page 124 Fager said the campaign failed both as a moral crusade and as entertainment. He was critical in the book, however, of the handling by police of a couple incidents around Resurrection City in which the police were forced to use tear gas and force to control unruly demonstrators.

MENTION OF THE FBI:

The Bureau is not mentioned in this book.

SUBJECT: "WE BAND OF BROTHERS"
A MEMOIR OF ROBERT F. KENNEDY
BOOK REVIEW

SYNOPSIS:

Guthman's book is published by Harper and Row, Publishers, and is a 330-page "hatchet job" designed to glorify former Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy at the expense of the Director and the Bureau. The book is replete with references both to Mr. Hoover and the FBI, some of which are favorable, most of which are neutral, and many of which are critical either intrinsically or by innuendo. As a forecast of things to come, Guthman states in his "Author's Note" that his book does not purport to be an objective analysis. This candid insight is well borne out by his subsequent chapters.

No pertinent references to the Director or the Bureau, other than asides, are found in the first five chapters. The author subsequently claims the Director "urged" Kennedy to become Attorney General and alludes that solely as a result of Kennedy's intervention the number of black Special Agents employed by the FBI was substantially increased. In chapter 9 he alleges again by innuendo that although the FBI had information that the Freedom Riders in Alabama would be attacked by the Ku Klux Klan we withheld this information from the Department and advised only the local authorities and as a result the Freedom Riders were attacked. The book also repeats a number of old canards relative to the FBI not investigating organized crime prior to the Kennedy Administration and reiterates the Kennedy "myth" concerning wire tapping.

The bulk of the criticism is found in chapter 12 entitled "Johnson and Hoover" which alleges the Director's Office leaked information to the press concerning former President Kennedy's assassination despite explicit instructions from the Department that the first assassination report was to be reviewed by the Warren Commission prior to disclosure, that Kennedy raised the morale of the FBI by visiting Field Offices, and relates what is obviously a fictional confrontation between the Director and Ethel Kennedy wherein Mrs. Kennedy allegedly forces the Director to agree former Los Angeles Chief of Police Parker should replace him upon his retirement. The author's basic allegations relate to what he calls the "extreme coolness" with which the Director allegedly treated Kennedy immediately following the assassination of his brother.

RECOMMENDATION:

None. For the Director's information.

DETAILS - OVER

M. A. Jones to Bishop memo
RE: "WE BAND OF BROTHERS"

DETAILS:

Edwin Guthman was formerly a "Seattle Times" newspaperman for 13 years. He won the Pulitzer prize in 1950 for national reporting. He was, of course, former Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy's Special Assistant for Public Information in the Department of Justice and also served as Kennedy's first Senatorial Press Secretary. At the present time he is national editor of the "Los Angeles Times," Los Angeles, California.

Chapters 1 through 5 consist of the author's description of his initial meeting with Robert Kennedy, Kennedy's subsequent activities as an investigator and/or counsel for Senators McCarthy and McClellan, the 1960 presidential campaign, and the subsequent election. There are no references to the Director, and the FBI is mentioned in these chapters only as a means of identifying other members of Kennedy's entourage as former FBI Agents. These men are former SA's Carmine S. Bellino, Francis Flanagan and the late James McInerney, none of whom are or were friends of the Bureau.

In chapter 6 entitled "We Happy Few," Guthman stated that Kennedy was reluctant to accept the post as Attorney General because of possible criticism alleging nepotism and that he therefore sought advice from Senator McClellan, the Director, and Justice William O. Douglas. According to the author, McClellan and the Director "urged him to become Attorney General." Douglas suggested he look elsewhere for employment.

The next reference to the Bureau and the Director is found in the same chapter on page 104 where the author claims the FBI had less than a dozen black Special Agents "including two who served as attendants in Hoover's office--out of a total of almost six thousand," at the time Kennedy became AG. A footnote states that ten years later based on Department of Justice employment figures the FBI had some 51 blacks among the total of 7,910 Special Agents.

Guthman states the Director asserted the FBI was having difficulty finding eligible young blacks and Kennedy advised his staff and U. S. Attorneys nationwide would provide the names of qualified blacks from their home areas. The author states, "The number of black FBI agents increased." No additional mention of the Bureau or the Director is made in the remainder of this chapter or chapter 7.

M. A. Jones to Bishop memo
RE: "WE BAND OF BROTHERS"

A number of references to the FBI relating to our Obstruction of Justice investigation of New York State Supreme Court Judge James Vincent Keogh are found in chapter 8. Guthman states John F. Malone, Special Agent in Charge (sic) of the FBI Office in New York, did not want to give the Judge a lie detector test and the Director supported Malone. After continued insistence by the AG, Guthman said the Director remarked, "Sherlock Holmeses must have their fun." Upon completion of the lie detector test which was inconclusive, Guthman said the Director noted, "See, that shows I was right."

In chapter 9 entitled "The Freedom Riders," Guthman reverts to his "backdoor" attacks by innuendo by stating a Klan informant advised the FBI in Alabama that the Freedom Riders' buses might be attacked and he acknowledges the Bureau alerted the Birmingham and Anniston, Alabama, Police. He states the Bureau did not, however, notify anybody in the Attorney General's Office and as a result no local officers were on hand to restrain the Klansmen and the mob beat the passengers for about ten minutes. The remainder of this chapter and chapter 10 are without pertinent references to the Bureau and the Director.

Chapter 11 contains the old canard of criticizing the Bureau for contacting newsmen at 5 o'clock in the morning during the steel crisis. Guthman states a meeting was held in the Department attended by himself, Kennedy and his staff, and former Assistant Director Courtney Evans. The decision to have the newsmen contacted was reached at approximately 6 p.m., April 11, 1962, but according to Guthman it was not until after midnight that this information was cleared through the FBI Office in Philadelphia. Guthman stated Kennedy took full responsibility and stated, "I get some credit when FBI agents do something good. I'll take the heat when they goof."

Chapter 12 is entitled "Johnson and Hoover" and contains the bulk of the criticism of the Director. Guthman states by way of introduction that when he came to the Department he had considerable respect for the Bureau and a good deal of high regard for the Director. However, after "...seeing Hoover at close range it was a revealing and ultimately embittering experience." He acknowledges that when he left the Department after almost four years his esteem for the men of the FBI and respect for the Bureau's capabilities were largely intact. The crux of Guthman's criticism relates to what he calls "the extreme coolness" with which the Director allegedly treated Kennedy immediately following the assassination of former President Kennedy.

CONTINUED - OVER

Guthman alleged former Chief Justice Warren requested the FBI's first report on the investigation of the assassination not be made public until the Commission had examined it and that this request was made known to the Director by former Deputy Attorney General Katzenbach, but within a few hours the report had been leaked to several newsmen. He states all the indications were that it had been leaked by the Director's Office.

Guthman stated that during the early part of Kennedy's administration Kennedy defended the Director when there was public criticism of him, visited most of the FBI Field Offices and as a result "raised FBI morale and was highly respected by many agents." Guthman goes on to relate the old criticism that the Bureau had not engaged in investigation of organized crime prior to the Kennedy Administration and, of course, completely ignores the absence of FBI jurisdiction prior to enactment of appropriate criminal statutes by Congress. He also delves into the newspaper morgues in an attempt to resurrect the alleged innocence of the former Attorney General concerning wire tapping. Guthman alleges nothing which has not been previously categorically and absolutely refuted.

He does quote William G. Hundley, former head of the Organized Crime and Racketeering Section of the Criminal Division, who states that when he asked the FBI about wire tapping and electronic bugs "...the top brass of the Bureau would flat-out lie to me."

The final shot taken by Guthman at the Director and the Bureau is found in a footnote on page 266 which relates an incident which allegedly occurred at a party wherein Ethel Kennedy, referring to former Los Angeles Chief of Police Parker, stated to the Director, "Don't you think Chief Parker is a wonderful man? Don't you think that if you ever retire he'd be the man to replace you?" Guthman goes on in his insidious manner to state the Director reddened and replied meekly, "Yes Ethel."

There are no further references to either the Director or the Bureau in this work which is notable for the absence of any correlation between truth and fiction.

OIL O BOOK REVIEW

Memorandum Jones to Bishop 5/24/71 reviewed captioned book wherein Guthman states that while the Department was aware of Freedom Ride of 1961 by Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), the information had not been brought to the Attorney General's attention prior to the eruption of violence 5/14/61. The FBI, however, had information that the Freedom Riders in Alabama would be attacked by the Klan, which information was furnished only to local authorities and not to the Department. As a result, the attack took place. The Director inquired "What are the facts of this allegation?"

BACKGROUND:

On 4/24/61, information was disseminated by Bureau to all offices with instructions to alert local authorities concerning the plans of the CORE, a Negro organization favoring integration, to conduct a "Freedom Ride 1961," reportedly to make a nonviolent attempt to complete integration of bus service in related public accommodations in the South. The group was to arrive in Birmingham, Alabama, 5/14/61. On 5/10-12-13/61 we received information that local authorities might allow disturbances to take place when the group arrived in Alabama and that the Klan intended to take violent action against the group when it arrived in a bus terminal in Birmingham 5/14/61. Memorandum Rosen to Parsons 5/13/61 stated, "We have alerted all authorities concerning the information furnished by our informant including the Chief of Police of Birmingham Police Department who is a National Academy graduate." From a review of our files we have been unable to locate any written record of dissemination of this data to the Department prior to 5/14/61.

Memorandum to Mr. Brennan
Re: "We Band of Brothers"
A Memoir of Robert F. Kennedy
by Edwin Guthman

No request was received from the Department for specific investigation concerning "Freedom Ride 1961" prior to the outbreak of violence and we were providing intelligence data to the Department as received. By letter 5/15/61, the Department was advised this Bureau was conducting investigation into the acts of violence which occurred in Alabama 5/14/61 and that information concerning possible violence had been furnished to Birmingham authorities prior to 5/14/61.

By letter 5/18/61, Assistant Attorney General Burke Marshall acknowledged Bureau's intent to investigate captioned matter under character of "Racial Matters; Destruction of Aircraft and Motor Vehicle" and set forth nature and extent of Department's interest.

OBSERVATIONS:

These were fast moving occurrences and our primary concern at that time was to notify local authorities who could prevent violence. We did advise local authorities in time for them to prevent the attacks which took place, however, local authorities failed to take the necessary action.

How to Do It

By BENNETT KREMEN

If revolutions were fought with books instead of bullets our cities would already be in ruins. And blood would be pouring through their gutters. Book racks everywhere are beginning to creak under an ever-increasing number of works devoted to the destruction of the existing order, well-packaged handbooks on how to annihilate the Establishment distributed by such giants of American capitalism as Random House and McGraw-Hill, in fact by almost all of commercial publishing.

Indeed, the spring list was dominated by books that would, if taken seriously, destroy the very publishers who've produced them. Dozens and dozens of these volumes are rolling off the presses of the major houses, some of them personal accounts of revolt and rebellion, others studies of campus insurrections, of black fury, of current revolutionary theory and history or of such diverse expressions of modern unrest as the so-called revolutionary front in the high schools, the political confrontations in our courts and a hint of mutiny in the army. Apparently wherever a defiant brick has been flung, an eager author is rushed to the spot—and here is a sampling of the results so far:

Have copy

DO IT! By Jerry Rubin. (Simon & Schuster. Cloth, $5.95. Paper, $2.45.) Staring from its cover is Rubin's war-painted face and surprisingly serious eyes—surprising because after reading his mélange of revolutionary clichés ranted in the Yippie style mixed with political autobiography, erotica and "ain't-I-naughty" slapstick, one can't imagine anything about this headline-hungry media-hustler being taken seriously. Surely his impassioned call for more acid and less discipline would force any self-respecting revolutionary general in command to shoot him dead. Indeed after reading Rubin's call for a return to some fantacized, carefree Xanadu supposedly inherent in the tortured state of adolescence—all this in the name of Freedom and a better, more self-indulgent world—one just can't imagine our cotton-candy rebel surviving the brutality of a true revolutionary struggle. Without the benefit of TV cameras to lift his spirits, it's not hard to imagine Yippie leader Rubin withering on the first mile of Mao's great march. Nonetheless, there is laughter to be gotten from some of the madcap tales in "Do It!" and for those who know revolution

REVOLUTION FOR THE HELL OF IT. By Abbie Hoffman. (Dial. Cloth, $4.95. Paper, $1.95.) WOODSTOCK NATION. A Talk-Rock Album. By Abbie Hoffman. (Random-Vintage. Cloth, $5.95. Paper, $2.95.) If Mao would have shot Rubin, he would no doubt have simply shipped Abbie Hoffman back to his mother. But Mao is a tough critic, a breed Abbie Hoffman seems uncannily able to avoid. These collections of pages he passes off as books should have been swiftly decimated by those responsible for the maintenance of literary standards. Perhaps Abbie's popularity as an alleged warrior for pure justice and his ability to manipulate the media, which he often boasts of in his scribblings, inhibited those who might have forced him to approach literature with that bit of awe necessary for this art to flourish. Instead, without thought, style or organization, we are given in both his books more egocentric political autobiography, Yippie slogans, revolution for the TV cameras and a dose of paranoia that reduces the complexities of politics, revolution and man himself into eerie, simplistic symbols of good and evil —this passion and distortion only a bane to a true revolution which depends for its very survival on a cool-headed appraisal of power and personality, of action and reaction. Nowhere in all the excitement of describing how Uncle Sam was baited in Chicago, at the Pentagon, in Woodstock does Hoffman ever really step out of his grandiose, mind-blown world to consider the terrors of counter-revolution.

FAMOUS LONG AGO. My Life and Hard Times with Liberation News Service. By Raymond Mungo. (Beacon. Cloth, $6.95. Paper, $2.95.) In this clearly written and appealingly naive autobiography, we accompany a young radical on a less arrogant and more classical search for a better world. Though his Holy Grail seemed to lie in meetings with the Vietcong in Czechoslovakia and with the Liberation News Service, which was set up to feed copy to underground newspapers, Mungo discovered that competition, political infighting and vicious factionalism reside not only on Capitol Hill but among his allies on the New Left also. Bruised from combat not with his enemies but with his friends, he retreated to poetry, Rousseauan idealism and a Vermont commune where he now says: "We're only trying to change ourselves. . . . what a preoccupation! But if we get better, if I get better, that's a tangible change, isn't it?"

Howe

PICKING UP THE GUN. A Report on the Black Panthers. By Earl Anthony. (Dial. $4.95) There is no retreat for Earl Anthony, even to the snows of Vermont, for his black skin affords this angry man no rest anywhere. He is totally dedicated to violence, if violence is called for, but only if it benefits the black man. For Anthony isn't concerned with class struggle, but with race. First and last he remains a Black Nationalist only. Therefore his initial intoxication with the Black Panthers, which his book records in detail, ends in disappointment and his ultimate exclusion from their ranks. Ironically, we find at the end of his book that it is the Black Panthers' alliance (or is it integration?) with white radicals and their revolutionary Marxism that separated Anthony from this party he once so admired.

Howe

SEIZE THE TIME. The Story of the Black Panther Party and Huey P. Newton. By Bobby Seale. (Random. $6.95.) Old-fashioned notions such as villainy and virtue still live in this strangely Homeric book full of combat and heroism, described often with Biblical cadence in the simple, searing language of the streets. In this effectively impassioned manner, Seale makes it clear that the Panthers have adapted Marxist-Leninism to the black experience and are committed not only to the elevation of the black man but to a revolutionary world order. (To Seale, Chairman of the Black Panther Party, Earl Anthony is an ignominious "jackanapes" who misused the party's trust and misunderstands its noble calling.)

The startling power of Seale's book lies not in its politics but in its passion; not in its polemics but in his belief, despite our age of anti-heroes, in the Olympian act of courage. This is the stuff great myths once were made of, and in this autobiographical history, largely inspired by an unflinching awe and love for the Black Panther Party's young leader, Huey P. Newton, Seale has undoubted converted Newton into one of those viable mythical beings necessary to sustain any culture, politically and spiritually. Somewhere within us we must believe in courage, virtue and humanity or shiver in a sinister landscape alive only with vileness and distrust. When Seale describes gun-toting Huey challenging the City's men in blue to a duel-out in the streets of the ghetto, any man — to the Right or the Left — can only marvel at the beauty of his bravery.

REVOLUTIONARY NOTES. By Julius Lester. (Grove-Evergreen-Black Cat. Paper, $1.25.) These lean, piercing essays should sober many slogan-drunk members of the New Left and caution dreamers of revolution in the nation's black slums, for Lester says, "The revolutionary's concern is not to sound or be militant. . . . His concern is to be realistic.

The revolutionary is very careful not to do anything that would call for a confrontation between him and the enemy as long as he knows he can't win that confrontation. The revolutionary does nothing that will serve only to unite the enemy against him." In essay after essay, Lester cuts like a surgeon into revolutionary strategy and principles, freeing them of the fantasy, bloated rhetoric and useless emotion characterizing so much of the sound and fury passing today as revolutionary action. Thus if revolution is your thing, Lester's realism should be your Baedeker. And for so many who feel that the current demonstrations and confrontations spell revolution just around the corner, these words from Lester should be reassuring or sobering: "A flower is a good weapon only when guns are not fired. A body is a good weapon only when the billy clubs are not swung with automated efficiency and tear gas used as if it were a squirt of nasal spray for head colds. It was a victory confronting the soldiers at the Pentagon with flower power only because the powerful did not use their power."

THE HIGH SCHOOL REVOLUTIONARIES. Edited by Marc Libarle and Tom Seligson. (Scanlan's-Random. $6.95.) OUR TIME IS NOW. Notes from the High School Underground. Edited by John Birmingham. (Praeger. $5.95.) Though our racial nightmare and cancerous Asian war add undeniable legitimacy to their sense of outrage, and even though such just grievances as tyrannical dress standards imposed in some schools or exploitative wages paid to janitorial personnel in others deserve a hearing from all of us, one can't help detecting also in some of the adolescent essayists who appear in these two books that ageless impulse simply to spitball the old teacher while her back's to the class —this time executed under a red banner. And oh, how arrogantly self-righteous the yet unsullied young can be! Because of the humility and warmth perhaps of its young editor, there's less of this in "Our Time Is Now" than in "The High School Revolutionaries," where we hear it stridently and often from representatives of such oppressed areas as Scarsdale.

THE BATTLE FOR MORNINGSIDE HEIGHTS. Why Students Rebel. By Roger Kahn. (Morrow. $6.95.) PUSH COMES TO SHOVE. The Escalation of Student Protest. By Steve Kelman. (Houghton Mifflin. $5.95.) Though the high schoolers insist that they are strictly doing their own thing and not following styles in righteousness and rebellion set by their big brothers at the universities, a glance through these two studies of student insurrections —one on Columbia University's Morningside Heights, the other at Harvard Yard — will convince you of the opposite. The college revolutionaries portrayed in these books appear hardly more genuinely humanistic or intelligently rebellious than their adolescent counterparts.

Roger Kahn's impressively researched history of the Columbia revolt does us a service by granting glimpses from time to time of Mark Rudd sans his ideological war-paint — and what is revealed isn't always pretty. Indeed, it seems that only Kahn's evenhanded liberalism keeps him from planting the ax even deeper.

Steve Kelman, an articulate Harvard undergraduate, isn't forced by political centralism to regard all sides with false fairness. He is an outspoken socialist with an old-fashioned dedication to social justice and democracy, outraged by the brutality, egoism, power-hunger and phoniness of the New Left in general, and their "glorious liberation" of Harvard in the spring of 1968 in particular. He not only questions the good intentions of those who precipitated the chaos he suffered at Harvard, he also recognizes the unreality of revolutionary actions by those not directly injured by economic and political pressures. In the hands of elitist and wealthy radicals at Harvard, revolt became a brutal ritual serving personal needs rooted in existential confusion, ennui and psychopathology. The process, Kelman demonstrates in detail, is a sinister and irrational one. One of his conclusions brands itself into one's memory: "Student revolutionary organizations have almost always been banes of the dispossessed classes they are supposedly trying to help." Amen. If the reactionary disaster should ever come, it's not hard to imagine affluent radicals retreating to the comfort of their families while the less fortunate of the country truly suffer.

Nonetheless, for the moment revolution is chic, and the books —already a score more than those mentioned here—keep rolling from the presses. ■

"Revolution for the hell of it? Why not? It's all a bunch of phony words anyway. Once one has experienced LSD, existential revolution, fought the intellectual game-playing of the individual in society, of one's identity, one realizes that action is the only reality; not only reality but morality as well. One learns reality is a subjective experience. It exists in my head. I am the Revolution."—Abbie Hoffman in "Revolution For the Hell of It."

"We go into a psychology class on 'Thinking,' a huge lecture hall with 300 students. The professor is up front, diagraming behavior on the blackboard. Everybody writes down in their notebook every word he spews.

"His first words are, 'Good morning, class.'

The guy next to me copies down, 'Good morning, class.'

"Somebody raises his hand and asks: 'Do we have to know that for the exam?'"—Jerry Rubin in "Do It!"

"The meeting never quite got off the ground (meetings seldom do). Everybody suspected the others of being impossibly straight or insufficiently militant, I suppose, and the 'leaders,' those who had called the meetings, accused the lot of us of apathy. . . . Frustration set in (it always does) and, as usual, several people attempted to talk at the same time, precipitating the 934th parliamentary hassle I've suffered since leaving home for college. And finally it was decided that another meeting would be held."
—Raymond Mungo in "Famous Long Ago."

"It is necessary for young people to know that we must use organized and practical techniques. We cannot let ourselves continue to be oppressed on a massive scale. We are not trying to be supermen, because we are not supermen. We are fighting for the preservation of life. We refuse to be brainwashed by comic-book notions that distort the real situation. The only way that the world is ever going to be free is when the youth of this country moves with every principle of human respect and with every soft spot we have in our hearts for human life, in a fashion that lets the pig power structure know that when people are racistly and fascistically attacked, the youth will put a foot in their butts and make their blood chill."—Bobby Seale in "Seize the Time."

"All too often, though, we confuse the doer with the deed and think that they are one and the same. It is the deed we must hate, not the doer of the deed. The policeman acts like a beast, but to call him a beast, a 'pig,' is only to negate the potential of man that is within him. . . . To yell 'Fascist!' at a Wallace supporter is only to guarantee that that individual will be a fascist."—Julius Lester in "Revolutionary Notes."

"He is extremely intelligent, responsible and really a professional. His writing is well structured and has a great deal of style. He's been very cooperative as far as promoting the book, and it really was a pleasure working with him."

The speaker, obviously, is a publishing executive; in this case, straitlaced, in-from-Fairfield-County-every morning Donald Hutter, editor-in-chief of Dial.

Somewhat less expected is the subject of Hutter's compliment: Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman, part-time revolutionary, part-time clown and, judging from recent publishers' lists, pretty near a full-time author.

Hoffman has two books out currently, "Revolution for the Hell of It," published by Dial, and "Woodstock Nation," Random House. Both are typical of a recent rash of works written by authors who fall under the generally accepted genus of radical—the New Left, Black Panthers, the high-school underground—or about radical subjects.

Despite the wide range in quality of writing, virtually all the 30-odd books share several common characteristics. For one thing, the editors who worked on the manuscripts tended to be young (in their late twenties and early thirties) and liberal in their political thinking.

Daniel Moses, for example, the Simon & Schuster editor who handled Jerry Rubin's "Do It!," is 34 years old, wears granny glasses and his hair shoulder length. "I don't look like I work for Metropolitan Life or I.B.M.," he admits. Moses sums up his political philosophy this way: "If American society is polarizing the young and the old, then I, as an individual, stand on the side of the students," a position representative of most of the editors queried.

Perhaps because of their left-of-center leanings, the editors seemed to get along extremely well with the authors. Moses says his relations with Jerry Rubin were excellent. "We had our little to-dos, but that's understandable. All the time he worked on the book, he had the Chicago trial facing him, and he was under severe emotional strain."

Arnold Tovell, Beacon Press, edited "Famous Long Ago," Ray Mungo's reminiscence of his life as editor of The Liberation News Service. Their relationship was so good that Tovell and his family were invited to weekend at Mungo's commune, where they slept in a Spartan room on a bed five feet off the ground. "It was built that way because heat rises," Tovell says. "And it can get pretty cold in Vermont. It was the first time in my life that I had to step on a chair to get into bed."

Another similarity shared by most of the editors is that the manuscripts they received were relatively clean and did not require extensive revisions. Several of the writers, of course—notably Herbert Marcuse, whose "Five Lectures" was published by Beacon in April—have been writing for years. Only one editor—nameless by request—came close to saying that one manuscript was somewhat less than standard. "We worked very closely together," he said about an author, a euphemism for "It required a great deal of rewriting."

Surprisingly, most of the editors felt that the fame—or notoriety—of the authors was secondary in importance to the contents of the book, surprising because sales figures seem to indicate otherwise. The best sellers of the group have been written by the Rubins (over 190,000 paperback copies of "Do It!" have been sold at this writing, and are continuing to sell at the rate of 3,000 to 5,000 copies per week) and the Hoffmans (over 125,000 soft-cover copies of "Revolution for the Hell of It" sold).

John J. Simon of Random House edited Bobby Seale's "Seize the Time." Simon feels Random House "would have published the book if it had beeen written by Joe Doaks. It's simply a well done work about a man's life. Frankly, some of our important authors aren't as good."

Probably more realistic, however, was Joyce Johnson's appraisal. Mrs. Johnson, now with McGraw-Hill, edited both "Revolution for the Hell of It" and "Picking Up the Gun," by former Black Panther Earl Anthony, when she was at Dial.

"It's much harder for a book by an author no one has heard of to surface unless it's really an exceptional book," she feels. On the other hand, Mrs. Johnson contends that notoriety is not enough to make a book a best seller. "Sure, Abbie is notorious, but there's a lot of really brilliant stuff in his book."

There was total agreement on the effect publicity—such as the Chicago conspiracy trial — has on sales. Simply: sales go up. But this, as James H. Silberman, editor-in-chief at Random House, points out, "is true about every book we publish." Adds John Simon: "Virtually every articulate author on the 'Today' show sells books."

Simon & Schuster's Moses, however, contends that for this type of book, the publicity reaches a "secondary audience"—adults who might not be aware of Jerry Rubin or that he wrote a book unless he presented an inscribed copy to Judge Julius Norman, an event duly recorded in the nation's papers.

The primary audience, Moses feels, is young people, who are "subject to word-of-mouth reviews. Someone brings a copy of the book into a dormitory, and, if he likes it, spreads the word."

Moses's contention seemingly is borne out by the sales statistics. As might be expected, the highest figures are recorded in college book stores, university towns and large urban areas like New York, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Similarly, when a book is brought out simultaneously in soft and hard cover, paperback sales (one always associates paperbacks with students, even at $1.95 to $2.95 plus tax—even in these affluent times) outpace cloth sales by a margin of roughly 10 to 1. In fact, when there is dual publication, the hard-cover edition is brought out solely for the benefit of reviewers—who reportedly have an aversion to passing judgment on books that come out only in paperback—and for sale to institutions.

Since a definite relationship between events and these books exists, timing became a critical factor. Many, therefore, were produced in weeks instead of the months it normally takes.

The most unusual production schedule was at Avon, which rushed 115,000 copies of "The Middle of the Country," about the Kent State massacre, to newsstands and book stores in less than three weeks.

Editor-in-chief Peter Mayer was in Cleveland on a business trip the day of the shootings, and his plane back to New York was filled with students returning home. One, Bill Warren, engaged Mayer in conversation and suggested the book.

The idea was approved, and Warren spent the next several days in Avon's New York office calling students, faculty members—anyone who might have seen the incident and would have photos or a story to tell. Because she was the closest in age, a young assistant editor, Karen Levine, was asked to coordinate the effort.

As reports came in—many by telephone—they were taken down on any available typewriter, collected and shipped en masse to Chicago—without editing or proof reading—to be printed. This process differed even from most instant books, which are largely prepared before an event—a moon landing or a spectacular trial—with just enough space left over to fill in the very dramatic ending.

Editors unanimously attributed their houses' motives for publishing these books to something higher than money. Said one: "I find it hard to believe that any publisher could make enough money on these books to really make it worth his while. If there were not some desire to let the author's views be known—and to let him tell it himself, not be guoted in a newspaper or magazine—then these books never would be published."

Adds another: "When people talk to journalists, there's a good chance that there will be some distortion. Publishing is the only medium that affords these authors an opportunity to say it as it is in their own words. Right now there's a need for these books. They're important as news, and we felt that we had to offer this opportunity."

Summing it up best perhaps is a poignant story told by Jeremy Cott of Beacon Press, who edited Father Daniel Berrigan's "The Trial of the Catonsville Nine" and "Trial Poems." Cott quotes a conversation he had with Father Berrigan about a manuscript delivery date:

Father Berrigan: "I can have it for you in late August."

Cott: "Fine, but late September is all right, too."

Father Berrigan: "No, late August. I might be in jail by September."

Cott: "Well, then your manuscript is something of a risk, isn't it?"

Father Berrigan: "Yes, but then so is the entire peace movement." ■

Most Whites Are Racist, Rights Panel Essay Says

By DUNCAN SPENCER
Star Staff Writer

Almost every white American is a racist—whether or not he thinks, knows, or does anything about, U.S. racial problems—according to an essay released by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights today.

In the 50-page pamphlet, written by an economist who was a consultant to the Kerner Commission, a new definition of the explosive term is attempted. Under the definition, practically every institution of government and industry here is part of a "system" that discriminates against non-whites.

Attached to the essay are the comments of five commission members, two of whom, vice chairman Stephen Horn, and member Robert S. Rankin, enter strong objections to some of the essay's methods and conclusions. The commission approved the essay as a whole, however, as a "catalyst" for producing national debate on the issue.

The author is Dr. Anthony Downs, senior vice president of the Real Estate Research Corp., and a consultant to the Rand Corp., the Urban Institute, the Brookings Institution, the Ford Foundation, and a number of federal agencies.

All whites, he says, have contributed to a system that "constantly produces racist effects from actions which are usually not overtly racist in either content or intention."

He says he was concerned, after publication of the Kerner report, which examined the causes of the 1967 riots and blamed white attitudes, that many whites were enraged at being labeled racists even though they had little opportunity to practice it.

He makes his new definition of the term "any attitude, action or institutional structure which subordinates a person or group because of his or their color."

Downs is quick to differentiate racism from racial pride. Thus, he argues, the black power, black awareness, and other minority solidarity movements are racist "only when these reactions involve some sort of subordination."

Downs outlines two main objectives to combat racism: First, to change the behavior of whites so they will no longer consciously or unconsciously support racism, and second, to increase the capabilities of non-white groups so they can overcome the handicaps racism imposes.

He proposes nine basic strategies, including the following:

Build up the capabilities of minority group members through political support and support for concepts such as black power and black nationalism to give minorities greater bargaining power.

Develop legislation to make it the self-interest of whites to support minority aims.

Develop alliances of non-whites and whites to obtain common goals in place of the separate efforts which are now the norm.

Open up "many more" opportunities for minority group members in business, housing, schools and personal daily life.

SUBJECT: REVIEW OF "FAMOUS DETECTIVES" BY EUGENE B. BLOCK

Captioned book was recently sent us by the author, who is on the Special Correspondents' List. The book is autographed: "To my highly esteemed friend, Hon. J. Edgar Hoover--with deep appreciation of his wonderful help in my book ventures. Our meeting last October was a highlight in my life. Eugene B. Block, August 1, 1967." Mr. Block previously advised us that he was forwarding a copy of the book, and he was thanked by letter of 1-18-67.

REVIEW OF "FAMOUS DETECTIVES"

This book consists of thirteen chapters, each dealing with an individual detective. In addition to the Director (Chapter 3), the other "famous detectives" are: Allan Pinkerton; Raymond C. Schindler; Frederick R. Cherrill, Head of Fingerprint Department of Scotland Yard; George W. Cornish, Superintendent, Scotland Yard; George Hunter White, U. S. Bureau of Narcotics; Tamegoro Ikii, Deputy Chief, Tokyo Metropolitan Police; Joseph Petrosino, New York Police Department; William J. Burns, Secret Service; Charles Chenevier, French Surete; Ora E. Slater, Cal Crim Detective Bureau, Cincinnati; Edward Oscar Heinrich of California; and Daniel J. O'Connell, Southern Pacific Railroad.

RE: REVIEW OF "FAMOUS DETECTIVES"
BY EUGENE B. BLOCK

Chapter three, which is entitled "Chief of the FBI" sets forth background concerning Mr. Hoover and the FBI and details our activities in connection with John Dillinger. Block begins this chapter by stating "Ask anyone to name the most famous detective in America today and without hesitation he will answer: 'J. Edgar Hoover, of course. He's the boss of the FBI.'"

Material for this chapter was furnished to Block by the Bureau. Block met the Director on 10-21-66.

RECOMMENDATION:

Is Someone Bugging You?

MR. WESTIN, who teaches public law and government at Columbia, is the author of "Privacy and Freedom," to be published this spring.

THE INTRUDERS: The Invasion of Privacy by Government and Industry. By Senator Edward V. Long. Illustrated. 230 pp. New York: Frederick A. Praeger. $5.95.

By ALAN WESTIN

READERS of the Congressional Record and regular visitors to the Senate chamber during the past three years have grown accustomed to a rather special bit of ritual. A short, stocky man wearing rimless glasses and smiling almost pixieishly is recognized by the chair. "Mr. President," the man announces tartly, "my Big Brother item for today is. . . ." With this introduction, Senator Edward V. Long, Democrat of Missouri, places in the Record his latest example of wiretapping, personality testing, lie-detector probing, peephole and camera watching, or other assorted methods of surveillance of individuals by government and industrial investigators. At the end of the insertion comes the Senator's favorite question: "Mr. President, how far will Big Brother be allowed to go in America?"

Senator Long's Big Brother items sometimes come from the press or from magazines in the field of technology, law and the social sciences. But the majority of them are products of hearings on invasion of privacy held since 1964 by the Subcommittee on Administrative Practice and Procedure of the Senate Judiciary Committee, of which Senator Long is chairman. Now the Senator has produced a book reporting the main findings of these hearings, a full-dress parade of government tappers, private eyes, corporate sleuths and private voyeurs, with well chosen illustrations to show how ominously wide and unrestricted is the surveillance net they have cast. The book also summarizes the legal status under American law of wiretapping, eavesdropping, polygraphing and other intrusive techniques, and offers Senator Long's recommendations for legislative action. The book comes at a perfect time, since a major effort is now developing to get Congress finally to pass legislation on government and private use of electronic eavesdropping.

THE writing of Senator Long's book underscores the fact that in the past decade Congressional committees have emerged as one of the most energetic and effective forces supporting privacy. By exposing the practices of Federal agencies, the committees have accomplished several things: they have prompted executive action ending many of the most flagrant official activities; they may well have laid the groundwork for major Federal legislation in the near future; and they have provided official support for some present and future judicial declarations expanding the constitutional and common law rights of privacy.

At least a dozen committees of Congress have dealt with this issue in the 1960's, but four main committees have been the leaders in this area: Senator Long's subcommittee; the House Government Operations Committee, under Rep. John Moss of California; the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights, under Senator Sam Ervin of North Carolina; and the House Subcommittee on Invasion of Privacy, under Rep. Cornelius Gallagher of New Jersey.

How the story told in "The Intruders" was put together by the Long subcommittee is worth noting, since it is not described in the book. With Senator Long's support and general approval, the subcommittee's chief counsel, Bernard Fensterwald Jr., a shrewd Washington hand and veteran staff director of the Senate Antitrust and Monopoly subcommittee, began in 1963 to look into the use of wiretapping and eavesdropping by Federal agencies. No Congressional committee in the 1950's or early 1960's had ever been able to pry this account from Federal agencies and make it public.

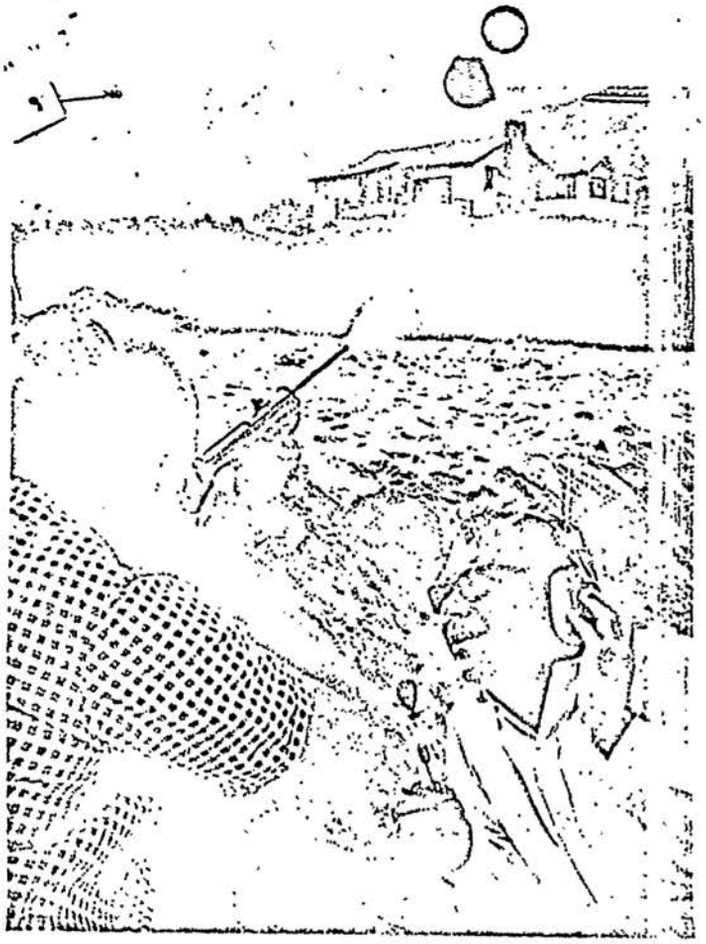
First, the subcommittee's talented chief investigator, Raymond C. Cole Jr., sniffed around law enforcement circles and talked to the nation's leading private wiretapping experts. Since Federal agencies must buy their equipment with Government funds supervised by Congress, Fensterwald obtained the lists of listening and recording equipment approved by the General Accounting Office for Federal procurement. The subcommittee then wrote each manufacturer and asked which Federal agencies the equipment had been sold to. Armed with this information (a few threats of subpoenas were necessary to get the facts), the subcommittee then wrote each Federal agency which had purchased the equipment and asked for a report on the use being made of it. The choice was either to respond or else to contend that the equipment was not being used at all, an admission of waste that no Federal agency would be likely to make to Congress.

To supplement this line of attack, the subcommittee also drew up a general questionnaire asking each major Federal agency (apart from the F.B.I., military intelligence, and C.I.A.) to list all the eavesdropping equipment it owned and describe how it was being used. Since the word was out in Washington that the Long subcommittee had already been to the suppliers, the pressure was on the Federal agencies to give accurate replies. Only when these questionnaire reports and some stormy interviews with Federal agency spokesmen had provided them with a clear picture of Federal use did the Long subcommittee staff move to public hearings in 1964.

With a well-developed sense of political timing, the Long subcommittee did not start its hearings by taking on that fortress of influence on Capitol Hill, the F.B.I. Instead, it opened its hearings with wiretapping and bugging practices by the Internal Revenue Service, a move guaranteed to trigger spasms of alarm down the spines of the nation's taxpayers. The subcommittee then moved to eavesdropping by the Food and Drug Administration (intensifying fears in the business community) and to the Post Office, whose "mail covers" put the nation's basic system of correspondence under scrutiny and whose peephole and camera surveillance of postal employes stirred labor unions to full concern.



With these disclosures having laid the groundwork, the Long subcommittee turned to the F.B.I. Using its own sources and the disclosures that emerged from the Bobby Baker case, the subcommittee exposed such patterns of F.B.I. practice as the leasing of telephone lines and, most damaging of all, the use of eavesdropping by the F.B.I. in tax-evasion and gambling investigations. The carefully created image that the F.B.I. taps and bugs only in cases involving national security or situations directly imperiling human life was finally and publicly destroyed.

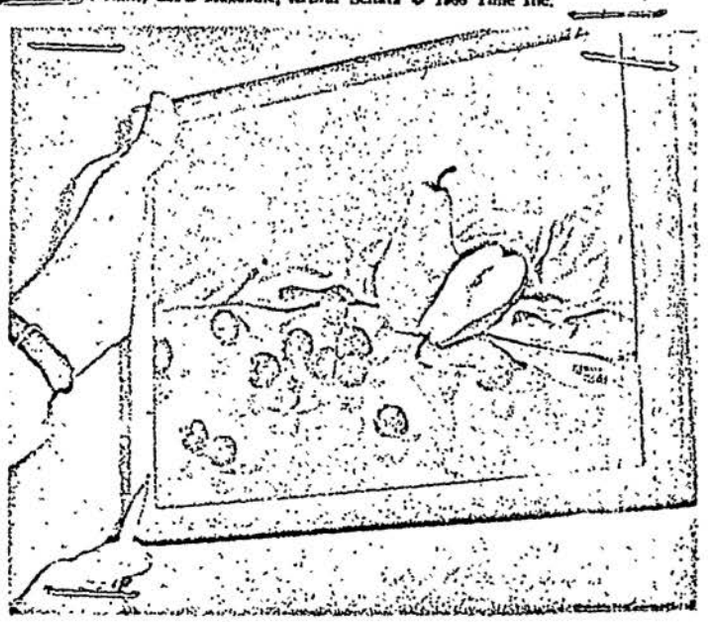
What "The Intruders" provides is a collection of the Long subcommittee data in one handy volume for the nonspecialized reader. The case against unchecked government and industrial use of electronic surveillance is made particularly well. Given the Senator's legal and policy focus, the book generally takes it for granted that Americans know what privacy is and when it is improperly invaded, though these issues are not always as simple when social interests are openly weighed. In addition, there could have been a more extended discussion of debate over law enforcement claims to the need of certain limited surveillance powers, if only to explain the basis on which Senator Long rejects these arguments.

DESPITE the points on which one would have liked further discussion, the Senator's policy suggestions on wiretapping and eavesdropping controls are carefully presented, and deserve the most thoughtful consideration from the press and Congress. His position calls for limiting Federal "third - party" wiretapping to a narrowly defined set of national security investigations (and forbidding all use of wiretap evidence in court); restricting Federal and state wiretapping to situations in which one party to the conversation agrees to the monitoring; and providing a similar participant - approval limitation on law-enforcement use of bugging devices. In fact, this is very close to the stand taken by the Johnson Administration, embodied in the Administration bill just sent to Congress. There are still knotty legal and policy issues involved here, and some observers will feel that the better solution is a new system of controls rather than such a complete denial of eavesdropping authority in cases of conspiracy and violent crime. One hopes this issue will be fully discussed in Congressional hearings on the proposed bills.



Since the Long subcommittee is scheduled shortly to hold such hearings (as well as hearings on the J. Edgar Hoover-Robert Kennedy dispute over who authorized electronic eavesdropping during the Kennedy Administration); Senator Long is sure to be well-supplied with "Big Brother items" in the near future. Meanwhile, his book is a welcome source of information showing how far electronic eavesdropping has spread in our society, and how negligent our courts and legislatures have been in not supplying the necessary legal controls to assure that the individual's right to privacy receives the same care as his right to property.

Above, a shotgun fires a "spike mike," which, when embedded in a window or door frame, transmits conversations to the eavesdropper. Above right, a "shocker" is taped to a girl's back, and dimes are taped around it to serve as electrodes. Her partner can then transmit coded shocks across a room to guide her actions; the device can be used to cheat at gambling. The "knot" in the picture frame, right, conceals a radio transmitter that can operate for about 200 hours on a battery hidden behind the picture.

LIBERALS AND COMMUNISM: The "Red Decade" Revisited By Frank A. Warren III. Indiana University Press. 276 pp. $6.95.

THE COMMUNIST CONTROVERSY IN WASHINGTON: From the New Deal to McCarthy. By Earl Latham. Harvard University Press. 446 pp. $7.95.

A decade has gone by since that tormenting national fever subsided which began with the creation of the Dies Committee in 1938 and reached its peak with the Senate's censure of Joe McCarthy in 1954. The time now seems ripe for an assessment of this period by critics who are free from emotional involvement in it and when the tensions about the internal threat of communism no longer inhibit public discussion.

Earl Latham is undoubtedly right in saying that "the temper of those years was suspicious, excited, emotional, pathetic, and hard. There was rage and outrage, accusation and defiance, a Babel of shouting anger. . . ." There was worse—an erosion of that mutual trust which is the essential cement of any society. McCarthy himself—or what came to be known as McCarthyism—was the culminating symptom of the national sickness. In Latham's words:

> Other political figures have been coarse and overbearing, loud and rude, without exciting the anxiety McCarthy generated. There was something else in his manner—a latency that yielded more meaning than the sum of his words, a sense of willingness to perpetrate gross assault without decency or restraint if it served his ends. He could literally unhinge the timid because he wrenched them from their confidence in the normal barriers that protect the personality from violation—courtesy, respect, and the due process of custom and law. McCarthy's power, "like a desolating pestilence," sickened the first two years of the first Eisenhower administration and, like the pox, left ineradicable pits and scars.

Behind the rage and the recrimination, however, lay a deeply troubling reality. An American Communist Party which was a docile tool of the Soviet Government had taken advantage at every turn of American tolerance, idealism, and Constitutional protection of political protest. And there can be no doubt that it had succeeded in infiltrating into public positions of responsibility and trust a number of persons who, at best, believed they could serve their country by serving Soviet interests or who, at worst, were agents of Soviet espionage.

These two books complement each other effectively. Both are solid works of scholarship, clearly defined in aim and written with detachment, verve, and style. Frank A. Warren's book is concerned wholly with the intellectual history of the 1930s, as it reveals the radical-liberal thought of that decade with respect to communism. By an exhaustive study of the polemical essays of a wide range of writers in such magazines as the Nation, the New Republic, and Common Sense, he is able to trace the development and alterations of liberal ideas, though perhaps in greater detail than the average reader is likely to appreciate.

The main trouble with this approach, however, is that almost every articulate political critic and commentator in the 1930s could be considered a liberal. And this means, obviously, that the rubric covered a bewilderingly wide range of opinion. Because of the very nature of liberalism, moreover, the opinions of almost all of its representatives, during a period of social upheaval, were in a continuous state of flux, and the range of their thinking was really too broad to permit valid generalization.

Liberals who became anti-liberal and called themselves conservatives came to indict their former associates as dupes of the Communists and as guilty, somehow, of a betrayal of their own princip[illegible] because they were not as quick as they might have be[illegible] to condemn the excesses and outrages of the Soviet system. But this was a condemnation that ignored the fact that liberalism naturally took a hopeful attitude toward the Russian Revolution and toward the whole experiment of a classless society. Warren quotes Roger Baldwin:

> For 15 years I looked with hope on the Soviet Union as a pioneer in creating an ordered and planned economy in which compulsion would gradually disappear. My support of the combined factors represented by the Soviet Union varied from a high at one time of about 80 per cent to a low of little over 50 per cent until finally, after 1936 when the great purges began, it dropped to a point where the evidence against the promise of the Soviet Union outweighed my hopes.

There is surely nothing discreditable in this position. Some liberals were disillusioned earlier; some held on to their hopes until the signing of the Nazi-Soviet Pact in 1939. Some were slow to accept the harsh truths about Soviet tyranny, tending to dismiss such reports as fabrications of a hostile press; some condoned these outrages as an inescapable cost and consequence of the revolution. Some shrewdly sensed the danger of collaborating with Communists in a Popular Front; some disregarded this danger out of a sense of confidence in the integrity of their own purposes. During the Popular Front period, Warren reminds us, the marked influence of Communism "resulted from an ideological and emotional appeal attuned to the liberals' need for ideological explanation and emotional assurance." As Warren goes on to point out, "the liberals did not respond simply as 'innocent dupes.' It was part of their creed that various groups, differing in methods but agreeing in general principles, could work together."

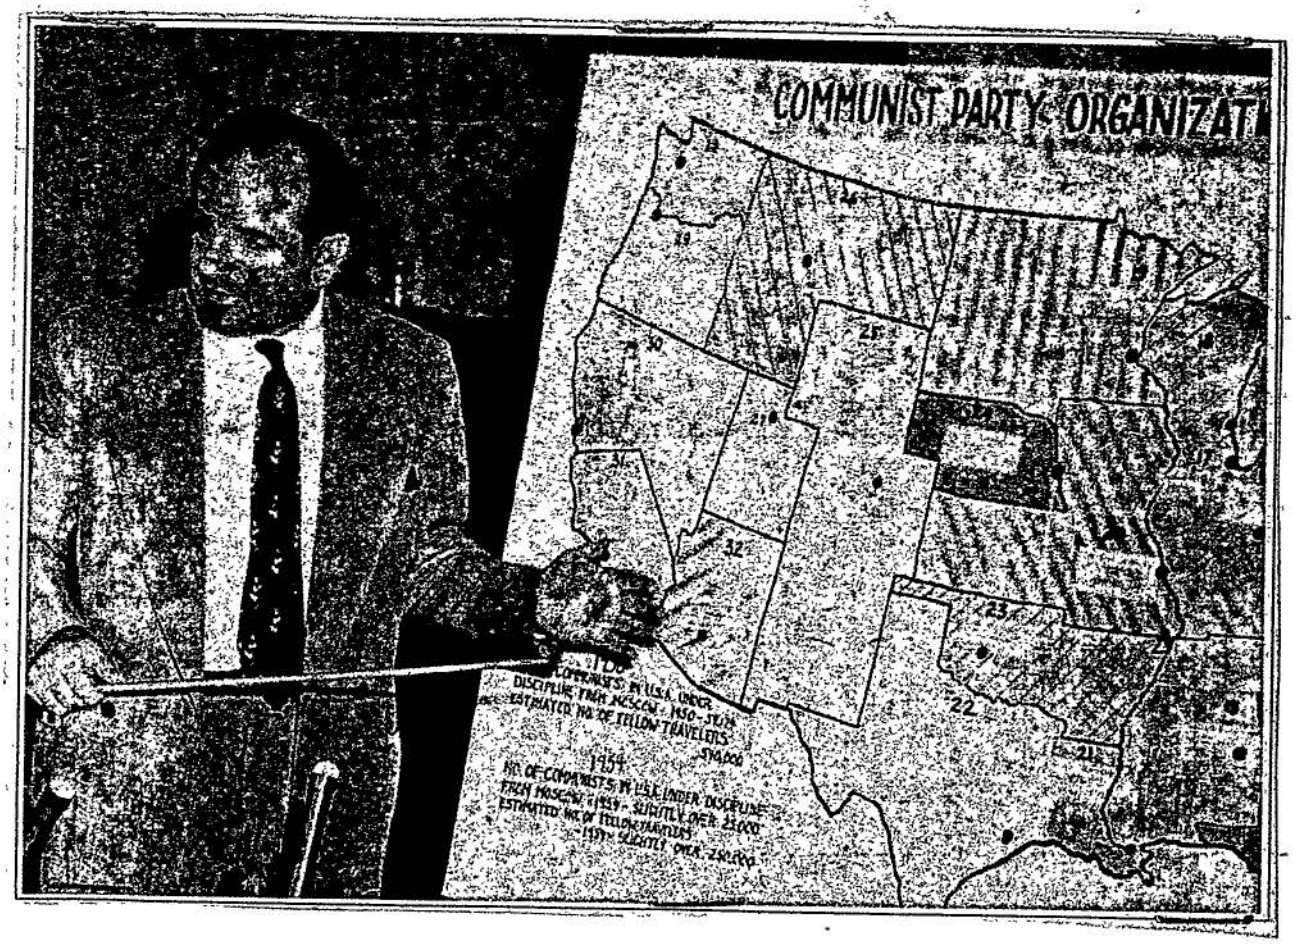
It is important to remember that throughout this period the liberals were engaged in their own vital program of social reform, under the New Deal. They were busy building labor unions and promoting racial equality and advancing social welfare; and if the Communists wanted to tag along in these undertakings, most liberals were willing to let them. But in simple truth it was the Communists, not the liberals, who were the fellow-travelers in this arrangement.

Latham's book presents a larger canvas, which depicts the whole complex picture of the beginnings of Soviet espionage in America, the sensational charges and discoveries of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, the development of the Federal Loyalty-Security Program, and the impact of McCarthyism. All this is done with objectivity, fairness, and judgment. Latham has aimed, and with considerable success, at a history of the period, not at a defense or an attack, and views the characters in this drama with detachment. He provides the "new generation of people who have no memory of the tensions" of that period with a balanced account of events that gains in perspective what it may have lost in passion.

My main reservation is that Latham gives too much credence to the testimony of Whittaker Chambers and Elizabeth Bentley. He remarks that "I have come across no argument against the credibility of the main stories of Bentley and Chambers that seemed to me convincing enough to suspend the tentative conclusion that most of what they said was correct." But one could with equal fairness put it differently and say that much of their testimony has not yet received the corroboration that enables us to accept it.

Behind both of these books lies the question of responsibility and guilt. In his concluding chapter, Warren quotes this criticism of liberal conduct from 1952:

> Did not the major segment of American liberalism, as a result of joining hands with the Communists in a Popular Front, go on record as denying the existence of Soviet concentration camps? Did it not give its blessing to the "liquidation" of millions of Soviet "kulaks?" Did it not apologize for the mass purges of 1936-38, and did it not solemnly approve the grotesque trials of the Old Bolsheviks? Did it not applaud the massacre of the non-Communist left by the GPU during the Spanish Civil War?



All these questions deserve an outraged "No." Many liberals, it is true, were slow—or slower than they should have been—to recognize that the monstrous tyranny of Stalin had smashed their hopes for the Russian Revolution. But with very rare exceptions, they neither applauded nor condoned any of the aspects of this tyranny. They were guilty of no more than a persistent hope that the principles to which they gave fealty would emerge from the rubble of revolution.

But what of the guilt of those castigators of liberalism who betrayed its principles—who were quick to cry that dissent was entitled to no Constitutional protection if it could be labeled disloyal and who were ready, in the service of an hysterical anti-communism, to jettison the very institutions of democracy? Theirs, in truth, was the ugliest and most dangerous form of subversion, for they struck at the foundations of the American society.

By and large, despite much diversity of opinion among them on specific issues, the men recognized as the leaders and champions of liberalism in the post-war years held a reasonable and realistic view of communism. They contained the Soviet Union, and yet spared the world an Armageddon; they recognized the Communist movement for what it was, and yet refused to sacrifice civil liberty.

SUBJECT: "THE DEADLY SILENCE"
BY MRS. RENEE BUSE
INFORMATION CONCERNING
BOOK REVIEWS

The above-captioned book, which has just been released for sale by Doubleday and Company, is devoted almost entirely to three interrelated narcotics cases involving Vito Genovese (La Cosa Nostra "Commission member), John Ormento (a caporegima, or captain, in the Luchese "family"), Carmine Galante (a former caporegima in the Bonanno "family"), Vincent Gigante (Genovese's former bodyguard and chauffeur), and a number of other hoodlums operating in New York State and Canada. The book is only 234 pages long but sells for $4.95 and is being widely publicized by Doubleday and Company.

Obviously written in close collaboration with the Federal Bureau of Narcotics--a picture of whose commissioner, Henry L. Giordano, appears on the dust jacket with the author--Mrs. Buse's book contains only one reference to the FBI. In describing the notorious meeting of La Cosa Nostra leaders which occurred at Apalachin, New York, in November, 1957, she says that the following day the switchboard at the Bureau of Narcotics was "jammed" by telephone calls from the FBI and other investigative agencies, "clamoring for files and information."

Mrs. Buse's writing style is fast-moving and highly readable but is so liberally sprinkled with errors and direct quotes, speculations, and private actions to which she could not possibly have had access, that her book is all but worthless from a documentary standpoint.

Probably the most flagrant example in this respect is a speech Genovese is supposed to have made at Apalachin, condemning such gangland wars as the "Gallo-Profaci family fight." In addition to the fact that no eyewitness has appeared to date to say what transpired at Apalachin, the Gallo-Profaci fight did not even start until nearly four years later.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: "The Deadly Silence"

Mrs. Buse also identifies Frank Costello as the late Albert Anastasia's "first assistant" (whereas the two had actually been "bosses" of their respective "families" and "Commission" members for a number of years prior to Anastasia's assassination in 1957). Nor is there any substantiation for her statement that Joe Profaci was then "the Big Boss," since reliable sources have advised that Genovese--after ordering Costello and Anastasia shot--personally called the meeting, set the agenda, and approved the site where it was to be held.

Still two other errors appear in the reason Mrs. Buse offers for the holding of the meeting and the number of persons present. The theory that underworld leaders had come from as far away as the west coast to decide the fate of a New York City hoodlum who had been accused of trying to "muscle into another man's exclusive jukebox territory" was first advanced by Lieutenant William Mooney, of the New York City Police Department, who later advised that he had no factual proof for the statement.

In saying that 45 men were detained by the New York State Police after leaving the Apalachin meeting, Mrs. Buse also proves that she did a minimum of research on her book, aside from contacting Giordano and other representatives of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. If, for instance, she had read Sergeant Edgar D. Crosswell's testimony before the Senate Select Committee on Improper Activities in the Labor or Management Field, she would know that a total of 60 were actually detained.

Bureau files reveal that Mrs. Buse was appointed editor of "True Detective" magazine in September, 1951, and that we have enjoyed a limited, but friendly, correspondence with her since that time. In April, 1952, she was afforded a special tour of the Bureau's facilities at the Seat of Government.

ACTION:

For information. Mrs. Buse's book will be forwarded to the Bureau Library for permanent retention.

The essays of Mills

POWER, POLITICS AND PEOPLE: The collected essays of C. Wright Mills, edited by Irving Louis Horowitz. Oxford University Press. 657 pp. cloth, $8.50. Ballantine Books. Paperback, $1.45.

C. WRIGHT MILLS broke his heart fighting for the truth. That's the way to live, and the way to die; what a tragedy that his heart was not stronger so that he could have given of his strength, courage, integrity and learning for another generation.

Though he died at the age of 46, he managed to accomplish a great deal; he produced at least four first-rate books and during the last decade of his life no one more than Mills symbolized—especially for students—rebellion against the Establishment, against dogma, and a kind of fierce, intensely personalized devotion to honesty.

In his last years, Mills moved more and more vigorously to an examination of, and an attack upon, U.S. imperialism; in his posthumously published anthology, The Marxists, he announced himself a Marxist, — a "plain one," he hastened to add, by which he meant to make clear his non-affiliated individualism. And Saul Landau, his research assistant during the last months of his life, writes that after visiting the U.S.S.R., shortly before his death, Mills—though persisting in a sharply critical outlook—was confident that the Soviet peoples would succeed in the greatest undertaking to confront human beings—the building of a Communist society.

PROF. IRVING Louis Horowitz, of Hobart and William Smith Colleges, has now presented, manifestly as a labor of love, Mills's collected essays. The book is over 650 pages and contains about 360,000 words. Of the 41 essays, some appear for the first time in print.

The volume is divided into four parts: Power, Politics, People, Knowledge. The first concentrates on the structural, the second on the ideological, the third on the psychological, and the fourth on the sociological. All manifest Mills's wide learning, fierce honesty, polemical style and dissenting commitment.

Two of the finest essays are reviews; one a devastating critique of James Burnham's Managerial Revolution, the other a warm appreciation of the late Robert A. Brady's splendid Business as a System of Power. Both offer significant analysis of the nature of fascism and of reaction in capitalist societies.

I HAVE selected two paragraphs that summarize Mills.

The first is from "The Conservative Mood," published in 1954, a year marking the highest point of influence of the "neo-conservatives":

"The intellectual core of the groping for conservatism is a giving up of the central goal of the secular impulse in the West: the control through reason of man's fate. It is this goal that has lent continuity to the humanist tradition, re-discovered in the Renaissance, and so strong in 19th Century American experience. It is this goal that has been the major impulse of classic liberalism and of classic socialism."

The second is from "Mass Society and Liberal Education," also written in 1954. These sentences conclude that essay:

"Politics as we know it today often rests upon myths and lies and crackpot notions; and many policies, debated and undebated, assume inadequate and misleading definitions of reality. When such myth and hokum prevail, those who are out to find the truth are bound to be upsetting. This is the role of mind, of intellect, of reason, of ideas: to define reality adequately and in a publicly relevant way. The role of education, especially of education for adults, is to build and sustain publics that will go for, and develop, and live with, and act upon, adequate definitions of reality."

"Those who are out to find the truth are bound to be upsetting"—yes, indeed, and especially in a society based on fraud and devoted to deceit. Mills lived in such a society, recognized it as such, and devoted his great talents to being as "upsetting" as he could.

Within a brief review, I do not wish to develop the weaknesses in Mills. But I cannot forbear noting that in all the hundreds of thousands of words Mills wrote in these collected essays—as also in his books—the existence of the Negro people is simply ignored.

AS TO the editing of the volume, the essays, in the body of the book, are not dated and their sources are not given; the reader must go to considerable trouble—poring through the front and rear of the volume—to find these basic facts. While I think the four-part arrangement of the essays is useful, I do not understand why, within that format, they are then not presented chronologically, rather than in an order that seems to have little meaning. Note must also be taken of the large number of typographical errors.

These are, however, details. Mills's essays stand the test of time; their collection was a staggering task, and that Horowitz accomplished it is the great point. In his introduction, Horowitz writes: "The main drift of C. Wright Mills's work is linked to the practical importance of an ethically viable social science. This is so because such a sociology confronts the facts with integrity, and confirms the integrity by doing something about the facts." This is an apt summary of the work and life of Mills. —Herbert Aptheker

A. MITCHELL PALMER

Palmer as A Political Phenomenon

A. MITCHELL PALMER: Politician. By Stanley Coben. (Columbia University Press; $7.50.)

This is a searching and interesting study of the career of an ambitious Pennsylvania Democrat — a reformer and an insatiable grasper for more political power.

Had Mitchell Palmer hailed from a less-rock-ribbed Republican State than Pennsylvania—from New York, for example — he might easily have achieved his ultimate ambition, which was to be President of the United States. Although he was able to win election to the lower house of Congress and to become the most powerful Democrat in his State, he was unable to win a State-wide election—for the Senate—or to carry Pennsylvania in either 1912 or 1916 for Woodrow Wilson.

In 12 Years

Nevertheless, as the author has pointed out, he was able to achieve prominence, political power and high office. Within 12 years—from 1909 to 1921—he was a member of the House, he was Democratic national committeeman of Pennsylvania and party leader, he was alien property custodian during World War I and Attorney General, and in the early months of 1920 he was the leading likely nominee of the Democratic Party for President.

Although Mr. Palmer was able to fight his way from genteel poverty to wealth and affluence and always enjoyed a certain amount of luxury, his real love—as shown by Mr. Coben—was political power. It was his desire for political power and high office which led him from the championship of reform and organized labor to the exercise of drastic action, as Attorney General, during the Red scare. Mr. Coben has given the keenest attention to the Red scare and Mr. Palmer's handling of the issue as Attorney General, particularly to the so-called Palmer raids in which hundreds of aliens suspected of being Communists and followers of the Bolsheviki in Russia were rounded up for deportation. No other Attorney General, Mr. Coben writes, has ever flouted to such degree the civil liberties guaranteed under the United States Constitution. During the Red scare 36 bombs were mailed from New York to blow up important Americans in public office and private life. A bomb was hurled at the front of Mr. Palmer's own home and had he been in that part of the house he probably would have been killed.

Mr. Palmer's story, Mr. Coben writes, "is a classic example of democracy's most notorious weakness. Sagacious commentators, beginning with those who drafted the Constitution, have warned that the rule by majority is both the greatest glory and the most serious hazard to our system; that our liberties are endangered most not by tyrants, but by democrats. If Mr. Palmer was one of the dangerous men in our history, it was not because he attempted to impose his rule or his policies upon the people, but because he tried to win power by carefully attuning himself to what he thought were the strong desires of the American people." It seems unfair to Mr. Palmer, however, to suggest he was "most dangerous" for such reasons. A number of our leaders have carefully kept their ears to the ground to keep themselves in office—some of them in the White House.

Red Cloaks and Daggers

Reviewed by Pat Frank

Mr. Frank's 1956 novel, "Forbidden Area," told how a Soviet spy, educated as an American, landed and worked in the United States.

SCHOOL FOR SPIES. By J. Bernard Hutton. Coward-McCann. 222 pp. $3.95.

THIS BOOK may raise goose bumps in the FBI but it will shake the Soviet Embassy. It is a factual spy book with the clear ring of truth in it. A lot of coded cables will be swapped across the Atlantic, I asking, "How did Hutton find out?" and a more ominous, "Who talked?" For this is a really definitive study of the Soviet espionage system and how it works.

Hutton's background provides few clues. He was a writer for a Czech Communist paper until he was sent to Moscow in 1934. He was trained at the Lenin School. In 1938 he resigned from the Party and returned to Prague but was forced to leave Czechoslovakia because of his, at that time, unfashionable anti-Nazi articles. Now in London, "a citizen of no country," he writes for London and New York papers.

IT IS APPARENT that he has maintained some of his Moscow contacts by clandestine means, for he takes you inside the Russian spy schools and tells in detail how they operate, creating Americans, Canadians, Englishmen, and others, out of Russians. American intelligence has known since 1945 that such schools existed, but never before has such a detailed description been published.

Russia's most important spy university, Hutton reveals, is called by the jawbreaker name Gaczyna. It lies, 100 miles southeast of Kuibyshev and encompasses an area of 425 closely guarded square miles. In this area are American, British and Canadian "colleges," or sectors.

An aspiring agent is screened for a year before he is tapped for Gaczyna. He must expect 10 years of training in an exact replica of an American or British or Canadian town before tests prove him capable of becoming an operative. He must think, speak and act like an American or an Englishman, but his heart and soul must remain Russian.

His cover, when he lands, say, in the United States, will be perfect. He will carry a legitimate birth certificate (although that person will be long dead). He will have all the documents, from driving licenses and Social Security card to passport, to prove his identity. And, of course he will have money and freedom of movement. And he will have communications. He is a carefully honed and very dangerous weapon.

Abel in the United States and Lonsdale in England attest to the success of the school. They were exposed and captured, true, but espionage is like an iceberg, with only one-tenth showing above the surface.

AFTER FINISHING "School For Spies," one is inclined to wonder what the United States is doing, until you remember the U-2. For years we maintained a continual aerial reconnaisance of Russia, and the Russians either didn't know about it or couldn't find a way to check it.

As a guess, I would say that one U-2 flight was worth a hundred highly trained graduates of that town with the unpronounceable name. After all, any filling station provides you, free, with a detailed map of vital areas of the United States, while in Russia there are not many filling stations, and none of them passes out maps.

Also, I would hope that the CIA has its own schools where Americans learn to be Russians. In the long run, it may not matter very much. All you really need is an accurate reading on the thinking of one man in the Kremlin.

CUBA vs THE C.I.A.

by Robert E. Light and Carl Marzani

$1 ppd.

The GUARDIAN's Robert E. Light and Carl Marzani, a former State Dept. intelligence officer, have combined efforts to probe behind the "official" explanation of the unsuccessful Cuban invasion to get at Washington's real plan and real motives. They have pulled back Allen Dulles' cloak and exposed a dagger pointed at the world.

The authors chart the invasion in detail, from its inception to its demise. They list who was involved in the plotting and who was opposed. They reveal how close the unsuspecting American people came to nuclear war.

The plot reads like mystery fiction, but the characters are real and the story is true.

To understand the intelligence agency mentality, the authors examine the CIA and trace the career of its director. They include an SS document on a conversation between Dulles and a Nazi official in 1943.

A concluding section deals with the dilemma of U.S. foreign policy and points a way for Washington to adjust peacefully to a changing world.

Cuba vs. the CIA is a handy pocket reference (6" x 9") you can carry to answer the distortions you hear from friends and co-workers. You may want also additional copies for them.

Anti-Reds Blamed In Undermining U. S. Churches

Anti-Communists are doing more to undermine America's churches than are the Communists, according to an article in the July issue of "The Episcopalian," church magazine.

Anti-Communists, the article states, are largely responsible for a "campaign which threatens to weaken and demoralize America's churches by planting in the public mind the suspicion that they are overrun by Reds."

The article goes on to say that, according to the F. B. I., Communists in this country are "as pleased with the results as if they had planned the whole operation themselves."

The article, entitled "What About Communism in Our Churches?" says that the charges are being made by "genuine, if extreme, conservatives, who are incensed at the social pronouncements" of various Christian organizations. Actually, the article states, real Communist efforts to infiltrate the churches have met with failure."

Vic Brown, attracted physically to Ingrid, a young woman who works in his office, thinks he loves her, and after a very short time of dating and love making, realizes that "there isn't the magic there was at the beginning." . . . "I don't love her, and that's the awful truth." . . . "how can I tell her I've been taken in because sex and a dream have got all mixed up inside me?" . . . "I'm caught and that's a fact—oh, what a fool; what a bloody, bloody fool!"

Through the eyes of Vic, Mr. Barstow sees the universe as a Godless place of blind necessity and inexorable law, and seems to ask us not to weep, not to laugh, but to understand the misery of the "life sentence" Vic drifted into through his own weakness. Some of the inchoate philosophy of Vic is in such a passage:

> "I reckon there's no such thing as sin and punishment. There's what you do and what comes of it. There's right things and there's wrong things, wrong things happen to you—and that's the punishment. But there's no easy way out because if you do only right things you don't always come off best because there's chance. After every thing else there's chance and you can do the best you can and you can't allow for that" p. 309).

After living through a series of unhappy and sometimes tragic events Vic realizes that the adventitious charms of Ingrid, who is now his wife, have disappeared. He hopes that together they can find a real love that will come with shared living. As he says, he hopes so, "because its for a long, long time."

Although the theme and the plot are as old as the sin that is described, the language, a combination of Yorkshire slang and profanity, is new (to me at least) and there is no denying that Mr. Barstow is a virtuoso of rhythm and accent.

There is much humor in the racy dialogue:

> "She was a bint with the neatest pair of gams I've seen" (p. 83).
> "Teeth, all sticking out of the gums any-old-how like gravestones in a mouldy old church-yard" (p. 70).
> "The trouble is there's two sides to everybody and Ingrid brings out all the worst in me instead of the best" (p. 209).

This is a novel written on a purely personal plane in the comic tradition of pure criticism. It is extremely witty and sad by turns, permeated with echoes of universal ideas: I have the distinct impression that Mr. Barstow knew Chekhov's line "Man will only become better when you make him see what he is like."

Peacock, Jere — Valhalla

Putnam. Jan. 9, 1961. 510p. $4.95. (III)

This book is Endsville, as the teenagers say, in the field of obscene, vulgar and profane words. You may have wondered at times just how far it would be possible to go in that field? If you read Valhalla you will rest secure that the ultimate has been reached.

In this book you have a literal transcription of the talk and actions of a group of Marines who, after a session in the Korean War, come to Japan for an interlude between wars. If there are any punches pulled, you can't imagine what they are, except perhaps in the field of abnormality. This "realism" is going to count against the book, which is unfortunate, because the book is worthwhile. It has a very important message. To have toned down the language and the descriptions would have deprived the book of much of its power.

Let us start by saying that this is an adult book. Secondly let us say that the realistic language is not put in as a lurid detail to lure a curious reader. The language is an essential and substantial part of the book. You might say that the book should not have been written, but you can't say that it should have been put through a kind of moral wringer.

From the book the first thing that we learn is that there is something wrong with the Marine Corps. They seem to be a group of men without ideals; they are men trained to kill; they are men who have turned sour. The general idea seems to be that they join the Corps under false inducements. Once in the Corps they are flooded with hypocrisy, e.g. a chaplain talks to them and contradicts what he says by shacking up with a Japanese girl in an area remote from the group. Their idea about things back in the USA is that the Capitalists are in power and that they are exploiting the poor. Speaking of Pretty Boy Floyd and Dillinger, one of the Marines says:

> "The goddam insurance companies screwed them . . . , took their land, and everything they owned. Just like they're doing today. And they never committed half the crimes they were accused of. But Old J. Edgar Hoover took advantage of this, see? It was a good gimmick to get his start and build a name. After that," he said with contempt, "after they got a few of the big ones like Gillis, Floyd and Dillinger, you couldn't stop the glory boys."
> "There's your goddam robber barons," Poke agreed, "The F.B.I."

Another thing which is evident from the book is the evil of a standby army. The ennui, the doing of things which have no meaning, (standing guard when there is nothing to guard), these things really drive the men. The author makes you feel the terrible tensions which build up in men separated from home life and the pathways of cultured man. (This Marine division was not part of the occupying force, just a division standing by in the event of further trouble in the Far East.) Perhaps this thing is necessary. Something should be done, if it is, to change things, e.g. screen out borderline maniacs and provide those remaining with some possibilities of family life.

There is a horrible account of life in a Marine Brig. The way the men are treated can not be duplicated, we hope, in jails for the worst criminals run in the worst way in the USA. And this treatment is for offenses which are minor. In the case of the man described in the book, it was for leaving his guard post and then going berserk. If this part of the book is true, there should be some investigation. This is by far the worst part of the book. A similar account in From Here to Eternity is tame compared to this. You are surprised to find that the Marine Corps could contain personnel so sadistic; secondly you are amazed to hear that they are not only tolerated but encouraged in their activity; and, lastly, you wonder how the men who command the Marines, can be so deaf to the rudiments of modern penology.

If there is a hero of the book, it is the Japanese people. When you recall that this is an account by a man who has no interest in building up these people, you are amazed to find out how friendly and likeable they are. Most of the contacts were with the women, with a sexual background; but looking beyond this it is surprising how kind they were, interested in the welfare of the men, understanding of the stresses they were going through, never trying to victimize or swindle them. The Marines seemed to travel easily, even in civilian clothes, all over the country. This is one of the most fascinating parts of the book.

Although this is the first book Mr. Peacock has written, he is not an amateur writer. He writes very well; he observes very closely and when he interprets the thoughts of his characters, even when they are Japanese, he does this with great skill. He is never boring. He is able to continue the narrative of the same individual for several chapters and only turns to another Marine when you yourself feel that things have gone far enough. We will hear much more of this young author. As a final word: while reviewing this book, I was present at a men's study group. The topic of discussion was a recent article in America on Catcher in the Rye which contains much profanity and sex. In line with this discussion I brought up Valhalla. All the men agreed that the language and drinking and fornication described in Valhalla are actually true accounts of life in the armed forces and also incidentally in many of our modern factories. In other words this is the state of affairs that our younger generation is headed for. To shut our eyes and bury our heads in the sand is not going to answer the question that Mr. Peacock is asking.

Dayan, Yaël — Envy the Frightened
World. Jan. 17, 1961. 187p. $3.50. (IIa)

The interest in this slim novel lies mainly in its picture of life in an Israeli village, situated close to the border and within earshot of hostile rifles. Its young author, Yaël Dayan, should know whereof she speaks, since she is the daughter of General Moshe Dayan, former commander-in-chief of the Israeli Army, in which she served two years, after enlisting in 1956 at the outbreak of the Sinai war, and where she earned her commission as a lieutenant.

The settlers of this pioneering colony of Beit-On are refugees from Europe, jealously wedded to their land and resolutely bent upon its defense. Save for the gentle old cobbler, Rabbi Lamech, and a handful of old folks, the faith of these rugged people reposes not in the God of their fathers but in the ground they till and the guns they carry. To defend the acres they have wrested from the flinty hills they feel they must rely solely upon their own strength, tenacity and courage. To this end weakness and fear must be bred out of their sons; and cowardice must be banished from their midst as the evil of evils.

In this Spartan environment, in a secret spot in the hills, we meet young Nimrod, a strong, sensitive, handsome boy of eight, playing the favorite game of the youngsters of the village, "Who is strong?" Each in turn must respond to the challenge by undertaking a feat that proves beyond doubt his fearlessness and strength. Nimrod excels in this kind of competition and under the tutelage of his father and the goading of Gideon, the village hero, quickly puts behind him the fairy tales, toys and fears of childhood to become a hardened, lonely uncommunicative young tough, bent upon proving himself a hero and patriot. If we were to judge his case as typical, it would appear that there is danger Israel may be rearing its own homebred type of Nazi.

However Gideon falls victim to his foolhardy recklessness and in his crippled and embittered state realizes how badly he was misled. He attempts in vain to open Nimrod's eyes to the errors of his ways, which have brought unhappiness to his family and threaten to wreck his marriage with Elli, a gentle Hungarian refugee. But it is not until he is engulfed with an overwhelming wave of fear for the safety of his own son, now playing in turn the game of "who is strong?" that Nimrod realizes that courage is rather the knowledge of what is to be feared than the fear of fear itself and that there may be, after all, grounds to envy the frightened.

For adults who are interested in the conflicts and developments in Israel, this story, simply and artlessly told, with its moral that fearlessness can destroy a man, may prove of interest.

Wright, Richard — Eight Men
World. Jan. 23, 1961. 250p. $3.95. (IIb)

When Richard Wright died two months ago in Paris, he had reached the position of America's best-selling and most widely known Negro author. Born in poverty in the South, holding countless jobs to support himself and his family, undergoing constant abuse and mistreatment, this sensitive and gifted man told much of his personal story in the classic Black Boy. So many episodes in this autobiography are memorable; yet, perhaps, the most characteristic incident in the book was Wright's attempt as a youth to borrow books from a Southern library. Borrowing the library card of a friendly white man, Wright had to pretend that he was really obtaining the books for the white man. From such episodes as this, it is not difficult to see why Wright eventually exiled himself to France, where he had freedom from prejudice and where he could be accepted as a human being. A tragic and bitter story was Richard Wright's life, and, yet, the bitterness which permeates much of his literary work is purifying. This bitterness is both a lament and a cry for justice. Above all, this bitterness is the truth speaking in genuine sincerity.

This present book is a collection of eight narratives, one of which is more an autobiographical essay than a short story. All of these tales are written in simple, straightforward prose, which is generally effective and always moving. Sincerity and impassioned feeling constantly earmark Wright's style. At its best this style is a powerful and perfect medium for his down-to-earth people who are caught in fundamental situations. At its worst—in a story such as "Man, God Ain't Like That"—this style becomes schoolboyish and inept.

Most of this collection is devoted to Negroes, both in the South and in American urban society. One tale is set in Copenhagen, another in Africa and Paris. The non-American locale stories are considerably inferior to the American narratives, both in meaning and in conception. Wright is at his best in "The Man Who Saw the Flood," a story of Negro tenant farmers victimized by a flood; "Man of All Work," an episode about a decent

Bonn's Censors Condemn Book by Nazi War II Hero

BONN, Nov. 19 (AP).—The West German government's censorship board has classified as "dangerous to youth" a book by the man who was the most decorated German soldier under the Nazi regime. It dismisses atrocities as mistakes in the heat of battle.

The author, Hans Ulrich Rudel, former colonel and pilot of a fighter-bomber, was credited with destroying a battleship and 519 tanks in 2,800 combat missions during the war.

Calls It "Hate Book"

The censorship board calls his book, "Of War and Peace," a "hate and propaganda book against the present democratic order."

The board, headed by a former prosecutor, Robert Schilling, was established six years ago. It includes representatives of the arts, book publishers and distributors, youth organizations, the churches and the state governments.

"We cannot ban a publication, but we can prohibit its sale to persons under eighteen years of age and its public display," Mr. Schilling said.

"Also, we cannot act on our own initiative but only upon a complaint from a state government or a prosecutor."

Mr. Schilling said the board's first task was banning the sale of sadistic "comic books" imported from the United States, Sweden and Italy.

Got "Rid of Trash"

"We were very successful in getting rid of this trash," he said, "and the distributors co-operated fully and without protest."

Another problem has been so-called men's magazines.

"These magazines carry almost identical stories and they always deal with sex, sadism and brutality," Mr. Schilling said.

"There's always the American flyer shot down over Germany during World War II who is miraculously liberated from prison by sparsely clad females, or the shipwrecked American sailor in the South Pacific who, instead of hardship, winds up with some jungle chief's harem."

Hundreds of war-adventure booklets have been flooding the West German market lately.

"These are being put out as true stories, but in most cases you can see after reading only a few pages that the author has absolutely no idea of military matters," Mr. Schilling said.

Praise for S. S.

A number of these booklets already have been put on the board's blacklist. Some call the Hitler S. S. (Elite Guard) the "advance guard of the concept of a united Europe."

The booklets usually portray the Germans as "super heroes" who frequently gulp a glass of schnapps before squeezing the trigger of a machine gun to mow down a few hundred Russian, American or British soldiers.

In one story, a Lt. Zahn and a handful of men climb into four captured Soviet tanks and in Soviet uniforms operate far beyond the front. Despite battles, the men find time to flirt with pretty Russian peasant girls and to drink plenty of schnapps. At one point, another lieutenant wants to "break the neck of a little animal" but is stopped by a sergeant. The "little animal" is a Russian baby.

This story, the board maintains, has nothing to do with war literature. It is a collection of fantastic lies offered as truth and presents the horrors of war as a mere adventure.

"The booklets never touch on the criminal character of the attack on Russia," the board said, "and the horrors of war repeatedly are belittled by German soldiers telling each other dirty jokes."

Mr. Schilling said the authors of these booklets received $120 to $190 per story. Before the blacklist was issued, publishers sold several million of the booklets each month for fifteen cents each, he added.

The Castro Revolution From Opposite Sides

RED STAR OVER CUBA. By Nathaniel Weyl. (Devin-Adair; $4.50.)

LISTEN, YANKEE. By C. Wright Mills. (McGraw-Hill; $3.95.)

These books gives completely opposite views of the Castro revolution.

In "Red Star Over Cuba" Mr. Weyl develops the thesis which his title indicates, that Castro has leaned so far to the left that he has fallen into the Soviet orbit or is about to.

Mr. Weyl points out that "the legend that the Cuban Communist Party backed Batista was assiduously spread." The truth was "that party had suffered horribly under Batista repression; some of its best cadres had been killed, manhandled or imprisoned, and the party was cowed and badly demoralized."

The Red Screen

The writer adds that a much more important consideration was that Castro had been advised to have nothing to do with known Cuban Communists or with the party. "The Soviet view was that it was vital that the Castro movement be without visible Communist taint and hence eligible for world-wide liberal support. When specific communist cadres were needed, these would be supplied by the Soviet apparatuses."

Latin America, Mr. Weyl feels, can play a significant, constructive role in free world stratgey during the coming decade. "For this to occur, it is essential that steps be taken to prevent communism from radiating outward from its Cuban base and to help the Cuban people to destroy the tyranny which is killing them swiftly and totally."

Pro Castro

Mr. Mills, who is a professor of sociology at Columbia, is frankly pro-Castro.

The author's views are set forth in a series of supposed letters from Cubans to a collective Yankee. According to the letter writers, we helped Batista exploit the masses of Cubans.

"Like much of Latin America but more so," this letter adds, "we're fed up with what your corporations and what your governments do down here. They've dominated us long enough . . ."

In closing chapters, Mr. Mills says he agrees with most of what his letter writers charge. The author rejoices that the Cuban revolution "has swiftly destroyed the economic basis of capitalism—both foreign and Cuban. Most of this power was foreign—in fact, North American."

While Mr. Mills disclaims any sympathy for "Stalinism," it is hard to see what his book will accomplish beyond bringing comfort to Communists and fellow travelers.

The Role of Law In Race Relations

Reviewed by George M. Johnson

United States Commissioner on Civil Rights and Professor of Law, Howard University Law School

RACE RELATIONS AND AMERICAN LAW. By Jack Greenberg. Columbia. $10.

MOST AMERICANS today are genuinely disturbed over the status of the relations between the so-called white majority and nonwhite minorities who make up our national citizenry. Volumes have been written on various aspects of the problem. However, the role which law has played and is playing in affecting race relations is seldom written about in language sufficiently objective and nonlegalistic to be informative to the increasing number of people who need and desire to be better informed in this area.

"Race Relations and American Law" fills a real need and should be a welcome addition to the libraries of Federal, state and local government units, and private persons and organizations as well, with interests and responsibilities in the Nation's major domestic problem.

The book is not "light reading" and some readers, without a considerable background in American jurisprudence, may find it more difficult to absorb than earlier books, such as Stephenson's "Race Distinctions in American Law," published in 1910, or Mangum's "The Legal Status of the Negro," published in 1940. For any such difficulty, no excuse seems necessary. Law sometimes is difficult and it played a wider and more significant role in race relations in 1959 than it did in 1910, or even in 1940.

GREENBERG discusses the present state of the law as it relates to nine major subject areas: public accommodations, interstate travel, elections, earning a living, education, housing, criminal law, domestic relations and the armed forces.

Each subject-area is discussed in a separate chapter with a separate conclusion. This treatment increases the book's usefulness. A reader whose immediate interest or responsibility relates to the subject-area of voting can read the one-page conclusion to Chapter Five on "Elections" and get a summary statement of the contents of the chapter in language that is about as nonacademic as the subject-area permits.

This is not to say that one will or can become well informed simply by reading all the conclusions, totaling approximately 15 pages. The discussions in each chapter are objective, reasonably thorough and surprisingly brief considering the volume of available material relevant to the discussions.

TWO CHAPTERS are devoted to general discussion and analysis. One is concerned with the uncritical assumption that legislation can't eradicate prejudices. It is pointed out that law in the field of race relations seeks not to eradicate prejudice but to control behavior, i. e., the overt manifestations of prejudice. Race relations involves not only how people feel but what they do because they feel as they do. Law changes behavior even when attitudes and feelings may remain unchanged.

In answer to the more appropriate question—Can the law alter race relations?—author Greenberg states unequivocally: "The thesis of this book is that law often can change race relations, that sometimes it has been indispensable to changing them and that in fact it has changed them, even spectacularly."

Substantial support is cited for this thesis and it will undoubtedly clear up misconceptions in the thinking of many readers.

Greenberg also analyzes and synthesizes the major court decisions which gradually have removed the cloak of legal respectability from Government imposed racial segregation. This has been a significant development which has taken place since Mangum's book of 1940. He includes an excellent discussion of the legal problems involved in current efforts to apply and implement the legal principle now established, that Government-imposed racial segregation is illegal.

I know of no book of comparable size and readability that gives as much solid information on the why, how, when and which of law and race relations.

'Soviet Union Seeks Normal Ties With West'

The Inquirer presents today the first part of selected portions of "Khrushchev's Blueprint for Future," from Nikita S. Part One

By NIKITA S. KHRUSHCHEV

MANKIND is threatened with an unprecedented catastrophic war of extermination, a war which, if it breaks out, will take a toll of many millions of lives.

This prospect is particularly absurd today, when science is advancing rapidly, when man has far greater opportunities to ease his toil and employ the world's natural resources to meet the requirements of all the peoples inhabiting our planet.

It is today perfectly possible to ensure progress and prosperity for every country and every nation on the basis of peaceful coexistence, friendly cooperation and mutual assistance between all states.

Today more than ever before, every honest person, and society as a whole, must strive to find ways not only of postponing war, but also of abolishing it forever. This problem cannot be completely solved until mankind has established a society in which there will no longer be rich and poor, in which all will be equal and all derive equal benefit from the blessings of collective labour.

It will be what we call a Communist society. We are convinced that in the long run mankind will build such a social system. But that still requires a great deal of effort, because the peoples are at different stages of development and there are many countries where the forces that would dominate others and live on their labour are still strong.

Our common duty today is to prevent war. If we cannot at the moment abolish it forever, we at least can and should create conditions enabling the peoples to live in peace, without fear that a war of extermination will be launched in accordance with the desires of a few madmen.

The Soviet Union firmly advocates the condemnation and prohibition of the use of atomic and hydrogen weapons as a means of mass-destruction and urges that they be renounced. We insist on this; we are prepared to conclude an appropriate agreement with other Powers at any time. It is now up to the Governments of the United States and Britain to decide.

We cannot be reconciled to a situation in which everybody is threatened with a terrible atomic war and in which an increasing share of human labour goes to produce weapons of extermination and destruction instead of create material values and raise standards of living.

We are confident that the peoples will bring greater pressure to bear on those Governments whose policies run counter to the interests of peace, and will in the end make them lend ear to the voice and demands of millions of people and find such a solution as will preclude military catastrophe once and for all.

From reply to the letter of C. Rajagopalachari

Peaceful Co-existence

The Soviet Union and the other socialist states are consistently pursuing a policy of peace and call for the peaceful co-existence of states with different social systems, for the ending of the arms race that is leading to a new war, and the prohibition of the use, production and testing of atomic and hydrogen weapons.

As for the economic factor, the Soviet Union and other socialist countries have achieved—and this is no longer denied by anyone—great successes in economic development and are rapidly altering the balance of forces in their own favour. In peaceful economic competition we do not doubt in the least that the task set by V. I. Lenin of economically overtaking and surpassing the most advanced capitalist countries—that is to say, in per capita production—will be successfully carried out by the Soviet people.

It can be said that our plans already outline measures for the practical solution of this task. As for the military side of the problem, the successful launching of the Soviet sputniks with the help of the intercontinental ballistic rocket speaks for itself and scarcely needs any extensive comments.

People of various countries differ in their way of life and thinking. Now there are two different systems; there are socialist and capitalist countries. The peoples living in these states have no other alternative but to live peacefully side by side, not to interfere in one another's internal affairs, and respect the opinions of others.

From replies to questions put by V. Sinnbeck, editor of Dansk Folkestyre, a magazine published by the youth organization of the Danish Venstre Party.

The same goes for international affairs. If we succeed in overcoming the stalemate in the current relations between our states, and primarily between the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain, France and other countries, if we begin to develop mutually advantageous trade, improve cultural, sports and other ties between the countries, it will have a favourable effect on the improvement of relations between countries as well as on the internal situation in those countries.

A reduction in the armed forces and in expenditures on armaments will create greater possibilities for raising living standards. If we succeed in moving the relations between our countries out of the deadlock in which they now stand, and succeed in turning them towards eliminating the cold war, this alone will be a great thing.

From interview given to A. McDonald, Foreign Editor of The London Times, on Jan. 31, 1958.

The Soviet Union, on the basis of its policy of peace and the principle of peaceful co-existence, is willing to establish normal diplomatic, trade, cultural and other relations with those countries with which, for one reason or another, such relations have not yet been established.

When we speak of peaceful co-existence we have in mind co-existence between the socialist and capitalist countries. And this not only admits but also presupposes the solution of differences and contradictions between them by means of peaceful competition and, first and foremost, economic competition, or if you like, contest. What does economic competition imply? We understand it as competition in the sphere of civilian production, a contest between the two systems—socialism and capitalism—in making life better for the people, in raising living standards.

What can hinder peaceful co-existence? Here, I think, there can be no two opinions: war and the preparation of war. The cold war, arms drive, propaganda of war, enmity and hatred between nations, trade discrimination and undermining of world commerce—all add to the danger of another devastating war and, consequently, endanger peaceful co-existence between the nations.

You, of course, realize that should the imperialists resort to war, then in view of the nature of modern armaments, the consequences for the peoples would be calamitous. Nowhere on the globe would the population be sure of being immune from military action, not only armies but peaceful cities and civil population would alike suffer.

We in all sincerity say to capitalist countries, let us compete not to see who can make the largest number of H-bombs and missiles, for that is a competition which bodes no good to the peoples, but to see who can build more houses, schools and hospitals, produce more bread, milk, meat, clothes and other consumer goods. That is the kind of competition the people want. Instead of the slogan "Let us arm!" we proclaim "Let us trade!"

Although the Soviet Union has made significant progress in all spheres, and not least in raising the standard of living of the people, it has set itself the goal of producing more consumer goods than any capitalist country. And we are confident that we shall achieve a still higher standard of living.

How can this endanger peaceful co-existence of nations? The imperialists fear this competition, while we are eager that each system—socialist and capitalist—should demonstrate its superiority not on the war front, but on the front of peaceful labour.

Far from endangering peaceful co-existence, economic competition would, on the contrary, strengthen it, safeguard the nations against the danger of another war and contribute to the improvement of their living conditions in an atmosphere of peace.

From replies to Manuel Mejido, correspondent of the Mexican newspaper Excelsior on Feb. 21, 1958.

Five Principles of Peaceful Co-Existence

The most burning, vital question for all mankind today is the question of peace or war. Wars between states have always caused many casualties and much destruction. But a future war, if, contrary to the will of the peoples, it is unleashed, threatens to be the most destructive of all wars—a nuclear war. Apart from direct destruction, the use of nuclear weapons will contaminate the air by radioactive fall-out, and this can lead to the destruction of all life, especially in countries with densely-populated, small territories. There, literally everything can be swept from the face of the earth.

It is precisely for this reason that in our day the struggle to preserve peace and prevent a new war has become not only the primary, vital concern of those who may be subjected to attack by the imperialists, but also the immediate concern of the peoples of all countries, regardless of where they may live—in Europe or Asia, America or Africa, irrespective of their class position, religious beliefs or the colour of their skin—it is literally the concern of everyone living on earth.

The task is to prevent a new war and to ensure peace throughout the world. But this needs more than just appeals, more than the desire alone. Peace must be defended in stubborn struggle against the forces that are trying to unleash a new war.

To live without wars, without fear for the morrow, without slavery and poverty, free from the exploitation of some countries by others, free from social injustices—that is what the best minds of mankind and the working people of the whole world have dreamed of for centuries. But only today can these noble dreams become clothed with reality.

This has become possible as a result of the strengthened might of the Soviet Union and the entire world socialist system, that have inaugurated a new epoch in the history of mankind—the epoch of real socialist freedom and the triumph of reason.

I would like to discuss briefly the problem of relations between the USSR and such Western states as France, Britain and the United States, which together with the Soviet Union, the Chinese Peoples Republic and India, bear great responsibility for maintaining universal peace and safeguarding the security of the nations.

We were allies of Britain, France and the United States during the Second World War and we fought together against Hitler Germany. We respect the peoples of those countries and have a high opinion of the great contribution they made to the development of world science, technology and culture.

Soviet men and women are very well aware that the peoples of those countries, too, are striving for peace. The Soviet Union has exerted, and will continue to exert, every effort to achieve understanding and establish friendly relations with the peoples of those countries and their governments.

In international affairs, in settling existing disputes, they should be guided, not by what divides the world today, but what brings countries closer together in their joint effort to preserve peace.

The only possible foundation for relations between states with different social systems are the well-known Five Principles:

Mutual respect for territorial integrity and sovereignty;

Non-aggression;

Non-interference in one another's internal affairs for economic, political or ideological reasons;

Equality and mutual benefit;

Peaceful co-existence.

The principles of peaceful co-existence, recently approved by the United Nations, should actually be made the cornerstone of relations between all states.

The Soviet Union has stood, and continues to stand for peaceful co-existence, not because it is weak or because it fears threats. If we were not weak before, then today, all the more so, we have everything necessary to protect the peaceful labours of the Soviet people and to smash any aggressor, should he try to attack our country.

We are sure that the great ideas of Communism will triumph, but we have never imposed upon other countries by force of arms the socialist way of life and our ideology, nor do we intend to do so. The Soviet people want to live in peace and friendship with all other peoples.

From the speech at a meeting of Electors of Kalinin constituency, Moscow, on March 14, 1958.

Part Two

By NIKITA S. KHRUSHCHEV

OUR point of view regarding the nature of inter-state relations between the socialist and capitalist countries has been set forth a number of times. The gist of it, in brief, is, first, that the form of state organization and the form of social organization of any particular country must be decided by the people of that country themselves; secondly, that no state or any external forces can or should impose on other nations their way of life or their political or social system; thirdly, since man's social development takes place along an ascending line, it inevitably gives rise to new forms of life for society.

Consequently, the appearance of states with a socialist system, as a result of the operation of the objective laws of social development, is just as natural as was, in its day, the appearance of bourgeois states; and lastly, in order to rid mankind of devastating wars and, in particular, of the threat of the most destructive war ever known by humanity—nuclear war—we feel that the principle of peaceful co-existence and cooperation must prevail in relations between the socialist and capitalist states.

What does this principle mean in practice? It does not demand that the capitalist states renounce their existing system or ideology. Naturally, acceptance of this principle will not lead to the immediate elimination of disputes and contradictions that are inevitable under conditions when different states exist.

But this principle demands that the states, in settling outstanding issues between them, should renounce the use of force in any form, including military force, and seek the peaceful settlement of possible conflicts respecting the mutual interests of the parties concerned. Peaceful co-existence also presupposes the complete and unqualified non-interference of states in the internal affairs of one another with a view to changing their system or way of life, or for any other reason.

I think that the meaning given to the term peaceful co-existence will now be clearer to you. As you see, we stand for a healthy and realistic basis for relations between states with different social systems. The principle of peaceful co-existence does not place any individual state or any group of states at an advantage over other states and does not infringe on anyone's interests; it is of benefit to all who desire peace, not in words, but in deeds.

From replies to questions put by John Waters editor of the Melbourne Herald, June 11, 1958

Differences in Views Should Not Lead to War. Principle of Non-Interference

The Soviet Union stands for the establishment of friendly relations with all countries regardless of their social and political systems, and we see no obstacle to the broadest development of all types of contact between the socialist and capitalist countries. We do not, however, close our eyes to the fact that there are bound to be points of difference or, as you term them, clashes of opinions and interests, between the socialist and capitalist countries.

But we consider that these differences and clashes should not lead to war. It must not be forgotten that in our age, the age of atomic energy and inter-continental rockets, any country which attempts to settle international disputes by force of arms hazards its own existence by so doing. Those in the West who do not want to understand this and who still console themselves with hopes about the power of aircraft carriers and bombs are thinking in terms of the last century. Only political maniacs and suicides can consider war as a means of settling international disputes and differences.

The only rational way of settling international differences and disagreements is through negotiations and mutually acceptable agreements which take into account the interests of all the parties concerned.

As I have already said, the socialist countries consistently adhere to the principles of peaceful co-existence. But for peace to triumph, the policy of peaceful co-existence should be recognized and pursued, if not by all, then at least by the majority of countries, and above all by those upon whose policy the question of peace or war depends.

The rulers of the United States, Britain and their partners must renounce their policy from "positions of strength" and their claims for domination over other countries. The sooner the illusions and emotions of the Western Powers give place to reality and common sense, the better it will be for everybody, and for world peace.

As regards the ideological differences between the capitalist and socialist countries, it is today nothing short of madness to attempt to impose one's own ideological opinions on others by force of arms.

We are fully convinced that in life's disputes those views and conceptions will triumph which most faithfully reflect the objective laws of mankind's social development and the requirements not of the minority, but of the majority of people. In our opinion, Marxism-Leninism is such an ideology. Reality day by day and hour by hour continues to confirm its correctness.

Non-interference in the internal affairs of other countries is one of the basic principles to which our country adheres in its foreign policy. Every people is master in its own house, and it alone has the right to decide what shall be its internal system.

We resolutely condemn the use of the diktat in international relations. The principle of non-interference in the affairs of other countries must be observed by all countries, not only in words, but in deeds.

From replies to questions put by Murilo Marroquim de Souza, Brazilian journalist, on Oct. 3, 1958

Relations Between East and West. Let Us Improve Our Relations And Strengthen Peace

We have always said and continue to say now: Let us improve our relations, let us trade, let us develop scientific, cultural and sports contacts. Let us meet and discuss pressing international problems in a businesslike manner. We have proposed and we propose now that an end be put to the cold war and the arms race, that the "policy of strength" be renounced, that the policy of intimidation by war be abandoned, and that our relations be built on the basis of peaceful co-existence.

The Soviet Government is ready to discuss any questions designed to strengthen peace and establish greater confidence among the states, to discuss these questions with its partners.

Mr. Eisenhower, for instance, recently put forward in one of his speeches the idea of pooling the efforts of the Soviet Union and the United States to combat such scourges of mankind as cancer, tuberculosis and malaria. We believe that one can agree with this. One could list many other questions, such as the struggle against poliomyelitis, locusts, glanders and foot-and-mouth disease. We are successfully co-operating with Iran and Afghanistan in combating locusts. There are many other matters regarding which, far from hindering co-operation, we are doing our utmost to extend it. Although not all these problems are acute or dangerous to our country, we are nevertheless ready to co-operate with countries where such problems are particularly pressing. We shall be pleased to pool our efforts with those of other countries in solving such problems.

From the speech on "Some Aspects of International Situation" made at the conference of front-rank workers in agriculture of the Byelorussian Republic on Jan. 22, 1958

Co-operation Leads to Consolidation of the Cause of Peace

It may safely be said that although certain circles in the imperialist countries are clinging frantically to the bankrupt "positions of strength" policy, the prospects for the relaxation of international tension and the development of economic co-operation and scientific and cultural exchanges between countries with different social systems have now become more favourable.

Take, for instance, the agreement on the development of cultural contacts concluded between the Soviet Union and the U. S. A. It is a big step forward. The socialist countries have made definite progress in the development of cultural contacts with the capitalist countries.

Indeed, every socialist country is doing its utmost to extend cultural relations with other countries, the Polish People's Republic among others, having done much in this direction. One can only welcome this development of co-operation, this strengthening of friendly ties between peoples, for it leads to better understanding and the consolidation of the cause of peace.

It is well known that the socialist countries have established economic ties with many capitalist countries. Recently, business circles in capitalist countries have been making more frequent statements in favour of the extension of these contacts. Today there are few people in the West who believe in the efficacy of the bankrupt policy of economically blockading the socialist countries.

The world socialist economy is able to produce everything needed for its further development, and no bans imposed by the ruling circles of certain countries on trade with the socialist countries can prevent us from continuing to advance as successfully as we are now doing.

If anyone stands to lose from these prohibitions, it is the business circles of the Western Powers. Their interests call for the extension of trade with the socialist countries. For our part, we also welcome the expansion of trade between the socialist and the capitalist countries.

The socialist countries have always stood for the all-around development of economic relations with all the other countries. It goes without saying that these relations must be based on the strictest observance of equality, mutual advantage and non-interference in internal affairs.

From replies to questions put by Trybuna Ludu on March 10, 1958

Peaceful Co-Existence Is Hard Reality

We considered, and still consider, that ideological differences are in no way an obstacle to the development of mutually profitable trade between socialist and capitalist countries.

I would recall that even in the early 1920s many Western countries, because of economic expediency and despite ideological differences, established trade relations with the Soviet Union. Since then trade between the Soviet Uion and capitalist countries, except for certain relatively brief interruptions, has continued to develop steadily.

In 1957, for instance, our trade with capitalist countries increased (at comparable prices) approximately twofold as compared with 1938. But can this growth be considered adequate and corresponding to the interests of the development of world trade? No, it cannot. We are ready for a further extension of trade, but certain circles in the Western countries—those who are interested in the continuation of the cold war—are using the existing ideological differences as a pretext to justify their unwillingness to develop normal trade relations with the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries.

If the principles of peaceful co-existence are adhered to, then no ideological differences, though they do of course exist, should prevent the development and broadening of mutually profitable economic ties. Peaceful co-existence is a hard reality whose significance in international relations is growing. Trade constitutes that sound and stable basis upon which co-existence between countries with different social and economic systems can successfully develop and be consolidated.

I think you will agree with me that trade has a more than economic significance. Trade is the most normal way of establishing good relations between countries. Trade and economic ties create a good basis for the consolidation of international political relations.

The Soviet Union today has trade treaty relations with 45 countries: with all the socialist countries, almost all the countries of Western Europe, including Britain, France, Italy, Austria, Switzerland, Greece, Sweden, etc., with the majority of Asian and African countries, including India, Indonesia, Japan, Iran, Afghanistan, Burma, the United Arab Republic, and many others. We also have trade agreements with two countries of the American continent—Canada and Argentina.

With a number of countries we have agreements which provide for the development of exchange on the basis of agreed lists of commodities for reciprocal deliveries.

Many Western countries are showing an interest in the development of trade with the Soviet Union on the basis of long-term agreements. That is why the Soviet Union has in recent years concluded long-term agreements on reciprocal deliveries with a number of capitalist countries, for instance, a five-year agreement with Finland and long-term agreements with Norway, Iceland and Denmark.

In 1957 alone we concluded such long-term agreements with France, Italy, Austria, Afghanistan and Iran. Negotiations are in progress on a long-term agreement between the USSR and the Federal Republic of Germany. All these agreements provide for a substantial increase in trade.

The United States of America is now the only Great Power and one of the few countries of the world with which the Soviet Union does not have trade treaty relations. If the Government of the United States expresses a desire to conclude a trade treaty or agreement with the USSR, I can assure you of a favourable response from the Soviet side.

We advocate the lifting of all restrictions and bans on trade between the capitalist and the socialist countries not only because we hope it would promote the establishment of confidence in the relations between all nations and bring about a relaxation of international tension, but also because discriminatory restrictions lead to uncertainty in commerce and mistrust between the partners in trade. Connected as you are with business circles, you should know full well how much confidence means in commerce and how adversely its absence affects the development of trade.

We are in favour of selling what we can sell and of buying what we want to buy, and we want our partners to be able to sell and buy what they want. And the things which either you or we cannot sell should not be a subject for reciprocal claims.

We were able to meet only on the 22nd of March. This is the day of spring. It would be gratifying if you could become the first swallows of spring in business relations between the Soviet Union and the United States of America, so that trade might develop on a more extensive scale and all the talk of military preparations and about who has more rockets, bombs and other means of annihilating people could stop.

The war preparations distress and horrify people. The nations do not want war. It would be much better if we adopted different attitudes in our relations, and talked about the number of machines and other goods you could sell us and the quantity of machines or other goods and raw materials you could buy from us. Is that a bad objective?

We are in favour of visits by more American manufacturers and businessmen whom we could acquaint with our production, and of visits to the U. S. A. by our workers in the field of industrial production. This would be useful for the peoples of the Soviet Union and the United States of America. People are indeed tired of reports about rockets, hydrogen and atomic explosions, and bombers.

Our sincere desire is that your visit to our country—a visit by the representatives of the most far-sighted American business circles—should serve as a starting point for good and friendly relations with the United Sttaes of America. We could only welcome this.

Part Three

By NIKITA S. KHRUSHCHEV

BUT the fact is that the leaders who now stand at the helm of the leading NATO member-states refuse to take the road of peaceful co-existence, refuse to renounce the policy of cold war. This is the reason why the so greatly needed turning point in the development of international events towards the normalization of the international atmosphere has not as yet been reached.

However, we are now living not in the 18th, and not even in the 19th century, when some rulers or other could ignore the will of the peoples, although it must be said that even in those times that was far from safe to do. In our days hundreds of millions of people in all countries have found their way to active political life and hardly anyone would be able to ignore indefinitely the will of the peoples for peace.

Already at the present time the more far-sighted political leaders of the capitalist world have realized the need for radical changes in method and approach to the solution of international problems. True, assurances are also not rarely heard from those leaders of the Western Powers who shape the policy of military blocs of their peaceable intentions and readiness to settle international problems by negotiation. But real intentions are gauged, not by words, but by deeds. If we look at the policy of the Western Powers from this angle, we shall obtain a totally different picture.

From speech "The Resistance of Forces Obstructing Improvement of International Climate and Peaceful Co-existence" at Meeting of Political Consultative Committee of Warsaw Treaty, May 24, 1958

Daring Search Is Needed

We should like to hope that the leaders of the United States of America, for their part, might take a more sober view of things. A solution of the contradictions dividing the states of the East and the West does not lie in an arms race, but rather in negotiations between them. It is not sabre-rattling but meetings between responsible statesmen that will lead to a solution of controversial issues.

In the present circumstances, with the cold war outgrowths that have accumulated over the years making themselves felt literally at every point, a daring search and a concerted and determined effort are needed to secure a turn in international relations which the peoples desire, and to spare the world the nightmare of a war catastrophe.

It can hardly be disputed that only a conference of the most authoritative and plenipotentiary representatives of states can tackle this task. This is precisely why the Soviet Union, upon consulting all the socialist countries, made a proposal last December for a top-level East-West conference.

The Soviet Government has done everything in its power to clear the way to a conference at the summit and to create an atmosphere of confidence and businesslike cooperation.

The Soviet Union has demonstrated by deeds its peacefulness and its sincere desire to provide conditions for a firm and lasting peace. The Soviet Government, without awaiting an international agreement on disarmament, has unilaterally reduced its armed forces repeatedly in recent years.

In 1955 it reduced them by 640,000 men and in 1956-57 by another 1,200,000. At present, a further reduction, by 300,000 is nearing completion, with considerable cuts effected in our troops temporarily stationed under existing agreements in the German Democratic Republic and Hungary.

Our country's armaments, military equipment and expenditures for defense have been reduced accordingly.

The other member-countries of the Warsaw Treaty Organization reduced their armed forces by a total of over 337,000 in the course of 1955-57.

We all give due recognition to the great contribution made to the maintenance of peace by the great Chinese People's Republic, which recently decided to withdraw the Chinese Volunteers from Korea. If the United States following the example of People's China withdrew its troops from South Korea and dismantled all its bases there, this would unquestionably help to strengthen peace in the Far East and to solve the Korean problem.

We say to the capitalist countries: Let us compete in the manufacture of goods and articles which the peoples need to make their life fuller and happier, let us compete in advancing the living standards and well-being of the peoples. And let the peoples themselves decide during this competition for the benefit of man which road coincides more with their interests.

The socialist states do not fear peaceful competition with the capitalist countries, for they are deeply confident of its outcome.

From speech "The Socialist Countries Are in Favour of Stopping Arms Race and Cold War" at Meeting of Political Consultative Committee of Warsaw Treaty, May 24, 1958.

People Desire to Live in Peace

All nations desire to live in peace and friendship and wish to be delivered, once and for all, from fears preying upon the minds of their people for their future and that of their dear ones. They wish to bring about a situation in which the vast sums now being spent on armaments could be used for the good of mankind, to raise their living standards, to develop the national economy and culture, and so on. Such conditions can be secured only by gradually achieving normal relations between states, and this requires, above all, the settlement of those questions which hinder an understanding between states.

What are these issues? Frankly speaking, this involves problems resulting from the Western Powers' pursuance of the policy of cold war and "positions of strength." At the present time the best way to deal with questions which are ripe for settlement is through a conference of leading statesmen, that is to say, a summit conference. We are convinced that, given the desire on the part of both sides, such a conference could discover ways of solving urgent international problems.

From replies to questions put by John Waters, editor of the Melbourne Herald, June 11, 1958.

Mutually Beneficial Basis Must Be Found

Our Government has recently received from large firms in Western countries many offers to deliver equipment for the Soviet Union's chemical industry. Such proposals, for instance, have been received from industrialists in West Germany, Britain, France and the United States. We are now studying all these offers with a view to concluding satisfactory contracts.

Here we are really acting on the basis of mutual benefit. The capitalists enter into business contacts only when it is to their advantage. We, for our part, want to do business with capitalist firms, which is advantageous to our country. So it is necessary to find a basis which is mutually beneficial to both parties and then sign business contracts.

The capitalist businessmen must be ensured a legitimate percentage of profit. Here we cannot count on friendly, unselfish assistance. There is no capitalist who would not strive to obtain bigger returns, to profit from any business transaction.

We have proposed to the Government of the United States that an agreement be concluded for the delivery of chemical equipment to our country and that appropriate credits be granted in this connection. But so far we have received no reply from the United States. It is apparently very difficult for the United States Government to reply to our proposals. But we are in no hurry about this—we shall wait. Furthermore, if we do wait, that does not mean we are doing nothing. We are waiting for an answer, but we ourselves are working on the problem of speeding up the development of our chemical industry with our own resources.

From speech at the meeting held in the Palace of Culture of the Bitterfield Electro-Chemical Works during the stay in the German Democratic Republic of the delegation of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union to the 5th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, July 9, 1958

What Is In the Way to Relaxation Of International Tension

The Soviet Government has recently published its proposals on the questions being put forward for consideration by a conference of Heads of Government. The Soviet Government is again proposing a discussion on the more important international problems which are ripe for solution and which, given the good will of all parties, can already be settled at the present time.

But how are the Western Powers responding to the peace-moves of the Soviet Union? What practical contribution have they made to ease international tension?

Unfortunately it must be said that the attitude adopted by the Western Powers by no means provides evidence of their readiness to help create a favourable atmosphere for a summit meeting.

The flights of American planes, loaded with hydrogen bombs, towards the frontiers of the Soviet Union, the policy of nuclear arms race, the arming of the West German Bundeswehr with atomic weapons, the stubborn refusal to follow the USSR's example in ending tests of atomic and hydrogen bombs, the creation of atomic and rocket bases aimed against the socialist countries—all this hinders the preparation of a summit conference and prevents the easing of international tension.

The Western Powers are dragging out such issues as cannot be settled, because the conditions are not yet ripe, or such as do not at all come within the competence of a summit meeting.

From speech at the 5th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, July 11, 1958

Peaceful and Tranquil Life Must Be Won for People

What makes us interested in negotiations with the Western Powers?

It would be futile to look for reasons in the situation within the socialist camp. Our camp is homogeneous and united as never before. We discuss our internal matters in our own fraternal circle, without outsiders. We are well able to solve all matters helping to consolidate further the socialist states and to expedite the development of their economy and culture. We have no difficulties in that domain, nor do we foresee any.

It would also be futile to look for reasons for our interest in negotiations with the Western Powers in the internal situation of the Soviet Union. That is simply absurd. The stability of our international position is based on the close solidarity of our peoples, the steady development of our economy, science, technology and culture.

The weight of the three artificial earth satellites placed in orbit by the Soviet Union is a symbol of our country's weight in international affairs. Yet this is only a beginning. The Soviet giant circling our planet is only a pathfinder blazing the trail for still greater successes of Soviet science and technology.

The Soviet Union's interest in negotiating with the Western Powers is not to be explained by internal reasons or our international position, but by human, universal considerations, by the fact that we stand firmly for the peaceful coexistence of states with different social and political systems. We want to remove the danger of a destructive war, to deliver the people from constant fear of a new military conflict, and to win them a peaceful and tranquil life.

The Inquirer presents today the fourth part of selected portions of "Khrushchev's Blueprint for Future," from Nikita S. Part Four

By NIKITA S. KHRUSHCHEV

BOURGEOIS ideologists assert that the formation and strengthening of the socialist camp restricts the independence and national sovereignty of the countries that belong to it. The entire practice of the development of co-operation among the socialist countries since the world socialist system was formed, convincingly shows that it is precisely socialism that brings to the peoples genuine state independence.

The socialist camp is a voluntary union of equal and sovereign states, in which no one seeks or strives for any special rights, privileges or advantages for himself. It goes without saying that each socialist country independently decides the question of the forms of its cooperation with the other socialist countries. There is not and cannot be any compulsion in this matter.

But is it possible for the sake of victory of socialism, to make full use of the rich possibilities possessed by the socialist countries, if each of them acts alone and "stews in its own juice," so to speak? Is it possible, in the present international conditions, to ensure the reliable defense of the gains of socialism, if the socialist countries act in an uncoordinated way? Of course not.

If is only the unity of the socialist countries that ensures the maximum utilization of the advantages of the world socialist system and enhances its strength and might in the struggle to prevent a new war, and in the economic competition with capitalism. Life has convincingly demonstrated that the strengthening of the unity of the countries of the socialist camp, far from infringing the national interests of any of these countries, is a reliable guarantee of their national independence and sovereignty.

The Communist and Workers' Parties unanimously agree that only the unity of the socialist countries and the strengthening of all-round cooperation and fraternal mutual assistance based on the great principles of proletarian internationalism ensure the common advance of the socialist economy and the raising of the formerly backward countries to the level of the advanced ones, and make it possible to abolish the existing inequality in economic and cultural development which they have inherited from the past.

The cohesion of the countries of the socialist camp is ensured, above all, by the unity of the Communist and Workers' Parties—a unity based on the unshakable principles of Marxism-Leninism, tried and tested by the experience of history. By creatively applying the general principles of Marxism-Leninism, each party works out the most expedient concrete forms for embodying these principles in the conditions of its own country, and thereby makes its contribution to the theory and practice of socialist construction, to the development of Marxism-Leninism.

From speech at the 7th Congress of the Bulgarian Communist Party on June 3, 1958

The Soviet Union Is An Irreconcilable Opponent of the Shameful System Of Colonialism

Today, we see how more than 1500 million people in Africa and Asia have taken the road of independence. In some places the colonial Powers, forced under pressure of the national-liberation movement to recognize the for-nal independence of one or another country, still retain a strong economic grip on them. But this will not be the case for long.

Having attained political independence, these young countries are beginning to build their own economies, enhancing their economic independence of the foreign monopolies. True, this process is taking place not without struggle and not without difficulties, but ultimately these countries will triumph over the difficulties.

The Soviet Union deeply sympathizes with all the nations striving to win and uphold their independence. And these nations can rest assured that the Soviet Union, without any meddling in their internal affairs, without stipulating any conditions will help them to strengthen the independence for which they fought so hard.

In the economic sphere, for example, they no longer need bow before their former enslavers. They can now get industrial plant, machinery and technical documents in mutually favourable conditions from the socialist countries. Our country has already extended disinterested help to the Afro-Asian nations in developing their economies and culture, and, what is more, help without any political or military strings.

From replies to Manuel Mejido, correspondent of the Mexican newspaper Excelsior, on Feb. 21, 1958.

THE Soviet Union is an irreconcilable opponent of the shameful system of colonialism and gives support to all peoples who are fighting for their national liberation, for the strengthening of their national independence. We know with what difficulty the new is born. The old forces not only do not want to recognize the new, but do everything possible to nip it in the bud.

The Great October Socialist Revolution struck a powerful blow at the entire system of imperialism and colonialism. The past 40 years have seen tremendous changes throughout the world. The defeat of the aggressors in the Second World War, the victory of the People's Liberation Revolution in China, the formation of a whole group of socialist states in Europe and Asia—all this dealt another crushing blow at imperialism. One colonial empire after another began to tumble down, and more and more independent states are emerging in the world.

The Soviet people rejoice at the liberation of the peoples of Asia and Africa from the yoke of colonialism. We, for our part, are ready to do everything to facilitate the complete liberation of the colonial and dependent countries.

While establishing friendly relations with other countries, we have never forced on them, nor do we want to force on them, our system of government, nor do we aim to derive privileges or any special material benefits.

Our people are used to earning their own living; we respect the labour of all peoples and believe that every man and woman and all nations have the right to dispose of the fruits of their work and of the wealth of their country.

From speech at the meeting of friendship between the peoples of the Soviet Union and the United Arab Republic on May 15, 1958.

The Colonialist Policy of Imperialists Is Tottering and Breaking Up

These are good times in which we are living. As during a great spring flood, the ice is now breaking up, everything is blossoming, everything is moving ahead in its historical development. The age-old ice of the colonial regime also has cracked and is breaking up before our eyes in quite a number of countries. The peoples are casting off, and are breaking the chains of colonialism.

In vain are the efforts of those who would like to curb the liberation struggle of the peoples who have risen against age-old colonial oppression. As the spring waters break the winter ice on frozen rivers, so the peoples of the colonial countries and imperialist dependencies are breaking the hateful order established in their countries by alien enslavers. The colonialist policy of the imperialists is tottering and breaking up and this drives them to violent fury.

We revolutionaries, followers of Marx, Engels and Lenin, rejoice that the colonial peoples have risen in resolute struggle against their oppressors, against the colonialists and that they wish to be masters of their own destiny. We hail their movement, sympathize with them in their liberation struggle and want to do everything to help them achieve their legitimate and noble aim—the liberation of their countries and national independence. We wish the peoples of these countries to be masters of their own national wealth, that these peoples ensure for themselves a state structure in their own countries dictated by their national interests.

The Arab peoples who have risen in resolute struggle against imperialism are waging this struggle not under the Marxist banner, but under the colours of the national liberation movement. How they will order their life afterwards is their own affair. We greet them as they are today —fighters against colonialism, against imperialism, who demand that the jackboots of the alien invader should not trample upon their soil.

From speech at embassy reception of the Polish Republic of the 14th anniversary of the Day of National Renascence on July 22, 1958

The Colonialists Will Surely Fail To Halt This Struggle

The struggle for liberation from colonial dependence is a matter of life and death for the colonial peoples. But those who are accustomed to being colonialists do not want to understand that at all. Moreover, at times it is not understood even by people who consider themselves progressive and free-thinking, and who condemn violence. They have become accustomed to a situation in which the imperialists of this or that Western state lord it over a number of countries of Asia, Africa and South America by virtue of being more "developed and highly civilized," as if destined to fulfill a "noble mission," to "bring civilization and culture" to the peoples of underdeveloped countries.

Such explanations are untenable. There are no arguments, nor can there be, to justify the preservation and continuation of the policy of colonialism.

And today, when people boast that in Britain and in some other Western countries the standard of living is higher than in other countries, we must not forget at whose expense this has been achieved. It became possible at the expense of the millions of people who were sacrificed to attain that high level.

How many millions have died and are still dying today in colonial countries so that colonialists may be able to make huge fortunes out of the blood, poverty and suffering of the peoples? It is not civilization and culture that the colonialists bring to the countries dependent upon them, but oppression, violence, poverty, backwardness and enslavement.

THE imperialists who extract oil and other wealth, practically for nothing, from the colonial and dependent countries, ignore the fact that owing to this, millions upon millions of people—children and adults—perish in those countries. This does not disturb them in the least. They say that the Asian and African peoples have always lived in greater poverty, and fared worse than the population in the Western countries.

Can the peoples of Asia and Africa reconcile themselves to such prospects? They are fighting, and will continue to fight, for their independence, for the right to dispose of their countries' wealth themselves. The peoples of Asia and Africa are waging a determined struggle for the national independence of their countries. The colonialists will not be able to halt this struggle. It began despite the wishes of the colonialists and it will reach a successful conclusion.

As for relations between the socialist countries, on the one hand, and the former colonial countries and the colonial countries which are liberating themselves, on the other, here there is complete clarity. It is necessary to strengthen in every way the relations between these countries, both along governmental lines and along social lines: To exchange delegations, to render each other assistance in economic and cultural matters and in the development of industry.

Economically highly developed countries should help the underdeveloped countries to enable the peoples of those countries to utilize the available possibilities for promoting their economy, culture and science and for raising the standard of living of the population. I think that relations of just such a kind are developing at the present time. In the future, too, they should develop in the same direction.

I believe that all socialist countries understand their role precisely in the following way: To help one another, to help the socialist countries, and at the same time also to help the countries which are throwing off, or have already thrown off, the colonial yoke; not to interfere in the internal affairs of those countries, but to help them in their development, in the consolidation of national independence and sovereignty.

ACCORDINGLY, it is always necessary to be guided by the well-known Five Principles which are now recognized by many countries: Mutual respect for territorial integrity and sovereignty, non-aggression, non-interference in one another's affairs, equality and mutual benefit, peaceful coexistence and economic cooperation. Such a development of relations provides the only correct way. It will promote the strengthening of the forces of progress, the strengthening of friendly relations between countries, and, consequently, it will help to ensure lasting peace.

As for my wishes for the Indian people, they have always been, and they remain, most sincere and open-hearted. First of all I heartily wish that the people of India may enjoy all the fruits of the independence India has won in her struggle against the colonialists. It is our wish that India may develop her economy, because independence can only be retained when the national economy is developed to a high level, making it possible to provide abundantly for the needs of the people.

If we do not achieve a solution to the problem of universal disarmament, a country must possess the means to defend its freedom and independence.

If colonialists were to attempt to re-establish their colonial domination in your country, you would not tolerate that, would you? In order to retain the national independence which many countries have now achieved, after having driven out the colonialists, they should develop their national economy in every possible way.

From interview with Indian journalists, July 29, 1958.

We Are in Favour of Real Economic Assistance

The press in Western states devoted much space to the need for rendering economic aid to underdeveloped countries. We are in favour of such assistance. Let us compete in this field. But such aid must be rendered as to enable the country assisted to really develop its economy and to rid itself of dependence on economically stronger countries, actually ensuring its independence. It is precisely such assistance that the underdeveloped countries need.

If underdeveloped countries are to be helped, this must be done in a way to enable them to increase their economic potential, in order to strengthen these states, and help them stand on their own feet. But the imperialists cannot accept this because it contradicts the essence of imperialism.

The imperialists have pumped tremendous wealth out of the colonial and dependent countries. Let them return at least a portion of what they have plundered. They are under obligation to do this.

Our country has taken no hand in colonial plunder. From the moment Soviet power was proclaimed Lenin declared that our state was vigorously opposed to the imperialist colonial policy, the enslavement and oppression of some countries by others. And our state has undeviatingly carried out and will continue to carry out such a policy.

As for the Soviet Union, it has helped and will continue to help underdeveloped countries disinterestedly, by lending direct assistance. We come to terms on an honest basis with those countries which need such assistance. As everyone can see, our assistance therefore fundamentally differs from that "aid" which the imperialists are rendering underdeveloped countries.

There is no force on earth which could halt the movement of the peoples fighting for their independence, for their liberation.

'Why Not Go From Words to Deeds?' He Asks

The Inquirer presents today the fifth part of selected portions of "Khrushchev's Blueprint for Future," from Nikita S. Part Five

By NIKITA S. KHRUSHCHEV

WE ARE ready to agree to the complete banning of atomic and hydrogen weapons, to a complete disarmament, to a complete withdrawal of troops and the closing-down of foreign bases on the territories of other states. We know that our partners are not prepared for such a solution and for this reason we have proposed that these problems be solved gradually by stages. As regards the stage our partners are ready to go to, you must ask them; we do not know. As for us, we are prepared to discuss and solve disarmament problems in their broadest aspect.

To make my point more clear I would say the following: The doctors at first treat a man emaciated by a grave illness gradually and prescribe food for him in small doses. If more were given the patient, it might kill him. And so we want to begin disarmament not with a full dose, although we are prepared even for a full dose. I have said already that the Western Powers have shown great distrust of us and we, too, do not trust them in everything. And so, in order not to wreck something of great and vital importance to mankind—disarmament—we suggest beginning not with a cardinal but with a gradual solution of disarmament problems, beginning with what offers hope, inspires confidence. Thus, step by step, gradually, it would be possible to reach the main goal, that is, the full solution of the problem.

From interview given to A. McDonald, Foreign Editor of The London Times, on Jan. 13, 1958.

It Is Necessary to Go From Words to Deeds

We have often declared and here again declare that the Soviet Union is most sincerely striving to do everything that lies within its power to avert events which can lead to atomic war, the consequences of which will be catastrophic for all countries.

Thus, so far as the desire to avert the danger of atomic war is concerned, our positions seemingly coincide. What, then, is the matter? Why not go from words to deeds, and make it possible for the peoples to breathe, freed from the danger of a new world conflagration which hangs over them like the sword of Damocles? Why not enable the world—to quote your good words, Professor Russell—"to live again in a noonday brightness of hope"?

The Soviet Union is ready to settle the disarmament problem as quickly as is practically possible in the interests of peace and security of the peoples. We have supported and still do support a fundamental solution of the disarmament problem; we have been and still are in favour of the complete and unconditional prohibition of atomic and hydrogen weapons, the ending of their production and testing, the destruction of all existing stockpiles, and a substantial reduction in armed forces, armaments and military expenditures—all with the establishment of reasonable international control.

It is not we who want to hold things up. However, as you know, due to certain considerations, the Western Powers, and above all the U.S.A., are evading a solution of the disarmament problem. If the Western Powers are not ready to accept a maximum programme, then we have suggested a minimum programme, in the belief that it is very important to make a first step, in order that they to solve one problem after another, until finally that d the peoples long for will be reached, the day when war as a means of solving international problems will be excluded.

We say: Let us act, let us impose a strict prohibition on atomic and hydrogen weapons, immediately cease testing these weapons and establish reasonable controls. Let us come to an agreement on conditions which do not trespass on the interests of the parties concerned, which do not strengthen some and weaken others, on conditions which would not lead to states losing their independence and sovereignty, whichever system they may belong to, and on conditions which would not offer advantages to some countries to the detriment of others.

The time is ripe and, before the opportunity is lost, the Soviet Union calls on the Western Powers. It is time to go over from words to deeds, we must act on the basis of equal rights, without dictation—not from a "position of strength," but from a position of reason.

It is well known that modern armaments and atomic and hydrogen bombs will be exceptionally dangerous in wartime not only for the two belligerent states in terms of outright devastation and destruction of human beings; they will also be deadly for states wishing to stand aside from military operations, since the poisoned soil, air, food, etc., will cause terrible torments and the slow annihilation of millions of people. There is in the world today an enormous quantity of atom and hydrogen bombs. According to the scientists' calculations, if they were all to be exploded simultaneously, the existence of almost every living thing on earth would be threatened.

Isn't it, therefore, time to think again, to end this duel of words, to eliminate the cold war, which was not begun by the peace-loving peoples, and turn to concrete negotiations in order, in a businesslike atmosphere, paying heed to each other's interests, patiently to advance step by step towards the solution of pressing urgent International problems, including that of disarmament? And for this there is no need for either the Soviet Union or the United States of America to renounce its own ideology.

From the letter to Bertrand Russel

Peaceful Co-existence or War

One need not be a scientist or military man to understand that another war—should any criminal force start it—would be calamity to all mankind. We share this planet with the capitalist countries, and it is better that there should be no war. We do not say this from weakness. We believe firmly that if there is a military conflict, the socialist system will win out, while the capitalist system will fail to survive the terrible ordeal. But Communists do not want their ideas to triumph at the price of tens of millions of human lives. The socialist countries do not wish to force their system on any nation.

We are deeply convinced that the advantages of socialism will unfold most effectively in peaceful competition with capitalism. The Soviet Union offers the capitalist countries to compete in raising living standards rather than in the arms race, in building dwellings and schools, rather than military bases and rocket ramps; in extending reciprocal trade and cultural exchanges rather than in the cold war.

In our time there is no other sensible policy but that of peaceful co-existence—a policy of reasonable compromise which does not place any country at an advantage and ensures the security of each state.

Today, the question stands thus: Either peaceful co-existence, or war.

From speech at the meeting in Budapest in celebration of the 13th Anniversary of Hungary's Liberation on April 3, 1958

The Disarmament Problem Is a Knotty One, But We Shall Not Lose Hope

The Soviet Union has made many constructive moves in the struggle to ease international tension. But so far we cannot be too hopeful, because the opposite side is twisting and turning all the time and is throwing up more and more new obstacles to the settlement of the paramount question of the present day—the problem of disarmament.

We have already taken the well-known decision to end unilaterally the testing of nuclear weapons and we have called on the United States and Britain to follow suit. But we are told: Control is needed. All well and good—we agreed. But we are again told in reply: 'No, something more is still needed.'

The matter is very simple. The Western Powers do not want to attain agreement and therefore seek to make such conditions as are impossible to carry out.

The question is utterly clear. The scientists of the entire world say that you cannot keep atomic and hydrogen explosions secret and that with existing technical means they are bound to be detected. Yet U. S. statesmen continued to claim that such explosions could be kept secret. However, they were forced by incontestable scientific information to admit that this could not be done. Now they again say that it is possible to carry out nuclear explosions in secret. As you see, they chop and change at every turn.

The disarmament problem is a knotty one. But we shall not lose hope. Our course in the struggle for peace, for disarmament, for a ban on nuclear weapons is crystal clear. All we have to say to the gentlemen who are against abolishing the cold war: We have plenty of patience. And it is of no avail to use pressure and intimidation in discussions with us. You will squeeze nothing out of us. We don't want war and we shall do everything to prevent it from breaking out. But we shall keep prepared for war.

From speech at the Moscow meeting on return of Party and Government Delegation of the U.S.S.R. from Hungarian People's Republic on April 10, 1958.

Soviet Union Is Ready at Any Time To Sign a Disarmament Agreement

If we were to enumerate all the Soviet proposals on disarmament, this enumeration would, in effect, be an indictment of the Western Powers, which, each time the Soviet Union has made a proposal meeting the Western position half-way, have sought various pretexts for not accepting it.

The Soviet Union is ready at any time to sign an agreement on banning atomic and hydrogen weapons and on disarmament. We are ready to conclude a comprehensive agreement and agreements on individual aspects of the disarmament problem. Yet neither of these two approaches suits the Western Powers. Even their own proposals do not suit them as soon as the Soviet Union agrees to them.

The Soviet Union is known to have proposed at one time the complete banning of atomic and hydrogen weapons, and end to their manufacture, their removal from national armaments and the liquidation of all stockpiles of these weapons. Moreover, the Soviet Union's proposal provided for the implementation of these measures under corresponding effective and reasonable controls. However, this proposal did not meet with support from the Western Powers.

We have repeatedly proposed to the Western Powers that unilateral disarmament measures be taken, but they have refused to do this as well. Now we have offered them another opportunity to take a real step towards reaching a disarmament agreement and ensuring international security: to unilaterally end the tests of atomic and hydrogen weapons. The Soviet Union is known to have already taken this step. But we have run against a blank wall again. The two other powers possessing nuclear weapons—the United States and Britain—remain stubbornly opposed to this.

Nevertheless, we shall continue to be patient and persistent in our efforts to solve the disarmament problem and to achieve a ban on nuclear weapons. We believe that sooner or later the Western Powers will be compelled to agree to a solution of the disarmament problem because all the peoples want this and because it is the only way to save the world from the horrors of a new war.

From replies to questions put by Greek newspaper publisher Lambrakis.

Socialist Countries Do Not Need War

The governing circles of the imperialist powers aim their policy against peaceful co-existence. There are statesmen in the capitalist countries who deny the need of peaceful co-existence. But what does that mean? It means going to war. There is no other alternative.

We do not need war. The socialist countries are growing, rapidly developing countries. They are young, sound and strong, and the future inevitably belongs to the young, the growing. We need peace to build the new society. Our countries have all the requisites for it.

Like a grievously sick man prepared to do anything to prolong his life, capitalism, too, fatally ill as it is, seeks salvation in such things as the armaments race, war preparations, hydrogen bombs, and military blocs, hoping thereby to checkrein the development of socialism and prolong its own existence.

Certain in the triumph of socialism, certain that the future belongs to it, we resolutely oppose the cold war. Socialism does not need atomic or hydrogen bombs to assert itself. Like sound seed thrown on good earth, socialism is yielding abundant fruit. And this causes joy to millions of people all over the world.

Why are the imperialists reluctant to negotiate with us and reach an agreement? They fear that an agreement with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries would knock the bottom out of the imperialist propaganda about the Soviet Union and the countries of the socialist camp wanting to conquer the whole world by force of arms.

If they acknowledge that the so-called "Communist danger" is non-existent, they will have to acknowledge the principle of peaceful co-existence of the two systems, and to accept the existence of the socialist countries. In that case the entire system of aggressive pacts which they built up—NATO, SEATO, the Baghdad Pact, etc.—will begin to crumble. The fable of a "Communist danger" is something like a main thread knitting together the system of military pacts. Speaking figuratively, that system is reminiscent of a knitted article. Pull a single thread out of it and it runs until it becomes a shapeless mass of thread.

ONE of the key issues now troubling world opinion is that of disarmament.

As before, the Soviet Union is consistently calling for decisive steps in that sphere. As you know, all our efforts have until now unfortunately failed to yield the desired results.

Western statesmen are resorting to a multitude of diverse manoeuvres to check disarmament, to lead it into a blind alley, and to torpedo it. What they like most is to talk about control. They seek to replace disarmament talk with talk about control and insist that control should precede disarmament. First control—then disarmament. First control—then easing international tension. First control—then mutual confidence. Such, in a nutshell, are their tactics.

But it is an absurd approach, because mutual control is an act of great trust. What does control mean? To permit one state to enforce all-round control within another means opening all one's doors to the other party, to admit its inspectors and controllers to places considered sacred by one's people.

In every church, at least in every Orthodox church, there is a spot in the altar which only a priest may tread. Others, even pious people, are not supposed to go there. Each country likewise has its altar, its sacred spots which it does not even show to all its friends, or shows to just its closest friends—those who have won its trust. I am deliberately using clerical terms here, because our Western partners like to refer to the Bible and to seek cover behind the Scriptures.

It would seem clear that we should first establish at least a modicum of mutual trust and then proceed gradually to control and inspection. That would be the natural approach while our partners are setting the question on its head. No, they say, admit us first to your Communist altar, and with time we'll see whether or not you ought to be trusted, and whether or not it is worthwhile reducing armaments.

Is it possible in present international circumstances, when even a modicum of trust is lacking, to speak in earnest about installing all-around control and inspection as a first step? Those who put matters that way only reveal themselves in their true colours and show that they have no intention of speaking in earnest about disarmament, or confidence, or control.

If the attempt is made to establish control without confidence, it will not be control but an act of intelligence with the object of locating the adversary's vulnerable points for an aggression. Since we have no thought of aggression, we have no need of such "control."

We shall never relinquish the right to guard our security. Nor do we deny this legitimate right to others. That is why we say: Let us not begin with control, keep out of other countries' altars until you have first proved that you may be trusted, that you will not desecrate their sanctity and will not strive to violate the laws of the country which you want to inspect.

But when numerous politicians in the United States openly urge war against the Soviet Union, when they pronounce spiteful speeches against our country, and follow this up with proposals about inspecting Soviet territory, it sounds, in effect, like a provocation.

We declare once again that the Soviet Union favours control and inspection. Our proposals about establishing control posts to prevent sudden attack, mainly on railway junctions, highways and ports, are well known. Furthermore, we have proposed air inspection 800 kilometres both sides of the line dividing our troops and Western troops in Germany and over a part of Soviet territory in the Far East and a corresponding part of U. S. territory. The Soviet Government has proposed that experts should work out practical measures to eliminate all possibilities of sudden attack.

As confidence gradually develops between states we shall be ready to agree to further measures of control. And as soon as there is complete trust between ourselves and the Western Powers, as soon as we see that nothing is being conspired against our country and against world peace, we shall be ready to open all doors and to show everything we have. But as long as these conditions are lacking, we do not intend, and have no right to intend, risking the security of the socialist countries.

From the speech at Soviet-Czechoslovak friendship meeting of Moscow working people, July 12, 1958.

Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons Is Only Way Out of Deadlock

The peoples are tired of the cold war. Fear of the possibility of a devastating war is preventing them from working normally. People cannot live in peace if their efforts are senselessly wasted on the production of instruments of annihilation. People are not secure as long as there is the possibility that imperialist provocateurs of some kind will risk starting war.

Is much required in the present tense conditions and with the existing suspicions, for the "accidental" appearance of a foreign plane, for a bomb, "accidentally" dropped by it, to cause a military conflict which may turn into a general war?

Strange as it may seem, there are some persons in official positions in the United States and Britain who are trying to prove that flights of bombers carrying hydrogen bombs are necessary. The more planes with hydrogen weapons are flying in the air, the less the room that is left for the doves of peace and the more for the machinations of the demon of war.

The level of armaments in some countries is now at such a stage that a moment is evidently coming—perhaps it has already come—when these countries themselves, irrespective of whether an agreement on discontinuing the manufacture of atom and hydrogen bombs is reached or not, will have to say: "Enough!"

In the past obsolete weapons and military equipment were replaced as new models were developed, but today, evidently, a stage has been reached in which it is difficult to invent a more powerful weapon than the hydrogen bomb, since there are no limits to its power. It is not by chance that scientists—so far timidly, it is true—are expressing the opinion that if the accumulated stockpiles of nuclear weapons are exploded, this can poison the atmosphere of the entire world.

The appalling consequences of nuclear weapons for all mankind are realized not only by scientists but also by the broadest sections of the public, by hundreds of millions of ordinary people throughout the world.

They are increasingly demanding of the governments, and above all of the governments of the countries possessing nuclear weapons, that an end be put to the tests of these weapons. Common sense suggests to the people the only way out of the deadlock on the disarmament problem. And this way out lies in the complete prohibition of nuclear weapons.

We are obviously approaching a time when governments, if they want to retain their bonds with the people, will no longer be able to turn a deaf ear to this universal demand of our times, and, even if they do not reach an agreement among themselves, they will be compelled unilaterally to discontinue the production of atomic and hydrogen weapons.

From speech at a meeting of the electors of Kalinin constituency, Moscow, on March 14, 1958.

Let Us Stop Testing from Today!

Loyal to its policy of peace, the Soviet Union has lately made many new constructive proposals and taken a number of steps internationally designed to relieve tension, stop the armaments race, and prohibit nuclear weapons.

You know that a few days ago the Supreme Soviet of the USSR adopted the decision for our country to unilaterally discontinue experimental explosions of atomic and hydrogen weapons. The Supreme Soviet of the USSR had called on the United States and Britain to follow suit.

We urge our partners to stop testing! Let us, as from today, make no more explosions of hydrogen and atomic bombs, and stop contaminating the atmosphere with radioactive fall-out.

On behalf of the peoples of the Soviet Union, on behalf of the Soviet Government, I address myself to the President of the United States, Mr. Eisenhower, to the Prime Minister of Great Britain, Mr. Macmillan: Follow the example set by the Soviet Union and thereby show your good will. It would make mankind happy. It would be a noble action that would live through the ages. We regard a stop to nuclear testing as a first step towards complete disarmament, towards creating conditions for lasting world peace, as a step towards peaceful co-existence, peaceful competition between the two systems. The settlement of this vitally important question would facilitate the solution also of other urgent international problems.

From speech at a mass meeting in Budapest during the stay of the Soviet Party and Government Delegation in Hungary, April 4, 1958.

We Stand Firmly for Peace

Our principal weapon is Marxism-Leninism. We shall defeat the capitalist world by using this powerful ideological weapon, rather than the hydrogen bomb. We produced the hydrogen bomb with the sole object of cooling the ambitions of some excessively zealous politicians and generals in the capitalist countries.

After all, living among wolves one must have the means to let them know how dangerous it is for them to show their fangs. We have no wish to attack anyone. But we do not want to be simpletons who can be taken barehanded. Now we cannot be taken with gloved hands, let alone barehanded!

The Soviet state, like all socialist countries, is a peaceful state. We adhere steadfastly to the Leninist principle of foreign policy. We stand firmly for peace, for the prohibition of atomic weapons, for disarmament. We are ready today to sign a treaty and end nuclear tests for all time, but this must be done in good faith, with our Western partners displaying as conscientious an attitude as we are towards solving this problem.

However, the ruling circles of the Western Powers, particularly the United States, do not agree to that. Everybody knows that the Soviet Government has unilaterally ended nuclear tests and urged the governments of the United States and Britain to follow suit. When we declared that we would do no more testing, they did not accept our proposal and stepped up their tests. Months went by, but the United States and Britain gave no thought to discontinuing tests of atomic and hydrogen bombs. Not to be at a disadvantage, in an unequal position, we had no other alternative but to resume our tests.

From the speech at Baltic Works meeting during stay in Leningrad of Polish People's Republic Delegation, Nov. 3, 19

The Nuclear Arming of West Germany Is a Fatal Course

Those who advocate arming the Bundeswehr with nuclear and rocket weapons are trying to present matters as if the measures they are taking in this direction are necessary to protect the Federal Republic of Germany from some "threat" coming from the East, and as if these might ensure the security of the Federal Republic. It is not difficult to see that these allegations, to say the least, have nothing in common with the truth.

The talk about a "threat" from the Soviet Union is a deception, and its purpose is to justify measures aimed at drawing the Federal Republic into the atomic and rocket race and to stir up hatred against the Soviet Union among the West German population.

The Soviet Union has never waged any aggressive wars—such wars are foreign to the very nature of our state. The USSR does not intend, and never has intended, to attack either the Federal Republic of Germany or any other state. The threat of "local attacks" on the Federal Republic by the Soviet Union, with which the Federal Republic's Defence Minister Strauss recently tried to scare the West German population, is an absurd fabrication invented to meet the needs of revenge seekers and militarists. West Germany as a state would undoubtedly stand to gain and would earn the confidence of neighbouring peoples if it called to order the ill-starred strategists in the Federal Republic who continue to slander peace-loving nations and foment revanchist passions among the German population.

The Soviet Government fully shares the opinion of West German circles who maintain that nuclear weapons cannot serve as a means of ensuring the security of the Federal Republic of Germany, and that arming the Bundeswehr with these weapons, and stationing these weapons on West German territory, threaten to destroy the Federal Republic of Germany and spell death for millions upon millions of Germans, since all these measures are pushing West Germany further and further along the road of war preparations.

Only politically blind and ignorant people can fail to see the horrible holocaust being prepared for the Federal Republic of Germany by those who are shaping the present military and political course of this state.

We get the impression that those who advocate the nuclear arming of the Federal Republic either do not realize to the full the danger to which they are exposing the West German population or are doing this deliberately.

In either case they are committing a crime by pushing the Federal Republic of Germany along a fatal course.

Part Six

By NIKITA S. KHRUSHCHEV

NOW let us turn to the German question. As soon as the desirability of a summit conference is mentioned, the governing circles of certain Western Powers consider it necessary to push the so-called German question into the foreground and demand that precisely this issue be discussed by an international conference.

But what is the German question in present-day conditions? It is, above all, the question of relations between the two sovereign states with different social systems now existing on German soil. It is the problem of contact, rapprochement and unification in one form or another of the two states, with the aim of restoring the national unity of Germany as a single peaceful and democratic state.

The Soviet Union has more than once set out its views on this question, declaring that the German question can be solved only by the German people themselves. The Soviet Union, for its part, will do everything to help the reunification of Germany.

On what basis must such reunification be effected? I think that the Germans themselves will decide this matter. Obviously Herr Adenauer will not want the economy of West Germany to be rebuilt along socialist lines. It is also obvious that the working people of the German Democratic Republic will not want to abolish their socialist gains and will not agree to restore capitalism. Therefore it is necessary to recognize the historical fact that two states with different social systems exist in Germany—the socialist German Democratic Republic and the capitalist Federal Republic of Germany. With the aim of peacefully unifying the country, the Government of the German Democratic Republic has made a reasonable proposal first to create a German confederation, which would be a union by treaty of two sovereign states, in order to pursue a common policy on a definite range of external and internal questions.

From speech, "Some Aspects of International Situation" at conference of front-rank workers in agriculture of the Byelorussian Republic, Jan. 22, 1958.

Peace Treaty Is Fundamental To Settlement of German Problem

We are aware that the problem of a peace treaty profoundly agitates the minds of Germans. And that is understandable. More than 12 years have elapsed since the end of the Second World War, but the German people are still without a peace treaty which would write finis to the war and its consequences. The problem of a peace treaty is the problem of restoring Germany's complete sovereignty and independence, the problem of its frontiers and of the withdrawal of foreign troops from its territory. It is therefore natural that no ersatz agreements, such as the Paris Agreements, can take the place of a peace treaty. Such decisions can only be of a transitory nature, because they do not spring from the national interests of the two German states and are in direct conflict with the interests of the security of a number of states, above all, those that took part in the war against Hitler Germany.

But it is one thing to end the state of war with Germany, which has also been done by the Soviet Government in view of the Western Powers' opposition to the conclusion of a peace treaty with Germany, and another to conclude a peace treaty, which defines the external conditions, through the observation of which Germany's entire development could be protected from every kind of extraneous interference. During the entire postwar period the Soviet Government has been working for a fundamental settlement of the German problem through the conclusion of a peace treaty with Germany.

Bearing in mind that there are two sovereign states in Germany today—the German Democratic Republic and the Federal Republic of Germany—it is important not to postpone the drawing up of a draft peace treaty, in order to give the German people a clear idea of Germany's prospects for future development.

Needless to say, the Germans themselves—the German Democratic Republic and the Federal Republic of Germany—must take part in the drawing up of such a draft treaty. And here again, in my opinion, it is the proposal of the Government of the German Democratic Republic to set up a German confederation that offers the most realistic possibilities for the conclusion of a peace treaty with Germany.

In that event, a peace treaty could be concluded both with the organs of the confederation and with the governments of the states within that confederation.

We believe that both German states must unconditionally renounce all kinds of weapons of mass destruction, that is to say, renounce both their own production of atomic, hydrogen and rocket weapons and also the equipping of their armed forces with foreign-made weapons of this kind, and prevent the building of atomic and rocket bases belonging to other powers on their territory. Both German states, after embarking on the road of re-establishing national unity, must renounce membership of the military groupings of the Powers to which they belong at the present time.

And lastly, the levels of the armed forces of the two German states must be established in conformity with their requirements for self-defense and for ensuring internal security, through an agreement between the Governments of the German Democratic Republic and the Federal Republic of Germany.

Indeed, the present situation in Berlin cannot be regarded as normal. Berlin is, of course, the capital of the German Democratic Republic, while the western part of the city, namely, the American, British and French sectors, represent a kind of island within the German Democratic Republic.

The military authorities of the Western Powers in Berlin in every way stress their prerogatives as occupation authorities. Whereas in West Germany some of the restrictions of the occupation regime which affect the Germans must have been lifted; in West Berlin these restrictions are still in force.

It is also well known that West Berlin is being extensively used for subversive activities against the German Democratic Republic and other socialist countries. I must say frankly that as a result of the policy of the United States, Britain and France, and also of the Federal Republic of Germany, West Berlin has become one of the most painful sores of the cold war.

From interview accorded West German publisher Alex Springer, editor of Die Welt, Jan. 29, 1958.

European Security Must Be Ensured

I also want to make a few remarks about the so-called German question. At one time we made persistent efforts to settle this question in complete conformity with the Crimean and Potsdam declarations. It is not our fault that this was not achieved. The Western Powers were interested in reviving German militarism instead of creating a united, democratic and peaceful Germany.

The situation has radically changed since then. Two sovereign German states have been formed and they themselves have to find the way to a rapprochement. We maintain normal diplomatic relations with these two states—the German Democratic Republic and the Federal Republic of Germany—and we refuse to interfere in their internal affairs.

If there is really a desire to do something useful in this sphere, the question of concluding a peace treaty with Germany should be discussed. If the Western Powers are against that, we shall not insist on including it in the agenda. But we cannot agree to the fact that some people tie up European security with the German question, as is done in the State Department's aide-memoire. Such a tie-up had its history, but those days are gone.

The main thing now is to ensure European security. But a solution to this important problem in the way proposed by the United States and some other Western countries will by no means strengthen peace in Europe, and, consequently, will not strengthen world peace either. Need it be said that this will bring neither a more stable peace nor security to the Germans, whether in West Germany or in East Germany.

The German problem is an important one for the German nation. But we must proceed from the interests of ensuring the security of all the European peoples, including the German people. Let us, therefore, begin by settling the problem which concerns all Europe and the entire world, and this will facilitate the solution of the German problem as well.

When Europe stops being a theatre for military competition between the two blocs, when foreign troops go back home, when the threat of war is eliminated, that is to say, when European security is ensured and tension has been eased, all the peoples of Europe, and for that matter not only of Europe, will only gain by that. Would not all this help the German people, who now live in two states with different social conditions, to find a way to contact, to rapprochement and to the solution of the issues that cause anxiety to the populations of both those states? Any other way will lead, not to the solution of the German question, but to a worsening of the situation and even to war.

From speech at a meeting of the electors of Kalinin Constituency, Moscow, March 14, 1958.

Why the Soviet Union Suggests the Ending of the Occupation of West Berlin

Why the question of ending the occupation status of Berlin has arisen, and why it has become necessary to settle this question at this particular time? This is explained by the particular relations which have developed between the Great Powers or, as the press would say, between the West and the East.

We have taken many steps towards relieving the tension in international relations, paving the way for a entente, developing normal relations between states ansuring peaceful co-existence and solving whatever differences may arise by peaceful means, without allowing matters to lead to conflict.

We have undertaken no few measures to find methods of approach to this problem, that is to say, towards the establishment of a normal situation throughput the world and, above all, in Europe, towards ansuring understanding and peace among the states which fought gainst Nazi Germany. And enough time—more than 13 years—has elapsed since the war.

The obstacle to the conclusion of a peace treaty with Germany, that accounts for the attitude of representatives of the Western Powers and the particular persistence of West Germany, consists in their unwillingness to recognize the realities of life. And the actual reality is that there are two German states in existence—the Federal Republic of Germany, which bases itself on the principle of private capitalist ownership, and the German Democratic Republic, which is growing and developing on a socialist basis and moving in the direction of socialism.

If we accept this reasoning which is often regarded in the West as valid, then it is necessary to perpetuate this situation. Indeed, the German Democratic Republic would hardly be able to persuade Herr Adenauer and his Government that West Germany should adopt a socialist trend in its political activity. That would, of course, be desirable both for the Germans of the German Democratic Republic and for many of the Germans in West Germany, as well as for all progressive mankind, and we, as Communists, would welcome this very much.

But to think that Herr Adenauer and the ruling circles of West Germany will agree to it would mean indulging in wishful thinking.

ON THE other hand, certain circles in West Germany and, to my regret, Chancellor Adenauer and other do indulge in this sort of wishful thinking, as they are hoping, for some reason or other, to get the German Democratic Republic to renounce its socialist system and to adopt a capitalist system. This, they say, would be the basis for the "reunification" of Germany, that is to say, for the monopoly circles of West Germany to absorb the German Democratic Republic and thus create a united Germany on the same social basis prevailing in West Germany. And only after this will it become possible, in their opinion, to conclude a peace treaty.

Are these hopes realistic? Of course not. They must be described as fantastic, since the working people of the German Democratic Republic will never agree to give up their social and political gains in favour of exploiters and monopolists.

So what is to be done?

One must proceed from the real facts. There exists a divided Berlin where the occupation regime is still maintained. The war was ended more than 13 years ago. I feel that every normal person finds such a situation abnormal. It is necessary, therefore, to find a solution that will end this abnormality, because the present existence of the occupation regime serves no positive purpose at all. The perpetuation of such a situation would be to the advantage only of a party pursuing aggressive aims.

To the Western Powers West Berlin is a convenient place for conducting an aggressive policy against the German Democratic Republic, and against the Soviet Union and other countries of the socialist camp. In view of a definite policy of the Western Powers to whip up revengeful sentiments in West Germany and to encourage the revival of reactionary fascist organizations and forces there, West Berlin has been turned into a kind of cancerous tumor. And if it is not eliminated this threatens to become a danger that may lead to quite undesirable consequences.

It is precisely because of this threat that we have decided to perform a surgical operation, i.e., to terminate the occupation status of Berlin and to create conditions that will help to normalize relations between the Great Powers of the former anti-Hitler coalition. We wish to establish a normal atmosphere, normal conditions, in which the relations between our countries will become what they were during the war against Hitler Germany.

We are convinced that all peoples who stand for ending the cold war, for establishing normal conditions in the mutual relations between countries, for ensuring the peaceful co-existence of countries, irrespective of their systems and for ruling out friction and conflicts between countries—all these people will welcome the Soviet Union's proposals for the solution of the Berlin problem.

At the same time, we realize perfectly well that certain circles who are in favour of continuing the cold war, stand for utilizing West Berlin as a hotbed of discord for kindling a hot war. These circles will naturally be displeased with our peace proposals and will oppose them.

But we are convinced that such people constitute a minority in the world. The overwhelming majority of people want peace in the world and therefore we count on the support of these people.

From press conference in Kremlin held by N. S. Khrushchev, Chairman of the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers, Nov. 27, 1958.

Adenauer's Policy May Lead to the Collapse of West Germany

If the Federal Chancellor were really concerned about the restoration of the country's unity would he then emerge as the leader of a campaign for continuing the occupation of West Berlin indefinitely? Why is he doing this? In any case, it is not being done in the interests of the West Berlin population, who have to put up with the occupation regime. Nor is it being done, of course, in the interests of a detente and the establishment of normal relations between neighbouring countries.

Or let us take the question of a peace treaty with Germany. It is indeed unbelievable that the head of the government of one of the existing German states does not want to conclude a peace treaty through negotiations with the Soviet Union and the three Western Powers—the leading participants in the anti-Hitler coalition—and with the participation of the two sovereign German states which have emerged on the territory of Germany.

Chancellor Adenauer, like his NATO partners, is apparently striving for some other peace treaty which would actually abolish the German Democratic Republic. But no sober-minded person can expect this to be accepted. What grounds are there for raising the question of abolishing the German Democratic Republic—the first workers' and peasants' state in the history of Germany? For that matter, the Germans in the German Democratic Republic could suggest the abolition of the Federal Republic of Germany and reunify the country on the basis of the socialist principles on which the German Democratic Republic is based. But it is obvious that neither of these two approaches to the question is realistic.

The only practical possibility of solving the German question once and for all is through a peaceful settlement with Germany. In concluding a peace treaty with Germany, the existence of the two German states must undoubtedly be taken into consideration and they must be invited to take part in the negotiations of the four Great Powers. This would be the most reasonable solution to the problem and would be welcomed by the people of all countries, who yearn for the relaxation of tension and for peace to be secured.

But if the Federal Chancellor insists on something else, it signifies that he is pursuing other aims but not those which guarantee peace. It means that he is pursuing a dangerous "positions of strength" policy.

He wishes to create an army and to arm it with atomic weapons; he wishes to pursue a policy of force. Thus it follows that Chancellor Adenauer is pursuing a policy which may lead to disaster, to the collapse of West Germany, since under present conditions, with the existence of modern weapons of mass destruction, war would be of a devastating nature. This is monstrous, of course, but it is a fact, and we must not shut our eyes to it. We would like to believe that the sound patriotic forces which exist in West Germany and are concerned for the destiny of their people, will correctly understand this in good time and do everything in their power to prevent the unleashing of a third world war.

'Future Conflict Can Bring About End of All Life'

The Inquirer presents today the seventh and last part of selected portions of "Khrushchev's Blueprint for Future," from Nikita S. Khrushchev's first important book, "For Victory in Pedceful Competition with Capitalism," as a public service because it believes all Americans should know how the leader of the USSR thinks, what he believes and what his aims are. Publication in our columns does not in any way constitute approbal or confirmation of his views. *Copyright, 1959, The Philadelphia Inquirer (A Division of Triangle Publications, Inc.) and Nikita S. Seventh and Last Part

By NIKITA S. KHRUSHCHEV

THE most burning, vital question for all mankind today is the question of peace or war. Wars between states have always caused many casualties and much destruction. But a future war, if, contrary to the will of the peoples, it is unleashed, threatens to be the most destructive of all wars—a nuclear war. Apart from direct destruction, the use of nuclear weapons will contaminate the air by radioactive fall-out, and this can lead to the destruction of all life, especially in countries with densely-populated, small territories. There, literally everything can be swept from the face of the Earth.

It is precisely for this reason that in our day the struggle to preserve peace and prevent a new war has become not only the primary, vital concern of those who may be subjected to attack by the imperialists, but also the immediate concern of the peoples of all countries, regardless of where they may live—in Europe or Asia, America or Africa, irrespective of their class position, religious beliefs or the colour of their skin—it is literally the concern of everyone living on Earth.

The task is to prevent a new war and to ensure peace throughout the world. But this needs more than just appeals, more than the desire alone. Peace must be defended in stubborn struggle against the forces that are trying to unleash a new war.

To live without wars, without fear for the morrow, without slavery and poverty, free from the exploitation of some countries by others, free from social injustices—that is what the best minds of mankind and the working people of the whole world have dreamed of for centuries. But only today can these noble dreams become clothed with reality. This has become possible as a result of the strengthened might of the Soviet Union and the entire world socialist system, that have inaugurated a new epoch in the history of mankind—the epoch of real socialist freedom and the triumph of reason.

Today the decisive requirement for mankind's advance along the path of progress is peace, the prevention of those terrible disasters that a new war would bring.

The Communist Party and the Soviet Government, for whom there is nothing greater than the fulfillment of the aspirations of the people, have done, and are doing, everything necessary to prevent a new war and to direct the development of international relations along the lines of preserving a stable peace. They are doing everything possible to achieve peace and equitable relations and friendship among all peoples in deeds and not in words.

From speech at a meeting of the electors of Kalinin constituency, Moscow, March 14, 1958.

To Rise Above Ideological Differences

The Soviet Union works untiringly for universal disarmament, for the unconditional banning of nuclear weapons, for an immediate discontinuation of atomic and hydrogen bomb tests, for ending the cold war. As part of its peace policy, working for an international detente and an atmosphere of confidence, the Soviet Government has in the last three years reduced the country's armed forces by 2,140,000 men.

You know that a few days ago the first session of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR has decided upon the unilateral discontinuation by the Soviet Union of tests of all types of atomic and hydrogen weapons.

The Soviet Union has applied, and will continue to apply, every effort to achieve mutual understanding and friendly relations with the peoples of all countries. We act upon the assumption that in present circumstances all governments which appreciate their responsibility for world destinies, must rise above ideological differences. In the past three or four years we have achieved some positive results in that respect.

Regrettably, leading statesmen in a number of Western countries have not as yet shown any desire to adopt the principles of co-existence, non-aggression, mutual respect of territorial integrity and sovereignty, non-interference in domestic affairs, and rejection of the policy "from strength." They take no heed of the people's hatred of cold war, of their urge for peace and action to relieve international tension.

The Soviet Union threatens no one. It has always opposed war as an instrument of international politics. It is against carving the world up into military blocs. It stands for settling international issues by negotiation. This is precisely why the Soviet Government has approached the governments of the Great Powers and the governments of most countries of the world, with the proposal of convening a summit conference.

From speech at the meeting in Budapest in celebration of 13th anniversary of Hungary's liberation, on April 3, 1958.

Let People See and Decide

Yes, we are convinced that our ideas will triumph. But the victory of these ideas will not be won by war but by a higher standard of living under socialism and a higher level of culture, science and art, of everything required for the life and not for the death of man. Hydrogen bombs and rockets are powerless against this; neither Atlantic nor Baghdad pacts can hinder dissemination of the ideas of scientific communism, because the logic of life is inculcating them in the minds and hearts of men.

When everyone sees that people in socialist countries live well, enjoy equal rights, have good housing—and we have now set ourselves the task of solving the housing problem within the next 10-12 years—that they are well fed and have the shortest working day because they are the owners of their plants and factories and no one exploits them; when people see that science develops faster and more successfully in these countries, that everyone who wishes can obtain higher education and finds application for his abilities in any sphere of mental or physical labour; that people enjoy every material benefit; when they see that as a result of the higher productivity of labour and the shorter working day man will have increasingly more free time to develop his talents and abilities and to take up the arts according to his inclination, then only an idiot, pardon the word, will oppose this.

This is the basis of our confidence and conviction in the inevitable triumph of Communism. All people will inevitably come to this, but it is hard to say when. It is a long path and one must not advance towards Communism by sowing death. On the contrary, Communism is the most humane and the most philanthropic ideology. If the triumph of Communism were to be gained by aggressive wars and the extermination of people, in that case I personally would oppose Communism.

When all the peoples, or most of them, reach Communism there will be some kind of distribution of labour and duties among the peoples. This will not be competition but friendly cooperation and a rational distribution of forces, so as to produce, with the minimum expenditure, more goods to satisfy the vital needs of society and man. That is our ideal and purpose. Is war between nations necessary to achieve this aim?

We Need No Arms Race

Some bourgeois politicians plan to impose a still more acute cold war on the Soviet Union, thereby make it spend more on armaments, and in this way weaken its economic potential and impede its development along peaceful lines. Despite the cold war policy, however, our country's rate of economic development greatly exceeds that of capitalist countries and will continue to exceed it. This is convincingly shown by the facts.

The time is not far off when we shall overtake the most advanced capitalist countries and outstrip them in per capita output. Everything now points to this, and when it has been achieved the indisputable superiority of the socialist system will be even more obvious to everyone.

Consequently, proceeding from the actual state of affairs and forecasts for the future, the Soviet Union is not interested in the arms race and the continuation of the cold war policy. We are for ending the cold war policy, for the establishment of the most sincere and friendly relations with all countries, for complete disarmament and the abolition of armed forces. But this, apparently, is something our partners are not yet prepared to do.

From interview given to A. McDonald, foreign editor of The London Times, on Jan. 31, 1958.

Man Is a Friend to Man

The main thing to be borne in mind is the noble aims and principles of Communism. Under capitalism man is a wolf to man. Every capitalist wants to snatch more for himself, caring nothing about the interests of other people or the interests of society, and he spies upon his neighbour in order to steal his secret and use it for his own ends. Such are the laws of capitalist competition.

Nothing like this exists under socialism. Under socialism there are no oppressors or oppressed; all men and women live by their own labour, and all have equal rights and duties to society. At the highest stage, under Communism, the full satisfaction of man's needs will be ensured. And these are not idle words. Under socialism man is a friend to man, regardless of the language he speaks and the God to whom he prays. Religion is matter for each person to decide for himself.

Socialism is the most just and noble social system, under which the efforts of the whole of society are aimed at promoting the welfare of the people and the constant development of the economy, science, culture and art, at ensuring that the people live better and better. It is well worth working for these lofty aims, sparing neither effort nor knowledge. In the language of Western businessmen, one can figuratively describe the firm of Communist construction as sound and upright.

Under socialism the products of labour are distributed in accordance with the quantity and quality of work contributed by each member of society, i.e., according to the principle: From each according to his ability, to each according to his work. Under Communism distribution will take place according to the principle: From each according to his ability, to each according to his needs.

In order to speed the advance of all the socialist countries to Communism, we must do everything possible for each socialist country to develop its economy and increase its labour productivity more rapidly. Each of our countries must render genuinely fraternal aid to the other socialist countries. By uniting our efforts, by promoting cooperation and collaboration, our countries are achieving greater successes in economic development. At the same time each socialist country must make the best possible use of its internal potentialities for developing its national economy.

In the process of building Communism, all socialist countries will equalize their economies, eliminate differences in level of development, without taking the relatively underdeveloped countries as their criterion. This equalization will not take place by lowering the level of the countries that are economically highly developed. By no means. The equalization should and will proceed through the more rapid advance of the countries that are relatively less developed economically by bringing them up to the level of the most developed countries. Thus, all the socialist countries will march in a common united front along the road of socialism, along the road of building communist society.

From speech at a meeting held in Palace of Culture of the Bitterfield Electro-Chemical Works during stay in German Democratic Republic of the delegation of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union to the 5th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, July 9, 1958

We Resolutely Oppose the Cold War

Certain in the triumph of socialism, certain that the future belongs to it, we resolutely oppose the cold war. Socialism does not need atomic or hydrogen bombs to assert itself. Like sound seed thrown on good earth, socialism is yielding abundant fruit. And this causes joy to millions of people all over the world.

THE END

The Visit Became a Career

ONLY HUMAN: By SIDNEY FIELDS

Allen Stuart Drury arrived in Washington, D. C., at the age of 25, to visit relatives and perhaps get a year's experience as a reporter on the national scene before he returned to newspapering in California.

That was 16 years ago.

Had he returned to California we would not have had his novel, "Advise and Consent," a completely absorbing story of Washington politics and politicians, their greatness as well as their greed. It has given me a new knowledge and respect for our government.

It's Drury's first novel. It was a Book-of-the-Month selection, a Reader's Digest book condensation, and will be dramatized and filmed in a deal reported as a $200,000 down payment against a $450,000 top (not counting the taxes.)

The play, to be produced by Bob Fryer and Lawrence Carr, is now being dramatized by Loring Mandel for production next October. Otto Preminger will film it. Movies aren't always tender with a novel.

"In which case I can call on the entire Washington press corps to help them make it authentic," said Drury, who stands six feet, three and a quarter inches, and has an affable, quiet directness.

FOR THE PAST five years he was a member of the N. Y. Times' Washington staff, but resigned, and after January 1, will work for the Reader's Digest in the capital. Before then he will take a holiday in Florida with his parents, his sister and her husband, and their two sons.

"Do you want to see my nephews?" he asked, and pulled their pictures out of his wallet. Two beautiful boys, five and two. Drury is a bachelor.

His father, now semi-retired and the Southern representative for "The Produce News," was a member of the Fruit Exchange in California. He got his first taste for politics from his mother, who was the State Legislative Representative for the PTA in Sacramento. Approx. 1918

Born in Houston, Texas, but raised in Porterville, Calif., from the age of six months, Drury wrote short stories and poetry in high school and college, even had a poem published in a regional quarterly.

"But I never got anywhere, so I became a newspaperman," he said, "though I always knew I'd write novels."

At Stanford he worked on the University daily, and broke his back in an auto accident. One vertebra is still where it shouldn't be.

AFTER FOUR years on a weekly and a daily he resigned to volunteer for the army, despite his back. He was discharged after 14 months, and went to Washington. He worked for the U.P., Pathfinder magazine, and the Washington "Star" before the N. Y. Times.

"And at one point tried to write for a string of papers on my own," he said, "but that fizzled out."

In 1950 he wrote the first few chapters of "Advise and Consent," and like most newspapermen told himself: "I'll get around to it." All he did was make occasional notes.

Seven years later a friend, Evelyn Metzger, scouting for Doubleday, the publishers, read the chapters, got Drury to the chief editor, who asked for an outline, and showed a contract before him. He didn't sign, but went back to write the first section. When the editor read it he offered the contract again.

"And this time I signed, Drury said, "I had a deadline, and had to finish it."

He wrote steadily for 3 months, every week-end, on

"I was blessed with the ability to write anywhere, any time, and under any circumstances," he said. And being a newspaperman helped."

HE WROTE in the modern two bed-room house he had built, along the Potomac five years ago, on property he bought ten years ago because he always wanted to live away from Washington and in a beautiful spot.

"Want to see a picture of it?" he asked, and pulled one out of his wallet. "Its beauty and all the river traffic are a distraction to writing."

He has a contract for two more novels; is now busy on the next one. "I have a few extra chapters lying around that I began years ago," he said.

And how has the sudden deluge of success affected him?

"I should be able to weather it with reasonable stability, sane good humor, and a calm refusal to be overly impressed with my own importance."

The Red Menace in the Unions

COMMUNISM IN AMERICAN LABOR UNIONS, by David J. Saposs [McGraw-Hill, 270 pages, $7.50].

Reviewed by George Bliss

"At present, Communists are embarking on another program of trade union penetration."

The warning of David J. Saposs, a lecturer and professor in the field of labor relations, comes at a time when government agencies and Congressional committees have vainly been trying to alert the public to the menace the left wing unionists have started in an all-out organizational and representational campaign.

Saposs says the inertia to the danger of the Communists displayed by leaders as well as union members indicates the need of shock treatment to induce action. Some years ago, he recalls, those who were alert to the infiltration of communism in vital labor organizations and who attempted to do something about the situation were criticized as labor baiters. The same situation exists today, and the author calls for an aroused public opinion to bring satisfactory results in combatting subversive elements that infiltrate and attach themselves to individual organizations and the labor movement.

He tells how the Communists are "planted" in labor organizations, mostly on the lower levels, and work their way up. He says these individuals completely conceal their affiliation and sentiments.

He warns of how the well educated and highly trained technicians conceal their identity by falsifying their place of birth, formal education, and references of previous employment.

"This tactic, used previously in the 'colonization' of followers in unions, vital industries, and various civil and political organizations, is now being expanded," he says.

"These concealed Communists studiously avoid participating in the consideration of broad social issues or in maintaining contact with overt communist activities and agencies. They concentrate on siding with dissident elements in the unions, instigating discontent, subtly planting and circulating rumors, and even resorting to other means of discrediting the current leadership. In this manner they hope to rise to leadership and power. Some of them have already achieved that aim."

And the author points out that this is not a new method used by Communists but that their greatest success was achieved by operating under cover when the country was prosperous and the labor movement was growing to unprecedented proportions. To contend that the decline of communism is attributable chiefly to an extraordinary prosperity is erroneous, he adds.

Saposs has presented a full revelation of the methods used by the Communists, their methods of infiltrating and amassing power, their appeal to the rank and file, and their successes within the CIO and AFL.

SUBJECT: BOOK REVIEW CONTROL BY PUBLICATIONS DESK CENTRAL RESEARCH SECTION

In connection with the inspection of the Records and Communications Division, it was recommended and approved that the Publications Desk, Central Research Section, create a central control and repository for book reviews, thus establishing a book review responsibility under the supervision of Inspector W. C. Sullivan. The procedures to be followed are set forth in the enclosed memorandum to Bureau officials and supervisors. These procedures are focused upon (1) eliminating duplication in purchases and reviews and (2) establishing a central repository to answer questions relating to whether a book has been purchased or ordered for review.

It is anticipated that after a 6-month period Central Research can review its experience in this regard and recommend procedures for streamlining or otherwise improving the handling of this matter, including such questions as to the length of time the book review index cards should be retained.

RECOMMENDATION:

SEP 1 1959

It is recommended that the enclosed memorandum to Bureau officials and supervisors be approved so that this program may be placed in effect immediately.

FOR VICTORY IN PEACEFUL COMPETITION WITH CAPITALISM
By Nikita S. Khrushchev
BOOK REVIEW

The New York Times, Monday, September 14, 1959, carried the following information:

FD-4 from New York dated 9-21-59 re E. P. Dutton's announcement book would not be published in U.S. next spring. Also stated Dutton's standing order for the book does not include Soviet propaganda. Bureau placed 1 copy in Reading Room pending review of the book.

"E. P. Dutton & Company announces the forthcoming publication of Nikita S. Khrushchev's first major book For Victory in Peaceful Competition with Capitalism with a special Preface for the American edition by Premier Khrushchev. This 600-page volume, translated into English under Premier Khrushchev's authorization and supervision, sets forth his blueprint for the world's future--a plan of which no American can afford to remain ignorant."

You should make discreet arrangements to obtain one copy of the referenced book (English translation) immediately, when available, and forward it to the Bureau by routing slip, attention Central Research Section.

SUBJECT: BOOK REVIEW: ADVISE AND CONSENT
BY ALLEN DRURY (DOUBLEDAY & COMPANY)
CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER

Captioned book is a lengthy novel about Washington politics and is an obvious attempt to "cash in" on the recent publicity surrounding the Senate's rejection of Admiral Strauss as Secretary of Commerce. There are two passing references to the FBI, and a number of snide remarks about various Government agencies and people associated therewith. No characters are identifiable with actual persons--either living or dead--but a number of similarities have been noted. In 1953, author Drury interviewed Miss Gandy in connection with her 35th anniversary in the Bureau. Bureau files not derogatory.

Reference is made to the memorandum of Mr. DeLoach to Mr. Tolson, dated September 11, 1959, in which reference was made to the fact that Central Research was preparing a review of above-captioned book.

Book-of-the-Month Club Selection

Advise and Consent, by Allen Drury (Doubleday & Company), is a 616-page novel of Washington politics, taking place at some undefined period in the immediate future and involving the general question of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union. It was the Book-of-the-Month Club selection for August, 1959. The title is derived from Article II, Section 2, of the United States Constitution, which provides that the President, "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate," shall nominate certain public officials for Government positions.

REC- 24

18 SEP 28 1959

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: Book Review: Advise and Consent
By Allen Drury (Doubleday & Company)

Cabinet Appointee

The plot of the novel--which indicates that Drury is either an extremely fast or else an extremely lucky writer, since it capitalizes on the recent Senate rejection of Admiral Lewis L. Strauss as Secretary of Commerce--concerns an ailing President, near the end of his second and last term, who is intent on replacing his Secretary of State in order to facilitate negotiations with the Soviet Union. His choice as successor is Robert A. Leffingwell, who is a dedicated public servant, but who is a controversial liberal and, therefore, is unacceptable to the conservatives.

Leading Figure Accused as Communist

At Senate hearings on his nomination, Leffingwell is charged by a former student of his at the University of Chicago of having been affiliated with a campus communist cell while teaching there years before. It is later brought out that Leffingwell lied to the Senate subcommittee in denying his former communist connections. The senator who heads the subcommittee is himself vulnerable, and he takes his own life when his political enemies revive a homosexual episode in his wartime past. In the end, Leffingwell's nomination is rejected by the Senate and the President dies suddenly.

Characters Resemble Real People

The leading characters in the book are never clearly recognizable, although they do possess more than a few traits of well-known political figures of the recent past and present. The President, for example, bears considerable resemblance to the late Franklin D. Roosevelt; the Vice President is reminiscent of Harry S. Truman; Senator Orrin Knox is cast in the same mold as the late Robert A. Taft; and Senator Fred Van Ackerman has many likenesses to the late Joseph R. McCarthy.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: Book Review: Advise and Consent
By Allen Drury (Doubleday & Company)

References to the FBI

The FBI is mentioned only twice in passing. The first time is at a party given by a prominent Washington hostess where "the director of the FBI (not otherwise named or described) was chatting genially with the Secretary of Commerce and his wife." At the same party was "the director of the Central Intelligence Agency and two of the primmer male members of his far-flung crew of motley misfits." (p. 108)

The other reference to the FBI occurs when tourists are described as "viewing with suitable awe," among the many popular sights in Washington, "the blood-stained relics of the FBI." (p. 277)

Snide Remarks

The book contains a number of snide references to Government agencies and people associated therewith. He refers to the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee as the "biggest fool in the Senate" (p. 82); the Vice President as "an awfully nice guy" who "certainly had not been equipped by temperament or nature for...the role he had to play" (p. 73); the Postmaster General as "a man whose qualifications for running the public mails were decided decisively in the last Presidential campaign when he contributed the surprising sum of $150,000 to the President's cause" (p. 143); and the Senate chaplain as "one of those ministers who go around slapping God on the back. A small, bulgy man with bad breath....getting older and bulgier and more odorous and more obnoxious." (p. 72)

Background of Allen Drury

Allen Drury, the author, is about 40 years of age. He has been assigned to the Washington Bureau of The New York Times as United States Senate correspondent since 1954. A native of Texas, he was graduated from Stanford University. Since that time, he has been a journalist, primarily as a Washington correspondent for various publications, working first for the United Press, then for Pathfinder magazine, and later for The Evening Star of Washington, D. C. (100-400370-22, p. 4)

While on The Evening Star, Drury interviewed Miss Gandy in 1953 on the occasion of her 35th anniversary with the Bureau. (94-8-24-386)

In February, 1959, a Bureau representative was scheduled to appear on an interview program with Drury over Radio Station WRC in Washington, D. C. This appearance did not materialize because the Bureau representative was out of the city on the day of the scheduled program. (94-1-31274-32)

There is no derogatory information in the Bureau's files relative to Drury.

A HISTORY OF AMERICAN LABOR

by Joseph G. Rayback

a two-century look at the triumphs and failures of American labor

A NEW APPROACH ——

A HISTORY OF AMERICAN LABOR examines labor as a fiber closely woven into the fabric of American life. You will see how labor affects and is affected by ECONOMICS, POLITICS, INDUSTRY, SOCIOLOGY.

Reading this book, you will be amazed at the sweeping changes that have taken place between the COLONIAL PERIOD when working men first rolled up their collective sleeves to bid for the dignity and economic well-being they considered rightfully theirs and the PRESENT ERA

when labor unions exert an unprecedented influence on all aspects of American life.

Just published A HISTORY OF AMERICAN LABOR has already caught the attention of the critics, who hail it as:

"a compact and comprehensive chronicle"

"A reading of this book should be helpful to those whose view of present-day labor is bounded by Dave Beck, Jimmy Hoffa and Johnny Dio....Mr. Rayback makes a commendable effort to integrate labor's story with the broad sweep of national economic, social and political developments.... a compact and comprehensive chronicle of where labor has been and where it is today....useful in a period when labor gives so many signs of neither understanding nor being understood." —A.H. Soviet Trade Challenge Cited in New Book

By CHARLES LUCEY
Scripps-Howard Staff Writer

NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV'S oft-repeated promise that communism will eclipse the American way makes timely an arresting new book on world economic affairs by Clarence B. Randall, foreign economic policy adviser to President Eisenhower. It is published today by Little, Brown and Co. in association with the Atlantic Monthly Press.

The Randall book is titled "The Communist Challenge to American Business." It centers on the vast new economic force the Soviet Union is bringing into play in its drive to expand and foster the communist system all over the globe.

Yet it is broader than this, too—it is a fresh and authoritative view of the new challenges facing the U. S. in all world trade by a man in exceptionally good position to know what he's talking about.

HARVARD MAN

Clarence Randall is a Harvard Law School product who rose to become president of Inland Steel. Then, a decade ago, he began a series of major government assignments —perhaps most notably the chairmanship of the Randall Commission on foreign econmic policy. Since 1953 he has been "continuously immersed in the ever turbulent stream of discussion of our foreign trade."

"For those who will listen," writes Mr. Randall, "an alarm bell is ringing in the eastern world. It tells us to watch the Russians. It calls to arm those of us who believe in free enterprise, and stridently proclaims that a new industrial challenge has suddenly come from behind the Iron Curtain."

The danger of military war we understand, says the author, "but we still ignore the economic war which now [illegible] damage of a different sort which it might cause."

DEDICATED

Russians work with religious zeal, he contends, not driven but dedicated. The Soviet production rate is formidable — "an American businessman would be mad indeed to delude himself into believing that there is something his company can do which the Russians cannot duplicate if they wish."

In Russia, he reports, there is no featherbedding, no made work, no job not contributing directly to output. He commends Soviet research and says that at the industry and plant level more effort probably is devoted to this field than in the U. S. Thus, Soviet output is based solidly on continuous scientific inquiry.

The author has many positive suggestions as to how American businessmen, by themselves and working with the U. S. Government, can help meet this rising challenge. He stresses the imperative need of less insular thinking by business, for greater awareness of pressing problems that lie ahead.

SUBJECT: BOOK REVIEW: Inside the Khrushchev Era, By Giuseppe Boffa (Marzani & Munsell, Inc., 100 West 23rd Street, New York, New York) CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER

SYNOPSIS: Captioned book more than just apology for 42 years of amorality which Soviet leaders have inflicted on world. Is a well-timed communist attempt to devaluate Western world and elevate Soviet Union, its history, and leaders into world's Hall of Fame. Like the forest which was obscured by the trees, truth, in this book, is obscured by 226 pages of Soviet propaganda. Brought into being by communist publishers, book comprises allegedly "unbiased" and "critical" views of indoctrinated communist, Giuseppe Boffa, on political, economic, and social evolutions in Soviet society as he witnessed them during 5-year assignment as Moscow correspondent for Italian Communist Party newspaper, L'Unita. Particular emphasis placed on period following 20th Congress of the Communist Party of Soviet Union in January, 1956. Publisher is Marzani & Munsell, Inc. Identical with Security Index subjects Carl Aldo Marzani and Alexander Ector Orr Munsell, both long active protagonists of communism in the United States. No mention whatsoever is made of FBI or law enforcement.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

CENTRAL RESEARCH

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: BOOK REVIEW: Inside the Khrushchev Era

The Text and The Purpose

The author, Giuseppe Boffa, who from 1953 to 1958 was Moscow correspondent for the Italian Communist Party newspaper L'Unita, relates his impressions of the Soviet Union during his 5-year assignment. "I needed to know," he states, "how the USSR had become a world power, how it had won the war, what was the secret of its transformation, whence came its moral and political force." His reporting is alleged to comprise the true picture, devoid of hatred and misunderstandings.

According to Boffa, Soviets are not "Martians" but real, genuine human beings who were motivated by the very highest ideals to bring into being a better way of life for all mankind. Whereas some Soviet leaders and officials have caused "harsh sacrifices" for a few people, these acts are excused by the very part these men played in the "dramatic events" of history.

In the first chapter, Boffa creates an air of suspense, excitement, and adventure as he first hears the "voices" in Moscow and loses himself in the "fairy-tale atmosphere" of turreted walls, palaces, and imperial balls. Throughout the book, he leads the reader through the shocks and effects of the 20th Congress, back into the origins of Stalin's "cult of the individual," lightly through World War II, and into the post-Stalin years. The greater part of the book deals with the achievements of Khrushchev and the Soviets since the death of Stalin. The author "exposes" their social betterment, their great strides in attaining the only true democracy, their position as leaders in science, their accomplishments in education and culture, and the all-around perfection which they have attained through the trials and tribulations on the road to communism.

Boffa categorizes the year 1954 as the year of the thaw; 1955, the year of decision; 1956, the year of passion; and, 1957, the year of reforms. The bloodthirsty activities of the Soviet Union which have stunned the world since the Bolshevik onslaught of 1917 are transformed into actions of "revolutionary value." It is obvious that the author has done all in his power to stir in his readers the approval and admiration which will force them to identify themselves with the "we" who "are today capable of continuing to transform the world, thanks to the successes of the USSR, thanks to the successes in a series of other countries, thanks to the struggles which we all wage in our own lands. We can, and we will, extend the civilization that was born in October, 1917."

Re: BOOK REVIEW: Inside the Khrushchev Era

Better Than You

The I-can-do-anything-better-than-you attitude seems to be the impetus for all of the bustling and frantic Soviet activity toward industrial, agricultural and cultural superiority. Certainly it was evident to this Italian communist who threaded it through his eye-witness report. It is not fair, according to Boffa, to compare the Soviet Union and capitalist countries from the same standards. In a short span of 42 years the Soviet Union has leapt and bounded to second place among world powers. It offers a better and more democratic way of life. It was the first champion of world peace and constantly strives to see the settlement of all quarrels between men. It is the heart of individualism because no where else can a man enter the world so safely, have his childhood so sheltered from "sacrifices," be so educated, live his life so free from the worries of unemployment and illness, and die so without fear. Today, they do not need what they do not have; tomorrow, they will have it.

Go East, Young Man

Everything is greener on the other side of the iron curtain. Even the Five Year Plans outstrip the pioneers of America's Far West. "How much more exciting," Boffa exclaims, "were the adventures, how much greater the dedication and the courage of those engaged in that enormous pioneering effort, the Five Year Plans!" The Soviet Union is a country of pioneers; "it is not a literary conceit."

Only Good Democracy Is a Red One

"The freeing of men from class exploitation, class injustice, class inferiority--is clearly superior to the so-called 'free world,' " says Boffa. Democracy in the capitalist United States is severely restricted, but Soviet society "bears a vigorous democratic imprint." There are few distinctions between one man and another. There is a great simplicity in social relations and a strong disapproval of any small manifestation of the abuse of power. Soviet democracy is in a phase of expansion--an expansion further and further away from capitalistic democracy, and toward the "most authentic civilized democracy the world has ever seen--the absolute democracy of communism."

Snow White and the Seven-Year Plan

According to Boffa, it is what has transpired under the leadership of Nikita Khrushchev that has brought the Soviet Union to its pinnacle of transformation. It was Khrushchev who saw the errors which had influenced all of Soviet life. It was Khrushchev who set about to correct them. He dispensed with Malenkov, Beria, Molotov, Zhukov, Kaganovich, Shepilov and others who rocked the Kremlin. He electrified Soviet industry, agriculture, science and education. He dared to denounce publicly the failings of the great Stalin--"the full courage of an action which wiped out an important patrimony that had been built up over the years." Like a sheepdog, he growled and snapped at the heels of the citizens of the Soviet Union spurring them on to greater and greater socialist achievements. At the 21st Congress, Khrushchev stood before the Russian people and outlined for them the great plans for the great advancement during the next seven great years. He promulgated "ideas about the new equilibrium within the Soviet economy, about the extension of democracy and the lessening of the state, about the new transformations in the countryside, about the laws of the Socialist state, about international perspectives." No one or thing can ever again stand in the way of communism, for didn't Khrushchev say "there are not in the world today enough forces to restore capitalism in our country. The danger of a capitalist restoration is excluded; not only has socialism won, but it has won for all time."

Unadulterated Soviet Propaganda

Inside the Khrushchev Era, from cover to cover, is sheer, unadulterated Soviet propaganda. It is filled with the usual brags and lies. Every opportunity is grasped to eulogize the Soviet Union and berate the nations of the West. The past, the present, and the future are maligned as only communist propagandists are capable of doing. By direct accusation and inference, the United States, categorized as "the eternal class enemy," and the other countries of the West are depicted as jealous, war-mongering nations whom the peace-loving Soviet Union must always fear and constantly appease. "Hardly emerged from the conflict, emaciated, lacking everything, literally drained of human blood and of economic wealth, the Soviets had to face a new and formidable threat--the atomic blackmail of the Americans." Continuing his "history," Boffa states that the "far-from-casual" coincidence of the aggression against Egypt and the anticommunist violence and vigor released in the West jolted the Soviet people out of their naive "trustfulness." "They seemed to have forgotten whom they were dealing with." But they learned not to "lower their guard."

The publication of this book was manipulated to coincide with Khrushchev's visit to the United States. At a time when Soviet leaders are slithering around other societies, and communist parrots are screeching about the dissolution of mistrust between East and West, a book such as this might find a larger and more receptive audience, and, at the same time, might root a few ideas in certain unplowed brains.

Munsell is identical with Alexander Ector Orr Munsell, a Security Index subject. He was a member of the Communist Party from the early 1930's until at least 1948 or 1949. During the late 1930's and early 1940's he was treasurer of the Communist Party of Maryland. He has received vast inheritances from his grandfather and his mother and has been reported over the years as a substantial contributor to the Communist Party. He has participated in the affairs of numerous communist fronts and took refuge in the Fifth Amendment in testifying before the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee in June, 1956. (61-10392-69)

SUBJECT: "COMMUNISM IN AMERICAN UNIONS"
BY DAVID J. SAPOSS
MISCELLANEOUS - INFORMATION CONCERNING

The captioned book has been reviewed in the Internal Security Section. This book is described on its cover as "an authoritative and comprehensive analysis of communist activities in the American trade-union movement." It appears to be based on previously available public source material with some conclusions drawn by the author from this material and his experiences in the labor field.

The introduction points out that recent events seem to have reduced the domestic communist movement to near impotence, but that the Communist Party (CP) is not discouraged and is resuming its covert activities and persists in boring from within the labor movement in this country. The author states that the CP is the only movement of its kind that has repeatedly gained strength following vital defeats, and attributes this ability to its support from Soviet Russia.

The book opens with a brief discussion of early radical and CP trade-union activities, including the Trade Union Educational League and the Trade Union Unity League. It is pointed out that communists have alternated between periods of boring from within existing trade-unions and attempting to operate their own unions. The book then goes into considerable detail regarding communist activities in the motion picture industry and communist infiltration of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Alliance, AFL, both of which ended in defeat for the communists after initial success. The rise and fall of communism in the CIO is covered in detail, ending with the expulsion of 11 communist dominated unions from the CIO (1949-1950) and the losses experienced by these unions after expulsion. The sources for these portions include congressional hearings, labor publications, union convention proceedings and previous treatises on the labor movement. An extremely large amount of the material is quoted.

In a section on combating communist domination, it is pointed out that in general rank-and-file union members have reacted against communists only when vital issues have aroused them; that when it desired to do so, union leadership, if effective, has been able to eliminate communist control; and that some employers have been prone to protect and do business with communist-dominated unions because they have considered the communist unions easier to manipulate. The book discussed the noncommunist affidavit provision of the Labor Management Relations Act, 1947, pointing to the difficulty caused by the present-tense wording of the noncommunist affidavits and mentions the conspiracy indictments at Cleveland and Denver involving the use of noncommunist affidavits. The author traces the policy of the CP during the past few years that all labor unions should be a part of the main stream of American labor (the AFL-CIO) to the clause in the Communist Control Act of 1954, which provides that unions affiliated with a national labor body shall be presumed not to be communist infiltrated.

The book, which appears from the most recent events discussed to have been prepared in 1957 although it bears a copyright date of 1959, concludes by pointing out that the communists are again stressing that the labor movement is the vital channel through which to enlist mass followers, disseminate propaganda and promote their objectives; that the communists in labor will ultimately be forced to reveal themselves in order to champion communist and Soviet policy to the maximum; but that lest they do considerable harm in the interim, all concerned should remember "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

The FBI is mentioned in only two places. On page 49 reference is made to a handwriting examination by the FBI Laboratory as part of the evidence at a congressional hearing. On page 265 a news article is quoted which refers to a refusal by the FBI and other Government agencies to make their files available to private groups.

The author, David Joseph Saposs, was born 2-22-86 in Kiev, Ukraine, and has a lengthy history of Government employment in the labor field, apparently retiring from the Department of Labor in 1954. Saposs was the subject of an Internal Security - Hatch Act investigation in 1942-1943, a European Recovery Program investigation in 1948 and a preliminary inquiry under Loyalty of Government Employees in 1948 (Bufiles 101-471, 124-1543 and 121-10759) based on reports that in his writings he had advocated a change in the Government of the United States and that he had associated with various allegedly "radical" organizations. One person interviewed reported that early in the 1930s Saposs had favorably compared communism with capitalism, and another reported that in 1935 Saposs had favored an alliance between socialists and communists to prevent war. All other persons interviewed indicated that Saposs was definitely opposed to communism and was a loyal American, although he was described by some as a socialist, liberal or "somewhat radical."

In connection with the inspection of the Records and Communications Division in December, 1958, it was recommended and approved that a book review control be set up at the Bureau. In connection with this recommendation, it was noted that although the Library Unit of the Crime Research Section and the Publications Desk of the Central Research Section were equally logical locations, it was felt that the Publications Desk of the Central Research Section at that time could more readily lend itself to this function.

STREAMLINING BOOK REVIEW CONTROL

On January 21, 1959, this function was implemented by a memorandum to all Bureau officials and supervisors. The procedure set forth was focused upon:

1. Eliminating duplication in purchasing and reviewing of books at the Bureau and

2. Establishing a central repository to answer questions relating to whether a book has been purchased or ordered for the Bureau.

Since the inception and establishment, the book review control function has been closely followed and evaluated in terms of practical efficiency. Some of the main features of streamlining the functions of book review control have been:

1. Setting up a main file (62-46855) in which a copy of all book reviews should be placed. Thus, book review material would be more readily available to those having an interest.

2. The use of a new form (5-103) to simplify the routing of information regarding the desirability of purchasing for review books which may be of interest to various sections or divisions throughout the Bureau.

3. The development of close working cooperation of the Publications Desk, Central Research Section with the Administrative Division and the Bureau Library Unit of the Crime Research Section relative to the functions of purchasing and cataloging books desired for review.

PROPOSED ADDITIONAL STREAMLINING

Our experience in recent months indicate that still additional streamlining of the book review control function can be accomplished. In connection with this streamlining, the following matters should be considered.

1. From the viewpoint of the Central Research Section the book review control function has not been costly as the functions have been absorbed by a clerical employee already engaged in handling security and intelligence publications matters.

2. Book review control was a big step in the right direction as it:

   a. Eliminated duplication in purchasing and reviewing of books at the Bureau and

   b. Established a central repository to answer questions relating to whether a book has been purchased or ordered for the Bureau.

3. There is a further streamlining step which could be taken at this time based upon our practical experience of the past few months. This streamlining could be effected by placing the book review control function in the Crime Research Section or perhaps, more specifically, its Bureau Library Unit. This is based on the following considerations:

a. Currently a minimum of three divisions are generally involved in the purchase of a book for review:

(1) Bureau Library Unit of the Crime Records Division, to avoid duplication of books in the Bureau Library;

(2) Administrative Division, to control funds a make a desired purchase; and

(3) Central Research Section, Domestic Intelligence Division, for initiating and coordinating requests for book purchases as part of the book review control function.

The only division which could logically be deleted from this purchase-and-control transaction is the Domestic Intelligence Division. This could be accomplished by placing the book review control function in the Crime Records Division. Then, of course, Central Research Section or Domestic Intelligence Division would generally be involved only when the books related to their fields.

b. Crime Records Division, during the course of handling matters relating to books sent to the Director and related correspondence, gains a firsthand knowledge of books which may be of particular interest to the Director and to the Bureau. Thus, Crime Records Division is in a position to take immediate action relative to obtaining these books for review or reference without routing to the Central Research Section to perform a book review control function.

c. Miscellaneous books, as well as related literature and advertisements, coming to the Bureau would naturally gravitate to the Bureau Library. This helpful information usually is not available to the Central Research Section and its Book Review Control Desk until it is routed there by the Bureau Library. This imposes on the Bureau Library Unit additional routing responsibilities.

d. At the Bureau, books are considered for purchase:

(1) For "reference" - this involves the Bureau Library of the Crime Research Section; Administrative Division; and the division or section having an interest in obtaining the book for reference.

(2) For "review" - this involves the Publications Desk, Central Research Section; the Administrative Division; the Bureau Library, Crime Research Section; and the division or section having an interest in obtaining the book for review.

(3) For "reference and review" - this involves the Bureau Library, Crime Research Section; the Administrative Division; the Central Research Section Book Review Control Desk; and the division or section having an interest in obtaining a book for these purposes. Currently the Bureau Library Unit, Crime Research Section, is primarily interested in "reference" and the Book Review Control Desk of the Central Research Section is primarily interested in "review." Often, books are useful for "reference" and "review." This whole function could be streamlined if "reference" and "review" were combined and handled in the same section. Routing could be minimized and coordination streamlined.

e. Books purchased with Bureau funds and having a reference value should be available to all Bureau officials and supervisors through the medium of cataloging in the Bureau Library. Thus, books purchased for review generally have a reference value to some supervisor or official at the Bureau. Books purchased for review are sent to the Bureau Library Unit, Crime Research Section, for cataloging. This function could be eliminated in many instances if the books for review and reference were obtained through the Bureau Library Unit, Crime Research Section.

RECOMMENDATION:

Our experience has shown that the book review control function has contributed to the efficiency and handling of book review matters. Central Research Section feels at this time that the book review control function could be further streamlined by relocating this function in the Crime Research Section. Therefore, it is recommended that the book review control function be relocated as described above.

SUBJECT: ARTICLE ENTITLED "MAN AND LAW" BY L. SHEININ APPEARING IN RUSSIAN MAGAZINE OCTOBER ISSUE FOR AUGUST, 1959, VOLUME 8 INFORMATION CONCERNING (CENTRAL RESEARCH MATTER)

Soviet meddling with our internal affairs continues with captioned article, appearing in Soviet "literary and socio-political magazine," which attempts to use two of the Director's speeches to prove the Marxian contention of 100 years ago that, under capitalism, "crime is growing even faster than the number of the population." The article claims that the Soviets have the answer to crime in the "humanist" approach of the 20th and 21st Congresses of the Communist Party, Soviet Union, and states that this approach has brought about a "great unrest" among the criminal element which has resulted in a large number of them wanting to start a "new working life."

The article contends, of course, that cases of law violation in the Soviet Union are a result of survivals of capitalism in the minds of people.

Bureau files indicate the author may be identical with an L. R. Sheinin who, in 1947, was the Chief of Inquiry for the Department of Prosecutor's Office of the Soviet Union.

RECOMMENDATION:

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont
Re: Article Entitled "Man and Law" by L. Sheinin, Appearing in Russian Magazine October, Issue for August, 1959.

Attack on Director

The Director and law enforcement in the United States are attacked in captioned article. This magazine, described as a "literary and socio-political magazine," is published in Russian by the Pravda Publishing House as an organ of the Writers' Union of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, USSR.

Snare Planned

This article attempts to place the Bureau on the horns of a dilemma by stating that while the Director is recognizing and making statements regarding the growth of crime in the United States, he is confirming the premises of Marx, published one century ago in the New York Herald Tribune. Marx allegedly wrote:

> "Probably, there is something rotten in the very heart of a social system which increases its wealth, but, at the same time, does not reduce poverty and in which crime is growing even faster than the number of the population."

Two Speeches Mentioned

The article refers specifically to observations made by the Director regarding the growing crime problem in connection with his speeches before the Junior Order of United American Mechanics at Charleston, West Virginia, and the American Legion at Atlantic City. Also, in connection with the crime problem in the United States, the Director is allegedly quoted by one "Don Eadon," New York correspondent for the Daily Mail, an English newspaper, as saying that "Juvenile crime is the most important problem which confronts the American people." A check of Bureau files reveals that answers to questions regarding crime were given to Don Iddon, New York correspondent of the Daily Mail, on April 9, 1946. Our written reply to a question regarding juvenile delinquency read in part:

> "Juvenile delinquency is a problem that is affecting many nations today.... The problem of juvenile delinquency is a local one which must be met at the source...." (94-8-1738-4)

"Humanist" Solution

The article October claims that the Soviets have the answer to this problem which plagues not only the United States, but other "capitalist" countries as well. October states that a great unrest is spreading among Soviet criminals, many of whom are presently characterized by a sincere and ardent striving to break with the criminal past and to start a happy new working life. This "miracle" was engendered by the atmosphere created at the 20th and 21st Congresses of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. This atmosphere apparently is related to the contention that in every man there is a better side which must be activated through the cultivation of "humanism," a boundless faith in man. This article does admit that there are hopeless, hardened and inveterate criminals. Of course, the cases of law violation in the Soviet Union are a result of survivals of capitalism in the minds of the people and some miscalculations in the struggle against these survivals.

Rehabilitation Stressed

Recently adopted Soviet principles of criminal legislation, according to October, carry out the theme that punishment is not only retribution for the crime committed, but also has the purpose of correction and re-education of the convicted in the spirit of an honest attitude toward work. In this connection it is pointed out that the Soviet courts also have a function as propagandists and agitators. The strong implication is given that this could not be carried out in the United States because of incompetency and the "profit" motive.

Memorandum to Mr. A. H. Belmont
Re: Article Entitled "Man and Law" by L. Sheinin, Appearing in Russian Magazine October, Issue for August, 1959

Khrushchev Refuted

The attack on the Director and the criticism of our internal law enforcement affairs certainly expose once again the perennial bit of propaganda about the Soviet Union not interfering in the affairs of other countries. Following the United States protest relative to the Seventh Congress of the Communist International, Alexander Troyanovsky, then Soviet Ambassador to the United States, issued a press release on August 26, 1935, in which he protested that his government would not interfere in the internal affairs of the United States. Khrushchev repeated this bit of fiction during his recent tour of the United States. (Foreign Relations of the United States, U.S. Government Printing Office, 1952; New York Herald Tribune, September 30, 1959)

Soviet Official

Bureau files do not contain any information positively identifiable with the author although they do contain references to an L. R. Sheinin, who was Chief of the Inquest Division, Prosecuting Magistracy, Advisor of Justice, 2nd Rank, in 1945, and who was Chief of Inquiry for the Department of Prosecutor's Office of the Soviet Union in 1947. The files further reveal that one L. Sheinin wrote an article entitled "Civilized Savages" (referring to lynchings in the United States) in Literaturnaya Gazeta, No. 43, October 14, 1947. (100-352385-1977)

TRANSLATION FROM RUSSIAN

MAN AND THE LAW

By L. SHEYNIN

An almost improbable and, moreover, most instructive event occurred in June of this year in an American city of Charleston. The Director of the American political police, the FBI, Mr. HOOVER, publicly, openly and quite officially marked, without himself wishing it, the centennary of an article by MARX, "The Population, Crime and Pauperism," published as we know in the newspaper "The New York Daily Tribune" exactly one century ago, namely, in 1859.

Moreover, Mr. HOOVER, cited in his speech figures which fully confirmed the premises stated by MARX in this article.

MARX wrote in 1859:

"Probably, there is something rotten in the very heart of a social system which increases its wealth, but, at the same time, does not reduce poverty and in which crime is growing even faster than the number of the population."

HOOVER admitted in 1959:

"....Crime in the U.S.A. is growing at a horrifying pace and reached an unprecedentedly high level in 1958, showing a frightful increase in comparison with 1957....

"Figures for 1958," HOOVER further stated, "are unfortunately exactly like that - shocking.... The total cost of crime to the entire country is now reaching a figure of 22 billion a year, i. e., it represents almost one-third of the total budget of the Federal Government for a year!..."

Thus the Director of the FBI characterized the state of crime in the U.S.A. in 1958.

ENCLOSURE

62-[illegible]-41

But over a year ago, it was likewise he, speaking at a convention of the American Legion in Atlantic City, who established the terrifying growth of crime in 1957. HOOVER admitted at that time that, in the last eleven years alone, the number of big crimes committed in the U.S.A. increased from 1,685,203 to 2,653,150 and continues to grow from month to month.

Both in the speech delivered in 1958, and in the speech delivered the other day, HOOVER noted the enormous growth of crime among youth.

"The forces of the world of crime," said HOOVER in his last speech, "tainted the lives of thousands of young men and women. Juvenile crime has never shown a single decrease in the last few years; it has been steadily growing....We are dealing not with the chance violators but with accomplished young criminals...."

Thus HOOVER involuntarily confirmed the prophetic words of MARX written by him one hundred years ago.

The fact that words of MARX are confirmed these days by American reality even in details, is seen also, apart from HOOVER's speech, from a book of an American journalist B. FINE "A Million Offenses" published in the U.S.A. in 1957. The author of this book asserts on the basis of official statistical data that the growth of crime in the U.S.A. is four times that of the population.

American criminologists, sociologists and journalists possibly did not read, or pretend that they did not read MARX. At any rate, they do not like to refer to him and, of course, are quite remote from an intention of admitting that which he understood and foresaw exactly a century ago.

Nevertheless, some of them have been coming out in recent years with a more "flexible" conception: Marxism, they say, may still be useful for application in Europe but it is absolutely inacceptable for America ...

HOOVER likewise did not refer to the article by MARX when speaking in Charleston, but whether he wanted it or not, by this speech of his he marked a hundred year anniversary of this article and very convincingly and vividly confirmed its basic principal conclusion, threatening the "American way of life," which turns out to be, alas, applicable to America as well....

For the sake of fairness, let us note that HOOVER was not alone in getting into such a strange position. On February 6 of last year, an English bourgeois newspaper "The Daily Mail" which could never be reproached with propaganda of Marxism, published an article by its New York correspondent DON EADON (phon.) devoted to the mores of the contemporary American youth. Here is what this bourgeois journalist notes:

"This morning, as every other morning, New York talks not about an American satellite but about the crime among the adolescents.

"The satellite was a one-day sensation. Terrorism by teen-agers and the growing wave of crime is a daily sensation. Police are discussing at present the question of launching patrol helicopters over the Central Park which is situated right on the side of Fifth Avenue where I live in an apartment house. But not one of the people living in this big house and in a long row of small houses in the vicinity goes to the park after twilight. Thousands of New Yorkers avoid going there even in the broad daylight. Central Park grew to resemble the jungles. Policemen are riding in automobiles in pairs and they have machine guns in the back seats, as well as revolvers....

"....The situation in schools is even more terrible. At present, policemen are being placed in school corridors... ...Attendance of public schools became so dangerous for the girls that their parents keep them at home and boycott the schools. Many teachers fear for their lives. Last week, a school principal GEORGE GOLDFARB jumped off the roof of his home to his death in a fit of despair induced by the school crisis....

"....Psychiatrists say that crime wave among youth and disorganization in schools are explained by the disappearance of the feeling of security in the country, which, in its turn, was brought about by atomic and hydrogen bombs and has swollen through the ignorance and hypocrisy of politicians...."

Thus writes an English journalist who likewise does not cite MARX but also unwittingly confirms his words.

In his long article BADON further reports that "over 60 per cent of drug addicts in America are people under 20 years of age" and that HOOVER in his talks with BADON told him: "Juvenile crime is the most important problem which confronts the American people."

We shall not dispute this statement but will only supplement it: American people are not the only ones confronted with the same problem these days. In a number of other capitalist countries crime among youth is growing. Thus, for example, in West Germany an enormous growth of crime is noted and many West German newspapers and magazines write with alarm about it.

Again, they too do not cite MARI, but, in their turn, they agree with him in spite of themselves.

Thus, discussing these subjects, a German magazine "Review" wrote that "the broad circles of the population are alarmed and are inquiring about conditions in our economically flourishing country," and this, as the magazine states further, "makes one think to what extent our asphalt culture is built on the swamp."

How striking is the resemblance of these forced admissions with the prophetic formula to the effect that "there is something rotten in the very heart of a social system which increases its wealth but, at the same time, does not reduce poverty and in which the crime is growing even faster than the number of the population." ...

Of course, all stated above does not at all pursue the naive aim of comparing crime in the capitalist countries with the crime in our country for a happy conclusion: look, how bad things are with them and how comparatively good they are with us! ....

Of course, from the point of view, let us say, of the very same HOOVER, our hooligans and pickpockets appear in the worst case as the mischievous but likeable children from a model kindergarten. But for us the "American scope" is entirely unnecessary in this field and we justifiably regard the hooligans also as real criminals.

Recently, an important American law official, who was in Moscow and visited a nearby correctional-labor colony, was greatly surprised on finding there a certain young man convicted for a drunken brawl involving the breaking of dishes at a restaurant.

"I beg you to explain to me, gentlemen," said the American judge, "why did you imprison this likeable gentleman, particularly, since, according to him, he paid for the broken dishes? Really, you and I have different ideas about law...."

Ideas are indeed different and not in the field of law alone. If, for example, the Chief of Moscow Police applies to the Moscow City Council with a request to provide for him helicopters for patrolling the Central Park of Culture and Rest or would send militia cars with machine guns into the streets, such a "valuable" idea would cause a great deal of amusement in many people, except in its author....

On the other hand, H OVER would, naturally, be genuinely surprised if anyone would advise him to transfer a considerable portion of the functions of American police to the public, without even the rubber sticks, let alone machine guns and revolvers. And we will plainly say that it would not be difficult to understand his surprise, considering this side of American reality....

All this is true. There are not any and there cannot be any such crimes and such criminals in our country, as there are now in America. But it is pointless to make comparisons of this sort and exult because in Moscow or any of our other cities there is no need for police helicopters, police machine guns, nor police posts in schools....

No, we do not have any drug addicts among school children and hardly any in general; we have no houses of prostitution, gambling dens, counterfeiters, or kidnappers, no gangster trusts or specialists in melting (sic) bank safes. We have no trade in narcotics, no publishers of smut, no opium dens, no professional pimps, no circulation of millions of copies of notorious and soul-destroying "comics," and only on the basis of American books, and very vaguely at that, can we imagine the racketeers who acquired such a fantastic power in the largest cities of America, so that entire banks and the most substantial of business firms are obediently bowing down to them, resignedly paying them a fixed monthly tribute....

No, there is not anything like that in our country; there cannot be and could not be anything like that, for the very simple reason that it is precluded by the very nature of our social system, our social law and order, all the conditions of our life and customs, and, finally by the very nature of our social and production relationships.

Consequently, the absence of all these festering sores is a normal and natural, direct and inevitable fruit, result, one of the many, of our new world, our socialist society; in short, of all that for what we have been fighting for over forty years already and what we have achieved in this struggle.

Let this be a source of wonder for bourgeois criminologists and sociologists, who moreover are afraid to interpret correctly that which surprises them. We realize their position and understand that it is exceedingly awkward and equivocal. As the saying goes, we sympathize but cannot help.

As for ourselves, it would be more useful for us in every respect to reflect why we still do have crime, why we still do have relatively numerous embezzlements, thefts, rowdyism; yes, numerous from our point of view, although strikingly few from the American one.

Then, should we, the Soviet people, approach this problem with the American yardstick, though in this case it would flatter our ego?

No, of course, not.

It would be far more useful therefore to examine every case of law violation, not only as a result of survivals of capitalism in the minds of the people, but likewise as a bitter result of some miscalculations in the struggle against these survivals, or, to state it more simply, in the system of upbringing and re-education in the family and school, a Young Communist League organization, or in a particular city, particular district, particular collective farm, or, finally, in the organization of the system of the social struggle against crime.

It was still V. I. LENIN who pointed out that it was necessary to re-educate "in a prolonged struggle, on the basis of dictatorship of the proletariat, the proletarians themselves, who do not get rid of their own small-bourgeois prejudices at once, through a miracle, by order of the Holy Virgin, through injunction of a slogan, resolution, or decree, but only in a long and difficult mass struggle against the mass small-bourgeois influences." (V. I. LENIN, Works, Volume 31, page 94.)

Thus, it is worth while to speak once more about certain aspects of this long, difficult mass struggle, and argue, if necessary, because it is a vast and complicated matter and there is still a great deal to be done in this field, we believe.

3.

First of all, it is necessary to repeat an old truism to the effect that the problem of crime cannot be solved at all through punishment alone, as some people still naively imagine.

Let us cite MARX again: "... History and such a science as statistics, prove with exhaustive clarity that from the times of CAIN no one has ever succeeded either in improving or in frightening the world by punishment."

That is why, as MARX wrote in another case, "a wise legislator will prevent crime, so as not to be compelled to punish for it."

This, of course, does not mean at all that there should be no punishment following the crime. On the contrary, a criminal should not have the slightest foundation for hoping that a crime planned by him will remain unsolved and, therefore, unpunished.

That is why LENIN stressed that the important thing in the prevention of crime is not the fixing of severe punishment for it, but the fact that not a single case of crime would go unsolved.

A development of this idea is that in order that the court sentence, e. e., punishment determined by the court, would have a preventive significance, it is important that not only the convict himself, but his relatives, friends and neighbors, as well, know what he was convicted for; for in an opposite case, quoting MARX again, if "the people see the punishment but do not see the crime," they "cease to see the crime where there is punishment."

How unfortunate it is that we sometimes in the past forgot the profound significance of these words and therefore gave inexcusably little publicity to the activities of our court, truly the first people's court in the history of mankind!....

As a result, court reporting has almost disappeared from newspaper pages; visiting assizes of the courts in workers' and collective farm clubs became an exceedingly rare event; court verdicts have been little discussed at the workers' and employees' meetings; we have inexcusably few books, novels, stories, plays or films about the people of the Soviet court, prosecution, or militia; our radio and television bashfully avoid these subjects in their broadcasts.

Finally, our law propaganda which should become the foundation of the legal education of the people, particularly youth, was completely inadequate. In the meanwhile, is it necessary to prove the usefulness of a persistent, intelligent, and patient popularization of our criminal, civil, family and labor law?

A youth graduating from a secondary school and receiving matriculation certificate leaves it with quite a broad field of knowledge of the laws of nature, physics and botany for example, but he knows nothing about the basic laws adopted by society which he is entering as a full-fledged citizen.

Finally, our literature and art - theater, cinema, radio or television - tell little about the role and aims of society in the struggle against crime; about the fact that in conditions of our society the criminal is always and invariably doomed, no matter how clever and adroit he may be; about the fact that every violation of the law inevitably cripples the life not only of the law-breaker himself or of his victims, but likewise the life of his family, gravely and sometimes irreparably.

And, most important of all, about the fact that crime has never yet brought happiness to anyone anywhere, but instead, always ravaged the soul, ruined the life and destroyed the reputation and future.

And yet, it is not only useful, but simply indispensable to talk and write about all this, to inculcate, to train in a man from childhood, from youth, a respect for the law and faith in it, revulsion against crime and realization of its consequences for all of us together and everyone of us individually.

And is it not clear that such a legal training of the people, and particularly youth, is a part of the entire problem of communist education, the problem which the 21st Party Congress set before the people as the chief, most decisive and most important task?

How difficult it is in the light of this task set forth by the Party, broadly and specifically, as never before, to understand that, for instance, in our great country, where thousands of newspapers and magazines are published, including special magazines and newspapers for builders, polar explorers, chemists, doctors and teachers, for the blind and deaf-mute, for fishermen and hunters, for sportsmen and chess-players, for automobile drivers and tourists, and many, many others, there has not been as yet a court or judicial newspaper or a mass magazine, equally interesting to chemists and builders, sportsmen and doctors -- in a word, interesting and useful absolutely to everyone!

And yet, we cannot doubt that as soon as subscription to such a newspaper or a magazine would be announced, tens of thousands of people would take place in line near subscription centers, because there is a legitimate interest among the broadest strata of the population toward our laws, the work of our courts, and prosecution and toward the problems of law in the broadest sense of this word.

That is why it is a high time to create such a printed organ, particularly because, as MARX wisely noted, "for the one who is guided by law, the law becomes a second nature."

Let us then make our laws, our socialist law, a "second nature" of every Soviet man and thus bring closer the time when we would have to expend the same effort for finding a thief or a hooligan for purposes of demonstration which are being now expended, for instance, in medical schools for a demonstration to students of a fresh case of the syphilis!

And if these lines will cause a distrustful and derisive smile in some of our skeptical readers, let them recall that not so long ago there were people who did not believe that in a few years, a fresh case of syphilis would be regarded as an almost museum rarity.

Must we repeat then mistakes of this sort of people.

But while we succeeded in the liquidation of such an evil as syphilis, and while a syphilitic is actually a rarity in our country, there are still enough moral "syphilitics" here and the time has come to deal seriously with this evil also; an old saying that "syphilis is not a shame but a misfortune" should be changed when applied to moral "syphilis": it is both a shame and a misfortune; a shame for the one afflicted and a misfortune for those who surround him.

The graver the illness, the harder it is to cure it. But, the longer the sickness has been neglected, the more dangerous it is and the more necessary it is to cure it. These simple truths apply not only to medicine, but also to such a specialized field as the struggle against crime.

In addition to the "methods of treatment" mentioned above and which basically belong to the field of prevention of the "diseases," which is, of course, extremely important, it is necessary seriously and broadly to apply one more method, the method of "relying on faith."

Yes, it is necessary persistently, concretely, and patiently to cultivate the faith in the fact that it is never too late in conditions of our society, even for the people who committed a crime, while they are still being able to breathe, see, and think, to return to an honest working and happy life.

It is impossible to overestimate in this sense the profound significance of the speech of Comrade N. S. KHRUSHCHEV at the Third Congress of Writers of the USSR.

It will be written about this speech and its significance as a program for further development of our art and literature again and again.

But right now we are speaking about that portion of the speech in which NIKITA SERGEEVICH told about his meeting and conversation with a habitual thief who appealed to him in a letter.

The entire speech moved us, delegates to the Congress, by many things: by its wonderful sincerity and frankness, by the respect for the writers' work revealed and stressed in it, by understanding of the difficulty and responsibility of this work, by the feeling of pride in the Soviet people and their wonderful achievements, by its clear look into the future, and by its gentle humor, as well as by many other things.

But the principal element which permeated this speech, from the beginning to the end, was a boundless faith in the people, in their potentialities, in their talents and wisdom, in their heroism and readiness for the noble deeds; yes, a boundless faith in the people, in the man and in the human heart.

Essentially, the episode with a thief related in this speech also was an expression of such faith in a man which indeed forms the foundation of true humanism.

The force of humanism is stronger than the force of the atom. This was once again revealed at the Third Congress of Writers, when NIKITA SERGEEVICH spoke. And when NIKITA SERGEEVICH said: "In order to put this man upon the right path, another approach is necessary; it is necessary to believe in man, in his best qualities. Can this man be an active participant of the communist building? Yes, he can, comrades!" and when he uttered these remarkable words in the huge auditorium of the Great Kremlin Palace in which the congress was held, such a storm of ovations broke out, the eyes of the people shone with such a sincere emotion and pride in our Party, such an unfeigned enthusiasm took possession of everybody, that no one of those who were present in the auditorium in those moments would ever forget it! ....

Yes, the power of faith in the human heart and its potentialities is truly astounding!

There is no need to hide it, there are still amidst us, including us writers, people who still quite recently made wry faces whenever a talk started about the re-education of criminals, and advanced at the same time a rather threadbare and profoundly petty-bourgeois "thesis" to the effect that it is impossible to make a black dog white by washing him....

Yet, the writers, the "engineers of the human soul," of all people, should know that in every man there lives, like a word "mother," a better side, although it is dormant and stifled at times, an appeal to which almost invariably produces a gratifying result, and that one of the tasks of true literature is a cultivation of humanism, of the trust toward people and development in a man of belief in himself.

Yes, belief in himself, without which, as without the trust toward himself, (sic), the life of a man is empty, inferior and profoundly unhappy.

NIKOLAY SERGEEVICH deservedly remembered with a good word A. S. MAKARENKO, stating that "he had shown the nobility of man, the great power of faith in man. And all of us know well, how this faith in man was repaid hundredfold by those toward whom attention and trust were shown -- to former murderers and criminals."

It goes without saying, of course, that relying on faith, does not at all presuppose some sort of all-forgiveness or wholesale trust toward criminals. For there are, after all, hopeless, hardened and inveterate criminals, who should not be trusted and in whom the trust shown in them arouses only a cynical desire to misuse it. Attempts to trust such accomplished scoundrels are naive and dangerous, and the surest thing with regard to such criminals is to apply the formula of a well-known pre-revolutionary jurist URUSOV: "Bend his head under the iron yoke of the law!"

Yes, from the point of view of interests of society as a whole, the application of such measures with regard to such hardened criminals is likewise an expression of humanism because these criminals are capable of ruining the lives of many people, let alone the fact that they are capable sometimes simply to take away these lives....

We are not speaking of these scoundrels in connection with the reliance on trust. But then, they are in the minority. We are speaking about an overwhelming majority of criminals, among whom a great unrest is spreading these days and many of whom are at present characterized by a sincere and ardent striving "to tie up," i. e., to break with the criminal past and to start a new working, happy life.

Such feelings are reflected, for instance, in letters recently published in "PRAVDA," and, of course, only an insignificant portion of letters received was published.

Of course, such a "moral turning point" is one of the many results of the general atmosphere, the atmosphere of the greatest national enthusiasm which took possession of our entire country after the 20th Congress of the C. P., SU, and gained still greater strength and scope after the 21st Congress. The re-establishment of Leninist standards in all the spheres of our life, a decisive strengthening of socialist legality, a sharp rise in the prosperity of the people, a gigantic reorganization in agriculture and industry, the grandeur of the Seven-Year plans which inspired the entire Soviet people, and, finally, the real, everyday, concern for man, concrete and perfectly obvious to everyone, which became the basic law of our life, all this could not help bringing on the moral crisis even in the people, who, at some time, made a wrong step and went along a criminal path.

The author of these lines devoted many years of his life to these problems, at first, as a criminologist and, later, as a writer. That is why he is familiar with this complex and peculiar world; that is why he receives hundreds of letters, both from criminals serving sentence and from criminals who have already served it or, who, due to fortunate combination of circumstances have not yet served it....

It is impossible to quote all these letters in a magazine article, even in a long one, although they are of a considerable psychological interest. They are written by the people of the most diverse ages and backgrounds, with a different number of convictions and different articles on the basis of which they were convicted. They are written with different degrees of literacy, in different handwritings, in the most diverse styles -- from a naive but sincere style to a quasi-refined "style" which certain worldly-wise "jail-birds" like to affect.

But there is one thing common to all these letters and it is a firm resolution -- and in a overwhelming majority of cases it was born through heart's suffering -- to end with their criminal past.

It is even difficult to imagine the enormous response aroused in this peculiar milieu by the speech of the First Secretary of the Central Committee at the Writers' Congress. This speech became a subject of the most excited and warm discussion, not only in Moscow and other large cities, not only in prisons and correctional labor colonies, but even in comparatively small towns, where correspondingly, gathered five-six local "eagles" for collective reading and discussion of the things which "NIKITA SERGEEVICH said about our kind." Quite recently, in Chistopol on the Kama, almost a hundred kilometers from any railroad, the Major of Militia, Comrade ZAKHVATOV, told us how several local criminals of a "provincial caliber" (let us hope they won't be offended), gathering especially for the purpose, read this speech aloud and fully approved it.

"Here, NIKITA SERGEEVICH understands everything about us," they said, "he hit the nail right on the head, no question about that! .... He understood us, but will our chiefs understand us?"

Under "our chiefs" the Chistopol criminals meant the local city authorities and, as a matter of fact, the above-mentioned Major ZAKHVATOV.

Let us say directly, that this question, "Will our chiefs understand us?" is not a simple question and it worries not only the Chistopol criminals. The fact of the matter is that there are still quite many cases when a man, who served his sentence and even returned with an excellent character report from the colony where he served it, meets with a number of difficulties in the way of obtaining employment, registration, or a place to live.

Thus, still in January, I received a letter from Leningrad, from Comrade B., a lathe operator from a certain factory. At some time, he was convicted for a crime (a street robbery), served his sentence, then returned to Leningrad and obtained employment as a lathe operator at this factory, however, concealing his past. B. turned out to be an excellent lathe hand (he learned this trade while serving his sentence); he became very well liked in the shop, acquired many friends and a good reputation.

And then, four and a half years later, when B. himself genuinely started to forget his past, it came to haunt him: his conviction became known and militia cancelled his registration. The entire shop came to his aid, but to no avail.

"I understand and even greatly sympathize with you," the chief of passport section told him politely, "but I am powerless to help you: an instruction...."

The Party Committee, the director and the Factory Committee of this large plant appealed further, but "instruction" stood like a concrete block.

Then they appealed to the editors of the "October," to me, inasmuch as they knew my stories and articles devoted to this type of subjects.

This is, by the way, what B. wrote in his long letter. I am quoting a part of it verbatim, correcting only the errors in spelling, wherever possible:

"....so, LEV ROMANOVICH, you see for yourself, they are driving me to the pit, and I do not want to fall in it.... For during these years, I have acquired a family; I am doing well in my work, I am like other people in every respect, only the registration is gone.... The director himself and the Party secretary are entirely on my side, but they cannot do anything, because of the instruction. Of course, I ruined my life myself, but, after all, I have already served my sentence and afterwards I worked honestly; there must be a reason why the entire factory is pulling for me. I am enclosing an opinion...."

And he really enclosed an "opinion." A good opinion. And it was signed by the director of the factory, by the Party Committee secretary, and by the chairman of the Factory Committee.

I had to appeal in the name of the editors of the "October" to the Chief of the Leningrad Militia, Comrade SOLOVYEV, a perceptive man with large experience, who, by the way, has always shown interest in the problems of rehabilitation. He responded immediately and reinstated the registration, waiving the "instruction."

As B. and his friends wrote me later, this caused great rejoicing at the factory, rejoicing for the two: "For the one, who was registered, and for the one who ordered the registration."

These were precisely the expressions in which B. informed me about it and a great meaning is contained in these words!

In citing this example, I do not want at all to say, that instructions are to blame for everything; but there are cases when the most proper thing to do is to violate the rule, even if it is a proper rule on the whole. Such are the dialectics of life.

It is good that Comrade SOLOVYEV is not the only one who understands this, but many other workers of the MVD organs do likewise. Thus, in Moscow, for instance, the Chief of the Moscow Criminal Investigation Department, Comrade PARFENTYEV, and the Chief of the Moscow OBKhSS (sic), Comrade GRISHIN find employment for the persons who come to them with confession of their guilt and carefully follow up their subsequent life.

Sympathy, with which the personnel of a Leningrad factory treated B. is not a singular case and this is likewise characteristic of our society. Many factories and collective farms in the Ukraine, Belorussia, and other republics have undertaken the patronage of correctional labor colonies; they arrange for those under their patronage concerts, amateur performances, lectures; they help to organize study, etc. Later, when particular prisoners finish their sentences, these enterprises willingly accept former prisoners as members of their personnel; the old workers help them to improve their qualifications; factory committees take care of providing for them places to live, etc.

Recently, in an interesting article of Comrade MONAKHOV published in the "Literary Gazette," the words of the secretary of the Party Committee of the Chelyabinsk Tube-Rolling Mill, Comrade A. MAKAROV, were quoted. "The re-education of prisoners," said MAKAROV," is our business too. The personnel of a plant patronizes a correctional labor colony for youth, sends there the best people from the plant to give various types of help, beginning with the organization of production and ending with the carrying out of political-educational work. P. I. GRECHKIN, Hero of the Socialist Labor, and E. T. TARASOV, a pensioner, an old worker and Party member since 1917, addressed the convicts. The best electrical welder, POPOV, riveter LOSHMANOV, and many other workers from the plant taught prisoners the advanced methods of work. With the aid of the patrons from the plant, over 200 convicts became electrical welders, lathe operators, polishers, etc."

Reflect over these simple words, and you will see behind them the truly statesmanlike and truly Soviet approach of the men of Chelyabinsk to this big and complex problem.

It is necessary to write more and oftener about such facts; the experience of the men of Chelyabinsk (and not in Chelyabinsk alone people are engaged in this sort of thing) should be extended to every city.

But there still occur opposite cases: a man who served his sentence and acquired a certain trade is sent to an enterprise, and there the chief of personnel, hardly glancing at the character report from the place of imprisonment, immediately begins to mumble:

"Ahem....Of course, this is very nice....And the character report, ahem....not bad....But, you know, here.... Yes.... In short, we have no vacancies...."

As a matter of fact, there is a "vacancy"; but in this case, a humane attitude, a human heart and the Soviet approach are lacking!

Essentially, such chiefs of personnel departments need re-education themselves.

It seems to us, that now the Party, Young Communist League, and labor union organs should take care of finding jobs, both for the former prisoners and for persons who voluntarily appear with the statement that they have renounced their criminal activities and intend to start a new life; and that in this big and important business, a system is needed, firmly and clearly established officially on a nationwide scale, which would be equally compulsory for everyone.

First of all, there should be organized, on social principles, the All-Union Committee for Aid to Former Convicts, in finding employment and return to honest life, with a broad participation of the public, with organization of local branches of this Committee and enlistment in its work of voluntary active membership out of a number of pensioners, old Party members, Young Communist League and labor union workers, writers, jurists and teachers, and court, prosecution, and militia workers.

In the already-mentioned Chistopol, for example, an old communist, a participant of the storming of the Winter Palace, Comrade SERGEY NAZAROV, who has long been on pension, assumed a personal guidance of two youths who lost their way. He worked with them patiently and persistently and now he received an award by order of the Minister of the Internal Affairs of the Tatar ASSR "for snatching the children from the criminal world."

But even in a small Chistopol, NAZAROV is not alone. In the same place, an old communist VASILY POPKOV (by the way, he was one of the creators of the Chistopol Bolshevik Organization) likewise guides teen-agers involved in criminal activities; a teacher-pensioner KRYLOV is engaged in the same work. The active workers in the Children's Room of Chistopol Militia number 16 people.

And in Moscow, hundreds of people are engaged in this noble work voluntarily and without remuneration.

There are many such facts and we may have no doubt that after the creation of the proposed committee it will not have to worry about active members.

We will say more, many former convicts will join this active membership and they, paradoxical as it may seem at first glance, will be very useful. Quite recently I received a letter in the current mail from a big-time robber, who was convicted last time for 25 years. He has been convicted more than once in the past. His name is Kh.

This man is fairly well educated and not devoid of a literary ability. He enclosed his photograph with the letter, apparently, as a sign of a special favor to the addressee. (By the way, the custom of sending photographs, in many cases with inscriptions, is very popular among the criminal world, where this is regarded as an expression of sympathy or a sign of the most refined "society" politeness. I take this opportunity to thank him and my other correspondents for this attention.)

The letter from Kh. begins as follows:

"Dear LEV ROMANOVICH!..

"It will soon be seven years since I have been in prison. I was convicted on Articles 16 and 593 of the Criminal Code of the RSFSR for 25 years ITL (Correctional Labor Camp).

"Here my spiritual rebirth took place. Feeling myself a new man, I cannot help being partially grateful to my fate for this shaking-up. My principal gain consists of the fact that I began clearly to distinguish the borderline between right and wrong, learned compassion and began to feel moved to tears by performance of a good deed. In this sense, the colony became for me truly a correctional one."

Kh. tells further about how he is working in the colony and engages in educational work in his free time. He writes a column of a humorous verse under the title "A Confidential Word from a Squint-Eyed EGOR, a Former Thief," in a newspaper with a large circulation published in this correctional institution. The column is a big success among readers. I am quoting a few extracts:

"Hear ye, thieves, big and small,
Infant thieves and experienced ones,
The true word of a Squint-Eyed EGOR,
A former thief.

"Only once life is given to a man,
And you cannot return the years that are gone,
Give up your thieving fraternity
And come out upon an honest road.

"Discard the garment of childish romanticism
And try always to remember:
The right to happiness in the Soviet world
Belongs only to the working people!"

In his letter, Kh. does not deny that he was justly convicted and he is not asking (me) for anything, except one thing: to become acquainted with his literary works. He also writes: "I am working on a dictionary of criminal slang. The dictionary has unexpectedly turned out to be of such size that it could well be taken for an academic supplement to DAL!! (Translator's Note: meaning, DAL's Dictionary of the Russian language.)

This is a letter from a big-time criminal, convicted for banditry. But we need not doubt that this man is perfectly sincere in writing that he is on the right road to rehabilitation.

Among criminals there are often encountered capable people, with alert minds and good inclinations. Every one of them arrived at the life of crime in his own way and every one has his own life story. Many were ruined by vodka, which, of course, is the mother of crime, as the lack of will power is often its sister.

Years of war and occupation, accompanied in a number of cases by neglect of children and absence of a normal Soviet way of life in a number of country's regions occupied by the Hitlerites, of course played their part, too.

Now, when a striking national upsurge has started, the existence of which is not contested even by our enemies, we have, as never before, conditions for a sharp reduction of crime.

An increasingly broad participation by public in the struggle against crime is also characteristic of recent years. People's brigades for the preservation of public order have originated quite recently, but already the result of their activities is clearly seen. In many cities, hooliganism is being sharply reduced; the members of brigades excellently cope with the task set before them and they will continue to improve in this.

However, it would be erroneous to suppose, that by organizing these brigades our society may consider that everything necessary has been done. No, this task must be solved consistently, broadly, and by diverse methods.

A respect for law and human personality should play here a tremendous role. The Soviet law is the first law in history of mankind which is placed in the service of man, which guards his rights, his dignity, his freedom, and his ideas. This law was created by the people themselves, in the name of the people.

World's greatest writers treated in their works the eternal and tragic conflict between man and the law, justice and absence of rights, force and helplessness. TOLSTOY and HUGO, ZOLA and BALZAC, DICKENS and GORKY, SUKHOVO-KOBYLIN and CHEKHOV, DOSTOEVSKY and ANATOLE FRANCE, and many, many other writers turned to this subject more than once in pain and anger, exposing hypocrisy and falseness, venality and cruelty of bourgeois "justice" and bourgeois "laws."

CHEKHOV, in his story "In the Court," painted a vivid picture of a Tsarist court:

"Murky windows and walls, the voice of a secretary, the pose of the prosecutor -- all this was permeated with bureaucratic indifference and emanated cold, as though the murderer was a part of office equipment or was being judged not by the living people but by some invisible machine, turned on by Lord knows whom."

A contemporary American writer, IRA WOLFERT (phon.), in his novel, "Tekker's (phon.) Gang," thus characterizes the moral make-up of an American judge:

"The judge mentally weighed all 'pros' and 'cons.' For the judge, like any other mortal, has to take part in the business game counting on profit."

This characterization is even more broadly confirmed by another contemporary American writer, WHITMAN, who writes about U. S. judges, that there is "among them a striking, almost unbelievable, number of incompetent people, loafers, political mediocrities, crooks and blockheads."

Before the Soviet court are set forth, first of all, the educational tasks. A decree on courts - a decree by which the entire system of Tsarist "justice" was liquidated, rang out in the very first days of October (Revolution).

"Let them shout," stated V. I. LENIN at the 3rd All-Russian Congress of the Soviets, "that we, in reforming the old court, summarily pulled it down. By this we cleared the way for the real people's court...." (V. I. LENIN, Works, Volume 28, page 421.)

Comparatively recently, the second session of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR adopted the "Principles of Criminal Legislation," where it is written: "Punishment is not only the retribution for the crime committed, but it also has the purpose of correction and re-education of the convicted in the spirit of an honest attitude toward work."

Such is the spirit, the text, and the meaning of our law!

It is important that this be equally understood by those who judge and those who are being judged. It is important that the law be applied in full conformity with its spirit and meaning. It is important that the law written in the name of man should be known by every man and that it becomes for him his own moral, immutable law.

"I vouch," said at some time M. I. KALININ, "that if the judge is able to examine and decide cases well, he can always count on an audience, his chamber will always be filled with listeners. A judge is a ready-made agitator and propagandist. He is a propagandist of our laws, a fighter for the fulfillment of laws."

Yes, the court should be propagandist and educator, but not the court alone. Participation of our society in the propaganda of the Soviet justice, Soviet laws, and in the law education of the people is an important and necessary work.

But our society should not only propagandize our laws, but also should help sometimes our judicial and militia organs in the re-education of law violators. It is necessary bolder and broader to practice the referral of comparatively unimportant offenses to the examination by the public. This, first of all, will reduce a number of criminal convictions, which will only improve the preventive significance of conviction and strengthen it, and, second, it will have a great educational meaning.

From this point of view, cases are inexcusable when the court, having the guarantee of the entire collective for a defendant and an application to entrust to the collective his re-education, refuses such an application on purely formal grounds, as it happened, for example, in one of the people's courts of Leningrad. The "Komsomol Pravda" justifiably attacked such an erroneous decision of the court.

Let us note, by the way, that reliance upon trust presupposes, first of all, the trust toward a collective, and not only toward the people who committed a crime.

There are cases known, when a young fellow, tried for hooliganism prefers to be convicted by the people's court rather than having his case referred for examination by the public, motivating this by the fact that it is "far more disgraceful."

We have to consider in this that the examination of such cases in a public procedure has a broad educational significance, and not only for the offender alone.

Prosecutors and judges, we think, should have the right to decide independently the problem of referring such cases to the public and comrade's courts and for examination at the workers' and Young Communist League meetings.

When militia organs transferred a part of their functions to the people's brigades for preservation of public order, this alone produced a significant result. We may not doubt that the referral by the courts of a number of cases to public organizations likewise will fully justify itself.
